me given by Postum Co., Battle
, Mich. Read "The Road to Well-
" in pkgs. "There's a Reason."
read the above letter? A new pears from time to time. They genuine, true, and full of human

WHY BUSINESS HALTS

Men of Affairs Are Plagued With Uncertainty.

Democratic Legislation Directly Responsible for the Hard Times That Are Universal — People Are Asking "How Long?"

Business never is, but always to be, blessed. Which fact is making business tired.

First, the tariff. Business was assured that everything would be all right as soon as revision of the Payne law was out of the way. It would then have no difficulty in adjusting itself to the new schedule. So business waited, hoping for the best. But the revision did not produce the promised effect. Business did not feel a spur to renewed activity.

Second, the currency. Business was assured that everything would be all right as soon as a new currency law was on the books. Then nothing could prevent a return of confidence, and everything would be in full swing again. So business, as it could do no other, continued to wait. But the new currency law did not produce the promised effect. In fact, there is much uneasiness about how it is going to work.

Third, the trusts. Business must not expect too much, if anything, before additional regulation of the trusts had been attended to. That had been promised at Baltimore, and the promise must be redeemed. Business must remember that Rome was not built in a day. Republican misrule had continued for sixteen years running, and the fruits were with us. Give the democracy a little time. Heavens above! After trust legislation had been added to tariff and to currency legislation nothing could longer hinder a return of prosperity.

Remembering its two disappointments, business is asking itself about the proper course if it meets with another disappointment. The new trust regulation may not produce what is being promised in its name. If it should not; if the great trilogy—tariff revision, currency revision, and additional trust regulation—should not light the fires in the darkened furnaces, start the still wheels to turning again, and guide pay envelopes into tens of thousands of empty pockets, what then? Upon what other measure must business wait? And how long will it be before the sun shines again, and business be able to "rake the meadows, sweet with hay?"

Except that the matter is so momentous and far-reaching, one might drop into slang and exclaim, "It is to laugh!" But what affects business calamitously is no laughing matter, however absurd it makes political prophets and certain legislators appear. The interests of business are the interests of the whole people.

Business and the President.

In the name of common sense and fair play, why not a combination of business interests? What can be more appropriate, more logical, more useful? Must business alone be silent and supine when business interests are involved in legislation?

Why should not the president himself pay close heed to this business dissent from his plans? Why should he threaten to stay all summer in Washington to fight down business opposition and force his program through despite the hostility of the business world? Does he mean it to be understood that he is at war with business and determined to crush it at any cost?—New York Sun.

The War on Incomes.

Now that the income tax, which was to yield between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 this year, is giving promise of little more than $30,000,000, Secretary McAdoo is talking about haling the rich men into court and putting them on the stand to explain under oath why their incomes are not so large as the administration believed they were. He had better pause before he embarks on any such rash course, for there are thousands of malefactors of great wealth who would be delighted to explain in public just how many hundred thousand dollars the policy of meddling with business has cost them in the last twelve months.—Public Ledger.

Looking to the Future.

Following Mr. Wilson's smug assertion that business depression is purely psychological a bill has been introduced to create a department of psychology. If it can be held up a matter of three years it would offer an opportunity to place an ex-president who is professorially inclined.

Might as Well Claim It.

Perhaps that shrinkage in income tax returns reported by Son-in-Law McAdoo is also merely "psychological."—New York Herald.

Political Opportunity.

The more the political situation is analyzed the more interesting it becomes. The approaching campaign will have as many angles as a well-developed story. The Democrats are anxious to get out upon the stump and try to straighten out some of the crooked lines. What a pity that they are kept to put more shackles upon business! If the Republicans have any political sense they will discuss the anti-trust bills ad infinitum and keep congress in session until the native lands in turn.

To Cleanse Rusty Nail Wounds

Always Get It to the Bottom

HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh

For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.

Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 OR WRITE

All Dealers G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll

Prints 3c and 4c Each

Prompt attention and work the best.

COVELL COMPANY

Department K Birmingham, Ala.

W. A. DEEDS of 231 Insurance Exchange Bldg., Chicago is curious to learn how many people can use $100. He is offering that sum to any customer suggesting the best name for his newly invented, universal, money-saving cleaning fluid which he is marketing in 50 cent bottles by parcels post.

Get "WILLET'S JULY BULLETIN" Tells of and prices FULGHUM Oats (Machine cleaned of weed and runty seeds, worth double all Farmer's stocks); Burr Clover; Hairy Vetch; New Winter Swedish Vetch; Crimson Clover, Etc. WILLET SEED COMPANY, Augusta

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR AN EASY seller with repeat orders, get our attractive proposition. DAVIS SPEARMINT PEPSIN GUM. High grade goods. Full box sample 40c. Atlantic Chewing Gum Co., Baltimore, Md.

69 Drafting Lessons for $5.00; 10 for $1.00. Practical Course for men in shops and boys in school, very easily understood. C. W. DENNIS, Box 672, Litchfield, Minnesota

WHIRLWIND seller; absolutely new; everyone buys, big profits, repeats sure, particulars free. Guy A. Richmond, Box 26, Livermore Falls, Me.

MEN in every locality—Make big money making automobile tires puncture proof. Write S. F. Rodkin, 219 Wyner Bldg., Muncie, Ind.

Start out for yourself—Be independent; send for my illustrated literature, it fully explains. Publisher's Representative, Box 76, Mobile, Alabama SNATCH Biggest proposition of today; absolutely new; profits; write today. Particulars free. BAL-MAR CO., 1509 W. Saratoga, Baltimore, Md.

GINSENG RAISING The most profitable business in the world. Address FRANKLIN LEWIS, 1728 Ludlow Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

GINSENG RAISING The most profitable business in the world. Address Chas. A. Nessler, Monongahela, Penn.

Business Men or Farmers 300 your circulars mailed. 300 fine envelopes printed. $1 prepaid. W. W. SMITH, BOX 173C, CORSICANA, TEXAS

AGENTS who mean business—Our household specialties offer big inducements. Springfield Mail Order House, 8A Wilmont St., Springfield, Mass.

Transformation Cream sold under guarantee to remove wrinkles and blackheads. For full particulars write The Rockwell Co., Box 647, Hot Springs, Ark.

Agents and Auto Owners A big winner. The greatest "Spark Gaps" on earth. Address HENRY EDWIN CO., SO. HAVEN, MICH.

AGENTS We have the 100% specialties. Every home buys. Red stamp brings proof. A. M. S. CO., Bromo Seltzer Bldg., Baltimore, Md.

MUSICIANS—Two Orchestra or Band Numbers or one of each, and great march song 15c stamps or silver. Sheet Music Co., 154 Station A, Boston, Mass.

Real Tragedy of the Stage.

A beautiful actress, Fraulein Darmer, was killed by accident recently, while playing at the Theater of Varieties at Berne, Switzerland. The last act of the comedy. "The Pride of the Third Company," was coming to an end when Fraulein Darmer fell through a defective stage trap to a distance of six feet and fractured her skull. The actress was carried unconscious to her room and a doctor was in prompt attendance, but the case was beyond his help, and as the curtain fell on the comedy on the stage the girl died. Neither the members of the company who took the final "call" nor the public, who wondered why the actress did not appear, had the slightest idea of the tragedy that had occurred behind the scenes.

His Wish.

She (during the quarrel)—I only married you to spite Fred Johnson.

He (ruefully)—I wish to heaven you'd married Fred Johnson to spite me.

For Real Enjoyment.

"Going to the theater again? Why, you saw that piece only the other night."

"Yes, but not in my new frock."

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure. The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Somehow the man who attends strictly to his own business never acquires a reputation as an entertaining conversationalist.

How To Give Quinine To Children FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for a ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

However, a girl never breaks into the spinster class until she gets angry when called one.

HOW HE TURNED THE TRICK

After This, Mr. Mordical Hammerfest Must Be Credited With Knowing a Thing or Two.

Mrs. Mordecal Hammerfest turned pale as her husband entered the dining-room for breakfast.

"Mordy!" she gasped. "Do you—don't you feel well?"

"Perfectly," he replied in seeming surprise.

"But—but, are you in your—your underduds!"

"Tell me something I don't know. Pass the butter, please," said Mr. Hammerfest.

She passed the butter, remarking nervously: "But, Mordy, dear, as you came in I saw you didn't have any shoes on."

"Well, what of it. Your hair is in curl papers, isn't it?"

"Why—y-yes."

"And you have on a wrapper, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Very well, then."

And he went on eating his breakfast in silence except when he asked her to pass the butter. Then he went upstairs and finished dressing, and the next morning and on succeeding mornings she reported for breakfast in regular clothes.

Sporting Instinct Aroused.

The street-corner orator had gathered around him a group of urchins. Why they listened so attentively he didn't understand; nor probably did they know themselves. Simply nothing doing. But the orator took full advantage of his opportunity and delivered an improving lecture on the value of kindness to dumb animals. At the end he sought for some illustration to point the moral and adorn the tale. It was there at hand. Across the way walked a lady, leading two little dogs in leash. The one was black and the other white. "Now," exclaimed the tub-thumper, "after what I have said, supposing those two dear little dogs were to start fighting, what would be the first thing you would do?" No answer came at first; but one little arab turned to look at the dogs critically and thoughtfully. "Well guv'nor," he answered, at last, "I fink I'd 'ave tuppence on the little black 'un!"

Suspicious.

"Too bad Jinx and his wife don't get along well together."

"Why, I always understood that they were an ideal couple."

"So did I, but they must have had a dreadful scrap before he started for work this morning."

"Did he have a black eye?"

"No, but he stopped in when we were on our way home and bought her a five-pound box of candy."

Ingenious Smuggling Device.

A museum of criminology has been founded in Paris by M. Charles Perchard, formerly chief of the police Anarchist brigade. Among its curious contents are a hollow wax baby which was used to smuggle brandy into Paris. A woman carried a baby into the city every day, but as it never grew any bigger the authorities examined it and discovered the fraud.

Not So Much to Blame.

"I didn't know you were so accomplished a linguist," he remarked as he glanced at the paper she was reading.

"I don't make any pretentions in that direction," she answered.

"But that is a Russian newspaper you have picked up."

"Why, so it is," she answered in surprise. "I thought it was a dialect story."

An Apposite Choice.

Bishop Evans Tyree at a dinner in Nashville was asked if he had any idea of preaching on the new fashions—the backless evening gown, slashed skirt and so forth.

"No," said the bishop; "such an idea has not occurred to me. If, however, I should preach on the new fashions I would assuredly choose my text from Revelation."

No Kick Coming From Mule.

"Is that your mule?" asked the man going fishing.

"Yassir," said the colored man, who was sitting on a log by the road.

"Does he kick?"

"'Deed, mistuh, he ain't got no cause to kick. He's gittin' his own way right along. I'm de one dat's havin' de worry an' difficulty."

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. The first application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

That's Settled.

Bobbie (who has been sent over for the fifth time to find out how Mrs. Brown is)—All right, ma; she's dead.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

A woman loves a man in proportion to his ability to make her angry.

FURNISHED BOND OF AMITY

Discomfited "Good Samaritan" the Unwilling Means of Bringing Rival Humorists Together.

Once upon a time two humorists dwelt in the same small town and both contributed to the Sunday Star. As was but natural, they became wildly jealous of each other, and when one would win a little more prominence than his fellow the other would have seven kinds of fits. "Your Pleasant Valley Items give me a pain!" quoth one. "Your prose rhymes make me ill!" retorted the other. As they were about to come to blows there appeared on the scene a Good Samaritan, and to him they appealed. "Which of us is the funnier?" they asked. "Neither!" was the prompt reply. "You are both as unfunny as wart hogs, and as tiresome as a trip across the Sahara!" Thereat they both set upon the gentleman from Samaria and beat him full sore, and dwelt together in amity forever after.

Moral: From this we should learn that while humorists delight in quarreling among themselves, they frequently resent criticism from outsiders.—Kansas City Star.

Modern Greek.

A stranger came into our office and graciously offered us some fruit which he said he purchased downstairs in the Greek grocery store. We asked him what Greek grocery, and he said the one right under us, in Holpos' place. We have been here some time and knew nobody of that name, and to satisfy our curiosity we went downstairs to have a look.

Sure enough, there was what did look like "Holpos" on the end of the awning, at least there were the letters "H Q L P O S" standing out in bold relief. We have learned since that it is an abbreviation used by the store which, when translated, means "Highest quality, lowest prices, our standard." To the average reader it's all Greek and would easily pass for a Hellenic name.—Quincy Ledger.

SCALY DANDRUFF ON HEAD

Shiner, Texas.—"I had dandruff so badly my head would itch and when I scratched it would hurt. My head was full of scaly dry dandruff and it became so thick that it scaled off and showed plainly. My head was almost white with it. It crusted and itched terribly. It got so bad I could hardly rest at night. My hair began to fall out, and it was lifeless.

"I tried a bottle of ——, but it did me little good. I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a sample. I applied the Cuticura Ointment to my scalp and frequently shampooed my head with the Cuticura Soap. After using one cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment my head was cured. Now I am free from dandruff and my hair is growing." (Signed) Miss Ida Ringhoffer, Mar. 28, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Oh, That Way!

"It's such a silly superstition to be always picking up pins!"

"You may call it a superstition if you wish, but I know a chap who makes about $6 a week by doing it."

"How can a fellow gather that many?"

"He works in a bowling alley."—Judge.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Not Entirely Gone.

Church—They say horses have all been banished from the street railroads in Berlin.

Gotham—Yes, but you'll still find 'em on the menus.

Short Memory.

Father—Why, son, you've grown another foot since you went off to college.

Son—No, father, you forget; I had two feet when I left home.

A street car runs twice as fast when you are trying to catch it as it does after you have caught it.

The real secret of happiness is to let the other fellow do the worrying.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. All dealers or sent express paid for $1.00.

HAROLD SOMERS, 180 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ONLY $21.90

f. o. b. factory for this nice 6 hole, nickel trimmed steel range without water tank. Add $3.50 for tank. Has Duplex Grates for coal or wood.

HIGH POINT NOVELTY WORKS HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA

Kodakers, Listen

We develop your films absolutely FREE. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Send us your order for Eastman films. Fresh supply always on hand. Mail orders solicited.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

METAL ROOFING

Shingles, Spanish Tile

EVERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

WE PAY THE FREIGHT WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES

THE M. EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO. COVINGTON - KY.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent Free Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Successor to Dr. H. H. Greens Sons, Box O, Atlanta, Ga.

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 29-1914.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Ready for To-morrow?

Horses digest their feed less thoroughly than other farm animals. In order to insure thorough digestion of all the food eaten, and to make your horses readier for next day's work, add to their evening feed a teaspoonful of—

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

It will lessen your feed bills.
It will increase your profits.

I am using Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE with my horses regularly and find it a saving proposition on feed. It also makes them healthy, thriving and clean.
Ira Johnston,
R. F. D. No. 1,
O'Neill, Nebr.

25c, 50c and $1. per can.
At your dealer's.
P. B. 1

Mr. W. H. Conway of Jemison was in Clanton Saturday.

J. W. Henley of Thorsby was here Monday on business.

Miss Kate Goodgame spent a few days last week with relatives and friends in Thorsby.

Commissioners Shaw Robinson and Atchison attended court here this week.

FOR SALE—An extra good milk cow and calf.
W. L. House
R. F. D. 5

The grading work on the road south of Clanton has been completed as far as Cordror's old mill place; the road is in good shape.

Mrs. W. W. Monroe of Fayette Ala., is spending several days with friends here.

Commissioner W. T. Herrod of Planterville was here this week attending to court business,

FOR SALE—One of the best home places in West town. Good house on well situated and large lot. For particulars see O. O. Roper, Clanton, Ala.

Postmaster Dudley spent last Friday in Calera.

Miss Katie Smith of Mt. Creek was in Clanton last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Robinson of Birmingham spent Sunday with friends here.

Ernest Mims and family of Birmingham have been visiting relatives here for several days.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle; 2 milch cows and calves freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

Dr. G. C. Roper of Searles is spending a few days at home

Take your watch and eye work to Doctor J. V. Higgins.

Digestion Faulty?

Does your stomach refuse to digest your food properly? If such is the case there will soon be other disorders in your system. Your food must be rightly assimilated or there will be a lack of vitality and broken health. POINDEXTER'S TONIC will give your stomach exactly the help that is needed, It will strengthen the digestive organs and restore perfect action. From the very beginning of treatment with this remedy you can eat what you like without fear of distress.

UPCHURCH DRUG CO.

Special Sale of SLIPPERS And Low Cut Shoes.

During the remainder of this month I will sell at cost, my entire stock of Mens and Boys Low Cut Shoes and Slippers. This is no "bum" lot. It is my regular summer stock, and of the best line made. Do not want to carry them over to next season. If you need a pair come to see me. I can save you money.

Sale Lasts till August 1st Only.

Wiley Littlejohn,
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

Notice of Singing School

To all who may be interested in same, I desire to say that I will teach a twenty days singing school at Walnut Creek church, beginning July 20. For rates of tuition see or write me at Clanton, R. 2. J. A. W. Mims.

Miss Elinor Robinson, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Birmingham has returned to her eummer home at Deatsville. She has had as her house guests for the past week Misses Pauline Roberts of Decatur, Myrtle Henley of Thorsby, Ruby and Annie Johnson of Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Callen motored with a party of friends to Jemison and Thorsby Sunday evening.

L. J. Duncan and P. C. Wilson made a buainess trip to Stanton one day last week.

Mr. W. H. Thomas of Jemison one of the oldest citizens of our county was here Tuesday Mr. Thomas comes to Clanton regularly to draw his pension, he being a Confederate veteran.

Rev. Jerome O. Williams is at home for a few days.

L. Cantreil spent Friday in Evergreen.

Miss Marie Campbell returned to her home in Montevallo last Tuesday after a pleasant visit to Miss Ruby Gore.

Miss Lurline Harper spent Thursday with friends in Wetumpka.

Miss Kate Little of Birmingham is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stanfield.

HEALTH PAST FIFTY

Careful diet is of utmost importance to men and women past fifty years of age; it keeps up their strength, and the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion is a nourishing food, a curative medicine and a sustaining tonic to regulate the functions.

It contains the medicinal fats of pure cod liver oil and science proves that they furnish twice as much energy as other foods—then too, it creates pure blood, sharpens the appetite, relieves rheumatism, strengthens the body and alleviates the ailments due to declining years.

Scott's is free from wines, alcohol or harmful drugs. Beware of substitutes.

Calvin Wilson, Sam Kanjutzky, Clarence Evans, and G. O. Anderson motored out to Lodk 12 Sunday atternoon.

D. Y. Johnston and family have returned from a visit to relatives at Rockford.

Miss Hatty Jones is visiting her sister, Mrs. J. P. Hayes.

C. H. Hunt spent Sunday in Birmingham.

Hoke Pipes spent Sunday in Nashville.

Robert Croswell was in Clanton Monday on business.

Prof. Pickens is visiting in Moulton, Ala.

For first class work, painting paper hanging, decorating, etc., see E. J. Townsend, Clanton Ala. He guarantees his work. Patronage of country people given attention. 7 16 4

Misses Mable and Myrtle Wilson of Montgomery Ala. are spending some time with their aunt Mrs. W. H. Sartor.

Miss Callie Watts is spending her vacation at Falakto Lake Maplesville Spaings, and Montgemery Ala.

FOR SALE

Remington typewriter model No. 7 bargain if taken at once. Apply at Union-Banner Office

Twelve Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Groceries of Us

No. 1.

BECAUSE back of this store stands the personal integrity of the management.

We have emphatically impressed the value of honesty upon all our employees.

No cheap trickster's methods are tolerated.

W. Z. HODGES,
CLANTON, ALA.

Lost near the Masonic Hall on June 12th a gold vest chain the finder will please return chain to W. H. Sartor Clanton Ala., and a liberal reward.

Miss Minnie Muse has returned from a sweet vacation near Cooperville Ala.

Take your watch and eye work to Doctor J. V. Higgins.

IF KIDNEY AND BLADDER BOTHER THEN FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Overworked kidneys will break down if not helped. When they can no longer protect the blood and the body from the poisons that come to them, then look out for Bright's disease, serious kidney trouble and bladder annoyances Foley Kidney Pills are your best protection, your best medicine for weak, sore, overworked kidney and bladder weaknesses. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that Mr. Grady Reynolds, by mutual consent, has withdrawn from our firm.

This, July 3rd, 1914.
J. Gordon Mims,
W. A. Mims.

Men Pay Homage to Mother's Friend

"I am not surprised to observe the number of men who come into the store to purchase 'Mother's Friend,'" remarked a leading druggist.

The expectant mother if she hasn't heard of this splendid embrocation is probably not reading the papers to much extent. And if she does it is a happy thought to send hubby to the drug store. "Mother's Friend" is applied externally over the abdominal muscles.

It is a gentle, soothing lubricant, penetrates to the fine network of nerves beneath the skin and has a marked tendency to relieve the muscular strain to which these broad, flat abdominal muscles are subjected. The cords, tendons and ligaments are thus permitted to stretch without the corresponding surface strain so often involved during the period of expectation. And particularly to young mothers is this remedial application of inestimable value, since in thus keeping the muscles firm but pliant it enables them to go through the ordeal without laceration of the coldernis often the case when this gentle attention is neglected.

"Mother's Friend" is highly recommended by a host of women. Write Bradfield Regulator Co., 403 Lamar Bldg. Atlanta, Ga., and we will send you a valuable book of information for expectant mothers.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADD

AUTOMOBILES FOR HI

Prompt Service Day or Nig

Two New Five Passenger C

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone

SEASHORE EXCURSIONS

Every Saturday until August 30th
TO
Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola	$6.65	Foley	$7.45
Pascagoula	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.35
Biloxi	8.40	Gulfport	9.00
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis	9.30

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fare with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply
L&N
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A. G. P. A., New Orleans

COURAGE

All mankind honors the courageous individual. The world pays willing homage to the men who stood on the ill-fated Titanic that the women and children might be saved.

Nations have for centuries dedicated memorials to the heroic dead. Tributes in prose and verse have been poured out unsparingly.

Physical courage commands the admiration of the world.

But there is another and equally as important courage,—moral courage.

The man who stands for the right in the face of public clamor; the man who from inherent courage is strong enough to mete out justice tempered with mercy.

Such a man is an invaluable asset to a city, state or nation. He is the kind of man who, after being correctly informed, will ask of himself what is right, and being convinced will do the right.

The L. & N. shares the public admiration for such men. Having had its work of supplying service and conducting development rewarded by ignorance, prejudice and selfishness, the L. & N. knows the value of courageous manhood, and the danger of moral weakness to the public welfare.

Ridicule is a dreadful weapon. Men dread it. Most big men, crave understanding and sympathy. The absence of these and the presence of ridicule prove the bigness. If, in the face of ridicule and without understanding and sympathy, a man performs his duty, he is truly great.

And the performance of that duty not alone enhances his reputation,—which means to promote him in the esteem of his fellow man,—but it strengthens his character, which means to make him an even better man.

The L. & N. talks of these things because we want the understanding and sympathy of the morally courageous men. We want their help and co-operation in our efforts to do what is for the general public good.

We want your moral support and sympathetic co-operation. We will endeavor to at all times merit the confidence reposed in us by the morally courageous.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

THE

THE UNION 11th Year

...D ROADS DAYS, AUGUST 14-15TH.

...e wide interest is being ...ed in the observance of ... Roads Days, August 14-15. ...abama Good Roads Association is making an active effort to secure the co-operation of ...n County in this move-... Secretary J. A. Rountree ...ritten the following letter ...ge E. B. Deason, which is ...xplanatory.

...ngham, Ala. July 14th, 1914

...E. B. Deason,
Clanton, Ala.

...r Judge:—August 14th-15th ...ood Roads Days. We hope ...ou have everything organ-... your county to observe ...days. Reports from nearly ...unties, stating that they will ...e Good Roads Days have ...received. We are glad to ... that you are deeply interested in the good roads movement and hope that you will lend ... aid possible to make the ... success.

...ry indication points that ...t 100,000 citizens in Alabama will turn out and work the ... on these days. Think of ...lendid work that will be ...pliseed by these volunteer ...s and the great enthusi-...t will be aroused by the ...y of the highway of the ...

...y resolutions endorsing ...Roads Days have been ... by the Alabama Good ... Association, the Alabama ...Association, the Alabama ... Letter Carriers Associa-...d the Alabama Farmers ...

...ernor O'Neal has issued a ...mation appealing to the ...e to observe Good Roads ... also calling upon the pro-...udges and county commis-...s to see that the same is put ...ffect.

... Alabama Good Roads Association, which inaugurated this ...ment in 1911 shall be the ...st days in the history of ...te and we hope that you ...ve no stone unturned to ... the same a great success. ...sociation stands ready to ...you in every way possible ... splendid work.

...With very high regards, we are Yours very truly
...ma Good Roads Assn.
Per J. A. Rountree Secy.

...unty Teacher's Examination

...e state teacher's examina-...or Chilton county was held ...e court house in Clanton ...day, Tuesday and Wednes-... Following are the names ...se who applied for certifi-...

... Eiland, Florence R. Mims, ...e Vance, Pearl Durbin, Ola ..., Ara Mullins. Julia Mae ...on, Gertrude Popwell, Ce-...rris, Jennie Wilson, Addie ..., Laura Martin, Thos. M. ..., S. H. Herbert, Mason ...mon, Oliver C. Duke, Geo. ...rick, Wymon McByrde ... F. H. Chappelle, Mabel ...

...blic Working

...ere will be a public work ... Rockey Mt., on Saturday ..., for the purpose of clean-... cemetery. Everybody ...ed is asked to come and ... tools.

C. M. Northcutt.

In Me...

On the morni... the death angel ... of Mr. and Mrs ... and claimed as ... sweet little darl... was born Feb. 1... lived to be sixte...

Funeral servic... ed by Rev. ... after which th... laid to rest at S... etery.

One W...

Rev. S. M... Is Chose...

To Officiate ... Rev. H. W...

On Sunday th... tist church in re... elected Rev. S. ... porarily to fill t... H. W. Fancher ... sick with typho... and is yet unab... vices. Rev. ... the call, and beg... services Sunda... will be preac... Sunday and Su... as it was befo... was taken sick.

Card of ...

Editor Union ... to thank our m... relatives for th... assistance durin... of our little girl ... tender our than... physician Dr. ... faithful service ... O. F. at Cooper ... liberal asstance ... est blessings ... thanking you ... main.

O. L. Devaug...

The ... Souv... serve... Stron... of th... succe... to pl... Only ... way ... fair p... wort... peop...

HEE LEE MADI
MOBILES FOR HI
Service Day or Nig
New Five Passenger C
CLANTON, ALA.
Phon

SHORE EXCURSIONS
y Saturday until August 30th
TO
lf Coast Resorts
OUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON a - $6.65 Foley - - $7.45
la - - 8.00 Ocean Springs 8.35
- - 8.40 Gulfport - - 9.00
stian 9.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.30
Ten Days Return Limit
ALSO
e daily until September 30th, regular round her Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fare n limit of October 31st.
For particulars apply
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orlea

COURAGE
d honors the courageous individual. T lling homage to the men who stood as d Titanic that the women and child
d.
ve for centuries dedicated memorials
d. Tributes in prose and verse have b sparingly.
urage commands the admiration of s another and equally as important c ourage.
no stands for the right in the face of p e man who from inherent courage to mete out justice tempered with mer is an invaluable asset to a city, state s the kind of man who, after being c d, will ask of himself what is right, a d will do the right.
. shares the public admiration for su had its work of supplying service a velopment rewarded by ignorance, pre shness, the L. & N. knows the value anhood, and the danger of moral we blic welfare.
a dreadful weapon. Men dread it. M e understanding and sympathy. The and the presence of ridicule prove th n the face of ridicule and without und ympathy, a man performs his duty, he formance of that duty not alone enhan
,—which means to promote him in fellow man,—but it strengthens his ch neans to make him an even better m
. talks of these things because we w ding and sympathy of the morally co
We want their help and co-operation do what is for the general public good.
our moral support and sympathetic
e will endeavor to at all times merit osed in us by the morally courageous.
VILLE AND NASHVILLE
ILROAD COMPANY

THE UNION-BANNER

Register Chanc'y April 2

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 15

ROADS DAYS, AUGUST 14-15TH.

wide interest is being d in the observance of Roads Days, August 14-15. bama Good Roads As-
on is making an active ef-secure the co-operation of County in this move-Secretary J. A. Rountree itten the following letter ge E. B. Deason, which is planatory.
ngham, Ala. July 14th, 1914
E. B. Deason,
Clanton, Ala.
r Judge:—August 14th-15th
ood Roads Days. We hope ou have everything organ-your county to observe days. Reports from nearly unties, stating that they will e Good Roads Days have eceived. We are glad to that you are deeply interin the good roads move-nd hope that you will lend aid possible to make the success.
y indication points that 100,000 citizens in Ala-will turn out and work the on these days. Think of endid work that will be liseed by these volunteer and the great enthusiwill be aroused by the
of the highway of the y resolutions endorsing oads Days have been

by the Alabama Good Association, the Alabama
Association, the Alabama
Letter Carriers Associad the Alabama Farmers

vernor O'Neal has issued a mation appealing to the to observe Good Roads also calling upon the pro-dges and county commis-
s to see that the same is put fect.
Alabama Good Roads As-
on, which inaugurated this ent in 1911 shall be the t days in the history of e and we hope that you ve no stone unturned to he same a great success.
ociation stands ready to in every way possible plendid work.
very high regards, we are Yours very truly
a Good Roads Assn.
er J. A. Rountree Secy.

nty Teacher's Examination

state teacher's examinar Chilton county was held court house in Clanton y, Tuesday and Wednes-Following are the names
e who applied for certifi-

Eiland, Florence R. Mims, Vance, Pearl Durbin, Ola
Ara Mullins. Julia Mae
n, Gertrude Popwell, Ce-
ris, Jennie Wilson, Addie Laura Martin, Thos. M.
S H. Herbert, Mason
son, Oliver C. Duke, Geo.
ick, Wymon McDyade
F. H. Chappelle, Mabel

blic Working

e will be a public work Rockey Mt., on Saturday for the purpose of clean-cemetery. Everybody
d is asked to come and ools.
C. M. Northcutt.

In Memory

On the morning of June 28, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Busby and claimed as its victim the sweet little darling Onzell. She was born Feb. 12, 1913; and only lived to be sixteen months old.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Charles Milstead after which the remains were laid to rest at South Calera cemetery.

One Who Loved her.

Rev. S.M. Adams Is Chosen Pastor

To Officiate in Absence of Rev. H W. Fancher.

On Sunday the Clanton Baptist church in regular conference elected Rev. S. M. Adams temporarily to fill the pulpit for Rev. H. W. Fancher, who has been sick with typhoid some weeks, and is yet unable to conduct services. Rev. Adams accepted the call, and began his work with services Sunday night. There will be preaching now every Sunday and Sunday night, just as it was before Rev. Fancher was taken sick.

Card of Thanks

Editor Union-Banner we wish to thank our many friends and relatives for their kindness and assistance during the long illness of our little girl Velma. We also tender our thanks to the faithful physician Dr. R. J. Eiland for his faithful service and to the I. O. O. F. at Cooper Lodge for their liberal asstance. May Gods richest blessings be with you all thanking you all again we remain.

O. L. Devaughn and wife,
Clanton Route 6.

A New Cotton Gin For Mount. Creek

Judge Graft Sims and Mr. W. W. Cobern of Mt. Creek, have organized a new cotton ginning company at Mountain Creek; they purchased the plant which was owned and controlled by the Southern Cotton Oil Company, and, then financed the new company by selling stock to cotton growers and farmers adjacent to Mountain Creek. The plant will be in operation by the ginning season.

Union Grove.

Our U. S. A. Society Base Ball first nine was challenged to play Shelby first nine Saturday evening, July 11th. Two two-horse wagon loads left home Saturday morning for Shelby to begin the game early in the afternoon. The game was called at 1:30 o'clock with a large crowd to witness the proceedings. The scores, 5 to 3, in favor of Shelby closed the game, which lasted a little less than an hour. At the last half of the fifth inning was the scores 3 to 0 in favor of U. S. A. S., but the errors of O. E. Little and O. O. Barnett gave Shelby four scores.

"Bobet" of Birmingham pitched for Shelby, fanning 8. Jean Bean, pitaher for the U. S. A. S., fanned out 15.

Our manager, O. O. Barnett challenged the Shelby boys to meet him on our grouuds one evening this week.

We want to thank the Shelby team for their kindness shown our boys

(Miss) Bertha Conway,
Secretary U. S. A. S.

Fairview

There will be a Union rally at this place on Friday, July 31st. Everybody is invited to come hnd bring baskets well filled.

Unity-Chilton Baptist High School

At the Fifth Sunday Meeting at Stanton, a rousing interest was manifested when the discussion of the Baptist High School for central Alabama came up. Although everything has not been as we might have wished, the first year's work was reasonably successful, and we trust we are facing a successfull future. A Strong faculty has been provided for the coming session with Rev. John A. Pool, Ph. D., as President. Dr. Pool is from Georgia, and has successful experience in the Baptist school work in that state, and under his leadership we expect a great years work. We appeal to the Baptists of this section to rally to the support of the school, and make for this part ot Alabama a great and needed institution.

List of Letters

Remaining uncalled for at the Clanton Post Office for the week ending July 18, 1914:

Ladies—Miss Phoebe Mints, Mrs. Ella Philips, Miss Lily Marlar, Miss Selena Williams, Mrs. Babe Headley, Miss Willie Bell, Mrs. Jessie Green, Mrs. Fannie Riley Mrs. Cecil Foshee, Mrs. Lulia Waggoner, (2).

Gentlemen—Anison Johnson, Walter Ready, (2), N. L. Minor Ocie White, Look Owens, P. D. Henderson, Ceolar Hammock, Elbert Ellis, Willy Roberts, Fred Robertson, C. E. Redwine, Lemuel Standifes, J. C. White, J. A. Hargrove, Walter Kelly, L. J. Mason.

These Letters will be sent to the Dead Letter Office August 1, 1914. if not delivered before. In calling for the above, please say 'Advertised, giving date of list.

F. O. Dudley, P. M.

NOTICE

Those who bring or send chickens and eggs to Clanton should see me before selling. I will pay the best cash market price.

G. W. Marcus.

7 2 4t.

Mt. Pleasant

The Democrats seem to be in a bad fix: They know if they endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson, the common people will be against them, and if they don't endorse it they know there is no Eederal office for them, which they love so well, so there they are.

G. W. Melton and T. C. Maberg visited relatives in Coosa last week.

Joe Pody and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Jake Plyer below Clanton.

Milton Cotton and mother of near Liberty Hill spent Sunday with his brother, Will Cotton.

Shipping water melons is the issue of the day here.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Blackman of Texas are visiting at R. M. Butlers.

Prof. W. G, Culp and wife spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Culp.

Mr. Oliver Duke of Marble Valley is visiting friends here.

Will Watson and wife were visitors at B. F. Masseys Sunday.

Mrs. A. J. Duncan is visiting her parens Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Joyner.

J. A. Louis and wife visited the latter's parents, T. F. Hawkins near Cooper.

There will be preaching here next Sunday at eleven o'clock and Sunday school at nine.

Little Viewer.

Poplar Springs

All persons who are interested are requested to meet at this place on July 30, 1914, for the purpose of doing some work in the cemetery and in and around the church. All members are especially urged to come and bring plenty of tools.

J. P. Stonecipher.

FOR SALE.

Yoke of well trained oxen. Weight, abont 1700 pounds. A good logging team.

D. F. Jones, Clanton, R. 5.

CITROLAX CITROLAX GIVE IT TO THE CHILDREN

Finest physic in the world for children. They love to take it—it tastes like lemonade. It is mild—and suits their sensitive organs. It is thorough—and keeps their system cleansed, sweet and wholesome. It dose the same for grown ups, too. An Ideal laxative. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

COMMISSIONERS'S SALE

The state of Albama, Chilton County: Probate Court.

In pursuance of the directions and terms of a Commission dated the 23rd day of May, 1914, issued by Hon. E. B. Deason, Judge of probate of said county, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder. for cash at public auction, on the 15 day of Aug., 1914 between the hours of 11 o'clock, a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m., at the court house, Clanton, Ala., the following described property:

S.E. fourth of N.W. fourth, and the S.W. fourth of the N.E. fourth of Sec. 16, Tp. 21, R. 14, in Chilton county, Ala.; 13 shares of stock in the Farmer's Warehouse and Storage Company, of Clanton, Ala., which said property is to be sold under the order of said Probate court, for the purpose of division and partition between the several joint owners thereof, viz:

Dewey Gallman, Harvey Gallman, Anderson Gallman, Leon Gallman, Deannis Parrish, Annie Watson, Odis Culpepper, Ensley Culpepper, Pauline Massey, Ruth Massey, Reed Gallman, Luther Culpepper.

This May 23, 1914.

Grady Reynolds, Commissioner.

PROVISIONAL PROGRAM

24th Annual meeting of the Clanton District Association of Congregational Churches to be held at Mountain Springs Church July 31st, and August 1st, and 2nd, 1914.

FRIDAY

10:00 a.m. Devotional service led by delegate from Union Church.

10:15 Organization and business.

10:35 Why are we here? Rev. Adna W. Moore.

11:00 Introductory sermon Rev J. M. Graham.

1:45 Devotional service led by delegate from Pilgrim church, Birmingham.

2:00 Business.

2:15 The Educational need of Rural Alabama, Prof. W. T. Bean Supt. of Education for Chilton Co

2:35 What are Congregatinalists doing to meet these needs Discussion led by Rev. S. H. Herbert.

2:55 Address, Subject, Who is my neighbor? Luke 10:29, Rev. J. M. Graham.

3:20 Reports from Churches.

7:15 Devotional service, led by delegate from Pilgram church Calera.

7:30 Sermon, Rev. W. D. Summerfield.

SATURDAY

8:30 a.m. Devotional service, led by delegate from Mountain Springs church.

8:45 Business.

9:00 Address, Wasted lives by S. E. Norton.

9:20 Our children for Christ by Rev. E. W. Butler.

9:40 Sunday School Efficiency Rev. J. M. Graham.

10:00 Economics and Religion J. Sterling Moran, Government Economic Survey Agent.

10:20 Best ways of strengthening the fellowship of our churches Discussion, led by Rev George Eaves, D. D.

11:00 How may Christians develop Spiritual Life, Rev. Adna W. Moore.

1:45 Devotional service led by delegate from Stony Point church.

2:00 Business.

2:15 Health a spiritual asset, Miss Helen Harlan, Chilton County Red Cross Nurse.

2:45 The Social Gospel, Rev. George Eaves, D. D.

3:15 Closing Business.

7:15 Devotional Service led by delegate from Mountain Springs church.

7:30 Sermon, by Rev. S. H. Herbert.

SUNDAY

9:15 a.m. Devotional service and Testimony led by delegate from Pleasant Hill church.

9:45 Sunday School, Conducted by Rev. S. H. Herbert Lesson Text, Mark 11: 1-11.

11:00 Sermon, by Rev. George Eaves, D. D. Followed by communion service, conducted by Revs. Milstead and Culver.

Mountain Springs church is four miles east of Lomax Station on L. & N. R. R.

Delegates coming by rail Friday morning will be met with conveyance.

Delegates coming at any other time, and desiring to be met will please notify (in time) Mr. Robert Heflin, Clanton, Route 2 stating when they will reach Lomax.

You are earnestly requested to come early and remain during the meetings.

Come!

The doors of our New Store open Friday, July 24. Souvenirs for the ladies and children, and all drinks served free on Opening Day.

Strong in the belief that service and consideration of the public's needs and desires are essential to success, we have aimed in opening this new store, to please you, rather than ourselves.

Only honest drugs and merchandise shall find their way to our shelves, and we hope, by combining fair prices and courteous treatment, to be more worthy of the patronage and confidence of the good people who trade in Clanton.

Our Store is Second to None in the State.

Upchurch Drug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

HUERTA ARRIVES SAFELY AT COAST

FALLEN DICTATOR MAKES LEISURELY TRIP FROM CAPITAL TO PUERTO MEXICO.

TRIP WAS WITHOUT INCIDENTS

British Consul Gemmil Meets Huerta and Offers Him Refuge on Board the Cruiser Bristol—Germans Offer to Help Huerta.

Puerto Mexico.—Gen. Victoriano Huerta, who recently resigned as provisional president of Mexico, arrived here, accompanied by Gen. Blanquet, his minister of war.

When he expects to leave his country and share the exile of Gen. Porfirio Diaz, whom he escorted to the coast three years ago, is yet unknown except perhaps to himself. Capt. Kohler of the German cruised Dresden offered him his ship "for any use he cared to make of her," but Gen. Huerta merely thanked him, adding that he would return his call soon.

The trip to this port was without incident or unpleasantness other than that occasioned by the terrible heat of the tropical lowlands. With Huerta and Blanquet were the general staff. The party occupied a train of nine sleeping cars, four of which were given over to troops. Two other trains loaded with nothing but troops preceded Gen. Huerta's train and arrived here an hour before the Huerta train. Behind him came another train, also loaded with soldiers.

Capt. Kohler and staff, in formal dress uniform, were at the station and were officially presented to Gen. Huerta. Answering inquiries as to his health, Gen. Huerta assured the officers he felt very well, although somewhat tired from the heat.

British Vice-Consul Gemmil also officially called on Huerta and presented him a message, presumably an offer of refuge on the British cruiser Bristol. Huerta read it and expressed pleasure at the consideration being shown him.

Local officials calling on Gen. Huerta were few in number, the only one of importance being Gen. Rincon, commander of the local garrison. Commander Gabriel A. Carvallo of the Mexican gunboat Zaragoza with his staff also called, but Huerta asked to be excused.

All arrangements were made for the reception of Huerta and Blanquet and the stage was so set that they could board the Dresden or Bristol and put out to sea so quickly and quietly as to rob their flight of all dramatic elements. Tracks were laid so that the special train could be pulled along the wharf.

MEXICO CITY IS NOW QUIET

Huerta and Blanquet Leave for Coast. Huerta Would Dispense With Guard.

Mexico City.—Gen. Huerta and Gen. Blanquet, the erstwhile ministers of instruction and communication, and several other high officials of the former administration, left the capital in several automobiles for the Los Reyes station on the Interoceanic railway, where they boarded a special train. It is believed they are going to Salina Cruz.

When informed that the people shouted "Viva Huerta," when his resignation was read to the chamber, Huerta smiled and remarked that he was glad they regarded it that way. He intimated that he would much rather dispense with the guard, which by courtesy is due to him, and at the strong behest of his friends, has been thrown around him. He shows no anxiety whatever regarding his safety, and made it plain that he would much rather go about openly.

At a late hour the city was quiet. Most of the cafes were open as usual and no sound could be heard except the whirr of an automobile or the rumble of carriages and the measured tramp of the guards. The government of Mexico may have been wrested from the hands of the stern dictator, by the combined force of almost the western hemisphere, but Mexico City does not seem to mind it. The city sleeps.

Washington.—News of Gen. Huerta's resignation as provisional president of Mexico was hailed by official Washington as the first practical step toward a quick solution of the Mexican problem. Constitutional diplomats and officials of the United States were elated over Gen. Huerta's voluntarily withdrawing and predicted an era of peace in his country.

Would Prevent Disorder.

El Paso, Texas.—In case of a sudden fall of the Huerta government, constitutionalist troops can enter Mexico City within a few hours. This would prevent the much feared reign of disorder at the national capital.

Huerta Must Surrender.

Saltillo, Mexico.—Unconditional surrender is the only condition on which Carranza will treat with Huerta and his party. This was emphasized by high constitutionalists in discussing the proposed resignation of Huerta.

HUERTA QUITS PRESIDENCY

Mexican Congress Accepts Resignation of Dictator—Carbajal Made President by Congress.

Mexico City.—General Victoriano Huerta resigned from the provisional presidency of the Mexican republic, and his resignation was accepted by the senate and chamber of deputies by a vote of 121 to 17.

Francisco Carbajal then was appointed president and took the oath of office at the joint session of the deputies and senators.

Huerta's resignation was submitted through the department of foreign relations. It was read in the house and was greeted with cries of "Viva Huerta." It then was referred to the joint committees of gobernacion. After brief consideration the committees reported, accepting the resignation in the following terms:

"Article 1. We accept the resignation presented by General Victoriano Huerta as president of the Mexican United States.

"Article 2. We call Licentiate Francisco Carbajal, minister of foreign relations, to assume the presidency."

A ballot was taken and the joint session approved the report.

President Carbajal proceeded to the national palace under an escort of presidential guards, and all along the way was greeted with tumultuous cheering.

The text of General Huerta's resignation follows:

"Deputies and Senators: Public necessity admitted by the chamber of deputies, by the senate and by the supreme court called me to the supreme magistracy of the republic. Later when in this same hall I had the honor of addressing you in compliance with the constitutional precept I promised at all costs to bring about peace.

"Seventeen months have passed, and in that brief period of time I have formed an army with which to carry out that solemn promise. You all know the immense difficulties which my government has encountered, owing to a scarcity of funds, as well as to the manifest and decided protection which a great power of this continent has afforded to the rebels—so that when the revolution has been broken up, seeing that its chief leaders were and continued to be divided, the power in question sought a pretext to intervene directly in the conflict and the result of this was the outrage committed at Vera Cruz by the American fleet.

"Success was had, as you know, in adjusting honorably through our delegates at Niagara Falls the petty Tampico incident, but the revolution continued, with the support of whom we all know.

"Yet after the highly patriotic work achieved by our delegates at Niagara Falls, there still are some who say I, come what may, seek my personal interest and not that of the republic. And as I need to rebut this allegation with facts I tender my formal resignation of the presidency of the republic.

"The national congress must know that the republic, through its government, has labored in entire good faith and with the fullest energy, having succeeded in doing away with the party which in the United States calls itself democratic and having shown how the right should be defended.

"To be more explicit, I will say that the action of the government of the republic during its short life has dealt death blows to an unjust power. Later on, stronger workers will come, using implements that undoubtedly will end that power which has done so much harm and committed so many outrages on this continent.

"In conclusion, I will say that I abandon the presidency of the republic, carrying with me the highest sum of human wealth, for I declare that I have arraigned at the bar of universal conscience the honor of a puritan, whom I, as a gentleman, challenge to wrest from me that possession.

"May God bless you and me."

The galleries of the chamber of deputies were packed before the beginning of the session. Intense excitement characterized the gathering, and at the close of the reading of Huerta's resignation the deputies and spectators broke into loud and continued applause.

After the acceptance of Huerta's resignation a commission was appointed by the president of the chamber to escort Senor Carbajal to the floor of the house. Senor Carbajal soon appeared in front of the chamber, passing through files of soldiers. He entered and as he walked to the platform the deputies stood. Speaker Manuel Mercado then administered the oath.

Two deputies spoke vigorously against the acceptance of Huerta's resignation, one calling it "weak submission to the United States."

Huerta Sees French Fete.

Mexico City.—President Huerta attended the French fete in celebration of the 125th anniversary of the fall of the bastile. He was accompanied by his daughters and son.

Huerta Debts Invalid.

Monterey, Mex.—"General Caranza will not recognize the validity of the debts of Huerta after he enters Mexico City and establishes a Constitutionalist government there" was the statement made here by high Constitutionalist officials.

Lind Will Not Talk.

Duluth, Minn.—"Events and results will show for the administration and for the nation," said John Lind when asked what he thought of Huerta's resignation.

HUERTA A PROTEGE OF GENERAL DIAZ

Former President of Mexican Republic Early Recognized Possibilities of Man Who Practically Succeeded Him in Power.

Has Seen Hard Service, and From the First Has Been Recognized as a Ruthless and Determined Man—Seemingly Knows No Quality of Mercy.

Once intended by old Porfirio to be a second Diaz in Mexico, now, like his former chief, a fugitive from the wrath of his compatriots, Victoriano Huerta sees himself at sixty forced to resign the presidency of his country. He will, it is believed, go to Europe, where, like other Latin American presidents, he will end his days with little enjoyment save that of reminiscence.

Huerta was born to wealth. Unlike Diaz, who is of plebeian origin, a mongrel, mostly Indian, Huerta comes of one of the most aristocratic families in Mexico.

He was born in Chihuahua, with which state the Huertas have long been identified, in 1854, or 1857, reports differ. At the age of seventeen the aristocrat was appointed by Diaz, then ruling Mexico with an iron hand, to the military school of Chapultepec.

Huerta served his four school years passably well. He was neither at the head nor the foot of his class. He was graduated with honors, being about the tenth in a class of nearly a hundred, and immediately went to join a regiment on the west coast as a second lieutenant of engineers.

When President Diaz began his reorganization of the Mexican army Huerta was promoted captain of engineers, and while holding this rank devised the plan for a Mexican general staff corps. He was an active member of the military map commission created to draft a staff map of Mexico on a large scale, and he had charge of all the topographical work of the commission, leading exploring and surveying parties over the wildest regions of the republic.

President Diaz soon after began to place confidence in Huerta. He believed he saw in the lieutenant colonel of engineers, to which rank the soldier had succeeded, traits which would make him a worthy successor in the executive chair. Huerta was placed in charge of a station in Matanzas, far removed from the capital. There plots could be easily hatched, and Diaz was loath to leave in charge any officer in whom he had not implicit trust.

Huerta was barely thirty-five when this incident occurred. One afternoon while he was riding with an escort of but three men through a mountain pass in the vicinity of his station, six or seven masked men stepped from the roadside and covered his little party. Naturally they threw up their hands.

The highwaymen proved to be members of the band of Flores Zegaza, the bandit who kept the community on the feather edge. It was his habit to descend on the towns along the coast and levy toll whenever hunger or caprice impelled him to do so. Huerta soon stood in front of Zegaza's hut, an adobe dwelling, much dilapidated, far up the mountain.

There Zegaza made the proposition which was not at all unusual in Mexico then, and which is, in fact, quite the vogue today. He proposed that Huerta should keep him informed as to the days when the military force would be marching in a direction opposite from the town.

On such days Zegaza would make it a point to call, with his followers, and collect from the natives such stores of money and clothes and food and wine and tobacco as had accumulated since the last visit.

Zegaza was not at all surprised to have Huerta accept his proposition to receive in return for the promised information a share of whatever loot fell to the bandits.

Ten days later Huerta sent word to Zegaza that he would be away from the station on the following Thursday.

Promptly on Thursday the bandits rode into Matanzas, confident there would be no opposition except from the sporadic popguns of the overfrightened storekeepers. As they turned into the main street, discharging their revolvers to frighten every one away, a squad of Huerta's soldiers closed in on their rear and another squad appeared in their front.

A number of Zegaza's men were killed in the street. The remainder, with the bandit chief himself, surrendered. A week later Zegaza was shot in the cuartel of the prison attached to the station.

Huerta is no drawing room soldier. He has seen much active service. In 1901 he took command of the infantry in the campaign against the Yaqui Indians. After this campaign he was again put in charge of the general staff's topographical work in Sonora. He participated in subsequent Yaqui campaigns and also in the campaign in Yucatan against the Maya Indians.

Huerta commanded all the detached government forces in the state of Guerrero at the beginning of the Madero revolution. When Madero succeded to the presidency, General Huerta was sent back into Morelos with a force to put down the Zapata rebellion. As a result of ill feeling growing out of this campaign, Huerta was recalled. Subsequently he led the army sent against Orozco, and was in command at the battle of Bachimba. For this service he was promoted to major general.

In the second Felix Diaz revolution, which resulted in the overthrow of the Madero government, Huerta was immediately called to active command as the senior ranking general then in the capital. He escorted Madero from Chapultepec castle to the palace on the first of the ten days' fighting and was placed in entire command of the forces of the government. He directed the government troops during all the subsequent fighting, and the conduct of these operations led to severe criticism on the part of Madero's friends.

It was charged that he did not carry out the operations with any spirit and that he disobeyed the commands of President Madero. It is said that before Blanquet entered the city the generals had a conference at which the fate of the Maderos was sealed.

Huerta was the moving spirit in the consummation of the plot that resulted in the seizure of the person of President Madero, his brother, Gustave, and Vice President Jose Pino Saurez. The assassinations of the Maderos and Saurez followed, and in the meantime Huerta, with the military behind him, had been recognized as the provisional president.

Huerta at once sought recognition of the United States, for it is understood in Latin-American countries that none of their presidents can hold office long without being recognized by the American government. President Wilson, however, refused to treat Huerta as chief executive of Mexico.

In the meantime, General Carranza, the successor of Madero in the dream of a justly governed Mexico, was winning over the North. His military commander, General Villa, repeatedly defeated the federal forces. Practically all of the North came under the constitutionalist sway. In the South Zapata held out against Huerta.

Then the United States came down upon him, seizing the city of Vera Cruz as a result of an affront to the Stars and Stripes. Mediation at the instance of Argentina, Brazil and Chile followed with no satisfactory results.

HAVE FAITH IN CARBAJAL

Huerta's Successor a Civilian and a Man of Acknowledged Probity—His Honorable Career.

Mexico City.—Francisco Carbajal is forty-four years old, a native of the state of Campeche, and a lawyer.

Almost ever since the start of his career he has occupied posts in the judiciary. In the Madero administration he was a senator, but relinquished his post to re-enter the supreme court, of which he was chief justice at the time General Huerta appointed him minister of foreign relations.

When General Porfirio Diaz determined in 1911 to treat with the Madero revolutionists, Senor Carbajal proceeded to Juarez as his commissioner.

Senor Carbajal has a reputation for possessing considerable intellectual force and independence of character. His demeanor is quiet. He shuns the exuberance in verbiage and gesticulation to which Latin-Americans are prone. He is courteous, but a man of few words and little given to elaborate compliments.

Besides, he is neat and well groomed in appearance. His features indicate pure European descent, without any admixture of Indian blood.

Altogether he is a man who conveys an impression of reserve power. He is a good man of business.

His probity has never been questioned. He has been sagacious and successful in investments and, while not rich, is a man of independent means. He is a man of family.

Fight Fog by Wireless.

Clearing away fogs by hurling into the mist great bolts from a wireless apparatus has been demonstrated to be feasible by the North Railroad company of France. The electric waves dissolve the water particles which constitute the fog.

As much as 600 feet can be cleared in front of the antennae. With improved machinery it is confidently believed that the discovery will prove of great aspect to ships at sea and will do much to prevent such accidents as the ramming of the Empress of Ireland and the drowning of hundreds.

Two Regrets.

"I s'pose John is still takin' life easy?" said the woman in the train.

"Yes," answered the woman who was carrying a bundle of clothes. "John has only got two regrets in life. One is that he has to wake up and eat, an' the other is that he has to give up eatin' to sleep."—Pearson's (London) Weekly.

INDICT MRS. CARMAN ON MURDER CHARGE

WIFE OF FREEPORT PHYSICIAN ACCUSED OF MANSLAUGHTER. TRIAL SET FOR FALL.

SHE PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Weeps Hysterically After She Had Been Arraigned—Great Crowd of Curious Throng Courtroom to Hear Jury's Report.

Freeport, N. Y.—Mrs. Florence Conklin-Carman, a woman as remarkable as the tragedy in which she has starred, was released from Nassau county jail under $20,000 bond to appear in court some time this fall and answer to the charge of killing Mrs. Louise Duryea Bailey.

A tense woman she was when she faced Justice Van Syclen in the supreme court in Mineola and was told that the grand jury had decided that she had killed Mrs. Bailey "in the heat of passion," and was therefore indicted for manslaughter in the first degree.

She strode into the courtroom like a woman walking to her death. She was very pale, as pale as the soft muslin shirtwaist that she wore. Her hands were clenched so tightly that her knuckles protruded, sharp and white.

Her lips were clamped until her mouth was nothing but a scratch across an absolutely colorless face.

Directly after she had been informed that the indictment had been found and her attorney had agreed with District Attorney Smith that $20,000 was all right as bail, Mrs. Carman retired into the ante-room where Smith Cox and Ernest Randall, her wealthy neighbors, signed the bond. With Cox and Randall back of her she strode into the courtroom with the same swaying stride and clenched hands. She raised her hand and was sworn with her bondsmen.

She retired to the rear room to surrender to the irrepressible desire to collapse. She fell into a chair and began to weep hysterically. Ten minutes later in a curtained limousine she left for a trip over the hard, sun-broiled roads of Long Island.

SEEK RETURN OF FORTUNE

Appointment of Some One to Push the New Haven Claims Asked. $306,000,000 Involved.

Boston.—The appointment of a receiver, special master or other official to prosecute claims aggregating $306,000,000 against defendant directors and estates of directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is asked in a suit filed in the supreme court. The action is brought by Whipple, Sears & Ogden, representing minority stockholders of the company.

The suit in which the attorneys recently demanded that the directors join is designed to force restitution from those responsible for funds alleged to have been illegally expended in building up the New Haven system.

Judge Brady issued an order of notice returnable next week to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed and why an injunction against the disposition of the defendants' stock should not be issued.

CHAFLIN COMPANY WINS SUIT

Shebar Loses Contention Against Co.—Deposit Based on Credit Which Was Accepted.

New York.—The contention that the H. B. Claflin company illegally engaged in a banking business in accepting money deposits and paying interest thereon was disposed of in favor of the Claflin company by Judge Hand in federal district court. This point was raied in a suit brought by Emmanuel Shebar of Aberdeen, Miss., to compel the Claflin receivers to return to him the balance of $10,000 deposited with the firm last January and drawing interest at 4½ per cent.

The court held that the transaction was based on the credit of the Claflin company, which Shebar accepted when he made the deposit.

SIX ARE KILLED IN WRECK

Nineteen Also Hurt When Electric Train Ran Into Coal Train Near Norfolk, Va.

Norfolk, Va.—A checking up of the dead and injured in the collision at a crossing near this city between an electric train on the Virginia Railway and Power company's lines and a coal train on the Virginia railroad, showed that six persons were killed and 19 injured. The dead, four men and two women, were all residents of Norfolk.

BOAT ROCKED—FIVE DROWN

Attempt of Woman to Get Into Boat Was Cause of Disaster at Naticook Lake.

Manchester, N. H.—The attempt of Miss Annie Burrans while in swimming to climb into a rowboat, in which were her sister, Mrs. Minnie Mills of South Merrimack, the latter's two small children and her young niece, Dorothy Burrans, caused the drowning of all five in Naticook Lake, South Merrimack.

CAPT. HARRY HAFF

Capt. Harry Haff is the ve yachtsman who has succeeded Bill Dennis as skipper of the V one of the trio of yachts tha striving for the honor of defe the America's cup against Sir T Lipton's Shamrock IV.

DEBATE ON FUTURES

Acceptance of House Measure Possibility, According to Ru Opposition Weakens.

Washington.—The conferees cotton futures bill made what lieved to be good progress tow acceptance of the House measu one that imposes a nominal contracts made in accordance the terms of the proposed law prohibitory tax upon other kind

The committee had before perts from the Department of culture, explaining the technical of the measure and their reas the parts of it that were upon the suggestion of the ment so as to assure the grow cotton that the largest possib centage of the crop will be de on contracts.

Senator Smith of Georgia, regarded as the keystone in the of opposition on the subject, said he was becoming more favorab pressed by the arguments in the Senate receding than it possible for him to be when ference committee was appointed would not be at all surprising in a short time he would be mending to his senatorial colle the substitution of the House the Senate measure, which is thing that is seldom done clashes between the two hou

MEDIATION PLAN IS REF

Western Trainmen Accuse Ra Prolonging Negotiations Gain Their Point.

Chicago.—Representatives of enginemen and trainmen of the ern railroads who have voted to unless their demands for wag creases are granted refused a of the general managers' com that the United States governme asked to mediate. The men ch the committee with seeking to the purpose of the employes by longing negotiations.

"As we have stated to you on eral occasions," the letter of r also says, "we will not accept tration, because in our past tions the railroads have refuse place the awards into effect."

MME. CAILLAUX TO BE T

Paris.—The first steps in the of Mme. Henri Caillaux, wife of seph Caillaux, ex-minister of fin on the charge of murdering G Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, taken when President Albanel of Siene Assizes made a drawing of jury which will hear the evidence

Would Sue Exchange

St. Louis.—Demand that he inst suit against the Merchants' exch of St. Louis on a charge of viol the anti-trust law was made on torney-General Barker of Missou Edward M. Flesh, member of a mission firm that holds a member in the exchange.

Washington.—News of Gen. Hu resignation as provisional preside Mexico was hailed by official Wa ington as the first practical step ward a quick solution of the Mex problem.

Three Are Drowned.

Easton, Pa.—Two girls and a who tried to save them drowne a flooded quarry hole near here a raft upset. The victims were Wagner, 13; Arlington Ackerman and his sister, Ethel Ackerman, Strikers in Riot.

Steubenville, Ohio.—Two or hundred striking miners mar down from the hills, where they camped, to the mines at Bro Ohio, and attempted to drive pumpmen.

Libby's Soups

making is an art. Why trouble recipes when the best chefs country are at your service? A of Libby's Soup on your pantry you of the correct flavor, a few minutes. There are Vegetable, Chicken, Oxtail, Con- Mock Turtle and other kinds. Your grocer has them.

Neill & Libby Chicago

Ox Tail Soup

ms Developed
Cents Per Roll
ts 3c and 4c Each attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
ment K Birmingham, Ala.

TAL ROOFING
ngles, Spanish Tile
VERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL
ST THAT MONEY CAN BUY
REFREIGHT WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES
EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO.
COVINGTON - KY.

despise an humble beginning. ter the violin it is necessary to cond fiddle first.

a hard's day's work if your eems lame, rub on thoroughly 's Balsam of Myrrh and the will soon disappear. Adv.

orning after is a cheerful one man who devotes the night sleep.—Albany Journal.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

a prescription prepared es- for Malaria or Chills and Five or six doses will break and if taken then as a tonic will not return. 25c.—Adv.

ge tree will bear fruit until its one hundred and fitieth her belt in an English fac- been running at a speed of a minute from 9 to 12 hours more than 32 years.

Shouldn't He Worry?

—"Why do I look so trou- Well, last night I dreamed I was buried, Parker, and I tombstone at the head of my Parker—"Saw your tomb- ? And what of it?" "Why, to live up to the epitaph."

Putting Off.

y boy."
does it mean to procrasti-
t off, my son."
I just saw mama upstairs was procrastinating her

Responsibilities.

you ask me why I paid rent owning my own home?"
Crosslots.
that inquiry," replied the man.
I'll tell you. When the roof a shutter drops off it's ndy to be able to ask your to bother you, but to go and roubles to the landlord."

GOOD CHANGE.
Coffee to Postum.

rge army of persons who d relief from many chronic by changing from coffee to a daily beverage, is grow- day.
ly a simple question of try- oneself in order to know returning health as realized young lady. She writes:
been a coffee drinker nearly and it affected my stomach insomnia and I was seldom headache. I had heard tum and how beneficial it nvinced to quit coffee and delighted with the change. sleep well and seldom ever che. My stomach has got- and I can eat without suf- rwards. I think my whole eally benefited by Postum.
ther also suffered from rouble while he drank cof- w, since using Postum, he ch better he would not go ee for anything."
en by Postum Co., Battle k: Read "The Road to in pkgs.
comes in two forms:
Postum—must be well and 25c packages.
Postum—is a soluble pow- spoonful dissolves quickly of hot water and, with sugar, makes a delicious ntly—30c and 50c tins.
per cup of both kinds is Reason" for Postum.
—sold by Grocers.

ALABAMA SOUVENIR

MEANS OF RAIS MAINTENANCE FRISCO

NEWS LETTER

Happenings in an State House

Souvenir Panam dollars will be pla part of Alabama in raising of funds t tion of an Alaban Francisco, and the Alabama exhibit according to a s Lee Cowart, who pointed by Govern man of the commi charge of the Alab These dollars w will have on on the State and on t scription, "Alaban Pacific Exposition 1915." Commissio persons who sell t

$15,000 From

More than $15,00 State treasury fro lands in Jefferson ties. The sale wa perintendent of Ed Feagin, and the tr pending for severa sold to the Wood 161½ acres in Je $6400. The Walke acres were sold Land company, th ing $9669.

Prison Inspector A

Severe criticism corded convicts in Convict camp near here by Dr. W. C inspector, who de tions in the camp that the cooking dirty, garbage a inadequate and tha to the convicts in ficient.

Dr. Oates has re of inspection which bile county camp, ty jail at Birmingha county jail at Ever

There are 94 c bile camp, 18 of wh are confined in th that are well ven cage that has litt found 14 convict fourth cage with for two people. H radical improveme

At Birmingham with the members county board of re construction of a plans for the remo tion of the presen

No Institutes This

Because teacher being held through week no county i held. The exami held in every coun there will be an u ber that will app censes according t ceived at the de tion. Many teache of the midsummer the examinations higher grade cert one of the reasons a large number to tions, according to

Investigate Homic

Urging a special gation of the recen ferson county an guilty persons be possible, the gov wrote to Judge E. ham, judge of th court, and requeste cial grand jury in der a special term

Candidate for Door

W. B. Goodwin be a candidate fo doorkeeper of the sentatives during the legislature. T for more than 20 John Hasson of G keeper will be nam ture, and the statu shall receive a sal for 90 days. Goo erate veteran. It several other veter the position.

Officials Attend Ba

Several state off annual barbecue g brake Experiment town, July 22. Ca Capt. John C. Che Fitzpatrick of the culture were amo tended.

Montgomerian Free

Governor O'Neal role to John Pri county, who was c a charge of misc

MAN
ARGE

HYSICIAN
GHTER.
LL.

GUILTY

She Had rowd of om to Florence

s remark-h she has n Nassau nd to aps fall and lling Mrs.

when she n the su-was told cided that n the heat ore indictfirst de-room like eath. She soft mus-ore. Her ghtly that harp and until her scratch ss face.

informed een found with Dis-20,000 was an retired Smith Cox wealthy nd. With her she with the clenched and was om to sur-desire to chair and Ten min-limousine hard, sun-

d.

ORTUNE

Push the Asked.
d.
of a re-er official ting $306,- directors
the New
d railroad e supreme ought by presenting company.
rneys redirectors
estitution funds al-expended aven' sys-

der of noto show ld not be injunction e defendssued.

NS SUIT

Against Credit
d.
n that the gally en-ss in ac-d paying sed of in by Judge
rt. This rought by en, Miss., ers to re-
10,000 de-
January per cent.
ransaction
he Claflin ted when

WRECK

Electric Train

up of the sion at a tween an Railway nd a coal d, showed d and 19
and two Norfolk.

DROWN

Into Boat
r at ttempt of in swim-wboat, in

s. Minnie he latter's er young used the ook Lake,

CAPT. HARRY HAFF

Capt. Harry Haff is the y yachtsman who has succeeded Bill Dennis as skipper of the V one of the trio of yachts th striving for the honor of def the America's cup against Sir T Lipton's Shamrock IV.

DEBATE ON FUTURES

Acceptance of House Measure Possibility, According to Ru Opposition Weakens.

Washington.—The conferees o cotton futures bill made what lieved to be good progress towa acceptance of the House measur one that imposes a nominal t contracts made in accordance the terms of the proposed law prohibitory tax upon other kind
The committee had before perts from the Department of culture, explaining the technical of the measure and their reason the parts of it that were in upon the suggestion of the d ment so as to assure the growe cotton that the largest possible centage of the crop will be deli on contracts.

Senator Smith of Georgia, w regarded as the keystone in the of opposition on the subject, said he was becoming more favorabl pressed by the arguments in fa
the Senate receding than it we possible for him to be when the ference committee was appointe would not be at all surprising if in a short time he would be r mending to his senatorial colle the substitution of the House bi the Senate measure, which is thing that is seldom done in clashes between the two house

MEDIATION PLAN IS REFU

Western Trainmen Accuse Roa Prolonging Negotiations to Gain Their Point.

Chicago.—Representatives of engineemen and trainmen of the W ern railroads who have voted to unless their demands for wag creases are granted refused a ro of the general managers' comm that the United States governme asked to mediate. The men ch the committee with seeking to d the purpose of the employes by longing negotiations.

"As we have stated to you on eral occasions," the letter of re also says, "we will not accept tration, because in our past ar tions the railroads have refuse place the awards into effect."

MME. CAILLAUX TO BE TR

Paris.—The first steps in the of Mme. Henri Caillaux, wife o seph Caillaux, ex-minister of fin on the charge of murdering Ga Calmette, editor of Le Figaro, taken when President Albanel of Siene Assizes made a drawing of jury which will hear the eviden

Would Sue Exchange

St. Louis.—Demand that he inst suit against the Merchants' exch of St. Louis on a charge of viol the anti-trust law was made on torney-General Barker of Missou Edward M. Flesh, member of a mission firm that holds a member in the exchange.

Washington.—News of Gen. Hue resignation as provisional preside Mexico was hailed by official W ington as the first practical ste ward a quick solution of the Mex problem.

Three Are Drowned.

Easton, Pa.—Two girls and a who tried to save them drowne a flooded quarry hole near here a raft upset. The victims were Wagner, 13; Arlington Ackerman, and his sister, Ethel Ackerman,

Strikers in Riot.

Steubenville, Ohio.—Two or hundred striking miners mar down from the hills, where they camped, to the mines at Bu Ohio, and attempted to drive pumpmen.

Libby's
Soups

making is an art. Why trouble recipes when the best chefs country are at your service? A of Libby's Soup on your pantry shelf gives you of the correct flavor, in a few minutes. There are Vegetable, Chicken, Oxtail, Con-
Mock Turtle and other kinds.
Your grocer has them.

s Developed
Cents Per Roll
s 3c and 4c Each
attention and work the best.
OVELL COMPANY
ment K Birmingham, Ala.

TAL ROOFING
gles. Spanish Tile
ERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL
EST THAT MONEY CAN BUY
FREIGHT WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES
EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO.
COVINGTON - KY.

despise an humble beginning.
er the violin it is necessary to nd fiddle first.

a hard's day's work if your ems lame, rub on thoroughly
's Balsam of Myrrh and the will soon disappear. Adv.

orning after is a cheerful one man who devotes the night sleep.—Albany Journal.

o. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

a prescription prepared es-for Malaria or Chills and ffer or six doses will break and if taken then as a tonic will not return. 25c.—Adv.

e tree will bear fruit until s one hundred and fiftieth er belt in an English facbeen running at a speed of a minute from 9 to 12 hours more than 32 years.

y Shouldn't He Worry?

—"Why do I look so trou-Well, last night I dreamed I was buried, Parker, and I tombstone at the head of my Parker—"Saw your tomb-
And what of it?" "Why,
g to live up to the epitaph."

Putting Off.

my boy."
does it mean to procrasti-off, my son."
I just saw mama upstairs was procrastinating her

Responsibilities.

ou ask me why I paid rent owning my own home?"
crosslots.
hat inquiry," replied the
man.
d tell you. When the roof a shutter drops off it's dy to be able to ask your bother you, but to go and ubles to the landlord."

GOOD CHANGE.
Coffee to Postum.

ge army of persons who d relief from many chronic by changing from coffee to a daily beverage, is grow-ay.
by a simple question of try-oneself in order to know returning health as realized young lady. She writes:
been a coffee drinker nearly and it affected my stomach nsomnia and I was seldom headache. I had heard um and how beneficial it
cluded to quit coffee and elighted with the change.

sleep well and seldom ever che. My stomach has got-and I can eat without suf-rwards. I think my whole ally benefited by Postum.
ther also suffered from uble while he drank cof-
, since using Postum, he ch better he would not go ee for anything."
en by Postum Co., Battle Read "The Road to in pkgs.
mes in two forms:
Postum—must be well
and 25c packages.
stum—is a soluble powpoonful dissolves quickly of hot water and, with ugar, makes a delicious
ntly—30c and 50c tins.
ny cup of both kinds is son.
Reason" for Postum.
—sold by Grocers.

ALABAMA TO SELL SOUVENIR DOLLARS

MEANS OF RAISING FUNDS FOR MAINTENANCE OF STATE'S FRISCO EXHIBIT.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings In and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

Souvenir Panama-Pacific Exposition dollars will be placed on sale in every part of Alabama in order to aid in the raising of funds to pay for the erection of an Alabama building at San Francisco, and the maintenance of an Alabama exhibit at the exposition, according to a statement issued by Lee Cowart, who was recently appointed by Governor O'Neal as chairman of the commission that will have charge of the Alabama exhibit.

These dollars will be of bronze and will have on one side the seal of the State and on the other side the inscription, "Alabama at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, 1915." Commissions will be paid to persons who sell the souvenirs.

$15,000 From School Lands.

More than $15,000 was placed in the State treasury from the sale of school lands in Jefferson and Walker counties. The sale was made through Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin, and the transaction had been pending for several months. The State sold to the Woodward Iron company 161½ acres in Jefferson county for $6400. The Walker county lands, 350 acres, were sold to the Tennessee Land company, the purchase price being $9669.

Prison Inspector Aroused.

Severe criticism of the treatment accorded convicts in the Mobile county convict camp near Mobile was made here by Dr. W. C. Oates, state prison inspector, who declares that conditions in the camp are not satisfactory, that the cooking outfit is filthy and dirty, garbage accommodations are inadequate and that ventilation given to the convicts in the cages is insufficient.

Dr. Oates has returned from a trip of inspection which included the Mobile county camp, the Jefferson county jail at Birmingham and the Conecuh county jail at Evergreen.

There are 94 convicts in the Mobile camp, 18 of whom are white. They are confined in three portable cages that are well ventilated and a fourth cage that has little ventilation. He found 14 convicts confined in the fourth cage with ventilation sufficient for two people. He has recommended radical improvements.

At Birmingham Dr. Oates discussed with the members of the Jefferson county board of revenue plans for the construction of a new jail and also plans for the remodeling and renovation of the present structure.

No Institutes This Week.

Because teachers' examinations are being held throughout the State this week no county institutes are being held. The examinations are being held in every county in the State and there will be an unusually large number that will apply for teachers' licenses according to informatioin received at the department of education. Many teachers take advantage of the midsummer vacation to stand the examinations in order to obtain higher grade certificates and this is one of the reasons why there will be a large number to take the examinations, according to Mr. Feagin.

Investigate Homicides in Jefferson.

Urging a special grand jury investigation of the recent homicides in Jefferson county and asking that the guilty persons be tried as early as possible, the governor of Alabama wrote to Judge E. C. Crow of Birmingham, judge of the Jefferson circuit court, and requested that he call a special grand jury into session and order a special term of the circuit court.

Candidate for Doorkeeper of House.

W. B. Goodwin of Montgomery will be a candidate for the position of doorkeeper of the House of Representatives during the next session of the legislature. This place was held for more than 20 years by the late John Hasson of Gadsden. The doorkeeper will be named by the legislature, and the statute provides that he shall receive a salary of $3.50 a day for 90 days. Goodwin is a Confederate veteran. It is understood that several other veterans will apply for the position.

Officials Attend Barbecue.

Several state officials attended the annual barbecue given at the Canebrake Experiment Station at Uniontown, July 22. Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, Capt. John C. Cheney and Capt. Alva Fitzpatrick of the department of agriculture were among those who attended.

Montgomerian Freed.

Governor O'Neal has granted a parole to John Price of Montgomery county, who was convicted in 1914 on a charge of miscegenation.

Paroles Issued to Five.

Governor O'Neal issued five paroles to convicts serving terms in the State penitentiary on various charges.

All the paroles were recommended by the State board of pardons at its recent meeting. The board considered almost 50 cases but action was taken by the governor in only five.

Those paroled were Robert H. Martin, Chilton county; Willie Pelligrew, Shelby; John George, Wilcox; Aubrey Howard, Elmore, and Jim Allen, Cherokee.

Pilligrew was serving a 25-year sentence on a charge of second degree murder. It was shown that he has served seven years and has been a model prisoner. Judge John Pelham, now a member of the State Court of Appeals, was the trial judge in the case and he recommended that the parole be granted.

Robert Martin was paroled for 20 days in order that he could obtain evidence to show why he should be permanently paroled. The governor has written to the trial judge about the matter.

Aubrey Howard was convicted of violating the prohibition law in two cases. Jim Allen was convicted on a charge of burglary and sentenced to four years. He has already served half of his term.

Bigger Market for Coal.

That Alabama's coal production would never reach its maximum capacity until an outside market of great power of consumption was acquired, and that Birmingham operators in realizing this fact are at present endeavoring to secure a richer field, were statements expressed by C. H. Nesbitt, State mine inspector.

"Business," said the inspector, "is on the upgrade, although, of course, ideal conditions do not yet prevail. The mines are working more days per week at the present time than sometime back. The output continues to be normal with indications of resumption of marked activity in the fall.

"Alabama has for some years mined a sufficient amount of coal to satisfy its consumers. Before we can mine coal up to our capacity we will have to acquire a permanent market which can buy regularly in great quantities Operators realize that fact, and are feeling out for the buyers of other states and countries. The opening of the canal will offer great opportunities to Alabama and its products. The probability of a settlement of the Mexican revolution will revive development in that country and local products will be in demand. Birmingham is mining annually about 18,000,000 tons of coal. Were there a sufficient market, this amount could be increased tenfold. There is plenty of coal in Alabama. In the long run we will be up to our capacity. The opening of the Warrior river and confluent streams and the cheap rates of transportation to be obtained will result in the establishment of a coaling station out from Mobile, and this will be the largest in the world.

"The future is bright; the present is good. But when operators begin furnishing coal to foreign countries regularly and in large quantities, our output will be increased as rapidly as that of Pennsylvania was. It is not generally known that Pennsylvania, which now mines such a quantity of coal that one wonders how the world consumes it, mined in 1840 about the same quantity that Alabama mines—17,500,000 tons per year."

Southern Field Trials in December.

Field events of the Southern Field Trials Club will be held at Letohatchie during the week of December 14, according to an announcement made by John H. Wallace, Jr., secretary of the club.

Two prizes of $750 each will be offered during the trials. One $750 prize will go to the winner of the all-age stakes and the other to the winner of the derby stakes.

It is expected that dogs will be entered in the trials this year from all parts of the United States. Sportsmen in several distant states have written Mr. Wallace for information abou the trials.

Alleged Moonshiner Bound Over.

William Poole, a Randolph county negro, was bound over to the federal grand jury under bond of $500 for illicit distilling when arraigned before Commissioner John A. Elmore. One witness testified to seeing the negro operating a distilling outfit which Deputy Marshal H. B. Reid had charged him with operating.

Fails to Establish Innocence.

John W Portevant, an elderly man of Mobile, who was convicted of criminal assault upon a woman of that place, and who was recently returned home from the penitentiary in order that the case might be further investigated, was brought through Montgomery en route back to the prison. Portevant was sent up from Mobile county last December and was in the penitentiary until a few weeks ago, when he was allowed to return home to seek further evidence of his innocence.

Escaped Arrest Two Years.

Two years after he had been indicted for killing Chester Butler near Montgomery, Henry Harmon, a negro, was arrested on a capias by Deputy Sheriff Tucker, and carried to the county jail. Harmon had never been captured since Butler was killed on the Hill plantation near the city early in 1912. Harmon was indicted for the murder at the February term of the grand jury in 1912. His case will come up for trial at the next session of court.

HINDUS IN BATTLE WITH POLICEMEN

OVER 20 REPORTED SHOT IN FIGHT AT VANCOUVER—COAL AND HATCHETS USED.

WERE DENIED ADMITTANCE

Hindus Would Not Allow Immigration Officials to Board Japanese Vessel, and They Retire—Canadian Government Firm.

Vancouver, B. C.—Scores among a party of 175 policemen and constables were injured, several seriously, in a battle with several hundred infuriated Hindus on board the Japanese steamer Komataga Maru in the harbor here.

Showers of coal and other missiles rained from the ship on the official force which attempted to board the steamer from a tug. In the face of the fire, the attacking party retreated and the attempt to board the steamer temporarily was abandoned. The Hindus braved the stream from a big hose the tug turned on them and mercilessly pelted the officers with lumps of coal. Fire bricks and pieces of iron from what is believed to have been the wreckage of the engine room on the steamer followed.

The battle grew out of an attempt to rid the harbor of the Japanese steamer on which 350 Hindus came to this port three months ago, only to have the Canadian immigration officials refuse them admission to the country. Their claim of a right to land as British subjects was overruled by the courts and the steamer was ordered to sail with them on board.

The Hindus had been rebellious and several times attempted to land, but were prevented.

SHIP BURNS IN N. Y. HARBOR

100,000 Persons See Spectacular Battle Against Flames—900 Aboard Doomed Ship.

New York.—More than 100,000 persons gathered on the Battery and the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges and watched the most spectacular steamship fire New York has seen since the burning of the Gen. Slocum in the East river in 1904, with its record of 1,000 deaths.

The passenger steamer Massachusetts, with 700 passengers and a crew of more than 200, an oil-burner, had cleared from her pier in the North river and swung into New York bay shortly after 5 o'clock, when there came a sudden burst of flames through the upper works amidships, where the after funnel rose from the oil tank room in the hold.

The passengers, frightened nearly into hysterics, were kept from panic only by heroic work of the squads detailed to look after them, but as the smoke grew denser and settled about the decks, it became apparent it would be unable to control them for any great length of time. At last the steamer crawled into the Wallabout Market, directly between the Manhattan and Brooklyn bridges, and made fast. The smoke soon died down, and when the fire boat crews had joined their efforts to those of the seamen on the Massachusetts the blaze was soon extinguished.

CROP CONDITIONS ONLY FAIR

Improvement in Carolinas, Louisiana and Oklahoma—Many Sections Dry—Damage in Texas.

Washington.—Cotton crop conditions over the belt are decidedly spotted, owing to the scattered nature of the rains of the past fortnight. In the west the weather has been decidedly hot and dry, except that good rains have fallen in Louisiana and portions of Arkansas. In Louisiana the crop improved, normal progress was made in Oklahoma, Arkansas showed very irregular conditions, by reason of the scattered rains, and in Texas there was some loss, due largely to damage done to young cotton by the dry weather and high temperatures.

Boll weevil are still numerous in infested areas, but damage to date is small.

Wilson on Street.

Washington.—President Wilson took a short walk through the business section of the city and attended to some business at his bank. His appearance, following his recent slight illness, attracted much attention.

Waiting on Lever.

Washington.—Final action by the senate and house conferees upon the bill regulating dealings in cotton futures will be taken up on the return here of Representative Lever, one of the conferees, from South Carolina.

Street Corner Sermons.

Philadelphia. — The Presbyterian Evangelistic alliance of this city will hereafter send out half a dozen automobiles each night loaded with ordained preachers, who will deliver street corner sermons at evevry prominent point in the city.

Eyes on Congress.

Washington.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, following a week's discussion of issues affecting organized labor, adjourned to meet at the regular quarterly session of the council in Washington, beginning on the 4th of November.

MME. CLAUSSE

Mme. Clausse, wife of the new counselor of the French embassy, is considered a distinct addition to the foreign colony in Washington, and is likely to be one of the most popular hostesses in the capital city.

WILL BUILD BRIDGE AT CAIRO

Mobile & Ohio Has Big Fund With Which to Build Structure. $5,000,000 Raised.

Cairo, Ill.—The announcement of Vice-President R. V. Taylor of the Mobile & Ohio, that his company has set aside $5,000,000 to build a bridge across the Ohio river at Cairo, marks a split between the Mobile & Ohio and the Illinois Central, whose bridge the M. & O. used to cross the river here. Under the existing contract the M. & O. pays the Illinois Central a cent a hundred for all freight crossing the bridge. The M. & O. has always interpreted this contract to mean revenue producing freight and not to include company freight, which they termed supplies. The Illinois Central learned of the practice, it is said, through a discharged clerk of the M. & O. and presented the claim for $500,000 back pay. The Mobile & Ohio refused to pay the claim, and resorted to the arbitration agreement in the contract. The matter was submitted to a commission consisting of President L. E. Johnson of the Norfolk & Western, President F. A. Delano of the Wabash and Comptroller F. Nay of the Rock Island, who heard testimony and decided for the M. & O., holding, however, that the wording of the contract was not clear and that the Illinois Central could collect bridge tolls on Mobile & Ohio freight after notifying them of its intention to do so. The Illinois Central immediately advised the Mobile & Ohio to this effect. For the past seven years it is said that the money paid the Illinois Central by the Mobile & Ohio for the use of the bridge would pay 6 per cent interest on their whole investment. The Mobile & Ohio recently made soundings of the river here to determine if a suitable crossing could be found.

THAW GETS A BIG INCOME

Awarded Income From Estate of Father After Legal Battle—Trust Company Beaten.

Pittsburgh.—After a six months' legal battle, Harry K. Thaw, in a court decision, was awarded the income from his father's estate, denied him by the trustees since he was adjudged insane for slaying Stanford White.

By the decision Thaw gets $160,773. Judge James W. Over held that Thaw is entitled to the money, despite the fact that alienists declare Thaw is suffering from an exaggerated sense of self which would make it unwise to commit any large sums of money into his personal charge.

The fight for the income began last January, when Thaw filed a petition asking for $30,000 to defray legal expenses. The Fidelity Title & Trust company of Pittsburgh, trustees, took exception. The court allowed the petition. The trust company then was permitted to send alienists to examine Thaw, claiming he was insane. Thaw refused to submit to an examination, it is said. The trust company then asked that Thaw be compelled to submit. The demurrer to this motion, filed by Thaw's attorneys, was sustained.

Powder Explodes.

Charleston, W. Va.—Thirteen men were burned, three probably fatally, when a keg of powder exploded in a coal mine at Dungriff. Matthew Holspein, Alexander Ownsby and Jesse Barlow have small chances for recovery.

Turn Down Charter.

Cincinnati.—At a special election Cincinnati citizens declined to adopt a new charter. The charter called for a smaller council and sought to give the mayor more power.

Marble Windows.

Remarkably beautiful effects are secured by the use of marble as a means of transmitting light instead of glass. This has been accomplished by a new process which has been devised by an engineer of Hamburg, W. Engle. He has succeeded in making plates of marble no more than three millimeters in thickness and for the use designated it is available up to 20 millimeters thick. The suitability of marble for this purpose was realized some time ago, but the difficulty encountered was that of securing the marble in slabs of sufficient thinness. These plates permit of the passage of a greater amount of light than frosted glass does, and at the same time imparts to the rays a much pleasanter color. Most opal glass imparts to the light an undesirable greenish tinge, while the light which passes through the marble has a reddish violet which is much pleasanter. After the marble has been ground down to the desired thickness it is subjected to an immersion in oil under high pressure, and the effects secured in this manner are said the superior to those of stained glass.

BODY COVERED WITH ECZEMA

R. F. D. No. 1, Tazewell, Tenn.—"My disease started on my legs in a small patch and kept spreading until my entire body was covered. It would itch and burn till I could not sleep at night. I would scratch till the blood would ooze out and run down my body and legs. The eruption came out in small red pimples and when I scratched the whole surface of the skin became irritated, red and ugly looking. My clothing seemed to irritate it. The pimples were on my hands, arms, legs, feet and entire body, especially between my fingers and toes. I also had dandruff on my head until my hair was all falling out.

"I was told it was eczema and took a treatment, but all remedies failed. Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I first washed with Cuticura Soap and warm water, dried well and then applied the Cuticura Ointment. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me, and they also cured my dandruff and falling hair." (Signed) Charley Alston, Jan. 31, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

In London.

Dressmaker—If I were you, madam, I would have the skirt slashed up the front, and it would look well to have the sleeves slashed up the side, and the bodice slashed for insert on the front—

Tourist—Hold on, please! Do you take me for a fighting suffragette?

For 75 years Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills have been their own recommendation in conditions of upset stomach, liver and bowels. If you have not tried them, a test now will prove their benefit to you. Send for free sample to 372 Pearl St., New York. Adv.

Bad Break.

Miss Bliss—Why, George, you spelled kiss with only one s in your last letter.

Mr. Bliss—Really, did I, dear?

"Yes, you did, and I always thought that was one thing you never would want to make shorter."

RUB-MY-TISM

Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

Where It Counts.

"Aunt Dinah, are you going to have 'obey' eliminated from the ceremony?"

"No, chile; but I sho is gwinter hab it 'liminated from de matrimony."—Puck.

EAS-IT

A PRESCRIPTION scientifically compounded and endorsed by prominent physicians for the treatment of Headaches caused from Overwork, Mental Worry, Constipation and Nervousness. Instant relief GUARANTEED. Contains No OPIATE. Ask your druggist. Adv.

An old bachelor says that there are no marriages in heaven because there must be some way to distinguish it from the other place.

George Heil of Bellaire, O., says: "I have used Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh for soft rotting frog in horse's feet and find it to be a valuable article." Adv.

Satan probably had a fine excuse for not learning to skate.

For calks use Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

An egotist is a man who expects a woman to marry him for himself alone.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Nine mines in ten, the world over, are richer in the first 1,000 feet than in the second, and few are worth operating below 3,000 feet.

How To Give Quinine To Children
FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not cinchonize nor cause nervousness nor deafness in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for it at your druggist's. Price, 50 cents per bottle (or 12 doses in a package), or by mail, postpaid, in United States, 60 cents.

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

We were pleased to have as our visitor one day last week, Mr. L. R. Neel, editor of the Southern Agriculturist of Nashville. Mr. Neel is an interesting conversationalist, and his wide range of knowledge and information is ably displayed in the columns of the splendid paper which he publishes.

Has the commissioners court issued those time warrants on the county? Is it a fact that they have actually voted in favor of putting the county in debt, over the wishes of the people? Have not the people a right to say whether or not they desire the county to go in debt to build a highway?

It seems that the time has come in this county when the tax payer has no voice at all in the management of the county affairs. But on the other hand, it seems that their wishes are absolutely ignored, and an effort in some cases is made to keep them from knowing just what is going on. Why is there so much secrecy about somethings that are going on in Clanton?

Last week the Clanton Press devoted a large space in giving figures showing comparative gains and losses of Republicans and Progressives respectively "from Maine to California." But somehow they omitted the figures of the Democratic vote. We do not understand why the Press preferred to "tell on" the other fellow, and hide their own part of the story, unless it was because that part which related the Democratic side of the affair, was the "bad" part and they did not want it made known.

A few days ago we received a letter from a subscriber, desiring to know what disposition had been made of the case of Leo M. Frank charged with the murder of Mary Phagan. For the information of the party who made the inquiry, and all others who may be interested to know, we will state that Frank is in jail in Atlanta with a sentence of death hanging over him, as rendered by the court jury some time ago. He is awaiting action on petition for new trial, which is being urged before the supreme court by his lawyers.

The Montgomery Advertiser observes that the state of Georgia has returned to the use of the famous old Blue Back Speller in its common Schools; it also suggests that such an action on the part of Alabama would be welcomed. This old Book carries with it the recollection of a time and influence in this country that no other text-book will ever claim, and it matters not how many states return to using it, they will never be able to bring back the real days of the old Blue Back Speller.

We wish to urge the voters of Chilton to come to the Progressive mass meeting at Clanton on Saturday, August 1st. At this meeting delegates will be elected to attend the state convention at Birmingham, August 5. Hon. M. W. Howard of Birmingham will be here to address the meeting, and every voter in the county should hear him. He has some information on the issues of the day and future of the Progressive party that will arouse every citizen to action, and create within the voters a greater zeal for Progressiveism. Be sure to come and spend the day and hear all the discussion. Others besides Mr. Howard will be on for speeches.

If the county is put in debt fifty or sixty thousand dollars, how can they pay the current expense of the county? They have failed for the last three years to even pay the current expense of the county. How can they do more now? Doesn't the county now owe several thousand dollars, on accounts that have not been passed by the commissioners court? Shall the people remain silent on these questions, or rise and demand their rights. We say that there are too many things being done in Clanton these days, where the people's tax money is being used, and the tax payers not knowing anything about it. We say that when the people's money is being used for any purpose they should have some voice in the matter.

PROGRESSIVE FARMING

The bool weevil damaged last year's cotton crop in Alabama to a considerable extent, and yet the crop was next to the largest ever picked in this state.

The wecvil is destroying more cotton now than it did a year ago. In some counties it is said that the pest has ruined fully 25 per cent of the crop. Nevertheless, Alabama is producing a bumper crop, larger even than that of last year.

This remarkable orospect despite the ravages of the boll weevil is due not to increased acreage, but to the intelligence and industry of the farmer. Intensive farming has been worth millions of dollars to this state. A great deal more cotton is being produced to the acre than in former years. No ambitious farmer is satisfied with making a third or a half bale to the acre as in years past. With many of them a bale to the acre is the rule.

As bad as the boll weevil is, therefore, this modern farming not only minimizes the damage to the crop, but in many cases makes it a negligable quantity.—Age-Herald.

Among the Democrats who believe that theirs is the only doctrine that will ever "take" in the South, and among the Republicans, who are deeply remorsed at any kind of success among the Progressives, there seems to be much speculation as to the real motive behind the action of the Democrats in Louisiana who have come over to the ranks of Bull Moose party. The true explanation of the action lies in the fact that these Lonisiana Democrats have seen in the Progressive party what other southern men are going to see sooner or later, viz: Relief from the old petrified unchanging ring rule of Democracy; a party of protection, free from those old Republican traditions that are and ever will be repulsive to southern born men; a party that stands for things that concern progress and prosperity of to-day; a party that is destined to break the solid South by the perpetuating of a second party, thus insuring for our people better conditions of law and government, and a true and popular rule of the people.

Last week's issue of the Clanton Press said: "And all this candycoated talk about the Bull Moose grazing in the South this Fall is the variest rot and nonsense."

We call attention to the following article clipped from the Atlanta Constitution, a Democratic paper. "'Louisiana Democrats bolt to Progressives.' Old Party leaders stunned by desertion of Third District Committeemen. Washington, July 13.—Democratic leaders from the South were stunned by news from the third Louisiana District where last week the Democratic congressional committee went over to the Progressive party in a body.

Louisiana Democrats are out of tune with the Wilson administration and are ripe for a revolt. The split is expected to extend throughout the state and may result in the election of three Progressive congressmen from Louisiana.

Leaders in the Progressive movement in Louisiana heretofore have been affiliated with the Democrats. They are: W. H. Price, L. C. Roger, Edwin Brossard, John Marks, Samuel Lee Blanc, and W. T. Peterman. Mr. Brossard is a brother of Senator-elect Brossard.

The third district leads the revolt, it was explained here today, because the democratic sugar tariff has caused ruin to the industry in that section."

The above clipping is from a democratic paper, and shows that the Clanton Press must be mistaken in its statement in last week's issue.

Many of the democratic papers predict that the Progressives will elect a full state ticket in Louisiana this year.

Watermelons Being Shipped.

Last Monday marked the opening of an industry in Clanton that has heretofore been undeveloped in this community, when Mr. Lum Wilson shipped the first car load of watermelons that have ever been sent to foreign market from here. Farmers of Chilton have always raised watermelons, but not for the market; they have never raised them except for home consumption, until this year, when several men planted large amounts with the idea of placing them on the foreign markets. Mr. Wilson has the honor of being the first to ship from Clanton. Mr. J. H. Duncan shipped a car from Lomax Tuesday. The success with which these men are meeting should be an incentive to our farmers to unite on diversification, and cause them to break away from the old worn out custom of cotton and corn one year and corn and cotton the next.

WHEN YOU ARE NERVOUS

you have the first symptom of a run-down system, and nervous people too often conceal their aches and pains and suffer in silence, while, if neglected, this condition often foreruns more serious trouble.

If these so afflicted would stop taking medicine containing alcohol or drugs which menace the foundations of health, and just take the pure, strengthening nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, it would create new blood to pulsate through the organs, refresh their bodies and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shun substitutes.

J. W. Sorrell of Jemison attended the Odd Fellows celebration here Wednesday.

F. A. Gulledge of Verbena was in Clanton Wednesday.

Reafro Mullins has removed into his elegant new residence just completed.

FOR SALE—One good second hand coaster brake bicycle; heavy tires; fine condition. Higgins, the Jeweler.

Miss Lurline Harper entertained the forty two club Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Fred Olive was in Clanton Tuesday.

FOR SALE—Jersey heifer 2 years old. Will sell cheap. Apply at Union-Banner Office.

You love your wife because she is good looking and true to you. Buy a Hamilton Watch and you will love it for the same reasons. It is a good looking watch and a true time keeper. For sale for cash or on time by J. V. Higgins, the Reliable Jeweler. "Buy a Hamilton."

For first class work, painting paper hanging, decorating, etc., see E. J. Townsend, Clanton Ala. He guarantees his work. Patronage of country people given attention. 7 16 4

PROGRESSIVE MASS MEETING

A mass meeting of the Progressive party of Chilton County is hereby called to meet at the Court House in Clanton Ala., on Saturday August 1st, 1914, at 11 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing delegates to the State Congressional and Senatorial Conventions to be held in the City of Birmingham, Ala., on Aug., 5th, 1914.

All white qualified voters who believe in the principles of the Progressive Party and who oppose political ring-rule and boss ism are cordially invited to attand this meeting.

The newly elected Progressive Committee is hereby called to meet at the same time and place for the purpose of organizing and assuming control of the paty.

This July, 15th, 1914.

J. Osmond Middleton,
Chairman.

J. P. VanDerveer, Jr.
Secretary.

Most Skin Trouble Readily Overcome

The Active Principle of a Famous Remedy Works Wonders.

Many people have marvelled the way S. S. S. overcomes skin troubles. The explanation is the fact that S. S. S. works in the blood and the blood is really a most intricate and extraordinary mass of arteries and veins.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh beneath are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood streams just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and just insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood and skin, write to the Medical Department, The Swift Specific Co., 529 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow some zealous clerk's eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. to fool you with the same old mineral drugs. Beware of all substitutes. Insist upon S. S. S.

BUY YOUR DRINKS

Cigars, Tobaccos, Cigarettes, Candies and other Summer-time goods from

Popwell & Jones

Place of business across the railroad from the Post Office. Open every day and Sunday too.

WE HAVE BEST ICE CREAM IN TOWN

You need a mighty good medicine if once your kidney are exausted by neglect and overwork, and you have got it in Foley Kidney Pill. Their action is prompt, healing and tonic. Sound health and sound kidneys follow their use. Try them. For sale by all dsalers everywhere.

All persons are hereby notified that J. V. Higgins the Jeweler has added to his repair department fine tools and material for repairing bicycles. Also a full line of telephone supplies.

The Hardware we sell is made mostly of steel and iron, yet this is the sort of a "golden rule" we practice--we sell good, honest, reliable stuff; we put a fair and square price and we charge everybody this same price.

Do you want to do business with this kind of a store?

Gamble Hardware Co.

Clanton, Alabama.

Your Summ

Is solicited by

We have the good
you. Anything y found here. It is to give a list of
When you need an

DRY GOODS	CLOTH
Anything in this line you want.	Men's Suits
Ladies Dress Goods.	Summer Tro
Latest Patterns.	Styles guara
Laces and Fancy	please you.
Notions.	Hats and Ge
	Furnishings.

Remember we are the
high standard of excelle
to our customers perfe

ClantonMe

Clanton, A

As Water Seeks Its Lev
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Su
particular and economical people where are shown the latest styles
ladies' furnishings and lingerie, stock of general dry goods, marke prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

EMP BROTHE

Clanton, Ala.

FECT CATHARTIC
and wholesome action
of Foley Cathartic Tablets.
with never a gripe or cases of constipation find them invaluable. Sto lieved of that bloated
so uncomfortable es weather. They keep
For sale by all dealers

Shingles and Gasolin

Anyone wanting Shingles to cov conferring with me right away. H to get your order in the next one.
I have a gasoline engine, tank, w to have city waterworks I will cash or on time. Come and look

L. H. RE

YOUR DRINKS
accos, Cigarettes, Candie Summer-time goods from well & Jones
usiness across the railroa st Office. Open every da too.
EST ICE CREAM IN TOW

medicine if sted by neg-u have got it eir action is
nic. Sound follow their by all dsalers

All persons are hereby n that J. V. Higgins the Je has added to his repair d ment fine tools and materi repairing bicycles. Also line of telephone supplies.

are we sell is made mostly yet this is the sort of a "go ce--we sell good, honest ut a fair and square price ybody this same price.
t to do business with this

e Hardware Co.
nton, Alabama.

ewriter has Ball Bearings at all frictional points ires a Good Operator
er
ut the business world to-day is neat, errors.
built to produce this kind of "copy."
in this machine all lead to Type-use—the carriage, the typebar re ball bearing.
ration, durability and efficiency.
Illustrated Catalog
k Bros. Typewriter ompany ffice and Factory
acuse, N. Y.
all principal cities

Your Summer Trading

Is solicited by our Store.

We have the goods that will please you. Anything you need can be found here. It is needless for us to give a list of what we have. When you need anything call on us.

DRY GOODS	CLOTHING	GROCERIES
Anything in this line you want.	Men's Suits and Summer Trousers.	Anything the farmer needs in the way of heavy groceries and supplies.
Ladies Dress Goods.	Styles guaranteed to please you.	Grain and Feed Stuff.
Latest Patterns.	Hats and Gents Furnishings.
Laces and Fancy Notions.

Remember we are the originators of that high standard of excellence which guarantees to our customers perfect SATISFACTION.

Clanton Mercantile Co.

Clanton, Alabama.

As Water Seeks Its Level
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Sun

particular and economical people seek the where are shown the latest styles of dress ladies' furnishings and lingerie, and the stock of general dry goods, marked at the prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

EMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

ECT CATHARTIC
and wholesome action
Foley Cathartic Tablets.
with never a gripe or ms of constipation find them invaluable. Stout people are relieved of that bloated congested feeling so uncomfortable especially in hot weather. They keep your liver busy. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

GO WHERE YOU PLEASE EAT WHAT YOU PLEASE

That is what you can do if you take Dodson's Liver Tone. Many people know the danger of calomel, yet they take it because they know of nothing better. Other people are not afraid of calomel, because they do not understand what a dangerous drug it is. Because it has never hurt them they believe it never will.

No one need to take dangerous calomel (which is just another form of mercury).

Alred Drug Company sell Dodson's Liver Tone for fifty cents a bottle and guarantee that it takes the place of calomel.

Dodson's Liver tone is a pleasant-tasting vegetable remedy that livens up the liver without causing any restriction of habit or diet. It has none of the many bad after-effects of calomel and is safe for children as well as grown-ups.

You don't run a single risk when you try Dodson's Liver Tone, because if you aren't entirely satisfied all you need to do is go right back to where you bought it and have your money cheerfully refunded to you with a smile. Isn't that fair?

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons.

Jim Baker and Mrs. Ada Lowery, S. J. Driver and Miss Lillian Culver, George G. Sewell and Miss Fay Hamrick, J. M. Thompson and Miss Berline Connell, E. M. Hayer and Miss Lizzie Taylor.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains conferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be to get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store. I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale as to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bar-ash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

THORSBY INSTITUTE FACULTY.

The Trustees of Thorsby Institute announce the following Faculty for the school year 1914-15:

Rev. S. H. Herbert, Principal, Science and Mathematics.

Miss Mary Stoddard, English and History.

Miss Effie Pittman, Latin and Teachers' Courses.

Rev. E. W. Butler, Mathematics, Bookkeeping.

Miss Elizabeth Hoopes, Matron and Domestic Science.

The Music Teacher has not yet been secured, and will be announced later.

Mr. Herbert, Mr. Butler and Miss Hoopes have been on the faculty for the past year, and are known to the people of the county. A word about the other members may be of interest.

Miss Stoddard is a graduate of Iowa Wesleyan College with the degree of Ph. B. She is spoken of very highly by those who have known her. Her home is in Grinnell, Iowa.

Miss Pittman is a graduate of the Fifth District Agricultural School at Wetumpka, and has attended the Alabama Girls' Technical Institute at Montevallo, and the State Normal College at Florence. She has taught for five years under an Alabama First Grade Certificate. She is spoken of by those who know her as "a faithful, conscientious and painstaking student, and a young lady of high Christian character."

The outlook for Thorsby Institute for the coming year is a good one. A number of applications have already come in for places in the boarding department. The new catalogue has just been issued, and will be mailed to any one on request. The Ladies' Guild of Thorsby are making arrangements for the painting of the dining room, and the study hall in the institute building will be painted. With the new drop curtain which was installed during the spring, this will make the institute hall a more useful and pleasant auditorium than ever.

J. D. Broadhead of Montgomery is spending a week with his father J. R. Broadhead.

Mr. L. Cantrell spent Friday in Montgomery.

Miss Margaret Curry of New Decatur spent the week end with Miss Mary Curry.

Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Roberts and Miss Lurline Harper Motored to Mineral Springs Sunday.

Mr. Clark Harper was a visitor to the Capital City Sunday.

Mr. Guy Roberts and Julian Latham left Monday for Maylene where they will attend a house party

Mr. Tod Soloman of Montgomery was a visitor to Clanton Monday.

Mrs. J. H. Middleton and little son Jones are spending a few days at Mineral Springs.

Mr. J. J. Pickens has returned from a visit to friends in Moulton.

Mr. Leonard Kemp and wife of Coosada are spending a few days with the formers parents.

Misses Agnes Courtney and Teresa Dunn of Montgomery are the guest of Mr. H. Jones.

Miss Vandeveer and Willetta Stringfellow left Monday for Maylene.

Misses Ruby Gore and Lake Jones are visiting friends in Centerville.

Jesse Moats of Pletcher was in Clanton Tuesday.

There are about 100 acres of melons planted in this vicinity and several cars should be shipped soon.

Don't forget the quarterly meeting of the Clanton County Improvement Association at Clanton next Saturday.

Beef and Milk A-plenty

Cattle are kept for two purposes; for beef production and for milk production. To do either right they must be healthy. There is nothing better to keep them in continued good health, or to make them well quickly when sick, than a few doses of—

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

Stirs up the liver—Drives disease poisons away.

Any time any of my cattle get anything wrong with them I give them a few doses of Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE. They soon get well.
John S. Carroll,
Moorhead, Miss.

25c, 50c and $1. per can. At your dealer's.
P. B. 2

F. O. Baxley spent Sunday at Talladega Springs.

C. J. Davis and sister, Miss Kate, spent Sunday with friends at Thorsby.

Dr. E. G Hyman of Jemison was in Clanton Sunday.

Collins Bros. have recently established an up-to-date livery service at Thorsby.

New crop Turnip seed a varity that cant be duplicated elsewhere at Alred's Drug Store.

Riley Robinson of Providense was in town Monday.

Buck Hart and Clark Harper spent Sunday in Birmingham.

Misses Annie and Rose Tyus have returned home to spend vacation with parents. They are accompanied by their friend Miss Pearl Carlisle of Birmingham.

E. J. Rawlinson, of Pletcher was a visitor Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Robinson Sr. and Margret, are spending the summer at Talladega Springs

The best wagon umbrella in town for 75c at Alreds.

Twelve Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Groceries of Us

No. 1.

BECAUSE back of this store stands the personal integrity of the management.

We have emphatically impressed the value of honesty upon all our employees.

No cheap trickster's methods are tolerated.

W. Z. HODGES,
CLANTON, ALA.

Misses Pearl and Ola Durbin of Fairview were in Clanton Monday and Tuesday taking teachers examination.

Miss Mabel Swan of Thorsby was in Clanton Tuesday.

Popwell's pressing shop is being operated now in the rear of the new barber shop in the Headley building. Remember this when you need your suit cleaned or pressed.

Miss Kate Goodgame spent a few days last week with relatives and friends at Thorsby.

Postmaster Dudley spent Monday in the Capital City.

Prof. S. H. Herbert Principal of Thorsby Institute was in Clanton the first of this week taking the state examination for a life certificate.

Mr. J. J. Foshee of Route 7 was a caller at our office Tuesday.

S. F. Holley of Helena was in Clanton Sunday.

Mrs Lizzie McKee and her daughter Mrs. Marlar, are visiting Mr. E. R. McKee st Garniers Fla.

Mr. J. R. Gamble of Wetumpka was in Clanton Tuesday on business.

Hardware of The Right sort can be found at our store.

Our stock is exceedingly large and comprises all that is best in modern hardware for household use and all that tde mechanic or tradesman could require along this line. Our prices are right and proper.

J. M. DUNN,
The Hardware Man Clanton, Ala.

The Hollow of Her Hand.

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON : COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

He did not once interrupt her. All the time she was speaking he was studying the profile of her face as if fascinated by its strange immobility. For the matter of a full half-hour he sat on the rail, his back against a post, his arms folded across the breast of the thick ulster he wore, staring at her, drinking in every word of the story she told. A look of surprise crept into his face when she came to the point where the thought of marrying Hetty to the brother of her victim first began to manifest itself in her designs. For a time the look of incredulity remained, to be succeeded by utter scorn as she went on with the recital. Her reasons, her excuses, her explanations for this master stroke in the way of compensation for all that she had endured at the hands of the scornful Wrandalls, all of whom were hateful to her without exception, stirred him deeply. He began to understand the forces that compelled her to resort to this Machiavellian plan for revenge on them. She admitted everything: her readiness to blight Hetty's life forever; her utter callousness in laying down these ugly plans; her surpassing vindictiveness; her reflections on the triumph she was to enjoy when her aims were fully attained. She confessed to a genuine pity for Hetty Castleton from the beginning, but it was outweighed by that thing she could only describe as an obsession! . . . How she hated the Wrandalls! . . . Then came the real awakening: when the truth came to her as a revelation from God. Hetty had not been to blame. The girl was innocent of the one sin that called for vengeance so far as she was concerned. The slaying of Challis Wrandall was justified! All these months she had been harboring a woman she believed to have been his mistress as well as his murderess. It was not so much the murderess that she would have foisted upon the Wrandalls as a daughter, but the mistress! . . . She loved the girl, she had loved her from that first night. Back of it all, therefore, lay the stern, unsuspected truth: from the very beginning she instinctively had known this girl to be innocent of guile. . . . Her house of cards fell down. There was nothing left of the plans on which it had been constructed. It had all been swept away, even as she strove to protect it against destruction, and the ground was strewn with the ashes of fires burnt out. . . . She was shocked to find that she had even built upon the evil spot! . . . Almost word for word she repeated Hetty's own story of her meeting with Challis Wrandall, and how she went, step by step and blindly, to the last scene in the tragedy, when his vileness, his true nature was revealed to her. The girl had told her everything. She had thought herself to be in love with Wrandall. She was carried away by his protestations. She was infatuated. (Sara smiled to herself as she spoke of this. She knew Challis Wrandall's charm!) The girl believed in him implicitly. When he took her to Burton's inn it was to make her his wife, as she supposed. He had arranged everything. Then came the truth. She defended herself. . . .

"I came upon her in the road on that wild night, Brandon, at the place I pointed out. Can you picture her as I have described her? Can you picture her despair, her hopelessness, her misery? I have told you everything, from beginning to end. You know how she came to me, how I prepared her for the sacrifice, how she left me. I have not written to her. I cannot. She must hate me with all her soul, just as I have hated the Wrandalls, but with greater reason, I confess. She would have given herself up to the law long ago, if it had not been for exposing me to the world as her defender, her protector. She knew she was not morally guilty of the crime of murder. In the beginning she was afraid. She did not know our land, our laws. In time she came to understand that she was in no real peril, but then it was too late. A confession would have placed me in an impossible position. You see, she thought of me all this time. She loved me as no woman ever loved another. Was not I the wife of the man she had killed, and was not I the noblest of all women in her eyes? God! And to think of what I had planned for her!"

This was the end of the story.

The words died away in a sort of whimpering wail, falling in with the wind to be lost to his straining ears. Her head drooped, her arms hung limply at her side.

For a long time he sat there in silence, looking out over the darkening water, unwilling, unable indeed, to speak. His heart was full of compassion for her, mingling strangely with what was left of scorn and horror. What could he say to her?

At last she turned to him. "Now you know all that I can tell you of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, again, that I thank you for everything," he said slowly.

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrandalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicis, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrandalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said levelly.

She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face.

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She

This Woman Was Beyond Him.

has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"

"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is now, Sara."

She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."

Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious.

"She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of loathing for me. How can I to regain what I have lost? How can I make her understand? She was [illegible] away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been beside her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"

"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance.

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I—I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you sail?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I—I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon, not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Not directly. But I will say this "Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to sink into the background, despite the absolution he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wrandall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help considering the two women. He loved Hetty, of course, [illegible] tive. She was Sara's superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if burnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wrandall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard not to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and reread it, searching for the slightest flaw: a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steadfast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wrandall, and but once was Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wrung everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wrandall. Even as he penned these lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Staring hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wrandall expects to close the 'ouse this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon, I suppose you know, sir, we 'ave taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we 'ave, sir. They've been decorating it for the pawst two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we 'ad. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them hexpensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinspirin'. Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wrandall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

Booth actually was startled by her appearance when she entered the room a few minutes later. She looked positively ill.

"My dear Sara," he cried anxiously, "this is too bad. You are making yourself ill. Come, come, this won't do."

"I shall be all right in a day or two," she said, with a weary little gesture. "I have been nervous. The strain was too great, Brandon. This is the vacation you might say."

[illegible]

Booth Was Startled by Her Appearance.

A few days to settle some beastly squabbles among the tenants. Next year he wants me to come over for the shooting. He isn't going back to India for two years, you may be interested to hear. Two years' leave. Lots of influence, believe me! We've been expecting him back in London since day before yesterday. I dare say he found matters worse than he suspected and has been delayed. He has been negotiating for the sale of some of his property in Belfast—factory sites, I believe. He is particularly anxious to close the deal before he leaves England. Had to lift a mortgage on the property, before he could think of making the sale. I staked him to your thousand pounds, to the tune of [illegible] tor as soon as you get to town. An ounce of prevention, you know."

"Well," she said, with a searching look into his eyes, "have you written to her?"

"Yes. Posted it at seven o'clock this morning."

"I trust you did not go so far as to—well, to volunteer a word in my behalf. You were not to do that, you know."

He looked uncomfortable. "I'm afraid I did take your name in vain," he equivocated. "You are a—a wonderful woman, Sara," he went on, moved to the remark by a curious influence that he could not have explained any more than he could have accounted for the sudden gush of emotion that took possession of him.

She ignored the tribute. "You will persuade her to come to New York with you?"

"For your sake, Sara, if she won't come for mine."

"She knows the cage is open," was her way of dismissing the subject. "I am glad you came over. I have a letter from Leslie. It came this morning. You may be interested in what he has to say of Hetty—and of yourself." She smiled faintly. "He is determined that you shall not be without a friend while he is alive."

"Les isn't such a rotter, Sara. He's spoiled, but he is hardly to be blamed for that."

"I will read his letter to you," she said, and there was no little significance in the way she put it. She held the letter in her hand, but he had failed to notice it before. Now he saw that it was a crumpled ball of paper. He was obliged to wait for a minute or two while she restored it to a readable condition. "He was in London when this was written," she explained, turning to the window for light. She glanced swiftly over the first page until she found the place where she meant to begin. "'I suppose Hetty Castleton has written that we met in Lucerne two weeks ago,'" she read. "'Curious coincidence in connection with it, too. I was with her father, Col. Braid Castleton, when we came upon her most unexpectedly. I ran across him in Paris just before the aviation meet, and got to know him rather well. He's a fine chap, don't you think? I confess I was somewhat surprised to learn that he didn't know she'd left America. He explained it quite naturally, however. He'd been ill in the north of Ireland and must have missed her letters. Hetty was on the point of leaving for Italy. We didn't see much of her. But, by Jove, Sara, I am more completely gone on her than ever. She is adorable. Now that I've met her father, who had the beastly misfortune to miss old Murgatroyd's funeral, I can readily see wherein the saying 'blood will tell' applies to her. He is a prince. He came over to London with me the day after we left Hetty in Lucerne, and I had him in to meet mother and Vivian at Claridge's. They like him immensely. He set us straight on a good many points concerning the Glynn and Castleton families. Of course, I knew they were among the best over here, but I didn't know how fine they were until we prevailed on him to talk a little about himself. You will be glad to hear that he is coming over with us on the Mauretania. She sails the twenty-seventh. We'll be on the water by the time you get this letter. It had been our intention to sail last week, but the colonel had to go to Ireland for make the sale. 'Gad, I almost had to beg him to take the money. He's terribly proud and haughty, as the bounder would say. He said he wouldn't sleep well until he has returned the filthy lucre. We are looking for him back any hour now. But if he shouldn't get here by Friday, we will sail without him. He said he would follow by the next boat, in case anything happened that he didn't catch the Mauretania."

Sara interrupted herself to offer an ironic observation: "If Hetty did not despise her father so heartily, I should advise you to look farther for a father-in-law, Brandon. The colonel is a bad lot. Estates in the north of Ireland. Poor Leslie!" She laughed softly.

"He'll not show up, eh?"

"Not a bit of it," she said. "He may be charged to profit and loss in Leslie's books. This part of the letter will interest you," she went on, as if all that had gone before was of no importance to him. "'I hear interesting news concerning you, my dear girl. My heartiest congratulations if it is all true. Brandy is one in a million. I have hoped all along to have him as a full-fledged brother-in-law, if that's the way you'd put it. Father writes that every one is talking about it, and saying what a fine thing it is. He has a feeling of delicacy about approaching you in the matter, and fancy it's just as well until everything is settled. I wish you'd let me make a suggestion, however. Wouldn't it be wise to let us all get together and talk over the business end of the game? Brandy's a fine chap, a corker, in fact, but the question is: has he got it in him to take Challis' place in the firm? You've got to consider the future as well as the present, my dear. We all do. With his artistic temperament he might play hob with your interests, and ours too, for that matter. Wouldn't it be wise for me to size him a bit before we take him into the firm? Forgive me for suggesting this, but, as you know, your interests are mine, and I'm terribly keen about seeing you get the best of everything. By the way, wasn't he a bit gone on Hetty? Passing fancy, of course, and not deep enough to hurt anybody. Good old Brandy!'"

"There is more, Brandon, but it is of no consequence," she said, tossing the letter upon the table. "You see how the land lays."

Booth was pale with anger. "By Jove, Sara, what an insufferable ass he is!"

"The shoe pinches?"

"Oh, it's such perfect rot! I'm sorry on your account. Have you ever heard of such gall?"

"Oh, he is merely acting as the family spokesman. I can see them now in solemn conclave. They think it their indisputable right to select a husband for me, to pass upon him, to accept or decline him as they see fit, to say whether he is a proper man to hang up his hat and coat in the office of Wrandall & Co."

"Do you mean to say—"

"Let's not talk about it, Brandon. It is too silly."

They fell to discussing her plans for the immediate future, although both minds of both were at work with something else.

"Now that I have served my purpose, I suppose you will not care to see so much of me," she said, as he prepared to take leave of her.

"Served your purpose? What do you mean?"

"I should have put it differently. You have been most assiduous in your efforts to force the secret from me. It has been accomplished. Now do you understand?"

"That isn't fair, Sara," he protested. "If you'll let me come to see you in spite of what the gossips and Mrs. Redmond Wrandall predict, you may be sure I will be as much in evidence as ever. I suppose I have been a bit of a nuisance, hanging on as I have."

"I admire your perseverance. More than that, I admire your courage in accepting the situation as you have. I only hope you may win her over to your way of thinking, Brandon. Goodby."

"I shall go up to town tomorrow, kit and bag. When shall I see you? We have a great deal left to talk about before I sail."

"Come when you like."

"You really want me to come?"

"Certainly."

He studied her pale, tired face for a moment, and then shook his head. "You must take care of yourself," he said. "You are unstrung. Get a good rest and—and forget certains things if you can. Everything will come out all right in the end."

"It depends on what one is willing to accept as the end," he said.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Why She Mourned.

"Boo-hoo!" sobbed the lady.

"What are you crying about?" the man asked.

"You know the bread and the jam I sent to the fair?"

"Yes. Didn't it take a prize? Well, cheer up—those judges—"

"But it did take a prize—they both took first prizes—boo-hoo!—"

"Well, what are you crying about?"

"The bread took first prize and the jam specimen of concrete, and [illegible] the best-[illegible]"

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

[illegible]y weather has reduced the yield [illegible]matoes in Etowah county [illegible]e cotton crop in Pickens county [illegible]ne.

[illegible]owah has some of the best crops [illegible]e state.

[illegible]me parts of Pike county are [illegible] dry.

[illegible]ntsville has three candidates for [illegible] commissioner.

[illegible]ntsville has abolished its red [illegible] district again.

[illegible] spineless cactus company has been [illegible]tered at Mobile.

[illegible]puty Willis Bass captured a still [illegible]iles from Gadsden.

[illegible]acon county fair is posting its [illegible] for November 3-6.

[illegible] B. Howard has been named ex-[illegible] commissioner for Cullman.

[illegible]enty-one deserted wives appealed [illegible]elp in a year in Montgomery.

[illegible]ol weather is reported to have [illegible]aged the crops around Equality.

[illegible]ty-six of the 193 pensioners on [illegible] Lauderdale county roll have been [illegible]off.

[illegible]om Eufaula comes the report that [illegible]pects for a bumper pecan crop are [illegible]t.

[illegible]skegee's population will show an [illegible]ease of 20 per cent by the school [illegible]us.

[illegible]y county has sent out more [illegible]ers than any county of like popu[illegible]n.

[illegible]new boat will be built to ply be[illegible]n Rome and Gadsden. The traffic [illegible]creasing.

[illegible]dison's commissioners will not [illegible]nt to take the fence from around [illegible]ourt house.

[illegible]dison county appropriated $3500 [illegible]ch domestic science in the Gur[illegible] High School.

[illegible]ge Gunter of Montgomery city [illegible] charged the grand jury to be [illegible] against pistol toting.

[illegible]scaloosa is sixth town in size in [illegible] ranking next to Anniston, be[illegible]head of Talladega and Gadsden.

[illegible]k has been started on the public [illegible] from Comer, in the northern [illegible] of Barbour county, to Midway, [illegible]llock county.

[illegible]H. King, a prominent farmer of [illegible] county, is reported to have [illegible]ed four thousand bushels of [illegible]rom a 60-acre field.

[illegible] election is to be called on Au[illegible], at which time the citizens of [illegible]ge will have the opportunity [illegible] for the issuance of $15,000 [illegible] for the purpose of street im[illegible]ent.

[illegible]e meeting held in Tuscaloosa [illegible] Burt, proprietor of the Flor[illegible]Hotel of Birmingham, was elect[illegible]esident of the Alabama Hotel [illegible] Association, and Birmingham [illegible]animously selected as the ne[illegible] place.

[illegible] citizens of Athens held a mons[illegible]elebration July 21 in honor of [illegible]mpletion to Athens of the Lew[illegible] and Northern road. Several [illegible]nd people were reported as be[illegible] attendance.

[illegible]t 50 young men applied at an [illegible]ation held in Birmingham July [illegible] state license as mine foremen [illegible]as the first examination held [illegible] the supervision of the new [illegible] of examiners recently appointed [illegible] governor.

[illegible]ernor O'Neal has written every [illegible] judge in Alabama asking each [illegible]pare plans in his county for [illegible] the roads of the State of [illegible] 13, 14 and 15, which days [illegible]en set aside by the governor [illegible]h the people should contribute [illegible]d money toward the improve[illegible] the highways.

[illegible] of the determined resistance [illegible] farmers and as a result also [illegible]tinuous dry weather, there was [illegible]mage done to the cotton crop [illegible] boll weevil during the week [illegible]ded than during the preceding [illegible] according to the weekly agri[illegible]l review issued at the office [illegible]tain Reuben F. Kolb, commis[illegible] of agriculture.

[illegible]gh defeated for the big college [illegible]rected by the Methodist Episco[illegible]urch, south, Atlanta being se[illegible] the place, announcement was [illegible] that a big technical school [illegible] be located in Birmingham, the [illegible]portations to assist the citizens [illegible]blishing one of the greatest in[illegible]ns of the kind in the country.

[illegible] Decatur is still discussing [illegible]g its name.

[illegible] blast furnace of the Gulf States [illegible]mpany at Gadsden has resumed [illegible]ons. Ore and coal mines as [illegible] coke ovens of the same com[illegible]ave also resumed.

[illegible] Southern railway has placed [illegible] for 10,000 tons of steel rails [illegible] Tennessee company's mill at [illegible]

[illegible]ities of peaches are being [illegible] from Thorsby every day. The [illegible]rop is extra heavy and crates [illegible]ing good prices.

[illegible]ourst at Altoona did consider[illegible]mage.

[illegible] increased business along the [illegible] the Louisville and Nashville [illegible] has necessitated the opening [illegible]r railroad office in Butler [illegible] The new office will be at [illegible] miles south of Green[illegible]

[illegible] meeting of the Chattaboo[illegible]ley Medical Society will be [illegible] Opelikians will have [illegible] of entertaining this dis[illegible] body of physicians of Ala[illegible] Georgia next July.

REVOLT [illegible]

DEMOCRATS [illegible] WITH P[illegible]

New Party Att[illegible] ers, Who N[illegible] publicans. Sprea[illegible]

Here is an e[illegible] any partisan. [illegible] the North. It [illegible]bal which has [illegible] "one-party rule [illegible] forces upon the [illegible]

Apropos of [illegible] from the Demo[illegible] the Watchman [illegible]lin, in that sta[illegible]

"The whole [illegible]itical situation [illegible] has changed co[illegible]

"All of the De[illegible]lowed the fall[illegible] to cast their [illegible]ives. Thirteen [illegible] in the legislat[illegible] old hulk, and [illegible] clinging to the [illegible] make an atten[illegible]

"Let us be pa[illegible] will come acr[illegible] soon as they [illegible] wrought by t[illegible] seats in Washi[illegible]

"The people [illegible] into the Repu[illegible] impossible. T[illegible]cept eternal pa[illegible] regions.

"But the new [illegible] for the white m[illegible]sume a safe a[illegible]ness interests [illegible] the pay envelo[illegible] is essential to [illegible] The progressiv[illegible] over the south[illegible] ana like a pr[illegible] eventually awa[illegible] when it comes [illegible]ture of this cou[illegible] and sane meth[illegible]

The shadow [illegible]er and strong [illegible] which has rais[illegible]cratic suprema[illegible] of the South.

Not only are [illegible] talking as th[illegible] talks; Louisian[illegible]ing desperately [illegible] head off the sh[illegible] party they hav[illegible] most oppressiv[illegible] conceived. It [illegible] requirement tha[illegible] primary shall [illegible] will vote at the [illegible] date named in [illegible] Tammany in a[illegible]vised a machin[illegible]

But the thin[illegible] back. Mr. Joh[illegible]ive committeem[illegible]lieves that any [illegible] by the Democr[illegible]ally "puts the n[illegible] And he is deli[illegible] at the fact th[illegible] of an apparentl[illegible]lature voted a[illegible] tack on the Pro[illegible] of the more w[illegible] have been sup[illegible]sive movement [illegible]licly that they [illegible]ly established. [illegible] this is the sava[illegible] Orleans machin[illegible]pressive legisla[illegible] "bolters" to sta[illegible]

"The Louisia[illegible]ing. The South[illegible] Republican part[illegible]tate, and does [illegible] use of a new p[illegible]

Roosev[illegible]

Colonel Roos[illegible] afraid of work. [illegible] a marvelous ca[illegible]mendously busy [illegible] waking day an[illegible] eager to take o[illegible] expend a great[illegible] When he with[illegible]torial staff of t[illegible] there is no do[illegible] big plunge into [illegible]

He means to [illegible] against the bos[illegible] fighting since [illegible]vention of 1912 [illegible] President Wilso[illegible]tion's foreign [illegible] fight Mr. Wilso[illegible]tion's economic [illegible] home. This h[illegible] but, because he [illegible] other work out [illegible] these fights, e[illegible] fight them toot[illegible] ditch.—New Yo[illegible]

The R[illegible]

T. R.'s physi[illegible] rest until he c[illegible] his recent spe[illegible]cords, but it w[illegible] point to study [illegible] vocal cords of [illegible] Borah et al.—B[illegible]

It Was B[illegible]

The Republica[illegible] says Colonel R[illegible] the Taft plan f[illegible] king. Give cred[illegible] The tariff comm[illegible]cated first by M[illegible] was in the sens[illegible] approved by M[illegible]

How Abe[illegible]

It might be [illegible] ascertain if his [illegible] are counseling [illegible] have not G. O. [illegible]

The Hollow Of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON : COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

CHAPTER XVII.—Continued.

He did not once interrupt her. All the time she was speaking he was studying the profile of her face as if fascinated by its strange immobility. For the matter of a full half-hour he sat on the rail, his back against a post, his arms folded across the breast of the thick ulster he wore, staring at her, drinking in every word of the story she told. A look of surprise crept into his face when she came to the point where the thought of marrying Hetty to the brother of her victim first began to manifest itself in her designs. For a time the look of incredulity remained, to be succeeded by utter scorn as she went on with the recital. Her reasons, her excuses, her explanations for this master stroke in the way of compensation for all that she had endured at the hands of the scornful Wrandalls, all of whom were hateful to her without exception, stirred him deeply. He began to understand the forces that compelled her to resort to this Machiavellian plan for revenge on them. She admitted everything: her readiness to blight Hetty's life forever; her utter callousness in laying down these ugly plans; her surpassing vindictiveness; her reflections on the triumph she was to enjoy when her aims were fully attained. She confessed to a genuine pity for Hetty Castleton from the beginning, but it was outweighed by that thing she could only describe as an obsession! . . . How she hated the Wrandalls! . . . Then came the real awakening: when the truth came to her as a revelation from God. Hetty had not been to blame. The girl was innocent of the one sin that called for vengeance so far as she was concerned. The slaying of Challis Wrandall was justified! All these months she had been harboring a woman she believed to have been his mistress as well as his murderess. It was not so much the murderess that she would have foisted upon the Wrandalls as a daughter, but the mistress! . . . She loved the girl, she had loved her from that first night. Back of it all, therefore, lay the stern, unsuspected truth: from the very beginning she instinctively had known this girl to be innocent of guile. . . . Her house of cards fell down. There was nothing left of the plans on which it had been constructed. It had all been swept away, even as she strove to protect it against destruction, and the ground was strewn with the ashes of fires burnt out. . . . She was shocked to find that she had even built upon the evil spot! . . . Almost word for word she repeated Hetty's own story of her meeting with Challis Wrandall, and how she went, step by step and blindly, to the last scene in the tragedy, when his vileness, his true nature was revealed to her. The girl had told her everything. She had thought herself to be in love with Wrandall. She was carried away by his protestations. She was infatuated. (Sara smiled to herself as she spoke of this. She knew Challis Wrandall's charm!) The girl believed in him implicitly. When he took her to Burton's inn it was to make her his wife, as she supposed. He had arranged everything. Then came the truth. She defended herself. . . .

"I came upon her in the road on that wild night, Brandon, at the place I pointed out. Can you picture her as I have described her? Can you picture her despair, her hopelessness, her misery? I have told you everything, from beginning to end. You know how she came to me, how I prepared her for the sacrifice, how she left me. I have not written to her. I cannot. She must hate me with all her soul, just as I have hated the Wrandalls, but with greater reason, I confess. She would have given herself up to the law long ago, if it had not been for exposing me to the world as her defender, her protector. She knew she was not morally guilty of the crime of murder. In the beginning she was afraid. She did not know our land, our laws. In time she came to understand that she was in no real peril, but then it was too late. A confession would have placed me in an impossible position. You see, she thought of me all this time. She loved me as no woman ever loved another. Was not I the wife of the man she had killed, and was not I the noblest of all women in her eyes? God! And to think of what I had planned for her!"

This was the end of the story.

The words died away in a sort of whimpering wail, falling in with the wind to be lost to his straining ears. Her head drooped, her arms hung limply at her side.

For a long time he sat there in silence, looking out over the darkening water, unwilling, unable indeed, to speak. His heart was full of compassion for her, mingling strangely with what was left of scorn and horror. What could he say to her?

At last she turned to him. "Now you know all that I can tell you of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly.

"For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrandalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicis, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrandalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said levelly.

She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face.

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She

This Woman Was Beyond Him.

has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"

"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is now, Sara."

She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."

Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious.

"She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of loathing for me. How am I to regain what I have lost? How am I to make her understand? She was away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been beside her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"

"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance.

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I—I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you sail?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I—I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon, not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Not directly. But I will say this "Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to sink into the background, despite the absolution he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wrandall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help contrasting the two women. He loved Hetty, of course, because he was made that way, of course because, of all the men in the world, she was the woman for him. But Sara! Sara was superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if burnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wrandall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard not to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and reread it, searching for the slightest flaw: a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steadfast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wrandall, and but once was Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wrung everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wrandall. Even as he penned these lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Staring hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wrandall expects to close the 'ouse this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon. I suppose you know, sir, we 'ave taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we 'ave, sir. They've been decorating it for the pawst two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we 'ad. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them hexpensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinspirin'. Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wrandall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

Booth actually was startled by her appearance when she entered the room a few minutes later. She looked positively ill.

"My dear Sara," he cried anxiously, "this is too bad. You are making yourself ill. Come, come, this won't do."

"I shall be all right in a day or two," she said, with a weary little gesture. "I have been nervous. This probably was too great a change. Do the reminiscences of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly.

"For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrandalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicis, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrandalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said levelly.

She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face.

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

Booth Was Startled by Her Appearance.

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"

"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is now, Sara."

She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."

Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious.

"She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of loathing for me. How am I to regain what I have lost? How am I to make her understand? She was away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been beside her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"

"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance.

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I—I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you sail?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I—I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon. not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Not directly. But I will say this "Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to sink into the background, despite the absolution he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wrandall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help contrasting the two women. He loved Hetty, of course, because he was made that way, of course because, of all the men in the world, she was the woman for him. But Sara! Sara was superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if burnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wrandall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard not to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and reread it, searching for the slightest flaw: a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steadfast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wrandall, and but once was Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wrung everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wrandall. Even as he penned these lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Staring hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wrandall expects to close the 'ouse this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon. I suppose you know, sir, we 'ave taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we 'ave, sir. They've been decorating it for the pawst two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we 'ad. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them hexpensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinspirin'. Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wrandall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

Booth actually was startled by her appearance when she entered the room a few minutes later. She looked positively ill.

"My dear Sara," he cried anxiously, "this is too bad. You are making yourself ill. Come, come, this won't do."

"I shall be all right in a day or two," she said, with a weary little gesture. "I have been nervous. This probably was too great a change. Do the reminiscences of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly.

"For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrandalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicis, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrandalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said levelly.

She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face.

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"

"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is now, Sara."

She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."

Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious.

"She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of loathing for me. How am I to regain what I have lost? How am I to make her understand? She was away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been beside her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"

"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance.

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I—I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you sail?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I—I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon. not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Not directly. But I will say this "Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to sink into the background, despite the absolution he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wrandall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help contrasting the two women. He loved Hetty, of course, because he was made that way, of course because, of all the men in the world, she was the woman for him. But Sara! Sara was superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if burnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wrandall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard not to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and reread it, searching for the slightest flaw: a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steadfast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wrandall, and but once was Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wrung everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wrandall. Even as he penned these lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Staring hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wrandall expects to close the 'ouse this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon. I suppose you know, sir, we 'ave taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we 'ave, sir. They've been decorating it for the pawst two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we 'ad. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them hexpensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinspirin'. Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wrandall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

Booth actually was startled by her appearance when she entered the room a few minutes later. She looked positively ill.

"My dear Sara," he cried anxiously, "this is too bad. You are making yourself ill. Come, come, this won't do."

"I shall be all right in a day or two," she said, with a weary little gesture. "I have been nervous. This probably was too great a change. Do the reminiscences of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly.

"For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrandalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicis, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrandalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Het make the sale. 'Gad, I almost ha to beg him to take the money. Te ribly proud and haughty, as the butle would say. He said he wouldn't slee well until he has returned the filth lucre. We are looking for him bac any hour now. But if he shouldn't ge here by Friday, we will sail withou him. He said he would follow by th next boat, in case anything happene that he didn't catch the Mauretania.'"

Sara interrupted herself to offer a ironic observation: "If Hetty did no despise her father so heartily, I shoul advise you to look farther for a fathe in-law, Brandon. The colonel is a ba lot. Estates in the north of Ireland Poor Leslie!" She laughed softly.

"He'll not show up, eh?"

"Not a bit of it," she said. "H may be charged to profit and loss t Leslie's books. This part of the lette will interest you," she went on, a if all that had gone before was o no importance to him. "'I hear inte esting news concerning you, my dea girl. My heartiest congratulations it is all true. Brandy is one in a mi lion. I have hoped all along to hav him as a full-fledged brother-in-law, that's the way you'd put it. Fathe writes that every one is talking abou it, and saying what a fine thing it i
He has a feeling of delicacy about a proaching you in the matter, and fancy it's just as well until everythin is settled. I wish you'd let me mak a suggestion, however. Wouldn't be wise to let us all get together an talk over the business end of th game? Brandy's a fine chap, a corke in fact, but the question is: has h got it in him to take Challis' place i the firm? You've got to consider th future as well as the present, my dea
We all do. With his artistic temper ment he might play hob with your i terests, and ours too, for that matte Wouldn't it be wise for me to sound him a bit before we take him into th firm? Forgive me for suggesting th but, as you know, your interests a mine, and I'm terribly keen about m ing you get the best of everythin
By the way, wasn't he a bit gone o Hetty? Passing fancy, of course, an not deep enough to hurt anybod
Good old Brandy!'"

"There is more, Brandon, but it of no consequence," she said, touchi the letter upon the table. "You s how the land lays."

Booth was pale with anno
"By Jove, Sara, what an insuf ass he is!"

"The shoe pinches?"

"Oh, it's such perfect rot! I'
sorry on your account. Have you ev heard of such gall?"

"Oh, he is merely acting as the fa ily spokesman. I can see them n in solemn conclave. They think their indisputable right to select husband for me, to pass upon him, accept or decline him as they see to say whether he is a proper man hang up his hat and coat in the offic of Wrandall & Co."

"Do you mean to say—"

"Let's not talk about it, Brand
It is too silly."

They fell to discussing her plans the immediate future, although th minds of both were at work w something else.

"Now that I have served my p pose, I suppose you will not care see so much of me," she said, a prepared to take leave of her.

"Served your purpose? What you mean?"

"I should have put it differen
You have been most assiduous in y efforts to force the secret from m
It has been accomplished. Now you understand?"

"That isn't fair, Sara," he prote
ed. "If you'll let me come to see y in spite of what the gossips and Redmond Wrandall predict, you m be sure I will be as much in evide as ever. I suppose I have been a of a nuisance, hanging on as I ha

"I admire your perseverance. M than that, I admire your courage accepting the situation as you ha
I only hope you may win her over your way of thinking, Brand Goodby."

"I shall go up to town tomorro kit and bag. When shall I see yo We have a great deal left to talk abo before I sail."

"Come when you like."

"You really want me to come?"

"Certainly."

He studied her pale, tired face a moment, and then shook his he
"You must take care of yourself," said. "You are unstrung. Get a g rest and—and forget certains thin you can. Everything will come all right in the end."

"It depends on what one is wil to accept as the end," he said.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Why She Mourned.

"Boo-hoo!" sobbed the lady.

"What are you crying about?"
man asked.

"You know the bread and the
I sent to the fair?"

"Yes. Didn't it take a prize?
cheer up—those judges—"

"But it did take a prize—the took first prizes—boo-hoo!—"

"Well, what are you crying a

"The bread took first prize best specimen of conserv jelly as the best skim

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

weather has reduced the yield atoes in Etowah county

cotton crop in Pickens county wah has some of the best crops

e state.

e parts of Pike county are dry.

ntsville has three candidates for commissioner.

ntsville has abolished its red district again.

pineless cactus company has been ered at Mobile.

uty Willis Bass captured a still iles from Gadsden.

con county fair is posting its s for November 3-6.

B. Howard has been named ex-commissioner for Cullman.

enty-one deserted wives appealed help in a year in Montgomery.

ol weather is reported to have ged the crops around Equality.

ty-six of the 193 pensioners on Lauderdale county roll have been off.

om Eufaula comes the report that pects for a bumper pecan crop are
t.

skegee's population will show an ease of 20 per cent by the school us.

y county has sent out more ers than any county of like popu-
n.

new boat will be built to ply ben Rome and Gadsden. The traffic creasing.

dison's commissioners will not ept to take the fence from around ourt house.

dson county appropriated $3500 ch domestic science in the Gur-High School.

ge Gunter of Montgomery city charged the grand jury to be against pistol toting.

aloosa is sixth town in size in ranking next to Anniston, bed of Talladega and Gadsden.

has been started on the public om Comer, in the northern Barbour county, to Midway,
k county.

King, a prominent farmer of county, is reported to have d four thousand bushels of n a 60-acre field.

election is to be called on Au-
, at which time the citizens of ee will have the opportunity e for the issuance of $15,000 nds for the purpose of street im-ment.

the meeting held in Tuscaloosa
Burt, proprietor of the Flor-Hotel of Birmingham, was elect-resident of the Alabama Hotel Association, and Birmingham animously selected as the ne t place.

citizens of Athens held a monsebration July 21 in honor of pletion to Athens of the Lew-and Northern road. Several d people were reported as be-attendance.

50 young men applied at an ation held in Birmingham July state license as mine foremen was the first examination held the supervision of the new of examiners recently appointed governor.

ernor O'Neal has written every judge in Alabama asking each pare plans in his county for the roads of the State of 13, 14 and 15, which days en set aside by the governor the people should contribute d money toward the improve-the highways.

e of the determined resistance farmers and as a result also mous dry weather, there was mage done to the cotton crop boll weevil during the week led than during the preceding according to the weekly agri-l review issued at the office ain Reuben F. Kolb, commisof agriculture.

ch defeated for the big college ected by the Methodist Episco-rch, south, Atlanta being seas the place, announcement was that a big technical school be located in Birmingham, the porations to assist the citizens thing one of the greatest inns of the kind in the country.

Decatur is still discussing g its name.

blast furnace of the Gulf States mpany at Gadsden has resumed
ns. Ore and coal mines as coke ovens of the same com-ve also resumed.

Southern railway has placed
r for 10,000 tons of steel rails e Tennessee company's mill at ities of peaches are being from Thorsby every day. The rop is extra heavy and crates ging good prices.

burst at Altoona did considermage.

Increased business along the the Louisville and Nashville has necessitated the opening her railroad office in Butler
The new office will be at nine miles south of Green-

t meeting of the Chattahoo-ley Medical Society will be Pelika. Opelikians will have e of entertaining this dis-body of physicians of Ala-Georgia next July.

REVOLT IN LOUISIANA

DEMOCRATS CASTING THEIR LOT WITH PROGRESSIVES.

New Party Attracting The Southerners, Who Never Would Be Republicans, And Movement Is Spreading Rapidly.

Here is an editorial. It is not from any partisan Progressive advocate in the North. It is from a southern journal which has always supported the "one-party" rule which the Democracy forces upon the South.

Apropos of "The Louisiana Revolt" from the Democracy to the new party, the Watchman of the city of Franklin, in that state, says:

"The whole complexion of the political situation in the third district has changed completely.

"All of the Democrats who have followed the faith have left the party to cast their lot with the Progressives. Thirteen of the representatives in the legislature have deserted the old hulk, and those who are still clinging to the wreckage will soon make an attempt to swim to safety.

"Let us be patient with them. They will come across like the others as soon as they can see the disaster wrought by the party holding the seats in Washington.

"The people of the South cannot go into the Republican party. That is impossible. They would rather accept eternal punishment in the lower regions.

"But the new party opens the way for the white men of the South to assume a safe attitude toward the business interests of the country and keep the pay envelope on the move, which is essential to the general welfare. The progressive spirit is sweeping over the southern portion of Louisiana like a prairie fire, and it will eventually awaken the other section when it comes to know that the future of this country depends upon safe and sane methods of doing things."

The shadow of reality grows stronger and stronger in this phantom which has raised itself against Democratic supremacy and the "solidity" of the South.

Not only are Louisiana newspapers talking as the Franklin Watchman talks; Louisiana Democrats are acting desperately in self-defense. To head off the shift to the Progressive party they have devised one of the most oppressive primary laws ever conceived. It makes the outrageous requirement that a voter voting in a primary shall make affidavit that he will vote at the election for the candidate named in the primary. Even Tammany in all its glory never devised a machine device like this.

But the thing has a deadly kickback. Mr. John M. Parker, Progressive committeeman from Louisiana, believes that any punitive action taken by the Democratic legislature virtually "puts the new party on the map." And he is delighted beyond measure at the fact that thirty-one members of an apparently all-Democratic legislature voted against the primary attack on the Progressives. One or two of the more wealthy planters who have been supporting the Progressive movement have announced publicly that they consider it permanently established. In confirmation of this is the savage admission by New Orleans machine Democrats that repressive legislation will only force "bolters" to stay in the new party.

"The Louisiana Revolt" is spreading. The South never can go to the Republican party, but it need not hesitate, and does not hesitate, to make use of a new party.—Chicago Post.

Roosevelt To Fight.

Colonel Roosevelt has never been afraid of work. He has always had a marvelous capacity for being tremendously busy every minute of his waking day and yet being able and eager to take on more activities and expend a greater energy upon them. When he withdraws from the editorial staff of the Outlook, therefore, there is no doubt what it means—a big plunge into politics.

He means to go on with his fight against the bosses whom he has been fighting since the first Chicago convention of 1912. He means to fight President Wilson on the administration's foreign policy. He means to fight Mr. Wilson on the administration's economic and social policy at home. This he himself announces; but, because he is going to put his other work out of the way to make these fights, evidently he means to fight them tooth and nail to the last ditch.—New York Press.

The Real Question.

T. R.'s physician advises complete rest until he can study the effect of his recent speeches on his vocal cords, but it would be more to the point to study their effect upon the vocal cords of Cummins, LaFollette, Borah et al.—Boston Transcript.

It Was Beveridge's Plan.

The Republican Philadelphia Ledger says Colonel Roosevelt goes back to the Taft plan for scientific tariff making. Give credit where credit is due. The tariff commission plan was advocated first by Mr. Beveridge when he was in the senate and was afterward approved by Mr. Taft.

How About the Doctors?

It might be well for Roosevelt to ascertain if his medical advisers who are counseling a long period of rest have not G. O. P. affiliations.

Women's Times of Danger

Women suffer a great deal from kidney diseases. Their indoor life, tight clothing and trying work all tend to weaken the kidneys. Woman's life also includes times of danger that are apt to leave the kidneys weak and to start attacks of backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness and urinary ills.

Prompt treatment, however will avert the danger of dropsy, gravel, or fatal Bright's disease.

Take Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended, special kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully throughout the civilized world—have brought new life and new strength to thousands of tired, discouraged women.

An Alabama Case

Mrs. J. M. Dowling, Union Ave., Ozark, Ala., says: "My kidneys acted irregularly and I felt miserable all the time. I had such bad dizzy spells, I could hardly stand and my sight was affected. I doctored, but kept getting worse. The first day's use of Doan's Kidney Pills made me feel better and while I was finishing the third box, I passed a gravel stone the size of a pea. I have been in good health ever since."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

FREE

Kodak Films Developed Absolutely Free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Mail orders given prompt attention.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over; will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. All dealers or 6 sent express paid for $1.00.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

TAKE Tutt's Pills

The first dose often astonishes the invalid, giving elasticity of mind, buoyancy of body, GOOD DIGESTION,
regular bowels and solid flesh. Price, 25 cts.

KODAK FILMS DEVELOPED FREE

Our high class work will assure you of best results. Price of prints 2c to 5c.
Write for samples.

TERRESON'S 2027 SECOND AVE. BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
Mail orders given prompt attention.

Get "WILLET'S JULY BULLETIN"

Tells of and prices FULGHUM Oats (Machine cleaned of weed and runty seeds, worth double all Farmer's stocks); Burr Clover; Hairy Vetch; New Winter Swedish Vetch; Crimson Clover, Etc.
WILLET SEED COMPANY, Augusta

DO YOU LIVE in a town having 200 or more Negro population? If so, and you want to make $50 to $300 per month easy, send $1. for scheme giving full particulars. Satisfaction guaranteed. F. PRACHOS, 1447 St. Elliott Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR AN EASY seller with repeat orders, get our attractive proposition. DAVIS SPEARMINT PEPSIN GUM. High grade goods. Full box sample 40c. Atlantic Chewing Gum Co., Baltimore, Md.

LADIES Don't ask a man for your toilet necessities, order by mail. Send for our FREE book you will be interested in. Write MAENNER CO., 2641 Wyoming, St. Louis, Mo.

Orangeade Ideal Summer drink. Send 10c for sample package, makes gallon. Particulars of money-making proposition free. Send now. The Orangeada Co., P. Box 882-L, Kansas City, Mo.

Men or Women can easily make from $5 to $10 daily; no capital or experience necessary. Edward W. Strassburgh, 984½ Hancock Ave., E., Detroit, Mich.

Whirlwind Seller Absolutely new, big profits, repeats sure, particulars free. GUY A. RICHMOND, Box 26, LIVERMORE FALLS, MAINE

LOOK 24 ways to make money and the "Roadman's Guide," particulars FREE. A. L. CUMMINGS, Lock Box 63, Chesaning, Mich.

MEN in every locality—Make big money making automobile tires puncture proof. Write S. F. Hodlin, 219 Wyse Bldg., Muncie, Ind.

AGENTS Greatest little seller; every household needs it. Dime, sample and prices. Triplebes, 178 Milford St., Manchester, N. H.

Two Good Farms Estancia Valley; sell either or both cheap or trade for store. G. N. MELTABARGER, VENUS, N. M.

SEND me 10 names and 25c and I will send you a wedding ring and a dollar note. E. W. McCallen, Borden, Ind.

MAKE BIG MONEY selling portable fire extinguishers. Sample $1.50; information free. Sandermann, 401 S. Broad, Elizabeth, N. J.

OWN YOUR OWN FARM in rich TRINITY VALLEY, TEXAS. 40 year terms. Write Jackson-Vreeland Company, Kansas City, Mo.

His Tricks.

"I went out motoring with that popular amateur magician, and what transformation trick do you think he pulled off before we had gone any distance?"

"What was that?"

"He made the automobile turn turtle."

Only One "BROMO QUININE"

To get the genuine, call for full name, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 25c.

For the Russian government railways some huge purchases are to be made—17,000 freight cars, 1,400 passenger cars and 700 refrigerator cars.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

Lots of people would rather send a dollar to the heathen than give the poor at home a pleasant look.

TANGO AS CAUSE OF CRIME

Brooklyn Judge Blames Theft by Two Youths to Nights Given to Modern Dance.

In suspending sentence in the cases of two youths who had pleaded guilty to attempted grand larceny, County Judge Fawcett in Brooklyn listed "white lights and tango nights" in the catalogue of incentives to crime.

"You can't expect to dance all night," he said, "and lie abed half the day, yet always have money for your carousals, unless you steal it. And let me tell you our jails and penitentiaries are full of people with just such ideas. If your family had given you good beatings instead of money to spend, it would have been better for you."

The boys, John Colver, twenty years old, of 487 Hancock street, and Carlton Chapman, sixteen, of 362 Jefferson avenue, had been indicted for stealing money and jewelry from Adelaide Wiston, keeper of a furnished room house, where they lived for a time. They belonged to respectable families of moderate means. Both promised the judge to go home and begin again, Chapman to return to school, and Colver to work. Both wore tango pumps and silk shirts when arraigned.—New York Sun.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES—RESINOL CURED

Atlanta, Ga., April 24.—"My face was covered with pimples which defied creams, soaps and cosmetics. They were a source of constant humiliation to me. By the time I had finished a cake of resinol soap and half a jar of resinol ointment, my skin was soft as velvet, and as smooth. My friends were stunned, and everyone asked me what I had done. When I told them, I think they hardly believed it, for the transformation was simply wonderful. Since then I have been using resinol soap and shall never be without it again, for I have learned the delights of a clear, soft, beautiful complexion that may be attained by its constant use." (Signed) Miss E. P. Gaddis, 284 South Pryor St.

Resinol ointment and resinol soap stop itching instantly and speedily heal eczema, and other skin humors, dandruff, sunburn, sores, burns and piles. Sold by every druggist.—Adv.

One Hundred Years Ago.

The curious modes which women affect now began as far back as 1798, which is a period we should hardly wish to copy in most respects. A dance not at all unlike the tango was in vogue at that time, and had many exponents, who danced in loose bodices opening in a V shape from the shoulders almost to the waist. Skirts were slit and were often made of transparent gauze.

We may return to the gowns of that period, which were without waists, having simply a girdle to the bust, with skirts caught up rather short in front and slightly trained at the back. In 1800 women wore sandals and bare feet. Corset belts were only about two inches wide. Some gowns were caught up to the knee with large cameos. Soon fashion overreached itself, and then came crinolines, pointed footgear and unnaturally small waists. Are we coming to this?

Puzzled the Parson.

At a marriage service performed some time ago in a little country church in Georgia, when the minister said in a solemn tone: "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" instead of the woman answering for herself, a gruff man's voice answered: "I will." The minister looked up very much perplexed, and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answered, "I will." Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said: "She's deef, parson, an' I'm answerin' for her."

Died With Fortune Near.

That Benjamin Vance, prospector, whose body was found in a gully at the base of a 500-foot cliff near Palo Rito pass recently, was killed after locating a rich mineral vein is the belief of S. J. Vance of Tekemah, Neb., his brother. In the prospector's cabin were a number of high-grade ore samples, cached in a secret passageway.—Crestone (Colo.) Dispatch to Denver Post.

A Beginner.

"Are you a socialist?" "I am." "What do you understand by socialism?" "I haven't got as far along as the understanding part. I picked socialism because I don't like any of the regular brands of politics."

For the Sake of Shopping.

A few women get so much fun out of shopping that they really hope the articles they really buy won't last as long as the clerk promises, so that they can the sooner repeat the experience.

Also Barren of Wealth.

"So that foreign suitor of Ethel's turned out to be no baron after all."

"Oh, he was a baron, all right—Baron Munchausen."

GET WIRELESS BY BEDSPRING

Eastern Amateur Experiments With a Novel Form of Antennae and Is Successful.

Cyrus H. Flandreaux of Peekskill, N. Y., gives the following interesting account of his experiments with a novel form of antennae for wireless telegraphy:

"There are many things used as antennae to catch the mysterious electric wives which carry our wireless messages through space, and I find that the springs of my bed serve as very efficient antennae. My room is on the second story of my house, and by using these springs as antennae I can easily read the signals sent out every night by the wireless station at Sayville, L. I., although they are not by any means so loud as when I use my outdoor antennae, which are 40 feet above ground, 60 feet long and consists of four wires on spreaders, the wires being two feet apart.

"The bedspring antennae are best for use with nearby high power stations. Sayville, L. I., is about fifty miles from Peekskill. With my outdoor antennae I continually hear the Arlington (Va.) naval station when it sends out the correct time signals at 11:55 a. m and at 9:55 p. m.; also the weather reports, Brooklyn navy yard; New London, Conn.; Cape Cod and others, including amateur stations too numerous to mention.

"I have an all-round good apparatus. I hold a station license and an operator's license, both issued by the United States government. My official call is 2 V U."

London Has Ambulances.

London, which has never yet had an ambulance, has at last ordered six of them, and expects them to do all the work for the entire city. In case of past accidents the policemen have had to commandeer the nearest wagon, depending on the generosity of the driver, as they were not able to offer him anything.

REMARKABLE LETTER FROM A WELL KNOWN WASHINGTON DRUGGIST.

In reference to Elixir Babek the great remedy for chills and fever and all malarial diseases.

"Within the last five months I have sold 3,600 bottles of Elixir Babek, for Malaria, Chills and Fever. Our customers speak very well of it. Henry Evans, 922 F St., N.W., Washington, D.C."

Elixir Babek 50 cents all druggists, or by Parcels Post, prepaid, from Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

Nothing Like Being Careful.

"Shall I pump up the tires, sir?"

"Wait until we get out into the country, Jacques. I heard a doctor say that the air around here is very impure."

James Miller of Pottstown, Pa., cured a horse of pollevil with three bottles of Hanford's Balsam. He says: "The veterinarians had been trying to cure the horse for seven years." Adv.

According to Dr. Clement Lucas of England the human family is likely to become a one-toed race.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Other people's troubles bore a man more than his own.

For fouls in cattle use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. Adv.

A friend in need seldom hesitates to tell you so.

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.—"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live.

Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefitted by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."—Mrs. MARTHA SEAVEY, Box 1144, Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Why Scratch?

"Hunt's Cure" is guaranteed to stop and permanently cure that terrible itching. It is compounded for that purpose and your money will be promptly refunded WITHOUT QUESTION if Hunt's Cure fails to cure Itch, Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm or any other Skin Disease. 50c at your druggist's, or by mail direct if he hasn't it. Manufactured only by A. B. RICHARDS MEDICINE CO., Sherman, Texas

SORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion

relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures without pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for SALTER'S. Only from Reform Dispensary, 68 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

FREE TO ALL SUFFERERS

If you feel 'OUT OF SORTS' 'RUN DOWN' 'GOT THE BLUES' SUFFER from KIDNEY, BLADDER, NERVOUS DISEASES, CHRONIC WEAKNESS, ULCERS, SKIN ERUPTIONS, PILES, write for FREE CLOTH BOUND MEDICAL BOOK on these diseases and WONDERFUL CURES effected by THE NEW FRENCH REMEDY THERAPION No. 1 No. 2 No. 3 and decide for yourself if it is the remedy for YOUR OWN ailment. Absolutely FREE. No 'follow up' circulars. No obligations. DR. LECLERC MED. CO., HAVERSTOCK RD., HAMPSTEAD, LONDON, ENG. WE WANT TO PROVE THERAPION WILL CURE YOU.

Most Valuable Liniment ever discovered, everybody needs it on hand. Receipt for 25c. Dept. A., 658 Plymouth Bldg., Minneapolis

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 30–1914.

Guaranteed under the Food&

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

You Look Prematurely Old

A Disordered Stomach

Is caused by food which has fermented. To avoid a spell of sickness this impure matter should be driven out. You need

DR. M. A. SIMMONS

Vegetable Liver Medicine

It Purifies the Stomach and Bowels

It is a pure, wholesome medicine, made only of a choice selection of the best of nature's herbal remedies for correcting disorders in the liver, stomach and bowels. It is a fine cleansing medicine that acts mildly, yet it rids the system of every particle of disease-breeding impurity. It relieves biliousness, indigestion and constipation. Buy only the genuine in a lithographed tin box. Look for the picture of Dr. M. A. Simmons on the front panel.

Ask for the Tin Box. Price 25 Cents.

C. F. SIMMONS MEDICINE CO., Proprietors, ST. LOUIS, MO.

20 Teachers 700 Students

State Normal School

Florence, Alabama.

This institution has an honorable record of forty-one years in Traning Teachers For Efficient Service.

Seven hundred students were enrolled last session from thirty-six counties.

This school welcomes young men and women of intellect and character who wish to be fitted for the profession of teaching.

Our graduates are holding many of the most responsible positions in Alabama.

Twenty teachers in the faculty, including departments of domestic science and domestic arts. Manual training and applied agriculture together with a systematic study of rural problems will be organized.

Board may be had either in the dormitory or in private families.

The value of the grounds, buildings and equipment is conservatively estimated at $240,000.

Next session begins September 8. Write for catalogue.

Henry J. Willingham, LL.D., President. E. A. Henry, Secretary.

J. H. Duncan shipped a car of nice watermelons from his place at Lomax to Birmingham Tuesday.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle; 2 milch cows and calves freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

Special Sale of

SLIPPERS

And Low Cut Shoes.

During the remainder of this month I will sell at cost, my entire stock of Mens and Boys Low Cut Shoes and Slippers. This is no "bum" lot. It is my regular summer stock, and of the best line made. Do not want to carry them over to next season. If you need a pair come to see me. I can save you money.

Sale Lasts till August 1st Only.

Wiley Littlejohn,

CLANTON, ALABAMA.

Professional Cards

Tipton Mullins A. C. Smith
Mullins & Smith
Attorneys at Law
Clanton - - Ala.

Hosea F. Downs
Doctor of Medicine
Verbena - - Ala

J. Osmond Middleton W. A. Denson
Grady Reynolds
Middleton, Denson & Reynolds
LAWYERS
Office New Gowan Building
Clanton - - Ala.

J. E. Gowan A. M. Gowan
Gowan & Gowan
Dentists
Office in Gowan building
Clanton - Ala

Dr. J. P. Crumpton
Dentist
Wilson Building—Second Floor
Clanton - - Ala

C. Reese Mullins, Agt.
FOR Life, Accident, Health, Fire and Tornado Insurance.
Singer Machines.
Bond Making
Oliver Typewriters and Supplies
CLANTON, - - ALA.

H. C. Junkerman
Dentist
Hours 9 to 11 a.m., 1 to 4 p.m.
Office Franzen building
Thorsby - - Ala.

Arnold A. Conway
DENTIST
Jemison, Alabama.

COURTS AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

Circuit Court.

Spring Term—Second Monday in May.
Fall Term—Fourth Monday in November.
Judge—Hon. W. W. Pearson, Montgomery.
Solicitor—Hon. F. L. Tate, Wetumpka.
Clerk—Hon. M. D. Foshee, Clanton.

Chancery Court.

Spring Term—Second Monday in March Fall Term—Second Monday in September.
Chancellor—Hon. W. W. Whitesides, Anniston.
Register—H. M. Simpson, Clanton.

County Court.

First Monday in each month.

Commissioners' Court.

February—Second Monday; all matters.
April—First Monday; all matters.
June—First Monday; tax matters.
July—Second Monday; tax matters.
August—Second Monday; all matters.
November—First Monday; all matters.

County Officers.

Judge of Probate—E. B. Deason.
Treasurer—J. W. Littlejohn.
Sheriff—Bowen L. Jones.
Solicitor—Sam A. Latham.
Tax Assessor—J. N. Dennis.
Tax Collector—J. D. Collins.

County Commissioners.

First District—W. H. Shaw, Jemison, R. F. D. No. 1.
Second District—W. Y. Atchison, Maplesville.
Third District—W. T. Herrod, Chantersville.
Fourth District—Moses Robinson, Verbena.

Superintendent of Education.

Prof. J. W. Moore, Clanton.

County Educational Board.

Wm. J. Billingsley, Chm. Billingsley,
J. Veazey, Sec'y. Maplesville.
T. J. Dorminy, Jemison.
L. A. Calloway, Cooper.
J. W. Moore, County Superintendent

County Surveyor.

F. M. Langston, Jemison.

Representative.

Hon. W. L. Popwell, Clanton.

State Senator.

Hon. T. A. Curry, Clanton.

Constitutional Convention.

A. O. Patton.

Greatest of All Human Blessings

The most wonderful thing in the world is love expressed in the helpless infant. And among those aids and comforts for expectant mothers is the well known "Mother's Friend."

This is an external application to enable the abdominal muscles to become more pliant, to expand naturally without undue pain from the strain upon cords and ligaments.

In almost every settled community are women who have enjoyed the blessing of this famous remedial and helpful embrocation. Their daughters have grown up to learn of its splendid assistance.

Applied as directed upon those muscles involved it soothes the fine network of nerves with which all the muscles are supplied. Thus a great share of the pains so much dreaded may be avoided and the period of expectancy passed through in ease and comfort.

Anything that adds so much comfort must be counted as a blessing indeed.

In a little book sent by mail much useful information is given to inexperienced mothers. It tells how to use "Mother's Friend" and how to avoid caking breasts. Get a bottle to-day and write for book to Bradfield Regulator Co., 109 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Be sure you get "Mother's Friend."

For first class work, painting paper hanging, decorating, etc., see E. J. Townsend, Clanton Ala. He guarantees his work. Patronage of country people given attention 7 16 4

If you have neglected your kidneys, and suffer from backache, weak back, headache, rheumatism and distressing bladder weakness, you will find Foley Kidney Pills to be the honestly made, healing and curative medicine you need to give you back your health and strength. They are tonic action, quick to give good results. They will help you. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —
MONUMENTS
AND GRAVESTONES
Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by
J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA

IF KIDNEY AND BLADDER BOTHER THEN FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Overworked kidneys will break down if not helped. When they can no longer protect the blood and the body from the poisons that come to them, then look out for Bright's disease, serious kidney trouble and bladder annoyances Foley Kidney Pills are your best protection, your best medicine for weak, sore, overworked kidney and bladder weaknesses. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDOX
AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE
Prompt Service Day or Night
Two New Five Passenger Cars
CLANTON, ALA.
Phone 100 Phone 3

SEASHORE EXCURSIONS

Every Saturday until August 30th
TO
Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola	$6.65
Pascagoula	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.35
Biloxi	8.40	Gulfport	9.00
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis	9.30

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fares with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply

L&N J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

"AUBURN"

Alabama Polytechnic Institute

The Oldest School of Technology in the South
69 Professors and instructors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Laboratories.
Summer Session July 24 to September 4, 1914.
Next Session Begins Wednesday, September 9, 1914.
New Buildings and New Equipment.

DEPARTMENTS

I. College of Engineering and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, and Mining Engineering, Architecture, Metallurgy, Arts, Technical Drawing, Machine Design, etc.
II. College of Agricultural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture, Husbandry, Botany, Entomology, Chemistry.
Department of Pharmacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and Two-Year Courses).
III. Academic Departments—History, English, Mathematics, German, French, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Pedagogy.
IV. College of Veterinary Medicine.
Expenses. Free tuition to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to non-residents. Board in Dormitory and with private families. For Catalogue and Further Information, Address

CHAS. C. THACH, LL. D., President, AUBURN, ALA.

EASES TORMENT OF ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER

For the discomfort and misery of asthma and hay fever use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It puts a healing, soothing coating over the swollen, tickling membranes, and eases the thick and choking sensation. Helps you breath easily and naturally. In the yellow package. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that Mr. Grady Reynolds, by mutual consent, has withdrawn from our firm.

This, July 3rd, 1914.

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON
W. A. DENSON

"The best paint for Your House."

ASK any painter and he will tell you that Pure White Lead, reinforced with Zinc Oxide and Genuine Linseed Oil in correct proportions is the best paint. That's the reason painters everywhere use and recommend

MASTIC PAINT

"THE KIND THAT LASTS"

FREE PAINT BOOK

Ask for beautifully illustrated book, "Houses and How to Paint Them," also color card showing 45 color schemes, or write direct to PEARLEY-GARLBERT CO., Manufacturing Chemists, Louisville, Ky.

You'll be proud of your home when it's attractively painted with Mastic Paint. Besides you'll enhance its value and protect it against the elements. Be sure it's Mastic Paint and you will realize the fullest measure of paint satisfaction.

Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton, Ala.

THE

THE UNION 11th Year

ome to the P

First Open Boll of Cotton

irst open boll of cotton ition county was found on n operated by Mr. C. C. obout five miles east of last Sunday and was to this office Monday. ll was of the King's Im- variety. 'It was a ma- d well developed boll, every sign of normal Mr. Baker states that very short time he will whole field of this cotton picking.

Union-Banner:

allow me space in your say a few words in re- the proposed action of missioners court issuing warrants to the amount 00.00 for the purpose of the proposed state high-wish to say that I do of a tax payer in this who is not opposed nty being encumbered generations to come, ch purposes, and I be- fully 90 per cent of the our county will pro- st such action by our ioners court if they are chance to do so. It does t in matters of such im- our officials would cer- spect the wishes of the nd not run things rough er them, against their nd over their protest. to say in conclusion pe every voter in the will come to the mass at the court house at on August 1st; every- me if you can possibly

Respectfully,
W. H. Gillespie.

hurch Has A ndid Opening

pening of Upchurch's store last Friday was a for the institution, and e reflector of the confi- t its worthy manage- won with the people in career of business activi- months the public has xious to see the doors of w store opened, and it truly said that their high ions have been left far ince they have had the nity of an actual obsercrowds at the opening ge from the beginning orning until late at night. ul music was rendered singers and musicians, together with delicious ents furnished by the ment, made the day one st pleasure for the visit-equipment of the new nsurpassed, being strict- with the best stores in Dr. Upchurch, the nd promoter of the insti- to be congratulated for rable taste displayed in ter of arrangement, and to give the highest ice to his patrons and ll supply being to him confidence and satis- the trading public.

Clanton I Died S

On last Friday citizens of Clanto ed at the audden J. T. Thompson, our prominent who lives in east Thompson seem in ill health for s to her death, bu lar day had m that she was fe ally well. She the home in the no apprehension later her daug the house to fin posing on the b remains were Clanton cemet ternoon.

Liber

There will b place next Sun commencing body invited to your books.

Notice to

The next t for the white t county will be beginning on 10th and con Every teacher, ing a life certif quired to atten must be there noon Monday. You are requ structor, T. W the Elementar Course of stud "The teacher a W. T. Bea

SINGING

With your Mr. Editor, I ers somethin great Sacred H tion at Birmin and 26. We that it will be actly describe that great gat

The Conve the Court hou crowd was so came necessa flow Convent of the buildi were just liter

Prof. Worle President; M Birmingham Among the n Prof. L. F. Prof. Cooper Mrs. Bird, da remembered The Densons ily of great si ers. Mrs. Ro lead a lesson ture congreg Other wond were lessons teen year old tions of Mrs. county were attention. feature of al lesson direc Jackson, a m ingham clas Jackson att musical geni self, Prof. W he had never could equal

A C

LEE MADD
ILES FOR HIR
vice Day or Nig
ive Passenger Ca NTON, ALA.
Phone

RE EXCURSIONS
ay until August 30th
TO oast Resorts
P FARES FROM CLANTON
8.65
8.00 Ocean Springs 8.35
8.45 Gulfport - - 9.00
9.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.30
Return Limit
AT 30
ntil September 30th, regular round rist Tickets at slightly higher fares
of October 31st.
For particulars apply
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

UBURN"
Polytechnic Insti
ool of Technology in the So tors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Labo ion July 24 to September 4, 1914.
gins Wednesday, September 9, 19
ldings and New Equipment.
DEPARTMENTS
ring and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Me ngineering, Architecture, Metallurgy,
, Machine Design, etc.
ural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture
omology, Chemistry. nacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and ments—History, English, Mathematics
s and Astronomy, Political Economy, Ps ary Medicine.
on to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to tory and with private families. For C n, Address
H, LL. D., President, AUBURN,

HMA
AY FEVER misery of ley's Honey
ts a healing,
wollen, tickl-
es the thick
Helps you ally. In the
by all dealers

DISSOLUTION N
Notice is hereby
Mr. Grady Reynolds, consent, has withdr
our firm.
This, July 3rd, 1914
J. OSMOND M
W. A. DENSON

e best paint f
House"
ter and he will tell you that Pure forced with Zinc Oxide and Gen ect proportions is the best paint n painters everywhere use and rec ASTIC PAINT
"THE KIND THAT LASTS"
e proud of your home when ively painted with Mastic ides you'll enhance its value
t it against the elements. Be Mastic Paint and you will e fullest measure of paint
anton, Ala.

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 16

ome to the Progressive Mass Meeting Next Saturday!

First Open Boll of Cotton

rst open boll of cotton on county was found on operated by Mr. C. C. bout five miles east of last Sunday and was to this office Monday. was of the King's Im- variety. It was a ma- well developed boll, every sign of normal Mr. Baker states that very short time he will whole field of this cotton picking.

Union-Banner:

allow me space in your say a few words in re- the proposed action of missioners court issuing warrants to the amount 00 for the purpose of the proposed state high-

wish to say that I do of a tax payer in this who is not opposed nty being encumbered generations to come, h purposes, and I be- fully 90 per cent of the our county will pro- st such action by our mers court if they are chance to do so. It does in matters of such im- our officials would cer- espect the wishes of the and not run things rough- er them, against their d over their protest.

to say in conclusion e every voter in the will come to the mass at the court house at on August 1st; every- me if you can possibly

Respectfully,
W. H. Gillespie.

hurch Has A ndid Opening

ening of Upchurch's store last Friday was a or the institution, and reflector of the confi- t its worthy manage- won with the people in career of business activi- months the public has ious to see the doors of w store opened, and it truly said that their high tions have been left far since they have had the nity of an actual obsercrowds at the opening rge from the beginning orning until late at night. ul music was rendered singers and musicians, together with delicious ents furnished by the ment, made the day one est pleasure for the visit-equipment of the new unsurpassed, being strict- with the best stores in ies. Dr. Upchurch, the and promoter of the insti- to be congratulated for able taste displayed in of arrangement, and to give the highest ice to his patrons and ill surely bring to him confidence and satis- the trading public.

Clanton Lady Died Suddenly

On last Friday afternoon the citizens of Clanton were shocked at the audden death of Mrs. J. T. Thompson, wife of one of our prominent business men who lives in east Clanton. Mrs. Thompson seems to have been in ill health for some time prior to her death, but on that particular day had made the remark that she was feeling exceptionally well. She was left alone in the home in the afternoon, with no apprehension of danger, and later her daughter returned to the house to find her mother reposing on the bed lifeless. The remains were interred in the Clanton cemetery Saturday afternoon.

Liberty Hill

There will be singing at this place next Sunday, August 2nd commencing at 1:30. Everybody invited to come and bring your books.

Notice to Teachers

The next teachers' institute for the white teachers of Chilton county will be held at Clanton, beginning on Monday, August 10th and continue five days. Every teacher, except those holding a life certificete, will be required to attend every day, and must be there by twelve o'clock, noon Monday.

You are requested by the instructor, T. W. Smith, to bring the Elementary Manual of the Course of study and Colgrove's "The teacher and the school."

W. T. Bean, Co. Supt. Ed.

SINGING CONVENTION

With your kind permission, Mr. Editor, I will tell your readers something relative to the great Sacred Harp State Convention at Birmingham July 24, 25 and 26. We admit in the outset that it will be impossible to exactly describe every teature of that great gathering of vocalists.

The Convention was held in the Court house. On Sunday the crowd was so large that it became necessary to hold an overflow Convention, so two rooms of the building were used and were just literally packed.

Prof. Worley of Cordova was President; Miss Edna Hood of Birmingham was the Secretary. Among the noted visitors were Prof. L. F. White, of Atlanta, Prof. Cooper of Dothan, and Mrs. Bird, daughter of the well remembered Mayor B. F. White. The Densons were there,—a family of great singers and composers. Mrs. Robinson of Cullman lead a lesson which held the entire congregation spell bound. Other wonderful performances were lessons lead by some sixteen year old boys. The selections of Mrs. Owens of Cleburne county were worthy of any ones attention. But the crowning feature of all was the splendid lesson directed by Miss Isabel Jackson, a member of the Birmingham class. Although Miss Jackson attained most of her musical genius at home by her self, Prof. White admitted that he had never had a pupil that could equal her.

A Chilton Delelegate.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF CITIZENS TO BE HELD AT THE COUNTY COURT HOUSE IN CLANTON

MANY IMPORTANT MATTERS TO BE DISCUSSED. SPEAKERS OF ABILITY WILL MAKE ADDRESSES. GENERAL RALLY OF PROGRESSIVE PARTY PRINCIPLES.

This is a clarion call to the citizens of Chilton to rally to the standard that will bring back to them their civil rights, and insure them a voice in matters that vitally concern their own welfare. The purpose of the meeting is primarily to select delegates to the Progrssive state convention in Birmingham August 5th. But there are other things just at this time that demand consideration at the hands of everyone that would pose as a guardian of the principles of civic righteousness, and champion the unselfish administration of popular government.

The Progressive party intends to show its fidelity to the people by giving consideration to these things; by inviting the people themselves to participate in its deliberations; by listening to the mingling voices of the voters in their petition for consideration; by joining in one united effort with the good of all at heart, to realize the best that may come from an honorable government.

There is a broad invitation extended, urging everybody to come to this meeting. It is to your interest to be here and get the sentiment of the meeting; get it firmly fixed in your mind that Pronressiveism is your frien, and go away with the determination to cherish and cultivate this friendship to the ultimate glory of a championship of peoples rights—to ALL THE PEOPLE.

The Alabama Good Roads Association is making every effort possible to see that Good Roads Days, August 14th-15th is observed in every county in the State and the work that is done shall be systematic and of value.

Mr. J. A. Rountree, Secretary of the Alabama Good Roads Association has sent out the following letters of instructions and suggestions for observing Good Roads Days. This letter has been addressed to Probate Judges, mayors, road officials and presidents of good roads organization, etc. It is as follows.

Birmingham, Ala. July 24th, 1914
Judge E. B. Deason
Clanton Ala.

Dear Sir:—we are glad to know that you and the people of your county are taking an active interest in Good Roads Days, August 14th-15th. Hope that you will arouse the people in the various road districts and communities and let them do systematic work on these days.

The Alabama Good Roads Association has the following suggestions to make in regard to observing Good Roads Days.

Let each community organize by road or school districts, appoint the best road builder in the neighborhood as boss for these days and then turn out and work loyally under his directions.

The following suggestions are offered as work that can be done by volunteer workers.

Remove logs, rocks, stumps and stones from the roadway; fill holes, preferably with good earth, cover stretches of sand with clay or gravel; drain wet places in the roadway; scrape off and outwarbs sod margins where they hold the water in the traveled track. When drained and graded clay may be covered with sand or gravel, but the gravel should not contain any clay unless it is to be placed on sand. Culverts may be repaired or new culverts put in. Road drags (of planks or split logs) should be made and arrangements perfected for using them after rains, throughout the season on all clay or loamy soils.

Dont try to do too much.

Dont start more than you can finish. You can not build a macadm road, nor very long stretches of gravel road in two days.

Dont haul gravel onto roads that have not been properly graded or drained.

Dont grade roads that have not been properly staked out on correct lines.

Dont plow long stretches of road and leave them impassable.

Dont scrape sods onto the traveled highway and leave them for passing vehicles to smooth down.

The Alabama Goob Roads Association made these suggestions, hoping that it will be of benefit to the volunteer road workers of the State and that a great success will be made of these days, and swell the enthusiasm for better roads, we are.

Yours very truly
Alabama Good Roads Assn.
Per J. A. Rountree Secy.

COMMISSIOMERS SALE

The state of Albama, Chilton County: Probate Court.

In pursuance of the directions and terms of a Commission dated the 23rd day of May, 1914, issued by Hon. E. B. Deason, Judge of probate of said county, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder, for cash at public auction, on the 15 day of Aug., 1914 between the hours of 11 o'clock, a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m., at the court house, Clanton, Ala., the following described property:

S.E. fourth of N.W. fourth, and the S.W. fourth of the N.E. fourth of Sec. 16, Tp. 21, R. 14, in Chilton county, Ala.; 13 shares of stock in the Farmer's Warehouse and Storage Company, of Clanton, Ala., which said property is to be sold under the order of said Probate court, for the purpose of division and partition between the several joint owners thereof, viz:

Dewey Gallman, Harvey Gallman, Anderson Gallman, Leon Gallman, Deannia Parrish, Annie Watson, Odis Culpepper, Ensley Culpepper, Pauline Massey, Ruth Massey, Reed Gallman, Luther Culpepper.

This May 23, 1914.
Grady Reynolds, Commissioner.

CITROLAX CITROLAX GIVE IT TO THE CHILDREN

Finest physic in the world for children. They love to take it—it tastes like lemonade. It is mild—and suits their sensitive organs. It is thorough—and keeps their system cleansed, sweet and wholesome. It does the same for grown ups, too. Our Ideal laxative. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Rudolph Cleckler Died Sunday

On last Sunday in Birmingham occurred the death of Mr. Rudolph Cleckler, who lived about five miles north of Clanton. Mr. Cleckler had been suffering with an ailment for some days, and was carried to Birmingham Sunday for an operation. The trouble proved to be appendicitis, and soon after the operation was performed death resulted. His remains were brought to Clanton Monday morning, and interred in New Salem cemetery. Mr. Cleckler leaves a wife and small family of children.

Providence.

BEAT 16.

All who are interested in the cleaning of the cemetery at this place are asked to meet here on Wednesday, August the 5th, for that purpose. Those who can, are especially requested to bring tools for the work.

Union Springs

Prof Lowery of Montevallo will begin a singing school here next Monday, Aug 3. All are invited to attend. Mr. Lowery's work will mainly be teaching the children the songs of the church.

Some of our people went to Birmingham Saturday to the great Singing Convention.

Mr. Rufus Davenport of Louisiana has been here on a visit; he is a former Chiltonite.

Oh! What a scramble when Mr. Wilson shakes the plum tree in Alabama, but the plums are so few that many will be disappointed. Republicanism gave us high prices, and those prices continue, but we have no complaint from the other party so we guess it is quite satisfactory.

Chilton County S. S. Convention

The chilton county Sunday school convention representing Sunday Schools of all denominations was held at Mulberry church near Thorsby, July 23-24. At the opening session Dr. J. M. Shelburne President of Howard College gave suggestions on "Helping Every Sunday School." The church was filled at the very first session and a large number of superintendents and pastors were present. The reports of the Department Superintendents show 430 miles traveled during the year; 18 Sunday School visited; 26 speeches made; 272 letters written.

The district presidents reports showed district No. 6 a gold star district. Every Sunday school in the district represented at a convention during the year, made a written report and every Sunday school made a contribution, district No.1 lacked 3 school which were re-organized since the district conventiont. The other district reports were not so encouraging. Two of these district presidsnts reported 80 miles traveled; 10 speeches made; 263 letters written.

The state association was represented by Mrs. S. P. Moore, Miss Myra Batchelder and Prof. R. D. Webb Field Secretary of the Alabama Sunday School Association.

Miss Myra Batchelder.

Cotton Crop Condition

The average condition of the cotton crop as compiled from reports of correspondents of date of July 22nd is 79.1 percent of normal. This is a loss since the government's report of June 25th of five tenths of one percent. The average July deterioration is seven tenths of one percent. The ten-year average condition for July 25th is 80 percent of normal.

Reports are in many instances quite at variance. In all parts of the belt there is some excellent cotton, some that is neither good nor bad and some very poor cotton. The point of view often determines a correspondents realy. It is quite evident that the early season's irregularity has not been overcome and probably throughout the season uneven conditions will prevail.

In Georgia, Alabama, and Southern Mississippi the crop is rather early as a whole notwithstanding a considerable percentage of young cotton. In southern parts of these states cotton is begginning to open and southwestern Georgia and southern Alabama will likely contribute liberally to an early movement to market.

Boll weevils are few in numbers and there is a general absence of serious complaint.

In Texas there is much small cotton, some incipient shedding as a result of dry weather, and a general approach toward acute drouth damage which will unquestionably set in without rain at once. The entire western belt is beginning to need rain and will shortly be clamoring for it.

Broadly speaking the territory east of the Mississippi river has a small plant which is well fruited and will thrive with well distributed moderate rains. In Texas and Oklahoma the plant is not generally well fruited for the season and in some instances is very unsatisfactory in this respect.

The twenty percent of June cotton in the Atlantic states is growing well and seems quiet thrifty at this time.

Minooka

There will be an Odd Fellow's picnic at Minooka on Aug. 1st. Everybody invited to come.

W. A. Howard.

The Chilton County Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention will meet in special session with South Calera the 2 Sunday in August. All good singers and lovers of music are invited to come. We are expecting the best singing we have ever had.

F. Iven Popwell.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Farmers Union Warehouse and Mfg. Co. will convene at Jemison Monday, Aug. 3, 1914, at 10 o'clock a.m. All stockholders are requested to be present, as there is very important business to attend to.

B. L. Cable, Secy.

PROHI'S LOSE OUT IN TEXAS ELECTION

RESOLUTIONS FOR STATEWIDE PROHIBITION LOSE BY LARGE MAJORITY.

ALL "DRY" ENTRIES LOSE

Ferguson Leads Dry Ticket Nominee for Governor of Texas by 40,000. Hobby Leads for Lieutenant-Governor.

Dallas, Tex.—With more than three-fourths of the total vote cast in the democratic primary election returned here, it was regarded as certain that James E. Ferguson of Temple- anti-prohibitionist, farmer-lawyer-banker, had been nominated for governor by a majority of perhaps 40,000 over Thomas H. Ball of Houston, former congressman, who was chosen by a prohibition state convention to make the race. It also appeared certain that the demand for submission of a statewide prohibition amendment to the state constitution had been defeated by a majority of 30,000.

Returns also showed that no prohibitionist on the state ticket who had an anti-prohibition opponent had been nominated, except as to the two congressmen-at-large, which result is in doubt.

The result also was in doubt as to lieutenant-governor and commissioner of agriculture. In the former race W. P. Hobby, newspaper man of Beaumont, was leading B. B. Sturgeon of Paris. H. A. Halbert of Coleman and Fred W. Davis of Gainesville had almost an even number of votes for commissioner.

Democratic nomination in Texas is equivalent to election.

HOME RULE FIGHT IS ON

Nationalists Clash With Troops at Dublin and Four Are Killed. Woman a Victim.

Dublin.—Three men and one woman are dead and more than 60 persons are in the hospital wounded as the result of a battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers firing into a mob in the streets of Dublin. Seven of the wounded are expected to die. Among them are three women and a boy of 10.

The affray was the result of a gun-running exploit of the nationalist volunteers, aided by a mob composed largely of women and youths. A consignment of rifles, said to number 10,000, was landed at Howth, nine miles from Dublin, from a private yacht. The nationalist volunteers cut the telegraph wires and stopped travel on the Dublin roads, and, according to reports, sent away most of the rifles, together with 70,000 rounds of ammunition in motor cars.

A battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers was ordered to capture the arms when the authorities heard the volunteers were bringing them into the city. The soldiers encountered a detachment of volunteers at Clonmell bridge. Soon a great crowd collected and followed the troops, jeering them and cheering for John Redmond and home rule.

Finally the mob began throwing bottles and stones, injuring several soldiers. To the attack the battalion replied with a scattered fusillade. In an instant the street was covered with wounded, while terrified men, women and children ran in all directions.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA SPLIT

Servia's Reply to Austria's Ultimatum May Bring on War—Ministers Given Passports.

London.—Developments appear to furnish new proof that Austria is determined to make war on Servia. The possibilities of a general European war seem greater than ever have confronted the present generation.

The Servian reply to the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum was an acceptance of almost all the imperious demands, except that Austrian officials shall participate in the investigation and fix the responsibility for the anti-Austrian propaganda. Servia proposed an appeal to the powers at The Hague for the settlement of that feature.

Notwithstanding this humiliating surrender, which was more than Europe expected of the proud little nation, the Austrian government gave the Servian minister his passports, which may be construed as a virtual declaration of war

Austria committed an act of war by arresting the chief of the Servian general staff, Gen Putnik, near Budapest.

A formal declaration of war is not expected, because Servia is not a party to The Hague convention, which requires this.

Collusion Charged.

New York.—Collusion by George J. Gould and Howard Gould to deprive Katherine Clemmons Gould of her dower rights in the estate of her former husband, Howard Gould, is charged in the answer she has filed to a civil action.

Branded a Massacre.

London.—The Daily News calls the affair at Dublin a massacre and demands an investigation of the conduct of the soldiery. It lays the responsibility upon the weakness of the government.

GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS

George Fred Williams, whose resignation as American minister to Greece was asked for because of his public criticism of the rule of Prince William of Wied in Albania.

SOUTHERN R. R. IS FLEECED

Useless Branches Are Sold to It—Says V. & S. W. Offered for $5,000,000. Southern Paid $6,500,000.

Washington. — Charges that the Southern railway has been imposed upon, much as the New Haven is said to have been, through the unloading upon it of branches of little worth at fabulous prices, added an unexpected feature to the investigation which a senate subcommittee is making of alleged discriminations against southern ports in coal rates.

B. L. Dulaney of Bristol, Tenn., made the charges in connection with an explanation of why he believed the Morgan interests dominated the Southern railway and directed the action of its officials.

He finished his direct statement to the committee, but will go on the stand to undergo cross-examination by attorneys for the Southern railway.

Mr. Dulaney said he once offered to sell the control of the Virginia & Southwestern railway to the Southern for $500,000. A bond issue of $1,000,000 stood against the line. His offer was refused, he said, but later Henry McHarg sold the line to the Southern for about $6,500,000 with a profit estimated at $4,000,000.

The Knoxville & Bristol railway, sold to the Southern for $500,000, Mr. Dulaney said, was offered for $40,000, and he did not buy because he did not think the line worth that amount.

WOULD TALK ON TREATY

Roosevelt Requests Permission to Appear Before Senate Committee on Colombian Treaty.

Washington.—A request from Col. Theodore Roosevelt for an opportunity to appear before the senate foreign relations committee in opposition to the Colombian treaty was considered by the committee, without action, however, as Chairman Stone was unable to marshal a quorum. Col. Roosevelt wrote Chairman Stone he wanted to tell why he opposes paying $25,000,000 to Colombia for the partition of Panama.

"I replied to Col. Roosevelt's letter personally, saying that I would submit the matter of hearings on the Colombian treaty and his appearance before it to the committee," said Senator Stone.

The Missouri senator said he had not set a date for another meeting of the committee, but that he would try to get the members together soon. The text of Mr. Roosevelt's letter he would not make public, because it was addressed to the committee.

Later Senator Stone made public Col. Roosevelt's letter, in which the former president wrote:

"If there is any intention of your committee to act favorably on the proposed treaty with Colombia, by which we are to pay Colombia $25,000,000 and to express regret for the action taken in the past, I respectfully request to be heard thereon.

"I was president throughout the time of the negotiations by which we acquired the right to build the Panama canal. Every act of this government in that connection was taken by my express direction, or else in carrying out the course of conduct, I, as president, had laid down."

AGREE ON COTTON MEASURE

Washington.—House and senate conferences on the cotton futures bill agreed at a private conference at the home of Senator Hoke Smith on the Lever bill, which permits trading in cotton futures when in standardized grades of cotton, but through a prohibitive tax of one cent a pound or $500 a contract stamps out of existence "future" trading on unstandardized grades.

The secretary of agriculture is to fix the standards, taking middlings as the basis. Cotton exchanges are required to keep exact records of all transactions and to hold such records open to inspection by agents of the department. Heavy fines are imposed for violation of this provision for publicity. The law is to be made to apply to foreign as well as interstate commerce in cotton.

St. Petersburg.—Prince Meicherasky, editor of Grashdanin, died here. He was exceedingly active in political affairs.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA ON VERGE OF WAR

CONFLICT MAY INVOLVE ALL EUROPE—SERVIA MUST MAKE AMENDS FOR DEATH.

ULTIMATUM FROM AUSTRIA

Both Germany and Russia Are Preparing to Take Action—May Mean Much Dreaded Conflict of Triple Alliance.

Vienna.—A war which may involve the whole of Europe is threatened as the result of the slaying of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and Austria's peremptory note to Servia demanding that the government of that country, in which the slaying occurred, give a satisfactory apology and disclaimer of all connection with the murder.

The answer must be made soon. There is no notice of its coming; and an extremely grave crisis has been precipitated. Both Germany and Russia are preparing to take action.

Baron von Giesline (Gieslingen, the Austro-Hungarian minister at Belgrade, has been instructed to leave Servia with the entire legation staff if the Servian government has not notified him that it agrees without delay to comply with the demands of Austria's note.

Although the peremptory character of the ultimatum and the brief time allowed to Servia to reply came as a surprise to the Austrian public, the government's action meets with universal approval.

The relations between Servia and Austria were felt to have become intolerable. It was believed in Servia that the time was ripe for the disintegration of the Austro-Hungarian empire and that Austria would suffer anthing rather than run the risk of a European war. Hence Servian statesmen aspired to bring Bosnia and other Austrian Slav provinces under Servian rule.

Germans and Austrians have for several years attributed the bad trade in the monarchy and the crushing taxation caused by repeated mobilizations to Servian hostile intrigues, and there is a feeling of relief, therefore, that matters now have been brought to a head and that Servia will be settled with once, for all.

DEFENSE FALLS INTO TRAP

First Mme. Caillaux Turns Over Letters That Caused Killing—They Prove Harmless.

Paris.—The defense in the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux, charged with the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, was caught in a trap innocently set by Mme. Gueydan, once the wife of the priconer's husband.

The principal argument of Maitre Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux, has been that his client was driven to shoot M. Calmette through fear that two letters, of which she was aware photographic reproductions existed, would be published by M. Calmette and the secrets of her inner life thereby made public.

This argument, it is said, will be reduced to nothing by the reading of the letters, which Mme. Gueydan reluctantly gave over to Maitre Labori. She declined to receive them back. Replying to a question by Labori as to what she desired done with them, the former wife of M. Caillaux said:

"I do not care what you do with them. Publish all of them if you wish to do so."

Their reading now is considered as inevitable.

Mme. Gueydan's counsel, S. G. Archibald, said concerning the letters:

"They are innocuous. They contain several disparaging references to Mme. Gueydan, then Caillaux's wife, and consider the possibility of his obtaining a divorce from her. This, however, he says, would have to be after the elections. They are completed by allusions to local politics of no importance whatever."

EXPRESS FEAR OF CIVIL WAR

Trade Stagnated in Ulster While Troops Are Being Armed—Indorse Carson's Plan.

Belfast, Ireland.—Official announcement of the failure of the Buckingham Palace conference on home rule caused no excitement here, as telegrams from the Ulster leaders had been received previously.

The leading business men, clergymen, bankers and manufacturers who had declared for an anti-home rule movement were unanimous in indorsing the uncompromising attitude of Sir Edward Carson and Capt. James Craig in demanding the total and permanent exclusion of Ulster from the workings of the home rule bill.

The business community is suffering severely through stagnation in trade and tight money. There is an unwillingness to order new stocks of goods with the fear of civil war hanging overhead.

MISS EDITH HAVEMEYER

Miss Havemeyer is the very wealthy young woman who is soon to marry the earl of Euston, oldest son and heir of the duke of Grafton. Her home is in New York, but she has been living in England for several years.

CLAFLIN CREDITORS MEET

Will Elect Committee to Consider Report of Receivers on Assets. Judge Holt to Preside.

New York.—When the creditors of the failed H. B. Claflin company meet here to elect a committee which, under the courts ruling will have the power to accept or reject any settlement or proposition the receivers may ultimately make, counsel for international banks, trust companies and mercantile houses representing a capital of many millions of dollars will demand representation on this committee.

The Creditors' Audit & Adjustment association, a credit men's protective organization, composed of these international houses and individuals, the statement announced, have engaged as counsel Frederick W. Lehman to conduct the fight for representation. "They have prepared in other ways to fight any attempt to deny them a voice in the make-up of the committee," the statement says. Mr. Lehmann was one of the United States commissioners to the Mexican mediation conference in Niagara Falls, Ontario. He was in New York, conferring with Claflin creditors who will be present or represented at the meeting at which George C. Holt, a former federal judge, appointed as special master, will preside.

MME. CAILLAUX NO. 1 TALKS

Puts Present Mme. Caillaux Upon Rack—Letters in Case Are Given to Labori.

Paris.—Mme. Bertha Gueydan, Joseph Caillaux's first wife, a slender woman with black eyes and wasted cheeks, faced her former husband, the ex-premier of France, and put upon the rack the woman who had won him from her—Mme. Henriette Caillaux, now on trial charged with the murder of Gaston Calmette.

The emotional climax of the trial was reached when other private letters were handed over by Mme. Gueydan to Fernard Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux.

"Here is the packet of letters I took at Mamers," said Mme. Gueydan, giving them to M. Labori. "I will consider with Maitre Chenu what shall be done," said M. Labori, "but whatever we decide, the jury may rest assured that they will be apprised of their contents as is their right and duty to expect."

"Among them," added Mme. Gueydan, "are the two letters referred to as the private letters."

Mme. Gueydan then left the box. Her remarkable personality had completely dominated the whole procedure. For three hours she spoke and her voice carried to the remotest corner of the room.

In that time she laid bare many of the secrets of her life with M. Caillaux. She told of his liason and of his throwing himself at her knees to ask her pardon. She described her methods of defense against what she termed "the machiavellian maneuvers of an unfaithful husband." She testified that he even threatened her life.

Then she left him, hoping he would follow her, but he did not, and she added, with a flash of her eyes and a tightening of her lips:

"You know why."

She gained the sympathy of those in the court room with telling phrases. There were murmurs of applause, despite the admonitory rappings of the judge and threats to clear the court.

Sydney, N. S. W.—The Island Aoba of the New Hebrides group is in immediate danger of collapsing from incessant earthquake shocks, according to advices received here.

Editor Fights Duel.

Havana.—A duel was fought here by Leon Ichazo, one of the editors of El Diario De La Marina, and Raol Nunez, brother of the secretary of sanitation. Nunez was wounded in the arm.

Cheer Wm. G. Sharp.

Washington.—The resignation of Representative Wm. G. Sharp of Ohio, recently appointed ambassador to France, was announced and Mr. Sharp was applauded when he appeared on the floor.

TO RID NAVY OF UNDESIRABLES

SUMMARY DISMISSAL INSTEAD OF IMPRISONMENT FOR DESERTERS.

DRASTIC ORDER BY DANIELS

The Secretary Believes the New Order Will Raise the Standard of the Navy.

Washington.—Abolition of imprisonment for desertion from the navy in times of peace was ordered by Secretary Daniels. Bluejackets who now overstay their leave or commit similar breaches of discipline will be dismissed summarily instead of being sent to prison while men who become dissatisfied and want to quit may have an honorable discharge by merely refunding certain enlistment allowances.

Secretary Daniels, in a statement announcing the new order said: "Enlistments in the navy always have been for a definite period—at present four years—and it always has been difficult, at times impossible, for men to terminate their contract of enlistment by honorable discharge before the enlistment expired. Absence from his ship or duty after having been granted leave, made a man a deserter and conviction involved a prison sentence.

"After thorough consideration and after a referendum in which the opinion of many of the highest officers were obtained, the secretary became convinced this situation was not in keeping with modern business ideas.

"The old plan involving long imprisonment created among enlisted men a feeling that during their term of enlistment if they desired to leave the navy, they were as if in bondage. Furthermore, this feeling doubtless in a large measure, accounted for more absence over leave or absence without leave, and other offenses which would never be tolerated in any well organized business.

"The secretary recognizes that the navy is in tife of peace a large business organization, that any feeling by enlisted men of compulsory detention or bondage is undesirable, that the service offers so many advantages, especially to those desiring to make of it a life work or secure a practical education, that it can keep fully recruited with men who are willing to obey and the department, therefore, holds that overstayed leave, drunkenness and similar offenses indicate merely that the offender is unfit for the service.

"In order not to be too drastic, the order permits commanding officers to hold a first offender on probation on reduced pay for periods of six months or 12 months, but on repeating the offense he is to be discharged.

"The naval prisons and naval barracks last year cost about $1,000,000. Under the new plan this cost will be greatly reduced, and before a great while will be very small."

VILLAREAL SCORES CHURCH.

Says Confessional and Sacristy Have Become Menace in Mexico.

Tampico, Mex.—A decree limiting the scope of the Roman Catholic church in the State of Nueva Laredo on the ground of public health, morality and justice was issued by Antonio I. Villareal, governor and military commander.

The decree issued in Monterey makes the following orders for the government of Catholic schools and churches.

"1. All foreign Catholic priests and Jesuits of whatever nationality will be expelled from the State of Nuevo Leon.

"2. Of the remaining Catholic priests, those who cannot promise absolute abstemiousness from politics shall be expelled.

"3. Only priests who have permission to do so will officiate.

"4. Confession is prohibited.

"5. The public is prohibited from entering the sacristy.

"6. Church bells shall ring only to celebrate fiestas, in honor of the country, or for triumphs of the arms of the constitutionalists.

"7. All Catholic colleges shall be closed which do not obey programs and texts ordered by officials and which do not have at their head some professor who is a graduate of the normal schools of the country, who will be responsible to the government for any infraction of the rules.

"8. Any infraction of these laws will be punishable by a fine of $100 to $500, and arrest and imprisonment from two to four months, or both fine and imprisonment. In event of a second offense the school will be closed."

Prohibition Loses in Texas.

Dallas, Texas. — Results of the democratic primary election in Texas follow, these returns being incomplete, and as is customary in this State, where the results are known without compiling the full vote, no complete returns will be available until the official returns are made to the democratic State chairman, which will be in two or three weeks. Submission of State wide prohibition was defeated by 15,000 to 20,000 majority. James E. Ferguson, anti-prohibitionist, nominated for governor by 30,000 to 40,000.

You Never Can Tell.

Hicks—You never can tell about a woman.

Wicks—You shouldn't, anyhow.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Can't Find This Perfect Woman.

Belgium has been trying to discover the perfect woman. According to a symposium in Brussels, she must possess the figure of an American, the elegance of a Frenchwoman, the complexion of an English girl, the hair of an Austrian, the eye of an Italian and the profile of a Spaniard. So far the creature has eluded discovery.

ECZEMA ON CHILD'S FACE

Marpleton, W. Va.—"When my little boy was one year old he broke out in little fine pimples all over his face. At times they would dry up and get scaly and peel off, then they would break out fresh again. He would scratch them until his face would be raw. The eczema looked angry and ran blood and corruption. His face was red and disfigured. He seemed restless and I had to be up with him the greater part of the nights.

"I applied various remedies without result. He continued to break out with the eczema until I sent for the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used them and the first application eased him. In ten days he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Lizzie McMahan, Jan. 2, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Absurd Comment.

Theodore Dreiser, the realist, speaking of an idealist at the Players' club in New York:

"The man's comments on life are ludicrous and absurd. They remind me of the old lady's comment on the work of the militant suffragettes.

"After the suffragettes in London had slashed a Valesquez, a Bellini and a Gentile, the old lady said, with a kind of saintly expression:

"'But, thank goodness, they've only old pictures that are being slashed.'"

Long-Lived Family.

The record for longevity is held by the Garrett family of Stranraer, Scotland, the oldest member of which, one James Garrett, has just passed away. Mr. Garrett claimed to be the oldest fisherman in Scotland. A native of Stranraer, he was almost a hundred years old. His mother and father, who were also natives of the district, lived until they were one hundred and one hundred and three years respectively. His oldest surviving sister is now well over seventy years of age.

Carelessness Cause of Fires.

More than 50 per cent of fires are caused by simple carelessness which is unnecessary and criminal. Repairs to dilapidated buildings, the removal of all fire breeding rubbish, care in burning weeds and rubbish, the placing of engines at a safe distance from buildings, the removal of oily waste, proper ventilation—in brief, plain common sense, will minimize the danger from this cause of fires.

It seems that no matter how high he climbs, a man is never above suspicion.

It is possible to be a man of parts by trying to be all the different kinds of fool at once.

Jerusalem has no developed commerce or industries.

It's a corking good idea to bottle your wrath.

Bohemia employs 875,000 people in factories.

PRIZE FOOD.

Palatable, Economical, Nourishing.

A Nebr. woman has outlined a prize food in a few words, and from personal experience, she writes:

"After our long experience with Grape-Nuts, I cannot say enough in its favor. We have used this food almost continually for seven years.

"We sometimes tried other advertised breakfast foods but we always returned to Grape-Nuts as the most palatable, economical and nourishing of all.

"When I quit tea and coffee and began to use Postum and Grape-Nuts I was almost a nervous wreck, so irritable I could not sleep and had no interest in life.

"After using Grape-Nuts a short time I began to improve and all my ailments have disappeared and I am a well woman. My two children have been almost raised on Grape-Nuts, which they eat three times a day.

"They are pictures of health, have never had the least symptom of stomach trouble, even through the most severe siege of whooping cough they could retain Grape-Nuts when else failed.

"Grape-Nuts food has saved us bills, and has been, therefore, a most economical food for us."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

LESSONS IN DOMESTIC SCIENCE

Prepared by the Agricultural Department WASHINGTON, D. C.

HOW TO MAKE A FIRELESS COOKER.

In all the talk that fireless cooking has recently created throughout the country, there has been little or no mention of the fact that the principle has been known almost as long as cooking itself, and that its application is within the reach of every household. Every woman who wraps a bottle of water in a flannel in order to keep it hot uses the principle, and everyone who has a kettle and a box big enough to put it in, can make a fireless cooker. Its use means less fuel burned and more liberty for the housewife.

Fireless cooking is a convenient but inaccurate term. It does not mean that we can cook without fire, but that we can cook with less fire. The food has first to be well heated in the ordinary way. It is then so thoroughly protected that the heat does not escape for a long time. In consequence the food continues to cook long after the fire is out in the range and the housewife gone about her other affairs.

There are many good fireless cookers—or to speak more accurately, cooking boxes—on the market, but it is quite possible to make one instead of buying it. The first necessity is a kettle to hold the food. The size of this naturally determines the size of the box in which it is to be placed. Between the kettle and the sides of the box there should be plenty of room for the packing which prevents the heat from escaping. For example, a cooking box measuring 15 by 15 by 28 inches is perhaps as easily obtained as any other kind. This may be divided into two compartments each holding a kettle capable of containing from eight quarts. In general, it may be said that for a kettle of this size, the box should measure about fifteen inches every way.

The question of the material to be used in packing the space between the kettle and the box is an important one. Asbestos and mineral wool are undoubtedly excellent, but they are also undoubtedly expensive. Satisfactory substitutes can be had at little or no cost. After experimenting with hay, excelsior, ground cork and paper, investigators from the United States department of agriculture decided that crumpled paper was the most practical. It not only holds the heat well, but is clean and odorless and does not require a cloth lining for the box. Single sheets of newspaper should be crushed between the hands and then pounded down until there is a layer at least two inches deep over the bottom of the box. Then the kettle should be placed in the center and crushed paper packed as solidly as possible all around it, a vacant space about two inches high being left at the top of the box.

For this space a cushion of some heavy goods like denim and filled with paper or excelsior must be provided. If the packing is done carefully and solidly, the "nest" will retain its shape and the kettle can be removed and replaced without trouble. The box itself should have a hinged cover fastened down securely in front with some kind of clasp. An ordinary window fastener answers this purpose admirably. In order to obtain the best results the kettles or other utensils should have straight sides and flat covers with deep rims hanging well down, but this is not indispensable. It should be remembered, however, that every little thing, no matter how trivial it may seem, that aids in retaining the heat is an advantage.

It is obvious that the "fireless cooker" is better fitted for long, slow cooking than for articles that need watching or stirring. It does particularly well, therefore, with cereals and soups—soup is a valuable addition to the diet too much neglected in this country.

Another advantage which the box cooker confers springs from the fact that the protracted cooking which it makes possible does much to render the cheaper and tougher cuts of meat as palatable as the more expensive. There is the fact, no doubt that with a little thought and experience, a skilful cook can save fuel and time by "firelessly cooking."

In other things, experience is the best teacher. There are, however, one or two fundamental rules which the beginner will do well to bear in mind. In the first place it must be remembered that the more heat that is put into the cooker, the more will it be required to do the cooking. The food, therefore, gives the best results when it is filled to its capacity. If it is not possible other material that holds heat well should be put into the vacant space. Several ways of doing this will readily suggest themselves. For instance, a smaller kettle containing the food may be placed in the large one that is partly filled with boiling water; or a number of hot bricks may be put in together. In this case, however, care must be taken to arrange the combination so that all may be cooked at the same time. If the food in one kettle requires longer cooking than that in the other, one kettle may be put in first. Still another way is to place the food that requires longer cooking in a kettle that has been heated on the range for a few minutes, and then put into the fireless cooker. Since the food continues to cook in the fireless cooker, the cooking, though slow, is practically continuous. Strain and season the soup, add the meat and season to taste, and let it stand in the cooker for half an hour longer. Dried lima beans may be soaked overnight and then cooked in the cooker for a few hours. The liquid may be thickened with flour and butter or dry vegetables may be cooked in the cooker.

Boiled Rice.—Put one cupful of rice into a quart of boiling water, let it boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for two hours. The rice will be found to be dry and fluffy.

Boiled Eggs.—Place the eggs in a kettle of boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The eggs will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Cereals.—Put the cereal into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for two hours. The cereal will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Potatoes.—Put the potatoes into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The potatoes will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Meat.—Put the meat into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The meat will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Fish.—Put the fish into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The fish will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Vegetables.—Put the vegetables into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The vegetables will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Pudding.—Put the pudding into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The pudding will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Cake.—Put the cake into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The cake will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Bread.—Put the bread into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The bread will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Milk.—Put the milk into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The milk will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

Boiled Water.—Put the water into the boiling water, let boil for two minutes, then place in the cooker for half an hour. The water will be found to be cooked to a jelly.

You Never Can Tell.

Hicks—You never can tell about a woman.

Wicks—You shouldn't, anyhow.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared specially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Can't Find This Perfect Woman.

Belgium has been trying to discover the perfect woman. According to a symposium in Brussels, she must possess the figure of an American, the elegance of a Frenchwoman, the complexion of an English girl, the hair of an Austrian, the eye of an Italian and the profile of a Spaniard. So far the creature has eluded discovery.

ECZEMA ON CHILD'S FACE

Marpleton, W. Va.—"When my little boy was one year old he broke out with little fine pimples all over his face. At times they would dry up and become scaly and peel off, then they would break out fresh again. He would scratch them until his face would be raw. The eczema looked angry and ran blood and corruption. His face was red and disfigured. He seemed restless and I had to be up with him the greater part of the nights.

"I applied various remedies with no result. He continued to break out with the eczema until I sent for some Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used them and the first application eased him. In ten days he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Lizzie Mc[illegible]han, Jan. 2, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Absurd Comment.

Theodore Dreiser, the realist, speaking of an Idealist at the Players' club in New York:

"The man's comments on life are ludicrous and absurd. They remind me of the old lady's comment on the woman of the militant suffragettes.

"After the suffragettes in London had slashed a Valesquez, a Bellini and a Gentile, the old lady said, with the kind of saintly expression:

"'But, thank goodness, they're only old pictures that are being slashed.'"

Long-Lived Family.

The record for longevity is held by the Garrett family of Stranraer, Scotland, the oldest member of which, James Garrett, has just passed away. Mr. Garrett claimed to be the oldest fisherman in Scotland. A native of Stranraer, he was almost a hundred years old. His mother and father, who were also natives of the district, lived until they were one hundred and one hundred and three years respectively. His oldest surviving son, now well over seventy years of age.

Carelessness Cause of Fires.

More than 50 per cent of all fires are caused by simple carelessness which is unnecessary and criminal. Repairs to dilapidated buildings, removal of all fire breeding materials, care in burning weeds and rubbish, the placing of engines at a safe distance from buildings, the removal of oily waste, proper ventilation—in brief, plain common sense, will minimize the danger from this class of fires.

It seems that no matter how high he climbs, a man is never above suspicion.

It is possible to be a man of many parts by trying to be all the different kinds of fool at once.

Jerusalem has no developed commerce or industries.

It's a corking good idea to bottle your wrath.

Bohemia employs 875,000 persons in factories.

PRIZE FOOD.

Palatable, Economical, Nourishing.

A Nebr. woman has outlined a prize food in a few words, and from personal experience. She writes:

"After our long experience with Grape-Nuts, I cannot say enough in its favor. We have used this food almost continually for seven years.

"We sometimes tried other advertised breakfast foods but we invariably returned to Grape-Nuts as the most palatable, economical and nourishing of all.

"When I quit tea and coffee and began to use Postum and Grape-Nuts I was almost a nervous wreck. I was so irritable I could not sleep and had no interest in life.

"After using Grape-Nuts a short time I began to improve and all my ailments have disappeared and I am a well woman. My two children have been almost raised on Grape-Nuts, which they eat three times a day.

"They are pictures of health, have never had the least symptom of stomach trouble, even through the most severe siege of whooping cough they could retain Grape-Nuts when all else failed.

"Grape-Nuts food has saved us bills, and has been, therefore, a most economical food for us."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

LESSONS IN DOMESTIC SCIENCE

Prepared by the Agricultural Department

WASHINGTON, D. C.

HOW TO MAKE A FIRELESS COOKER.

In all the talk that fireless cooking has recently created throughout the country, there has been little or no mention of the fact that the principle has been known almost as long as cooking itself, and that its application is within the reach of every household. Every woman who wraps a kettle of water in a flannel in order to keep it hot uses the principle, and everyone who has a kettle and a box big enough to put it in, can make a fireless cooker. Its use means less fuel burned and more liberty for the housewife.

"Fireless cooking is a convenient but inaccurate term. It does not mean that one can cook without fire, but that one can cook with less fire. The food has first to be well heated in the ordinary way. It is then so thoroughly protected that the heat does not escape for a long time. In consequence the food continues to cook long after the fire is out in the range and the housewife gone about her other affairs.

There are many good fireless cookers—or to speak more accurately, cooking boxes—on the market, but it is quite possible to make one instead of buying it. The first necessity is a kettle to hold the food. The size of this naturally determines the size of the box in which it is to be placed. Between the kettle and the sides of the box there should be plenty of room for the packing which prevents the heat from escaping. For example, a box measuring 15 by 15 by 28 inches is perhaps as easily obtained of any other kind. This may be divided into two compartments each holding a kettle capable of containing eight quarts. In general, it may be said that for a kettle of this size, the box should measure about fifteen inches every way.

The question of the material to be used in packing the space between the kettle and the box is an important one. Asbestos and mineral wool are undoubtedly excellent, but they are also undoubtedly expensive. Satisfactory substitutes can be had at little or no cost. After experimenting with hay, excelsior, ground cork and paper, investigators from the United States department of agriculture decided that crumpled paper was the most practical. It not only holds the heat well, but is clean and odorless, and does not require a cloth lining for the box. Single sheets of newspaper should be crushed between the hands and then pounded down until there is a layer at least two inches deep over the bottom of the box. Then the kettle should be placed in the center and crushed paper packed as solidly as possible all around it, a vacant space about two inches high being left at the top of the box. For this space a cushion of some heavy goods like denim and filled with paper or excelsior must be provided. If the packing is done carefully and solidly, the "nest" will retain its shape and the kettle can be removed and replaced without trouble. The box itself should have a hinged lid fastened down securely in front by some kind of clasp. An ordinary window fastener answers this purpose admirably. In order to obtain the best results the kettles or other utensils should have straight sides and flat covers with deep rims fitting well down, but this is not indispensable. It should be remembered, however, that every little thing, no matter how trivial it may seem, which aids in retaining the heat is an advantage.

It is obvious that the "fireless cooker" is better fitted for long, slow cooking than for articles that need watching or stirring. It does particularly well, therefore, with cereals and soups—the soup is a valuable addition to a diet too much neglected in this country.

Another advantage which the box possesses springs from the fact that the protracted cooking which it makes possible does much to render the cheaper and tougher cuts of meat as palatable as the more expensive. There is in fact, no doubt that with a little thought and experience, a skilful cook can save fuel and time by "fireless cooking."

In other things, experience is the best teacher. There are, however, one or two fundamental rules which the beginner will do well to bear in mind. In the first place it must be remembered that the more heat that goes into the cooker, the more will be retained to do the cooking. The kettle, therefore, gives the best results when it is filled to its capacity. If this is not possible other material which holds heat well should be put in to fill the vacant space. Several ways of doing this will readily suggest themselves. For instance, a smaller kettle containing the food may be placed in the large one that is partly filled with boiling water; or a number of hot bricks may be put in together. This is done, however, care must be taken to arrange the combination so that all may be cooked at the same time. If the box is opened to take out one, the others must be reheated. Still another thing to remember is that in the fireless cooker there is no chance for liquids to evaporate. Consequently not so much liquid should be put in as in ordinary cooking.

To guide the housewife in her experiments with the cooking box the department of agriculture tested a newspaper-packed box by placing in it a kettle of boiling water at a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit. After four hours this had fallen to 172 degrees Fahrenheit, after eight hours to 155 degrees Fahrenheit.

The following recipes, too, are practical examples of what can be done:

For making soup stock or broth with the cooking box, the soup bones should be well split up, or the soup meat should be cut into small pieces. Wash the meat, place it in the kettle, and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil on the stove and boil 15 minutes. Do this at night if the soup is to be used at noon the next day. Place in the cooker overnight. In the morning remove meat and bones from soup. Strain and remove fat. Return soup and meat to kettle, adding whatever seasoning is desired. Bring to a boiling point again and return it to the box and let remain until noon. This stock may be used as a foundation for several soups, such as vegetable soup, clear soup, or noodle soup.

Dried lima beans, peas and lentils make excellent soup without meat. Since they require long-continued cooking, they are well adapted to fireless-cooker methods. These dried vegetables, cooked with less water and no meat, rubbed through a coarse sieve and made into the proper consistency with milk or thin cream, and seasoned to taste, make so-called "cream" soups. Soups made by thinning the cooked legumes with water and seasoning with onion (fried until pale brown), with celery tops, and other vegetables are very palatable also.

Brown Fricassee of Chicken.—Joint the chicken and brown in fat after rolling in flour. As pieces brown pack them in the kettle. When all are browned make a gravy in the skillet where the browning was done. Add this to the chicken with enough boiling water to cover. Salt and pepper. Boil 20 minutes. Place in box over night. Reheat and return to box until noon. This length of time in the box will reduce the toughest old fowl on the farm to a state where the meat will fall from the bones.

Roast Meat.—Prepare a four-pound rib roast as for oven roasting. It can be tied more compactly if the ribs are removed. Place in pan in very hot oven for half an hour, or sear the roast until brown in a frying pan and then place it in the oven for 20 minutes. Have ready a small pail into which the roast will fit as closely as possible. Place the seared and heated roast in this and set it into the large kettle used in the box, with enough boiling water to come well up around the small pail. Place in the box for three hours.

Roasting Tough Poultry.—Many housewives make a practise of stewing chicken or turkey which they think is likely to be tough, and the practise is a good one. It is, however, much easier to boil for 15 or 20 minutes, and then put the fowl, boiling hot, into the cooker and let it remain ten hours. It should then be drained, wiped dry, and stuffed, if stuffing is desired, and roasted long enough to brown it well.

Boiled Dinner.—Cook a piece of corned beef and a piece of salt pork in the cooker overnight. In the morning prepare all the vegetables it is desired to use in the kettle with meat. The greater the variety the better the dinner. Boil ten or fifteen minutes and return to the cooker. It is best to leave potatoes until an hour and a quarter before serving, as they are the only vegetables likely to suffer from too long a time in the cooker. When they are added bring the contents of the kettle to the boiling point again. The liquid from the boiling dinner makes a good soup if the corned beef and salt pork have been parboiled to remove some of the salt.

Boston Beans and Other Dried Vegetables.—In cooking dry beans, the time required either in the oven or the cooking box will vary with the length of time the beans have been kept; the older the beans the more cooking required. Soak one quart of beans overnight; in the morning drain them and cover with cold water and heat to boiling. Let boil until the skins will burst when touched very lightly, adding one-fourth teaspoon of soda a few minutes before taking from the fire. Drain through a colander. Return to the kettle and add one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of mustard, three tablespoonfuls molasses, and one-half pound of salt pork, washed and scraped, and cover with boiling water. Let boil 20 or 30 minutes, then place in the cooking box. If the beans are new, six hours in the box will be long enough. Old beans require longer cooking and should be left in the box overnight, then reheated in the morning, and returned to the box. They will be ready to serve for the midday meal.

Dried vegetables, such as peas, beans, lima beans, lentils or corn may be soaked in cold water several hours, and then after the preliminary boiling of a few minutes kept from six to twelve hours in the cooker. They may be cooked with salt pork, and thus prepared they are liked by many, or they may be cooked with vegetable oil, as olive oil, or they may be cooked plain and seasoned with salt, pepper, and butter or cream. The longer, then, dry vegetables are cooked in the box the more palatable and the more digestible they will be.

EXAMINER MAKES REPORT ON AUBURN

AFFAIRS OF SCHOOL IN GOOD SHAPT—TREASURER'S BOOKS ACCURATELY KEPT.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery,

Disbursements of the Alabama Polytechnic institute at Auburn for the period extending from June 1, 1911, to May 31, 1914, were $400,105.43, according to the report of Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman on the books and accounts of Miss Allie Glenn, treasurer of the institution. Examiner Gorman filed his report in the office of the governor.

The examiner reported that the books of the treasurer were accurately kept, the various vouchers having been numbered consecutively and filed for the disbursement of all funds.

The report contains a detailed account of the source from which all revenues are received by the college, the principal sources being the Morril fund, the State college fund and the horticultural fund.

The value of the lands and buildings of the institution is $500,000, according to Examiner Gorman, and the insurance carried on the buildings is $300,000. The examiner declares that the year 1913-14 was the most prosperous and successful in the history of the institution, the enrollemnt being 820, with 16 States, Mexico, Peru, Cuba, Guatemala and China being represented in the student body.

Solvent Credits Taxable.

Declaring that the State of Alabama has a right to collect and ad valorem tax on solvent credits, the supreme court ruled in favor of the State in two test cases brought before the supreme body from the city court of Birmingham. The court decided that the State can collect this tax on all solvent credits except those secured by recorded mortgages, deeds of trust and written contracts of conditional sales, which have paid a privilege tax for their recordation.

This decision was a sweeping victory for the State and will mean that much additional revenue will be forthcoming each year from this source. It will enable the State tax commission to carry on the work of assessing taxes against solvent credits and will give that body a larger field of operation.

All the members of the supreme court, with the exception of Chief Justice J. C. Anderson, concurred in the decision. The case was taken up at the special session of the court, which began last week, and the members of the court spent several days in discussing the case.

Sheriff Lane Not Guilty.

Sheriff John W. Lane, of Chambers county, was not guilty of the charges brought against him by the State and he will continue to discharge the duties of his office, according to a decision announced by the supreme court of Alabama. Sheriff Lane was charged with corruption in office and with the commission of offenses involving moral turpitude. He was tried before the supreme court.

The court was divided on the case, four justices being of the opinion that the State had failed to establish the charges against Sheriff Lane and three dissenting. Justices Sayre, Mayfield, Somerville and Gardner decided in favor of Sheriff Lane, with Chief Justice Anderson and Justices McClellan and deGraffenreid dissenting from the majority of the court.

The impeachment proceedings against Sheriff Lane were brought at the request of the governor, following the filing of information with him charging the Chambers official with the commission of various illegal acts. The most serious charge against him was that he collected money for fines without having issued warrants for arrest. Moreover, it was claimed that this money did not reach the county treasury.

Supreme Court Takes Recess.

The supreme court declared recess until the November term and no more sessions of the body will be held until that time unless an extraordinary situation should arise. Nearly all the members of the court will leave within the next few days for various resorts to obtain recreation and rest. The court has been grinding away longer than usual because of the extra work brought before it recently. Twenty decisions and 19 rulings on applications for re-hearings were handed down on the last day by the court.

H. H. Smith, Assistant Solicitor.

Harry H. Smith, of Mobile, was appointed as assistant solicitor of Mobile county, to succeed T. J. Touart, whose term has expired. The appointment was announced by Governor O'Neal. Mr. Smith is a son of Gregory L. Smith, one of the State's most prominent lawyers. Practically all the members of the Mobile bar endorsed Mr. Smith for the place and in addition many leading citizens of that city recommended that he be appointed. Other applicants for the place were [illegible]

Commission May Attend Dedication.

The Alabama commission appointed recently by Governor O'Neal to raise funds for the purpose of erecting an Alabama building at the Panama-Pacific exposition, which will be held next year at San Francisco, may go to San Francisco during the summer to be present at the dedication of a site for the Alabama building, it was announced by Lee Cowart, secretary of the commission.

J. H. Hicks, of Talladega, is chairman, and if he decides that the commission should go, the trip will be made within the next six weeks. If the whole commission does not go, it is certain that at least three members will make the trip. Governor O'Neal may accompany the commission to California.

The commission is composed of J. H. Hicks, Talladega, chairman; W. L. Henderson, Mobile; G. G. Crawford and O. P. Bartlett, Birmingham; F. G. Salter, Montgomery; Louis B. Farley, Montgomery, treasurer, and Lee Cowart, Birmingham, secretary.

Pensions for Fourth Quarter.

As a result of the labors of the State board of pension examiners in purging the rolls of more than 1,200 illegal pensioners, Confederate veterans this year will receive 45 per cent of the pension money due for the fourth quarter, according to an announcement made at the office of Auditor Brooks Smith.

The paying of pensions to bona fide veterans of the Confederate army for the fourth quarter of this year will mark the first time since 1911 that pensioners have received any money for that quarter, inasmuch as the fund, under an act of the last legislature, has heretofore been exhausted with the payment of pensions for the third quarter.

More than 1,000 other pensioners have been cited by the special master to appear before the State pension board at a special meeting to be held September 7, and show cause why their names should not be dropped from the pension rolls. A regular meeting of the board will be held August 14, but no pensioners have been cited to appear at that meeting.

In the purging of the pension rolls it has been discovered that the State has been paying pensions to 325 men who deserted the Confederate army. It is thought that this number will be doubled by the time the board concludes its work.

$100,000 For Negroes.

Thirty per cent of a fund of $300,000 voted by Congress for the promotion of agricultural education in Alabama will be appropriated to the negro institutions if the recommendations of a special committee that visited the Tuskegee institute are approved by Governor O'Neal. According to the members of this committee, these recommendations will be made, but it is up to the governor to divide the fund.

The committee, it is understood, will suggest that 15 per cent of the fund will be appropriated to the Tuskegee institute and that an equal sum be given other negro agricultural institutes of the State. A report is being formulated by Commissioner of Agriculture R. F. Kolb and will be submitted to the governor. After it has been presented, the remaining 70 per cent of the fund will be apportioned among Auburn and the various agricultural schools for white students.

Says Route Could Be Made Good.

W. S. Keller, State highway engineer, returned from southwest Alabama, where he went on an automobile tour over the old stage route between Montgomery and Mobile. Mr. Keller, accompanied by John Craft, of Mobile, and Prof. G. N. Mitcham, of Auburn, members of the State highway commission, made a trip from Fort Deposit to Burnt Corn over the old mail route between Mobile and Montgomery.

Some of the highway traversed by the Keller party is in good condition, but much of it is rough and uneven, according to Mr. Keller. The route has the advantage of running along the top of the watershed in southwest Alabama and could be put in fine condition.

Text-Book Changes Made.

Members of the county high school commission, which has charge of the work of selecting text-books for the county high schools and State agricultural schools, met in the office of W. F. Feagin, State superintendent of education. The commission cleared up many routine matters that required its attention. Several new text-books were selected and a few changes in old text-books were made.

B. and S. E. Railroad.

Extension of the Birmingham and Southeastern railroad from Eclectic to connect with trains entering Birmingham and Anniston will be made within the near future, according to a statement of W. M. Blount, president of the road.

Mr. Blount made this announcement at Eclectic, where he attended the barbecue and picnic given at that place in honor of the opening of the road, one year ago. President Blount declared that all financial arrangements had been made for the extension.

R. E. Steiner on Executive Board.

Maj. R. E. Steiner of Montgomery has been appointed by the governor a member of the executive committee of the board of trustees of the University of Alabama to succeed the late Col. M. P. LeGrand of Montgomery. Major Steiner was recently elected as Colonel Le Grand's successor by the board of trustees of the university, and his election will be confirmed by the members of the legislature when they meet in regular [illegible]

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Clay county has good crops with some dry places.

Masons of Bessemer are planning to build a Masonic temple.

Masons of the Fourteenth district will meet August 20 at Eufaula.

The handsome new Baptist church has been dedicated at Lystra, in Clay.

Houston county's board of commissioners appropriated a 2-mill tax for good roads building in the county.

La Fayette sells ice to Camp Hill and to Dadeville from its municipal ice plant.

Part of the burned district of Sheffield is already under contract for rebuilding.

The body of Slaughter Banks was recovered from the Tennessee river, near Decatur.

Blount doubts the census report that there are 663 white men in that county who cannot read.

Alabama's first bale of cotton brought 22 cents a pound at auction on Court Square, Montgomery.

Sheffield's new opera house, built at a cost of $12,000 to $15,000, was formally opened to the public.

Marengo county commissioners did not think there was any need to raise taxes in that county and the state may take action.

Mrs. S. E. Webb of Heflin celebrated her 82d birthday. She has had 14 children and 75 grandchildren and 47 great grandchildren.

Robert Wilson, 26 years old, was instantly killed at the plant of the Gulf States Steel company at Gadsden, when the boom of a steam shovel crushed his head. He was operating the shovel at the blast furnace.

Severely criticising conditions which now prevail in Montgomery the grand jury made its final report to Judge Gaston Gunter in the city court. There were 231 indictments returned out of 300 cases docketed, after examination of 560 witnesses.

Robert L. Sears, former deputy sheriff of Montgomery county, must serve a five year term in the State penitentiary for shooting Will Smith, a negro, in the court room of the Montgomery city court last fall, according to a ruling handed down by the supreme court.

General Chairman C. B. Harvey of the convention committee of the Mobile Chamber of Commerce, named October 20, 21 and 22 as the dates for the holding of the general reunion of the Alabama division of the United Confederate Veterans. Maj. Gen. Hervey E. Jones has approved of the dates.

The oldest building in the business center of Huntsville, the old Bell factory building, is being torn away to make room for a modern storehouse. The building is fully 100 years old and was for many years the offices of a general supply concern and the Bell factory, which was the first cotton mill in Alabama.

That the cotton crop has been greatly effected by the long drouth and that the corn crop has been seriously damaged by the same cause is the statement given out by the State department of agriculture and industries, in the latest report on agricultural conditions throughout Alabama. The report declares that the farmers are getting ready to plant crimson and burr clover in great quantities next fall, and that a large crop of that product is predicted.

At a state convention held by republicans of Alabama in the Jefferson theatre at Birmingham a full ticket to be voted on in the November elections was put into the field. O. D. street of Marshall county was named for governor, and Alex C. Birch for United States senator to oppose Hon. Oscar W. Underwood. The other candidates selected are as follows: Lieutenant governor, George Beyer of Cullman; secretary of state, Frank Feltus of Jefferson; auditor, R. O. Noojin of Etowah; treasurer, J. M. Atkins of Cleburne; attorney general, William Chenault of Marion; chief justice supreme court, Shelby S. Pleasants of Madison; associate justices, Warren S. Reese of Montgomery and James B. Sloan of Blount; judge circuit court of appeals, John B. Isbell of DeKalb; railroad commissioners, C. P. Lunsford of Madison and John B. Shields of Walker; superintendent of education, Thos. H. Robinson of Franklin; congressman-at-large, J. T. Abercrombie of Shelby; commissioner of agriculture, Norris Woodruff of Calhoun.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, commander of thedepartment of the east, inspected the joint maneuver camp of the Alabama National Guard at Montgomery. General Wood complimented the officers on the condition of the camp.

Lightning struck the house of Martin Stone on Sand Mountain and destroyed a kettle of jerry and a dozen jelly glasses near by.

Miss Ross Tatum has been appointed postmaster of Dutton and will move the office to Sand Mountain institute.

Reunion of Nineteenth Alabama Confederate infantry will be held at Summit in Blount, August 12.

The eleventh session of the University summer school for teachers came to a close with the completion o fthe State examinations for teachers' certificates. A total of 241 students took the examinations, 31 being applicants for life certificates, 88 for first grade, 112 for second and 10 for third.

The summer school at the Jacksonville State Normal school has closed. [illegible]

Libby's Luncheon Delicacies

Dried Beef, sliced wafer thin, hickory smoked and with a choice flavor that you will remember.

Vienna Sausage—just right for Red Hots, or to serve cold. Try them served like this: Cut rye bread in thin slices, spread with creamed butter and remove crusts. Cut a Libby's Vienna Sausage in half, lengthwise, lay on bread. Place on top of the sausage a few thin slices of Libby's Midget Pickles. Cover with other slice of bread, press lightly together.

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll

Prints 3c and 4c Each

Prompt attention and work the best.

COVELL COMPANY

Department K Birmingham, Ala.

Reverse Method.

"What did his wife do?"

"She nailed him on the spot, and then she hammered him."

Natural History.

"You can't hear a tree's bark."

"You can't, but a dogwood."—Baltimore American.

RUB-MY-TISM

Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

Insatiate.

She—I notice that the suffragettes are getting after George V.

He—Yes, and when they get him they will not be satisfied until they have the remaining four-fifths.

Preferred the Lesser Evil.

"What are you going to be when you grow up, Jennie?"

"I'm going to be an old maid."

"An old maid, dear! Why?"

"'Cause I don't think I'd like to kiss a man a hundred times and tell him he's handsome every time I do shopping. I'd rather earn money and buy things for myself."

Women Change Subject Too Often?

In the Woman's Home Companion Margaret Busbee Shipp, writing a love story entitled "Sweet Margaret," presents a character who comments, as follows, on women's conversation:

"'I never had a sister, and I have never known how to talk to women. They embarrass me; they—er—change the subject so often, I never seem quite to catch up.'"

No Use.

When visiting the wounded men in a field hospital an army chaplain came to one poor fellow who was groaning pitifully.

"Come, my poor fellow, bear the pain like a man," said the chaplain. "It's no use kicking against fate."

"Bedad, sorr," murmured the sufferer, "you're right, especially when, as in my case, they're the fate of an army mule."

Being minus the price of a haircut isn't the only thing that makes a bohemian.

Tuscany cultivates 1,486,554 acres of grapes.

Delays Sometimes Expensive

Business or social engagement—just a few minutes for lunch—can't wait for service. What can be had quickly?

Order

Post Toasties

with fresh berries or fruit and cream. They will be served immediately, they are nourishing and taste mighty good, too.

Sold by Grocers

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala. as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Don't fail to remember the Progressive mass meeting at the court house next Saturday—and be sure to come.

Farmers of Chilton can make money out of the watermelon trade simply by organizing themselves in order to obtain systematic marketing.

The first Alabama bale of cotton was sold in Montgomery last week. It brought an astounding price, being sold at auction. This is much earlier than the first bale was reported last year.

Alabama Republicans in convention at Birmingham last week nominated a full state ticket to oppose Progressives, Democrats and everything else that might come in their way in November. The head of the list is Oliver D. Street for Governor, and Geo. H. Beyer for Lieuteuant Governor.

H. F. Williamson, a prominent business man of Anniston, has declined the Republican nomination for Congressman from the Fourth district, in opposition to Fred Blackmon, Democrat It is not known who the Republicans have next on their slate, but it is reasonably certain that they will have someone bidding for the place in November.

Those who were elected on the county executive committee of the Progressive party last primary election should not lose sight of the fact that there has beeu a call issued for them to meet and organize next Saturday at the mass meeting, and get things lined up for taking charge of the party management. We hope everyone of the new members will be present, and get in this work from the beginning. This will insure much better results in the wind up.

Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby county has been invited to be present at the Progressive mass meeting to be held at the court house in Clanton next Saturday. It is expected that he will be here and deliver an address before the assembly. Numbers of men in this county are acquainted with this gentleman, and are aware of the worth of his opinion in matters of politics and government. We hape all who possibly can will come to hear Judge Longshore and the others who will make speeches at the meeting.

In a very drastic report of the Grand Jury of Montgomery county, rendered Saturday, along with several other timely suggestions, they made the following recommendation that is especially worthy of note: "That no additional roads be built until the financial conditions of the county are improved, and that the practice of borrowing money from the banks be discontinued." It is to be presumed that the county of Montgomery, according to this recommendation that they borrow no more money, has been making a practice of the county debt system, which has recently been discussed in Chilton, and have found it a bad practice. Let us be wise enough to take advantage of the experience of those who have tried this method and found it malicious, and keep it in our own county before it is here.

Clanton should be proud of the splendid store recently opened by Upchurch Drug Company. The firm is by no means a new one for Clanton. It has been in operation here for a number of years, and the confidence that the management has at all times held with the public is strongly attested by the success attained. The new place of business is far in advance of the ordinary drug store for towns of this size, and sets a pace for Clanton that will not be surpassed in many years.

Rev. W. W. Carleton has just published a book of sermons selected from his preaching. The little volume is neat and handy and contains ten of his best sermons. All who have heard this able minister are acquainted with his power as a preacher of the gospel, and will be pleased to have one of his books. They were printed by the Union Publishing Company, and can be had for 25 cents each. They were not gotten out to make money. The selling price is simply what it cost to print them.

It's a pity that with the magnificent record of achievement the present Congress has made—the passage of the currency bill, tariff bill, and now the anti-trust legislation—there has been extravagance of the most flagrant kind. Chairman Fitzgerald of the House Appropriation Committee declares that whenever he thinks of "the horrible mess" this Congress has made in its expenditures of pubiic money, he is tempted to quit his place. It is to be hoped that Senator Burton will at least succeed in taking the rivers and harbors bill to death.—Progressive Farmer.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Recommended and Praised by Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick man for about three months caused from Gall Stones of the Liver and was told by three of our most prominent physicians that I would have to submit to an operation to get relief, but heard of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy and secured a full treatment and took it according to directions and passed hundreds of Gall Stones. Since taking your medicine I work regularly and don't feel any ill effects. I am praising your Remedy to all my friends. I think it's worthy of the highest praise. B. L. DOOLEY, Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments are not asked to take Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy for weeks and months before they feel benefited. Just try one dose—which should make you feel better in health, convince you that you will soon be well and strong, free you from pain and suffering and give you a sound and healthy Stomach, as it has done in thousands of other cases. Wherever it is taken you will hear nothing but the highest praise. Go to your druggist—ask him about the great results it has been accomplishing in cases of people he knows or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for a free book on Stomach Ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored.

Brought Out by Trial.

There can be no true virtue in those who have never been tried—or at least we cannot be sure of its existence; it may be there, or only its semblance may be there. In real life we have to do with realities: let us make sure that our defenses are real. —Arthur L. Salmon.

HAPPY MOTHERHOOD

The happiness of motherhood is too often checked because the mother's strength is not equal to her cares, while her unselfish devotion neglects her own health.

It is a duty of husband or friend to see that she gets the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which is not a drug or stimulant but nature's concentrated oil-food tonic to enrich and enliven the blood, strengthen the nerves and aid the appetite. Physicians everywhere prescribe Scott's Emulsion for overworked, nervous, tired women; it builds up and holds up their strength.

Get Scott's at your nearest drug store.

Keep a Thankful Heart.

The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find in every hour some heavenly blessings: only this iron in God's sand is gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Stevenson on Life.

We are not meant to be good in this world, but to try to be, and fail, and keep on trying; and when we are at our best to say, "Thank God!" and when we are at a buffet, to say, "Just so: well struck."—Stevenson.

HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Henry Russell Miller, the young Pittsburgh lawyer-novelist, who is known for his political stories which have appeared during the last few years, has distinguished himself again through the production of another story, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt"—a story of social and industrial Pittsburgh—which critics say is far better than either "The Man Higher Up" or "His Rise to Power," his two earlier political stories. We have secured this story as our next serial, and the first installment will appear in an early issue.

For a number of years Mr. Miller has exhibited a great interest in the steel industry. He has made the acquaintance of many of the big men as well as the laborers in the mill towns, and from them has learned a great deal about the game.

"The Ambition of Mark Truitt" is a story that is not only tremendously interesting, but one that will cause readers to stop and think.

Mt. Carmel

Those who are interested in the Childress Grave yard are requested to meet there Monday August 3rd. to Clean off same.

H. W. Varden, W. Q. Childress, Committee.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

All stockholders of the Farmers Warehouse and Storage Co., are hereby called to meet at the court house at Clanton on Thursday, the 6th day of August, 1914, at 10, a.m., for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year and to attend to other business of the corporation.

J. N. Dennis, Secy-Treas.

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is," she asked, "that nearly all the great men of this world have been married?" "I suppose," replied the old bachelor, "it's because they had to do something to get their minds off the troubles they had at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Business Man Praises Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

Successful Merchant After Investigation Found a Remedy That Restored His Health.

"This is Thanksgiving day in the state of Pennsylvania, and I want to devote a part of it in writing a letter to you. On the 28th day of November, '10, I was stricken with heart trouble. My family physician pronounced it Angina Pectoris. I had from one to five attacks in 24 hours, in the latter part of December, 1910. I wrote to the Miles Medical Co. for information concerning my case, and in reply I received a very kind and instructive letter, which I handed to my family doctor, and he told me to use your Remedies in connection with the medicine he gave me, so I did. I used five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and seven bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine. I was confined to the house for about four months. The action of my heart is now, and has been normal for the last six months. I can truly recommend Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Remedy to do what they are intended for, if used according to directions. I thank you kindly for your advice in answer to my monthly reports. I am now sixty-seven years of age, have been in the mercantile business for thirty-five years and lived retired for the last thirteen years." A. B. HOLLINGER, Lincoln, Nebr.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

FOR SALE—Jersey heifer 2 years old. Will sell cheap. Apply at Union-Banner Office.

Rifling a Barrel.

The grooves in a rifle barrel are made with special machinery, and unless one has this it could not do the work properly, no matter how skilled he was. When the grooves of a rifle barrel are filled with lead it is usually necessary to have an expert gunsmith clean them out.

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons.

G. J. Davis and Miss Francis Oren Yeargan, Chas. Parter and Miss Rosella Balton, G. C. Lockhart and Mrs. Maggie Lee Bridges, C. A. Longcrier and Miss Carrie Dewitt.

Colored Sam Thomas and Sindy Goodman.

Wanted Information.

Half an hour after Mrs. Richly had given her new maid an order she became uneasy and went to investigate. "Well, Mary, what has detained you? Have you found my Keats, as requested?" "Lor', mum," Mary apologized, "I was just comin' back to ask what is a Keats."

Quick Relief When Utterly Worn Out

Getting the Blood in Order Is Required By Most People.

If you think you have gone to smash and fit only for the discard, try S. S. S. for the blood. It will surprise you to know what can be done for health once the blood is released of the excess of body wastes that keep it from exercising its full measure of bodily repair.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling; it just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine.

The ingredients in S. S. S. serve the active purpose of so stimulating the cellular tissues of the body that they pick out from the blood their own essential nutriment and thus repair work begins at once. The relief is general all over the system.

Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. today. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 530 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Send for their free book telling of the many strange conditions that afflict the human family by reason of impoverished blood.

BUY YOUR DRINKS

Cigars, Tobaccos, Cigarettes, Candies, and other Summer-time goods from

Popwell & Jones

Place of business across the railroad from the Post Office. Open every day and Sunday too.

WE HAVE BEST ICE CREAM IN TOWN

You need a mighty good medicine if once your kidney are exausted by neglect and overwork, and you have got it in Foley Kidney Pill. Their action is prompt, healing and tonic. Sound health and sound kidneys follow their use. Try them. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Qualities to Develop.

Guard within yourself the spirit of kindness. Know how to give without hesitation, know how to lose without regret, how to endure without meanness. Know how to reflect upon your heart the happiness that you would be wanted in yourself—F. W. R.

The Hardware we sell is made mostly of steel and iron, yet this is the sort of a "golden rule" we practice—we sell good, honest, reliable stuff; we put a fair and square price on it, we charge everybody this same price.

Do you want to do business with this kind of a store?

Gamble Hardware Co.

Clanton, Alabama.

Good Typewriting requires a Good Operator —and a Good Typewriter

This Typewriter has Ball Bearings at all frictional points

The typewriting that is demanded throughout the business world to-day is neat, properly aligned, clean-cut, and free from errors.

The L. C. Smith & Bros. typewriter is built to produce this kind of "copy." The mechanical ideas worked out in this machine all lead to Typewriter Efficiency.

Every part that is in constant use—the carriage, the typebar joints and the capital shift, are ball bearing.

This means ease of operation, durability and efficiency.

Write for Illustrated Catalog

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Company

Home Office and Factory Syracuse, N. Y.

Branches in all principal cities

MAIL THIS COUPON

Tell L. C. SMITH & BROS. TYPEWRITER CO. 404 North 20th St., Birmingham, Ala.

Card Writing ☐ Billing ☐ Tabulating ☐ General Correspondence ☐ Legal Writing ☐

Your Summ

Is solicited by

We have the good
you. Anything y
found here. It is to give a list of
When you need an

DRY GOODS
Anything in this line you want.
Ladies Dress Goods.
Latest Patterns.
Laces and Fancy Notions.

CLOTH
Men's Suits
Summer Tr Styles guara
please you.
Hats and G
Furnishings

Remember we are th
high standard of excelle
to our customers perfe

ClantonMe

lanton, A

As Water Seeks Its Le
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Su
particular and economical peopl where are shown the latest style
, ladies' furnishings and lingeri
t stock of general dry goods, mar t prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

EMP BROTH

Clanton, Ala.

FECT CATHARTIC
are and wholesome action
of Foley Cathartic Tablets.
with never a gripe or
of constipation find them invaluable.
lieved of that bloa
so uncomfortable
weather. They k
For sale by all dea

Shingles and Gaso

Anyone wanting Shingles to conferring with me right away.
to get your order in the next o
I have a gasoline engine, tank to have city waterworks I w cash or on time. Come and lo

L. H. R

UR DRINKS

s, Cigarettes, Candies mer-time goods from

ll & Jones

ess across the railroa ffice. Open every day
.

ICE CREAM IN TOW

Qualities to Develop.
Guard within yourself the kindness. Know how to give out hesitation, know how to for out regret, how to acquire meanness. Know how to rep your heart the happiness th be wanted in yourself.—F. W.

HONEST PRICE TO ALL AND NO MONKEY BUSINESS IS THE RULE OF OUR STORE

we sell is made mostly this is the sort of a "go
-we sell good, honest
a fair and square price
ody this same price.
do business with this

Hardware Co.
on, Alabama.

ter has Ball Bearings at all frictional points

es a Good Operator

he business world to-day is neat, ors.

t to produce this kind of "copy."
this machine all lead to Type-

e—the carriage, the typebar ball bearing.

on, durability and efficiency.

strated Catalog

Bros. Typewriter
pany
e and Factory
use, N. Y. principal cities

Your Summer Trading

Is solicited by our Store.

We have the goods that will please you. Anything you need can be found here. It is needless for us to give a list of what we have. When you need anything call on us.

DRY GOODS	CLOTHING	GROCERIES
Anything in this line you want.	Men's Suits and Summer Trousers.	Anything the farmer needs in the way of heavy groceries and supplies.
Ladies Dress Goods.	Styles guaranteed to please you.	Grain and Feed Stuff.
Latest Patterns.	Hats and Gents Furnishings.
Laces and Fancy Notions.

Remember we are the originators of that high standard of excellence which guarantees to our customers perfect SATISFACTION.

Clanton Mercantile Co.

Clanton, Alabama.

Party for the Younger Set.

Miss Willie Belle Sartor entertained a number of the younger set at a delightful party at her home Monday night in honor of her guests, Mr. John and Henry Bell of Atlanta, Georgia. Miss Rilla Smith presided at the punch boll, and among these present were, Misses Helen Bishop, Dalene Hayes, Rilla Smith, Kathleen Mullins, Eva Dickenson, Beverly Hester, Fannie Dickenson; and Messrs Burton Higgins, Courtney (Jack) Harper, Grady Broadhead, John Bell, Wesley Adams, Henry Bell, and Hoke Pipes.

Mrs. Garner is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. E. M. Pinckard.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sartor accompanied a party of young people to Lock 12 Sunday.

Miss Ellen Baldwin of Verbena is the guest of Miss Bessie VanDerveer.

Dr. E. G. Hyman of Jemison was in Clanton Wednesday.

Mrs. E. M. Pinckard and Mrs. Garner left for New York Wednesday to visit their sister.

C. H. Robinson of Jemisod was in Clanton Wednesday.

The best wagon umbrella in town for 75c at Aireds.

Tom Gulledge of Mountain Creek was in Clanton Tuesday night as a visitor to Waxahatchie Tribe, I. O. R. M.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. M. Parrish of Birmingham are visiting relatives here.

F. A. Gulledge of Verbea was in Clanton Monday on business.

J. S. Jones of Mountain Creek was in Clanton Wednesday.

J. M. Grant of Clanton Route 2 was here Wednesday.

W. H. Conway of Jemison was a visitor to Clanton Wednesday.

W. Q. Childress of Route 4 was here Wednesday.

Miss Bessie VanDerveer has returned from a visit to Maylene.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Broadhead have returned to their home in Montgomery after a visit to relatives in Clanton.

Miss Gertrude Matthews is the guest of Mrs. J. Q. Wade.

Mrs. W. W. Monroe has returned to her home in Fayette after a pleasant visit to Mrs. E. E. Upchurch.

Mr. John Henry Bell of Atlanta is the guest of the family of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sartor.

Misses Eva and Fannie Dickenson of Woodville Texas are visiting here.

Miss Mary Curry is visiting relatives in Livingston.

Leon Kemp is spending a week at Montevallo.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Curry and family, and Miss Dora Haynes are spending a week on a camp at Yellowleaf creek.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cooper spent Sunday with relatives in Calera and Jemison.

W. M. and T. E. Wyatt spent Saturday night and Sunday with friends in Birmingham.

J. T. Rockett of Cooper was in Clanton Monday.

The county commissioners met in a special session Monday.

Misses Ruby Gore and Kate Goodgame have returned from a visit to friends at Centerville.

W. C. Robinson was a visitor to Birmingham Sunday.

Judge L. H. Reynolds spent the day Sunday with friends in Birmingham.

Messrs A. C. and Wiley Smith went up to Birmingham Saturday and returned Sunday night.

Lee Maddox motored a wedding party to West Point Georgia one day last week. It was another run-away.

Goldman and Frank Palmer spent Sunday in the Magic City.

New crop Turnip seed a variety that cant be dupli[illegible] anywhere [illegible]

3 — Equals — 25

A startling statement but a true one in this case. One teaspoonful of medicine and two pounds of your own ground feed (cost about 3 cents' equal, —in what they do for your animals and fowls,—two pounds of any ready-made stock or poultry tonic (price 25 cents). There you are! If you don't believe it, try it out! Buy, today, a can of—

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

Changes feed into tonic—Makes it result-producing.

Write for a trial package of Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE, also our 32 page, illustrated book, fully explaining its uses. Address: Bee Dee Stock Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

25c, 50c and $1. per can. At your dealer's.

P. B. 3

Joe VanDerveer Dr. Nabors, Eric Hart, Joe Calloway made an auto trip to Eclectic Sunday.

L. J. Duncan and family motored to Mineral Springs and Jemison Suuday afternoon. They were accompanied dy J. Hance Alred.

J. E. Robinson, Sr., went up to Birmingham Sunday night for a day or two on business.

Julian Latham went over to Talladega Springs Saturday night.

State Highway Engineer, W. S. Keller, was in Clanton Monday in the interest of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway.

A delegation of citizens from Verbena were in Clanton Monday to consult with the County Commissioners regarding Verbena's relation to the Montgomery-Birmingham highway.

Clark Harper spent Sunday in the city of Clanton.

Dr. Baldwin of Verbena came in his auto over the Highway to Clanton Monday

Dr. J. P. Hayes visited Birmingham Sunday.

Miss Rosa Parrish delightfully entertained a large number of her friends at a lawn party and watermelon cutting at her home in South Clanton last Friday night.

Twelve Reasons Why You Should Buy Your Groceries of Us

No. 1.

BECAUSE back of this store stands the personal integrity of the management.

We have emphatically impressed the value of honesty upon all our employees.

No cheap trickster's methods are tolerated.

W. Z. HODGES,

CLANTON, ALA.

John Strock of Verbena was in Clanton Monday on business

L. A. Calloway of Cooper was a visitor to Clanton Sunday.

Judge R. H. Bradley of Vernon Ala. was in Clanton last Thursday.

Dr. N. B. Sewell of Wetumpka was in Clanton last week attending the Odd Fellows celebration.

W. W. Devaughn of Rockford spent the week end in Clanton visiting relatives.

R. C. Hand of Titus was in Clanton last Thursday.

FOR SALE—Good gentle family Horse. Will work anywhere. To sell cheap for cash or on time. J. T. Rockett
7-30-3t. Cooper Ala.

Arthur Dickinson, colored, a Chilton county crap shooter, who some time made his escape from the officers here, was captured Sunday in Birmingham by Sheriff Jones and his deputies and returned to Clanton to face trial with his charges.

Bud Gant of Titus was in town Thursday last.

G. B. Jones of Route 2 was in town last Friday.

"Do a thing incomparably well, and the world will mak a path to your door even though you live in a forest."

Read these lines and then come to J. M. DUNN, the Hardware man, on FRIDAY and SATURDAY, July 31 and August 1st, and find out why we claim the right to quote them. THESE ARE BARGAIN DAYS AT DUNN'h, and if you have always wanted something for nothing, now is the time. COME TAKE A LOOK—I am sure you will see something you need, and at a bargain. If you miss Dunn's bargain days don't blame him—blame yourself. COME!

J. M. DUNN,

The Hardware Man Clanton, Ala.

As Water Seeks Its Level
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Sun

particular and economical people seek the where are shown the latest styles of dress ladies' furnishings and lingerie, and the stock of general dry goods, marked at the prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

KEMP BROTHERS

Clanton, Ala.

Program

District Sunday School Convention to meet with Mount Moriah Methodist Church on August 16th, one mile west of Wessington and five miles north west of Jemison.

10:00 a.m. Devotional Exercise led by Rev. Job Reynolds.

10:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

10:45 a.m. The Ideal Superintendent by Rev. Winkler.

11:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

11:45 a.m. Report and pledges of all Sunday Schools in the district.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

1:30 p.m. Devotional Exercise by Rev. Job Reynolds.

1:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

2:15 p.m. Correlation of home and school by J. B. Kilpatrick.

2:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

3:15 p.m. Time and place of next Convention.

3:30 Adjournment.

W. H. Shaw, Dis. Pres.
Miss Odia Harsly Sec. and Tres.

Prof. Jos. F. Bone, who is teaching at Rockymount schoolhouse, was a visitor to our office last Saturday. Prof. Bone says he is making great success with his school now, having practically overcome some formidable obstacles which faced him when he took up his work there. This is one of the best communities in the county, and ordinarily enrolls more than a hundred pupils.

PERFECT CATHARTIC
Mild and wholesome action of Foley Cathartic Tablets. Work with never a gripe or pain. Cases of constipation find them invaluable. Stout people are relieved of that bloated congested feeling so uncomfortable especially in hot weather. They keep your liver busy. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains conferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be to get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store. I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale; as are to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bar cash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

The Hollow of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON : COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

16

CHAPTER XIX.

The Hollow of Her Hand.

When Booth called in the afternoon at Sara's apartment, he was met by the news that she was quite ill and could see no one—not even him. The doctor had been summoned during the night and had returned in the morning, to find that she had a very high temperature. The butler could not enlighten Booth further than this, except to add that a nurse was coming in to take charge of Mrs. Wrandall, more for the purpose of watching her symptoms than for anything else, he believed. At least, so the doctor had said.

Two days passed before the distressed young man could get any definite news concerning her condition. He unconsciously began to think of it as a malady, not a mere illness, due of course to a remark Carroll had dropped when Sara had told him the whole truth of the tragedy and of her own vindictive plans. It was Carroll himself who gave a definite report of Sara. He met the lawyer coming away from the apartment when he called to inquire.

"She isn't out of her head, or anything like that," said Carroll uneasily, "but she's in a bad way, Booth. I'll tell you what I think is troubling her more than anything else. Down in her heart she realizes that Hetty Castleton has got to be brought face to face with the Wrandalls."

"The deuce you say!"

"Today I saw her for the first time. Almost immediately she asked me if I thought the Wrandalls would treat Hetty fairly if they ever found out the truth about her. I said I thought they would. I didn't have the heart to tell her that their grievance undoubtedly would be shifted from Hetty to her, and that they wouldn't be likely to forgive her for the stand she'd taken. She doesn't seem to care, however, what the Wrandalls think of her. By the way, have you any influence over Hetty Castleton?"

"I wish I were sure that I had," said Booth.

"Do you think she would come if you sent her a cablegram?"

"I am going over—"

"She will have your letter in a couple of days, according to Sara, who seems to have a very faithful correspondent in the person of that maid. I shudder to think of the cable tolls in the past few months! I sometimes wonder if the maid suspects anything more than a loving interest in Miss Castleton. What I was about to suggest is this: Couldn't you cable her on Friday saying that Sara is very ill? This is Tuesday."

"I will cable, of course, but Sara must not know that I've done it."

"Can you come to my office tomorrow afternoon?"

"Yes. Tomorrow night I shall go over to Philadelphia, to be gone till Friday. I hope it will not be necessary for me to stay longer. You never can tell about these operations."

"I trust everything will go well, Brandon."

Several things of note transpired before noon on Friday.

The Wrandalls arrived from Europe, without the recalcitrant colonel. Mr. Redmond Wrandall, who met them at the dock, heaved a sigh of relief.

"He will be over on the Lusitania, next sailing," said Leslie, who for some reason best known to himself wore a troubled look.

Mr. Wrandall's face fell. "I hope not," he said, much to the indignation

He Met the Lawyer Coming Away From the Apartment.

of his wife and the secret uneasiness of his son. "These predatory connections of the British nobility—"

"Predatory!" gasped Mrs. Wrandall.

"—are a blood-sucking lot," went on the old gentleman firmly. "If he comes to New York, Leslie, I'll stake my head he won't be long in borrowing a few thousand dollars from each of us. And he'll not seek to humiliate us by attempting to pay it back. Oh, I know them."

Leslie swallowed rather hard. "Any news here, dad?" he asked [illegible] "Anybody dead?"

"Sara is quite ill, I fear. Slight fever of some sort. Carroll tells me

"Is she going to marry Brandy Booth?" asked his son.

Mr. Wrandall's face stiffened. "I fear I was a little hasty in my conclusions. Brandon came to the office a few days ago and informed me in rather plain words that there is absolutely nothing in the report."

"The deuce you say! 'Gad, I wrote her a rather intimate letter—" Leslie got no farther than this. He was somewhat stunned and bewildered by his private reflections.

Mr. Wrandall was lost in study for some minutes, paying no attention to the remarks of the other occupants of the motor that whirled them across town.

"By the way, my dear," he said to his wife, a trifle irrelevantly, "don't you think it would be right for you and Vivian to drop in this afternoon and see Sara? Just to let her know that she isn't without—"

"It's out of the question, Redmond," said his wife, a shocked expression in her face as much as to say that he must be quite out of his head to suggest such a thing. "We shall be dreadfully busy for several days, unpacking and—well, doing all sorts of necessary things."

"She is pretty sick, I hear," mumbled he.

"Hasn't she got a nurse?" demanded his wife.

"I merely offered the suggestion in order—"

"Well, we'll see her next week. Any other news?"

"Mrs. Booth, Brandon's mother, was operated on for something or other day before yesterday."

"Oh, dear! The poor thing! Where?"

"Philadelphia, of course."

"I wonder if—let me see, Leslie, isn't there a good train to Philadelphia at four o'clock? I could go—"

"Really, my dear," said her husband sharply.

"You forget how busy we are, mother," said Vivian, without a smile.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Wrandall, in considerable confusion. "Was it a serious operation, Redmond?"

"They cut a bone out of her nose, that's all. Brandon says her heart is weak. They were afraid of the ether. She's all right, Carroll says."

"Goodness!" cried Mrs. Wrandall. One might have suspected a note of disappointment in her voice.

"I shall go up to see Sara this afternoon," said Vivian calmly. "What's the number of her new apartment?"

"You have been up to see her, of course," said Mrs. Wrandall acidly.

He fidgetted. "I didn't hear of her illness until yesterday."

"I'll go up with you, Viv," said Leslie.

"No, you won't," said his sister flatly. "I'm going to apologize to her for something I said to Brandon Booth. You needn't tag along, Les."

At half-past five in the afternoon, the Wrandall limousine stopped in front of the tall apartment building near the park, a footman jerked open the door, and Miss Wrandall stepped out. At the same moment a telegraph messenger boy paused on the sidewalk to compute the artistic but puzzling numerals on the imposing grilled doors of the building.

Miss Wrandall had herself announced by the obsequious doorman, and stood by in patience to wait for the absurd rule of the house to be carried out: "No one could get in without being announced from below," said the doorman.

"I c'n get in all right, all right," said the messenger boy, "I got a tellygram for de loidy."

"Go to the rear!" exclaimed the doorman, with some energy.

While Miss Wrandall waited in Sara's reception hall on the tenth floor, the messenger, having traversed a more devious route, arrived with his message.

Watson took the envelope and told him to wait. Five minutes passed. Miss Wrandall grew very uncomfortable under the persistent though complimentary gaze of the street urchin. He stared at her, wide-eyed and admiring, his tribute to the glorious. She stared back occasionally, narrow-eyed and reproving, her tribute to the grotesque.

"Will you please step into the drawing-room, Miss Wrandall," said Watson, returning. He led her across the small foyer and threw open a door. She passed into the room beyond.

Then he turned to the boy who stood beside the hall seat, making change for a quarter as he approached. "Here," he said, handing him the receipt book and a dime, "that's for you." He dropped the quarter into his own pocket, where it mingled with coins that were strangers to it up to that instant, and imperiously closed the door behind the boy who failed to say "thank you." Every man to his trade!

There was a woman in the drawing room when Vivian entered, standing well over against the windows with her back to the light. The visitor stopped short in surprise. She had expected to find her sister-in-law in bed, attended by a politely superior person in pure white.

"Why, Sara," she began, "I am so glad to see you are up and—"

The other woman [illegible]

"No, I am not Sara Wrandall," [illegible] Carroll tells me

she said, in a well-remembered voice. "How do you do?"

Vivian found herself looking into the face of Hetty Castleton. Instantly she extended her hand.

"This is a surprise!" she exclaimed. "When did you return? Leslie told me your plans were quite settled when he saw you in Lucerne. Oh, I see! Of course! How stupid of me. Sara sent for you."

"She has been quite ill," said Hetty, non-committally. "We got in yesterday. I thought my place was here, naturally."

"Naturally," repeated Vivian, in a detached sort of way. "How is she today? May I see her?"

"She is very much better. In fact, she is sitting up in her room." A warm flush suffused her face, a shy smile appeared in her eyes. "She is receiving Vivian Found Herself Looking Into the Face of Hetty Castleton.

two gentlemen visitors, to be perfectly honest, Miss Wrandall, her lawyer, Mr. Carroll, and—Mr. Booth."

They were seated side by side on the uncomfortable Louis Seize divan in the middle of the room.

"Perhaps she won't care to see me, after an audience so fatiguing," said Miss Wrandall sweetly. "And so exasperating," she added, with a smile.

Hetty looked her perplexity.

"But she will see you, Miss Wrandall—if you don't mind waiting. It is a business conference they're having."

An ironic gleam appeared in the corner of Vivian's eye. "Oh," she said, and waited. Hetty smiled uncertainly. All at once the tall American girl was impressed by the wistful, almost humble look in the Englishwoman's eyes, an appealing look that caused her to wonder not a little. Like a flash she jumped at an obvious conclusion, and almost caught her breath. This girl loved Booth and was losing him! Vivian exulted for a moment and then, with an impulse she could not quite catalogue, laid her hand on the other's slim fingers, and murmured somewhat hazily: "Never mind, never mind!"

"Oh, you must wait," cried Hetty, not at all in touch with the other's mood. "Sara expects to see you. The men will be out in a few minutes."

"I think I will run in tomorrow morning," said Vivian hastily. She arose almost immediately and again extended her hand. "So glad to see you back again, Miss Castleton. Come and see me. Give my love to Sara."

She took her departure in some haste, and in her heart she was rejoicing that she had not succeeded in making a fool of herself by confessing to Sara that she had said unkind things about her to Brandon Booth.

Hetty resumed her seat in the broad French window and stared out over the barren treetops in the park. A frightened, pathetic droop returned to her lips. It had been there most of the day.

In Sara's boudoir, the doors of which were carefully closed, three persons were in close, even repressed conference. The young mistress of the house sat propped up in a luxurious chaise-lounge, wan but intense. Confronting here were the two men, leaning forward in their chairs. Mr. Carroll held in his hand a number of papers, prominent among them being three or four telegrams. Booth's face was radiant despite the serious matter that occupied his mind. He had reached town early in the morning in response to a telephone message from Carroll announcing the sudden, unannounced appearance of Hetty Castleton at his offices on the previous afternoon. The girl's arrival had been most unexpected. She walked in on Mr. Carroll, accompanied by her maid, who had a distinctly sheepish look in her eyes and seemed eager to explain something but could not find the opportunity.

With some firmness, Miss Castleton had asked Mr. Carroll to explain why the woman had been set to spy upon her every moment, a demand the [illegible] lawyer could not well meet for the good and sufficient reason that he wasn't very clear about it himself. Then Hetty broke down and tried, confessing that she was eager to go to Mrs. Wrandall, at the same time [illegible] out something about a [illegible] dickering touch to Mr. Carroll's [illegible] and retired with Miss Castleton to the innermost of his private offices, where without much preamble he informed her that he knew everything. Moreover, Mr. Booth was in possession of all the facts and was even then on the point of starting for Europe to see her. Of course, his letter had failed to reach her in time. There was quite a tragic scene in the seclusion of that remote little office, during which Mr. Carroll wiped his eyes and blew his nose more than once, after which he took it upon himself to dispatch a messenger to Sara with the word that he and Miss Castleton would present themselves within half an hour after his note had been delivered.

The meeting between Sara and Hetty was affecting. . . . Almost immediately the former began to show the most singular signs of improvement. She laughed and cried and joyously announced to the protesting nurse that she was feeling quite well again! And, in truth, she got up from the couch on which she reclined and insisted on being dressed for dinner. In another room the amazed nurse was frantically appealing to Mr. Carroll to let her send for the doctor, only to be confounded by his urbane announcement that Mrs. Wrandall was as "right as a string" and, please God, she wouldn't need the services of doctor or nurse again for years to come. Then he asked the nurse if she had ever heard of a disease called "nostalgia."

She said she had heard of "homesickness."

"Well, that's what ailed Mrs. Wrandall," he said. "Miss Castleton is the cure."

Booth came the next morning. . . . Even as she lay passive in his arms, Hetty denied him. Her arms were around his neck as she miserably whispered that she could not, would not be his wife, notwithstanding her love for him and his readiness to accept her as she was. She was obdurate, lovingly, tenderly obdurate. He would have despaired but for Sara, to whom he afterwards appealed.

"Wait," was all that Sara had said, but he took heart. He was beginning to look upon her as a sorceress. A week ago he had felt sorry for her; his heart had been touched by her transparent misery. Today he saw her in another light altogether; as the determined, resourceful, calculating woman who, having failed to attain a certain end, was now intensely, keenly interested in the development of another of a totally different nature. He could not feel sorry for her today.

Hetty deliberately had placed herself in their hands, withdrawing from the conference shortly before Vivian's arrival to give herself over to gloomy conjectures as to the future, not only for herself, but for the man she loved and the woman she worshiped with something of the fidelity of a beaten dog.

* * * * * * *

At a later conference participated in by Sara, Booth and Mr. Carroll, the old lawyer spoke plainly.

"Now are you both willing to give serious consideration to the plan I propose? Take time to think it over. No harm will come to Miss Castleton, I am confident. There will be a nine days' sensation, but, after all, it is the best thing for everybody. You propose living abroad, Booth, so what are the odds if—"

"I shan't live abroad unless Hetty reconsiders her decision to not marry me," said the young man dismally. "'Gad, Sara, you must convince her that I love her better than—"

"I think she knows all that, Brandon. As I said before, wait! And now, Mr. Carroll, I have this to say to your suggestion: I for one am relentlessly opposed to the plan you advocate. There is no occasion for this matter to go to the public. A trial, you say, would be a mere formality. I am not so sure of that. Why put poor Hetty's head in the lion's mouth at this late stage, after I have protected her so carefully all these months? Why, take the risk? We know she is innocent. Isn't it enough that we acquit her in our hearts? No, I cannot consent, and I hold both of you to your promises."

"There is nothing more I can say, my dear Sara," said Carroll, shaking his head gloomily, "except to urge you to think it over very seriously. Remember, it may mean a great deal to her—and to our eager young friend here. Years from now, like a bolt from the sky, the truth may come out in some way. Think of what it would mean then."

Sara regarded him steadily. "There are but four people who know the truth," she said slowly. "It isn't likely that Hetty or Brandon will tell the story. Professional honor forbids your doing so. That leaves me as the sole peril. Is that what you would imply, my dear friend?"

"Not at all," he cried hastily, "not at all. I—"

"That's all tommy-rot, Sara," cried Booth earnestly. "We just couldn't have anything to fear from you."

With curious inconsistency, she shook her head and remarked: "Of course, you never could be quite easy in your minds upon those points so long as there would always be the feeling of threat. Am I to be [illegible] after all? I [illegible] I will not turn against one or the other of you some time and crush you to satisfy a personal grievance? How do you know, Brandon, that I am not in love with you at this very—"

"Good heavens, Sara!" he cried, agape.

"— at this very moment?" she continued. "It would not be so very strange, would it? I am very human. The power to love is not denied me. Oh, I am merely philosophizing. Don't look so serious. We will suppose that I continued along my career as the woman scorned. You have seen how I smart under the lash. Well?"

"But all that is impossible," said Booth, his face clearing. "You're not in love with me, and never can be. That! for your philosophy!"

At the same instant he became aware of the singular gleam in her eyes; a liquid, oriental glow that seemed to reflect light on her lower lids as she sat there with her face in the shadow. Once or twice before he had been conscious of the mysterious, seductive appeal. He stared back at her, almost defensively, but her gaze did not waver. It was he who first looked away, curiously uncomfortable.

"Still," she said slowly, "I think you would be wise to consider all possible contingencies."

"I'll take chances, Sara," he said, with an odd buoyancy in his voice that, for the life of him, he could not explain, even to himself.

"Even admitting that such should turn out to be the case," said Mr. Carroll judicially, "I don't believe you'd go so far as to put your loyal friends in jeopardy, Sara. So we will dismiss the thought. Don't forget, however, that you hold them in the hollow of your hand. My original contention was based on the time-honored saying, 'murder will out.' We never can tell what may turn up. The best laid plans of men and mice oft—"

Sara settled back among the cushions with a peremptory wave of her hand. The loose, flowing sleeve fell away, revealing her white, exquisitely modeled arm almost to the shoulder. For some strange, unaccountable reason Booth's eyes fell.

"I am tired, wretchedly tired. It has been a most exhausting day," she said, with a sudden note of weariness in her voice. Both men started up apologetically. "I will think seriously of your plan, Mr. Carroll. There is no hurry, I'm sure. Please send Miss Wrandall in to me, will you? Perhaps you would better tell Hetty to come in as soon as Vivian leaves. Come back tomorrow afternoon, Brandon. I shall be much more cheerful. By the way, have you noticed that Dicky, out in the library, has been singing all afternoon as if his little throat would split? It is very curious, but today is the first time he has uttered a note in nearly five months. Just listen to him! He is fairly riotous with song."

Booth leaned over and kissed the hand she lifted to him. "He is like the rest of us, Sara, inordinately happy." A slight shiver ran through her arm. He felt it.

"I am so afraid his exuberance of spirit may annoy Vivian," said she, with a rare smile. "She detests vulgarity."

The men departed. She lay back in the chaise-lounge, her eyes fixed on the hand he had touched with his lips. Watson tapped twice on the door.

"Miss Wrandall could not wait, ma'am," he said, opening the door softly. "She will call again tomorrow."

"Thank you, Watson. Will you hand me the cigarettes?"

Watson hesitated. "The cigarettes, ma'am?"

"Yes."

"But the doctor's orders, ma'am, begging your pardon for—"

"I have a new doctor, Watson."

"I beg pardon, ma'am!"

"The celebrated Doctor Folly," she said lightly.

CHAPTER XX.

Sara Wrandall's Decision.

"Now, you see what I mean, Brandon, when I insist that it would be a mistake for you to marry me," said Hetty in a troubled voice. "I feel that Sara will not let me go."

"That's pure nonsense, Hetty," he said. "She wants you to marry me, I am positive." He may have thought his tone convincing, but something caused her to regard him rather fixedly, as if she were trying to solve an elusive puzzle.

He took her by the arm and raised her to her feet. Holding her quite close, he looked down into her questioning eyes and said very seriously:

"You are suspicious, even of me, dearest. I want you. There is but one way for you to be at peace with yourself; shift your cares over to my shoulders. I will stand between you and everything that may come up to trouble you. We love one another. Why should we sacrifice our love for the sake of a shadow? For a week, dearest, I've been pleading with you; won't you end the suspense today—end it now—and say you will be my wife?"

The appeal was so gentle, so sincere, so full of longing that she wavered. Her tender blue eyes, lately so full of [illegible] was in them. Her warm, red lips [illegible] ed in a dear little smile of surrender.

"You know I love you," she [illegible] tremulously.

He kissed the lovely, appealing [illegible] not once but many times.

"God, how I worship you," he [illegible] pered passionately. "I can't go on [illegible] out you, darling. You are life to [illegible] love you! I love you!"

She drew back in his arms, [illegible] shadow chasing the light out of [illegible] eyes.

"We are both living in the pre[illegible] we are both thinking only of it, [illegible] don. What of the future? Can we [illegible] see the future? Dear heart, I [illegible] ways thinking of your future, [illegible] own. Is it right for me to bring [illegible]

"And I am thinking only of you [illegible] ture," he said gravely. "There [illegible] that shall be mine to shape [illegible] make glad with the fulfilment of [illegible] promise that love has in store for [illegible] of us. Put away the doubts, dri[illegible] the shadows, dearest. Live in the [illegible] for ever. Love is light."

"If I were only sure that my [illegible] ows would not descend upon you [illegible]

He drew her close and kissed [illegible] again.

"I am not afraid of your sh[illegible] God be my witness, Hetty, I [illegible] them. They do not reflect we[illegible] but strength and nobility. They [illegible] you all the more worth ha[illegible] thank God that you are what you [illegible] dear heart."

"Give me a few days longer, [illegible] don," she pleaded. "Let me [illegible] this strange thing that lies here [illegible] brain. My heart is yours, my [illegible] yours. But the brain is a re[illegible] must triumph over it, or it will [illegible] lie in wait for a chance to ove[illegible] this little kingdom of ours. [illegible] have been terrified. I am dis[illegible] Give me a few days longer."

"I would not grant you the [illegible] were I not so sure of the outco[illegible] said gently, but there was a [illegible] triumph in the tones. Her eye[illegible] very dark and soft and her lips [illegible] bled with the tide of love that [illegible] through her body. "Oh, how [illegible] you are!" he cried, straining her [illegible] in a sudden ecstasy of passion.

The doorbell rang. They dre[illegible] breathing rapidly, their blood [illegible] with the contact of opposing [illegible] their flesh quivering. With [illegible] sweet glance at him, she [illegible] ward the door to await the [illegible] of Watson. He could still [illegible] his arms.

A drawling voice came to [illegible] the vestibule, and a moment [illegible] lie Wrandall entered the lib[illegible] ing off his gloves as he came [illegible]

"Hello," he said glibly. "T[illegible] fellow downstairs it wasn't [illegible] to announce me by telephone [illegible] arrangement, I say. Why [illegible] should they think everybody [illegible] or a book agent or a constable [illegible] subpoena? He knows I'm one [illegible] family. I'm likely to run in [illegible] I told him, and— Oh, I say, [illegible] butting in, am I, Miss Castle[illegible]

He shook hands with both [illegible] and then offered his cigarette [illegible] Booth, first selecting one for [illegible] Hetty assured him that he was [illegible] trop, sheer profligacy on her [illegible] view of his readiness to con[illegible] point without a word from her.

"Nipping wind," he said, ta[illegible] stand before the fireplace. "W[illegible] Sara? Never mind, don't bo[illegible]

Booth Kissed the Hand She L[illegible] Him.

I've got all the time in the wo[illegible] the way, Miss Castleton, wha[illegible] latest news from your father?"

"I dare say you have later n[illegible] I," she said, a trace of anno[illegible] her manner.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Are Spices Injurious?

According to Dr. Gigon of [illegible] spices are a much abused co[illegible] of the diet. He claims that [illegible] of being injurious they are, [illegible] beneficial to the human ap[illegible] much as they stimulate the [illegible] saliva and of the gastric juice [illegible] by furthering digestion. B[illegible] aromatic spices—ginger, [illegible] cloves, pepper, etc—he ado[illegible] ommends salt. This last [illegible] taboo by many dietitians. [illegible] leading sanatoriums of the [illegible] that for years condemned [illegible] commendation.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

[illegible] indeed hath oft compared [illegible] public feasts, where meet the [illegible] public rout, [illegible] they that are without w[illegible] fain go in [illegible] they that are within would [illegible] fain go out.
—Sir John Davies.

SUMMER FOODS.

[illegible] the diet throughout the heated [illegible] be largely of vegetables and [illegible] fruits. Remember that milk is a food and not a beverage; that buttermilk is a most wholesome and cooling drink for hot weather and will take the place [illegible] ry food to our good. It is cooling [illegible] the blood and will for a season [illegible] as food.

[illegible] ken and Nut Salad.—Mix two [illegible] s of minced chicken with one [illegible] of finely cut celery and a half [illegible] of nut-meats, either walnuts or [illegible] s, browned in the oven, with a [illegible] butter and salt and a dash of [illegible] per. Moisten with mayonnaise [illegible] ve on lettuce.

[illegible] nch or two of small seed onions [illegible] in boiling water and served in [illegible] white sauce makes a wholesome [illegible] vegetable for a noon meal.

[illegible] ge Ice.—Make a sirup of four [illegible] of water, two cupfuls of sugar, [illegible] ated rind of two oranges and [illegible] minutes, strain and cool, add [illegible] pfuls of orange juice and a [illegible] of a cupful of lemon juice.

[illegible] e Date Pudding.—Soak half a [illegible] gelatin in one-half cupful of [illegible] ater. Add one pint of boiling [illegible] and half a cupful of sugar. [illegible] nd cool. When almost set add [illegible] pound of chopped dates and [illegible] cupful of walnut meats. Serve [illegible] eam.

[illegible] room Omelet.—Cook mush[illegible] butter and add to the omelet [illegible] fore folding. Garnish with [illegible] the mushrooms cooked in but[illegible]

[illegible] rry Whip.—Beat the white of [illegible] with a cupful of powdered [illegible] one and a half cupfuls of [illegible] raspberries together 30 min[illegible] lle in the center of a platter [illegible] whipped cream around the [illegible] erve with macaroons.

[illegible] berries or any fruit that will [illegible] ay be used for this dessert. [illegible] t with too much juice should [illegible] ed a little.

[illegible] y and dissipation, soft and [illegible] s their approaches are, and [illegible] as they throw their silken [illegible] about the heart, enslave it more [illegible] e most active and turbulent [illegible] Hannah More.

THE FAMILY OF TWO.

[illegible] any find that dividing the [illegible] ives poor results, and that [illegible] roasts are out of the question unless one desired to spend the week on one kind of meat. There is no reason why a small family should not indulge in a roast if it is given thought before its preparation. This is a good time to have [illegible] guests to enjoy a juicy [illegible] nd if that is not convenient [illegible] rving a roast for Sunday a por[illegible] y be warmed in the gravy with [illegible] tion of jelly if it is mutton [illegible] and tomato, worcestershire [illegible] onion if beef or veal. The [illegible] potatoes left over may be [illegible] o potato patties and served [illegible] ned in a little fat.

[illegible] delicious meat balls or cro[illegible] may be prepared from roast [illegible] with the addition of chopped [illegible] d green pepper.

[illegible] carrots or two turnips well [illegible] will be sufficient for two and [illegible] dressed in different ways. A [illegible] petizing dish is carrots with [illegible] utter. Chop the carrots after [illegible] and season with butter and [illegible] ice with salt and a pinch of [illegible] erve hot and they are good.

[illegible] and steak may be used for [illegible] after the roast. A good steak [illegible] ve several meals. One may [illegible] tenderloin for one meal, the [illegible] rtion for brown stew in casse[illegible] the rest for chopped meat, [illegible] ired.

[illegible] serving chopped meat or [illegible] er steak a sauce of tomato [illegible] sest to the meal.

[illegible] ny shops one is able to buy [illegible] hicken and one need not fear [illegible] lied extravagant, as this will [illegible] least two meals and a little [illegible] y then be had for a third day. [illegible] d-sized steak is more economi[illegible] y than a small one for several [illegible] ay be prepared from it, with [illegible] le waste if the steak is thick.

[illegible] Maxwell.

She Filled It.

"Lovely," said he earnestly, [illegible] ve noticed these missing word [illegible] in Fun, I know. Well, I [illegible] that I want you to help me [illegible] pe sentence is, 'Will you be [illegible] ?' Can you supply the missing [illegible] at one?" "Yes," said she, [illegible] ly: "sister."

Making a Calendar.

Harry (munching fruit of the [illegible] day, mama, if I eat dates [illegible] I grow up and be a calen[illegible]

NOT IN T[illegible]

Why the Colom[illegible] No [illegible]

Secretary Bryan [illegible] Which the Cou[illegible] dorse—Mar[illegible] Based [illegible]

Secretary Bry[illegible] fense of the prope[illegible] leaves the mat[illegible] nents unshaken. [illegible] is not based on [illegible] morals. The mat[illegible] covert apology fo[illegible] are not ashamed [illegible] our regret for W[illegible] to pretending to [illegible] do not consider [illegible]

In this Secret[illegible] with the opinion [illegible] countrymen. [illegible] which he [illegible] culty is insuper[illegible] faces that fact [illegible] able to give his [illegible] ane great influe[illegible] ing more urgent[illegible] him realize [illegible] tion of the nati[illegible] instructions of [illegible] tary Knox, to M[illegible] he said: "The [illegible] for one moment [illegible] any language [illegible] pugns the pase[illegible] tives of this go[illegible]

Secretary Bry[illegible] financial feature [illegible] be more convin[illegible] tion that we sh[illegible] of a wrongdoer [illegible] Colombia has a[illegible] tion from us for [illegible] zone let us exa[illegible] mentality and p[illegible] because we owe [illegible] mit the folly o[illegible] self-stultification [illegible] vanced by Sec[illegible] will give prestig[illegible] throughout Spa[illegible]

The Colombia[illegible] the assumption [illegible] Colombia. Wit[illegible] the treaty has [illegible] American peop[illegible] such assumption [illegible] prove any treat[illegible]

More Than [illegible]

The fact 'abo[illegible] we are very so[illegible] that the preside[illegible] ory that the tr[illegible] merely "psycho[illegible] if a feeling of [illegible] servatism may [illegible] matter of psych[illegible] recognize that [illegible] a just basis for [illegible] servatism? Do[illegible] for years back [illegible] this country ha[illegible] pounded and p[illegible] tions by the w[illegible] party after the [illegible] ventures in the [illegible] made by politi[illegible] the favor of t[illegible] know what the[illegible] now want mor[illegible] rest, and that [illegible] for all "psych[illegible] nervous and [illegible] quiet and a ce[illegible] annoyances fr[illegible] has been suffe[illegible]

The New Y[illegible] president's mo[illegible] an apt referen[illegible] it cited Bism[illegible] reforms should [illegible] that no man [illegible] do everything [illegible]

Why it is [illegible] friends will p[illegible] destruction?

Democrat[illegible]

If the new [illegible] succeeded in [illegible] cost of living, [illegible] eign markets [illegible] American ma[illegible] question had [illegible] Democrats in [illegible] far better po[illegible] seats. The s[illegible] rienced among [illegible] anxiety, upon [illegible] have noticed [illegible] ment in seve[illegible] larly the elec[illegible] which the pr[illegible] hand, only to [illegible] The house De[illegible] cannot expect[illegible] tional admini[illegible] tive districts, [illegible] has an abund[illegible] own. They a[illegible] ing about for[illegible] ing the camps [illegible] living and aw[illegible] places Demo[illegible] and old cam[illegible] well that to b[illegible] be badly hand[illegible]

The follow[illegible] from the sen[illegible] velt, most i[illegible] honest, educa[illegible] server, right[illegible] sentative, [illegible] statesman, [illegible] vating, loyal[illegible] ganizer, scie[illegible] ing, noble, t[illegible] erate, lingui[illegible] energetic, ni[illegible] ministrator, [illegible] Chicago Trib[illegible]

oth-
l to do t in ied.

conery han.
me.
on't that
the w I said not be.

ame her that ower
e in e he ous.
at gaze first able.
you ible

said,
that,
ex-

ould Carou'd ends miss ever,
w of
was ying, tell pians

cushf her fell sitely nider.
rea-

t has said, n her apololy of is no
Miss
rhaps
come Come
on. I by the y, out ll aftwould day is note ten to song."
d the ke the appy."
arm.

ce of l she,
s vul-

ack in ed on s lips.
bor.
wait,
r soft-w."
you rettes,

m, beg-

n."

," she

Brand be a
," said
el that ty," he y me, I thought nething

r fixedolve an raised quite er ques-

ously:
of me.
is but ce with r to my een you e up to another.
love for a week,
ith you;
today—
l be my sincere, wavered.

o full of ineffable itulation

was in them. Her warm, red lip ed in a dear little smile of surre
"You know I love you," she tremulously.

He kissed the lovely, appealin not once but many times.

"God, how I worship you," he pered passionately. "I can't go on out you, darling. You are life to love you! I love you!"

She drew back in his arm shadow chasing the light out o eyes.

"We are both living in the pr
we are both thinking only of it, don. What of the future? Can we see the future? Dear heart, I a ways thinking of your future, n
own. Is it right for me to bring y

"And I am thinking only of yo ture," he said gravely. "The that shall be mine to shape a make glad with the fulfilment of promise that love has in store fo of us. Put away the doubts, driv the shadows, dearest. Live in the for ever. Love is light."

"If I were only sure that my ows would not descend upon you

He drew her close and kisse again.

"I am not afraid of your sha
God be my witness, Hetty, I gi them. They do not reflect wea but strength and nobility. They you all the more worth havin thank God that you are what yo
dear heart."

"Give me a few days longer,
don," she pleaded. "Let me co
this strange thing that lies here brain. My heart is yours, my a yours. But the brain is a reb must triumph over it, or it will n lie in wait for a chance to over this little kingdom of ours. To have been terrified. I am disti
Give me a few days longer."

"I would not grant you the re were I not so sure of the outcom said gently, but there was a th triumph in the tones. Her eyes very dark and soft and her lips bled with the tide of love that s through her body. "Oh, how sh you are!" he cried, straining her in a sudden ecstasy of passion.

The doorbell rang. They drew breathing rapidly, their blood b with the contact of opposing their flesh quivering. With a sweet glance at him, she hu ward the door to await the of Watson. He could still fee his arms.

A drawling voice came to the the vestibule, and a moment la lie Wrandall entered the library ing off his gloves as he came.

"Hello," he said glibly. "I to fellow downstairs it wasn't p to announce me by telephone arrangement, I say. Why the should they think everybody's a or a book agent or a constable w subpoena? He knows I'm one family. I'm likely to run in any I told him, and— Oh, I say, I butting in, am I, Miss Castleto

He shook hands with both o and then offered his cigarette c
Booth, first selecting one for h Hetty assured him that he was trop, sheer profligacy on her p view of his readiness to conce
point without a word from her.

"Nipping wind," he said, taki stand before the fireplace. "Wh Sara? Never mind, don't both

Booth Kissed the Hand She L
Him.

I've got all the time in the wo the way, Miss Castleton, what latest news from your father?"

"I dare say you have later ne
I," she said, a trace of anno her manner.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Are Spices Injurious?

According to Dr. Gigon of spices are a much abused c of the diet. He claims th of being injurious they are beneficial to the human sy much as they stimulate the saliva and of the gastric juic by furthering digestion. B aromatic spices—ginger, cloves, pepper, etc.—he ado ommends salt. This last taboo by many dietitians leading sanatoriums that for years
commending

KITCHEN CABINET

indeed hath oft compared blic feasts, where meet the blic rout,
they that are without w go in they that are within would go out.
—Sir John Davies.

SUMMER FOODS.

he diet throughout the heatec
e largely of vegetables and fruits. Remember that milk is a food
and not a beverage; that buttermilk is a most wholesome and cooling drink for hot weather and will take the place

y food to our good. It is cool-the blood and will for a season s food.

ken and Nut Salad.—Mix two of minced chicken with one of finely cut celery and a half of nut-meats, either walnuts or s, browned in the oven, with a butter and salt and a dash of per. Moisten with mayonnaise ve on lettuce.

ch or two of small seed onions in boiling water and served in white sauce makes a whole-vegetable for a noon meal.

ge Ice.—Make a sirup of four of water, two cupfuls of sugar, ated rind of two oranges and minutes, strain and cool, add pfuls of orange juice and a of a cupful of lemon juice.

Date Pudding.—Soak half a gelatin in one-half cupful of
ter. Add one pint of boiling and half a cupful of sugar.
and cool. When almost set add pound of chopped dates and pful of walnut meats. Serve eam.

rom Omelet.—Cook mush-butter and add to the omelet fore folding. Garnish with the mushrooms cooked in but-ry Whip.—Beat the white of ith a cupful of powdered

one and a half cupfuls of aspberries together 30 mine in the center of a platter whipped cream around the erve with macaroons.

berries or any fruit that will
ay be used for this dessert.
it with too much juice should ined a little.

ry and dissipation, soft and as their approaches are, and as they throw their silken about the heart, enslave it more the most active and turbulent —Hannah More.

THE FAMILY OF TWO.

any find that dividing the gives poor results, and that roasts are out of the question unless one desired to spend the week
on one kind of meat.
There is no reason why a small family should not indulge in a roast if it is given thought before its preparation. This is a good time to have guests to enjoy a juicy and if that is not convenient rving a roast for Sunday a pory be warmed in the gravy with tion of jelly if it is mutton and tomato, worcestershire onion if beef or veal. The potatoes left over may be potato patties and served ed in a little fat.

elicious meat balls or cromay be prepared from roast with the addition of chopped green pepper.

carrots or two turnips well will be sufficient for two and dressed in different ways. A petizing dish is carrots with utter. Chop the carrots after and season with butter and pice with salt and a pinch of Serve hot and they are good.

and steak may be used for after the roast. A good steak ve several meals. One may e tenderloin for one meal, the portion for brown stew in casse-
the rest for chopped meat, ered.

serving chopped meat or ger steak a sauce of tomato zest to the meal.

ny shops one is able to buy chicken and one need not fear called extravagant, as this will least two meals and a little ay then be had for a third day.
-sized steak is more economi-y than a small one for several may be prepared from it, with tle waste if the steak is thick.

Allie Maxwell.

She Filled It.

"Lovely," said he earnestly,
e noticed these missing word in Fun, I know. Well, I e that I want you to help me
The sentence is, 'Will you be
?' Can you supply the missing
dear one?" "Yes," said she, ly; 'eister.'"

Making a Calendar.

Harry (munching fruit of the —Say, mama, if I eat dates will I grow up and be a calen-

NOT IN THE WRONG

Why the Colombian Treaty Has No Basis.

Secretary Bryan Has Taken a Position Which the Country Will Not Indorse—Main Objection Is Based on Morals.

Secretary Bryan's statement in defense of the proposed Colombian treaty leaves the main objection of its opponents unshaken. The main objection is not based on money. It is based on morals. The main objection is to the covert apology for action of which we are not ashamed. It is to declaring our regret for what we do not regret, to pretending to be sorry for what we do not consider wrong.

In this Secretary Bryan disagrees with the opinion of the majority of his countrymen. That is the difficulty in which he finds himself and the difficulty is insuperable. The sooner he faces that fact the sooner he will be able to give his undivided attention and great influence to matters requiring more urgently his attention. Let him realize that the spirit and conviction of the nation was expressed in the instructions of his predecessor, Secretary Knox, to Minister Du Bois, when he said: "The United States will not for one moment consider the use of any language which in any way impugns the past attitude, acts or motives of this government."

Secretary Bryan's discussion of the financial features of the treaty would be more convincing if his determination that we shall accept the position of a wrongdoer were not evident. If Colombia has any right to compensation from us for the loss of the canal zone let us examine it without sentimentality and pay whatever we owe, because we owe it. But let us not commit the folly of self-humiliation and self-stultification on the theory advanced by Secretary Bryan that "it will give prestige to the United States throughout Spanish America."

The Colombian treaty is based on the assumption that we did a wrong to Colombia. Without that assumption the treaty has no basis. But the American people do not accept any such assumption and they will not approve any treaty based upon it.

More Than "Psychological."

The fact about the matter is, and we are very sorry to have to say so, that the president is wrong in his theory that the trouble with business is merely "psychological." He is right if a feeling of business fear and conservatism may be described as a mere matter of psychology; but does he not recognize that there is such a thing as a just basis for business fear and conservatism? Does he not realize that for years back, the business men of this country have been whacked and pounded and pulled in different directions by the wild men of one political party after the other, and by unending ventures in the direction of Socialism made by politicians in order to catch the favor of the mob? Does he not know what the people of the country now want more than anything else is rest, and that the one sure treatment for all "psychological" conditions of nervous and business depression is quiet and a cessation of the previous annoyances from which the patient has been suffering?

The New York World, one of the president's most friendly critics, made an apt reference the other day when it cited Bismarck's plea that a few reforms should be left to posterity and that no man nor political party could do everything at once.

Why it is that our Democratic friends will persist in rushing upon destruction?

Democrats on the Defensive.

If the new tariff law had actually succeeded in hammering down the cost of living, or if it had opened foreign markets to offset the loss of the American market, or if the Mexican question had been solved successfully, Democrats in congress would be in a far better position to defend their seats. The shrewdest and most experienced among them look with extreme anxiety upon the campaign. They have noticed a change in public sentiment in several by-elections, particularly the election in New Jersey, in which the president himself took a hand, only to see a Republican elected. The house Democrats realize that they cannot expect much help from the national administration in their respective districts, since the administration has an abundance of troubles of its own. They are nonplussed in searching about for subjects to discuss during the campaign. Every issue that is living and awaiting popular judgment places Democrats on the defensive, and old campaigners know only too well that to be on the defensive is to be badly handicapped.

All of These.

The following words are created from the sentence, "Theodore Roosevelt, most intelligent man:" True, honest, educator, orator, diplomat, observer, righteous, exemplary, representative, optimist, ornithologist, statesman, explorer, versatile, elevating, loyal, thorough, marvel, organizer, scientist, traveler, illuminating, noble, talented, enthusiastic, literate, linguist, independent, gallant, energetic, nimrod, thinker, manly, administrator, nervy.—Correspondence Chicago Tribune.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Sand and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Your Druggist's 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye Free ask Druggists or Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

For Sprains, Strains or Lameness

Always Keep a Bottle in your Stable

HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh

For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot, Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.

Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 OR WRITE

All Dealers G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Don't Read This

unless you are interested in Kodaking. We develop your films absolutely free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Prompt attention to mail orders. We carry a fresh supply of Eastman films. Send us your order for these. We mail them out quickly.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 31-1914.

THEY HAD TO BE "SEBENS"

'Bena's Method of Reasoning in Matter of Slippers Quite Plain to Those Who Understand.

'Bena was much excited over the prospects of camp meeting that was about to take place in her neighborhood. For weeks she had been preparing gay and gaudy feathers for the array, and now her outfit was complete, save a pair of much-desired patent leather slippers. She approached her mistress.

"Mis' Ford," she said, "I sho' wants to git a pair o' slippers fo' de meetin' commences, an' I ain't got a single cent lef'."

"What size do you wear, 'Bena?" asked her mistress.

"Mah right numbah is fo'," she replied, "but I has to weah sebens, 'cause fo's hurts me dat bad I jes' natcherly cain't hardly walk."—Woman's Home Companion.

WHAT TO DO FOR HOT WEATHER SKIN TROUBLES

With hot weather comes the worst skin suffering for some folks. Eczema, hives, heat-rash, insect-bites, poison oak or ivy, sunburn, chafing, and a dozen other troubles make life unendurable. But YOU needn't worry. That soothing, antiseptic resinol ointment stops itching and burning instantly, allays inflammation, and soon restores the skin to perfect health, even in severe, stubborn cases. Doctors have prescribed resinol ointment for 19 years. At all druggists'.—Adv.

Marked Down.

"Why do you suppose Alice married that poverty-stricken count?"

"Got him at a discount, I guess."

Late, but Good.

Miss Jinks—And where's your little brother today, Jimmy?

Jimmy (pointing to the snow-bah)—That's 'im, miss. He fell down at the top of the hill, and rolled down to the bottom.

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. The first application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

It isn't until a man approaches the top that the world is anxious to give him a boost.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

The people who are satisfied to put it off till tomorrow generally put it off indefinitely.

NO EXPERT WITNESS NEEDED

Quite Evident Mr. Miggs Was Right When He Testified as to the Handwriting.

"Libel, indeed!"

Old Miggs repeated the words to himself dully and uncomprehendingly, as he tramped along to the court, where he was to appear as witness in a local libel suit.

Nervously he entered the witness box.

The fierce looking lawyer eyed him calculatingly.

"Do you swear," he asked, "that this is not your handwriting?"

"I don't think so," stammered Miggs.

"Now, be careful," insinuated the lawyer. "Are you prepared to swear that this handwriting does not resemble yours?"

"Yes," answered Miggs trembling.

"You take your oath that this does not in any way resemble your handwriting?" solemnly queried the learned man.

"Y-yes, sir," stammered the witness, now thoroughly frightened.

"Well, then, prove it!" denounced the lawyer, triumphantly, as he thrust his head toward the witness.

This action woke the last spark of drooping courage in poor Miggs, and, thrusting forth his head, he yelled:

"'Cos I can't write!"

The Tango in Church.

Mother, like countless other mothers, had been doing much tangoing and hesitating of late. She had taken dancing lessons. She practiced the various steps at home with father. Little Frances had heard much of the lingo that goes with the tango, and the hesitation. She knew all of the phrases.

A few days ago Frances went to church with her mother. Frances had not learned all of the ceremonials of this church for, after the mother knelt outside the pew, Frances looked up at her and whispered:

"Mother, what did you do the dip for?"—Indianapolis News.

Law's Uncertainties.

"When you poke a toad," said old Farmer Hornbeck, philosophically, 'you can't tell which way he will jump, nor how far; an' it is jest about the same way with a jury."

"That so?" returned young Jay Green, in a noncommittal way.

"Yep. For instance, in the case of Plunk Jarvis, who has jest been tried over at Kickyhasset courthouse for pullin' out his brother-in-law's whiskers by the roots in a fight, the jury discharged Plunk an' fined his brother-in-law 10 cents, the regular price of a shave."—Puck.

Outspoken.

Mrs. Smith's four sons made the life of her old colored servant a burden. One day Uncle Andy was busy in the garden hoeing corn, and for half an hour Tom, the most mischievous of the quartet, had amused himself throwing clods of dirt at him. At last Andy threw down his hoe and stamped indignantly down to the house.

"Miss Ella," he said, to the little culprit's mother, "Ah jes' has to tell yu dat dat boy Tawm am de meanes' chile yu got—an' Ah tells you fo' yo' face and tells you behine yo' back!"

Musical Note.

"Why is the scholarly-looking man slamming down his windows so hard?"

"I will tell you why, the scolarly-looking man is slamming down his windows so hard."

"The scholarly-looking man is slamming down his windows so hard because the hurdy-gurdy out in front is playing the same tunes that he paid five dollars to hear last night at grand opera."—Judge.

Still In Vogue.

John Vincent Honeywell, the veteran life guard of Bar Harbor, was talking about bathing suits. "They tell me," said the wise old man, "that the girls 'll wear suits this summer to match the eyes."

He added with a chuckle:

"Suits to catch the eyes 'll still be popular too."

These June Brides.

"Ma'am, here's a man at the door with a parcel for you."

"What is it, Bridget?"

"It's a fish, ma'am, and it's marked C. O. D."

"Then make the man take it straight back to the dealer. I ordered trout."—Kansas City Star.

A Mere Toy.

Silas—That city fellow follows his vocation closely and yet he spends all of his time at play.

Hez—How does he manage that?

Silas—He leads a string orchestra.

But Not to Eminence.

"Pa, what is a sheepskin?"

"It's a diploma, and a diploma is a passport to the Land of Work."

It's all right to take things easy, provided they don't belong to some one else.

Works Itself.

"How do you suppose this craze for motors comes to possess people?"

"I guess it's automatic."

IN NO POSITION TO PREACH

Stranger Lost the Confidence of Truthful Fisherman When He made His Inquiry.

Representative Frank Clark, Representative Howard of Georgia, and Superintendent George W. Hess of the botanic gardens, were having a friendly argument at Washington.

"Howard," said Clark, banteringly, "I just want to illustrate to you in a story how little you know about this. There is in my district in Florida an attractive village named Callahan.

"One day a stranger walking along a road in the country near a creek saw a youth fishing.

"'Young man,' said the ministerial-looking individual, 'can you tell me the way to Callahan?'

"'Yes,' replied the boy, 'take the first road to your right.'

"Instead of proceeding on his journed, the stranger gazed intently at the boy a few moments and said: 'My young friends, don't you know you are wasting your time in a way that is dreadful to contemplate? You are fishing, just fishing, when you ought to be a-studyin' of books to prepare yourself for life's struggle. My boy, you're sure on the road to perdition.'

"'Road to perdition,' replied the indignant youth. 'What in blazes do you know about roads? You don't even know the road to Callahan.'"

Revolutionary Patriot.

James Lovell, a distinguished patriot of the Revolution, died 100 years ago in the town of Windham, Me. Mr. Lovell was born in Boston in 1737 and graduated from Harvard college at the age of nineteen. He delivered, April 2, 1771, the oration before the town authorities on the Boston massacre. Because of his display of patriotism he was imprisoned by General Gage immediately after the battle of Bunker Hill. Subsequently he was conveyed to Halifax with the British army, and remained in confinement until exchanged for Governor Skene in the latter part of 1776. From 1776 until 1782 Mr. Lovell was a member of the Continental congress. In later life he filled a number of public offices in Boston.

Snakes Got His Roll.

"I lost $325 trying to kill rattlesnakes, and now I am going to walk back to my home in Brooklyn," explained a man about forty-five years old, who said he is Ezra Sellen.

Sellen said he started for a walk from his boarding place, encountered a lot of rattlesnakes, killed some, fled from the others, waded a stream, and then missed his roll of bills. He said he had just money enough left to ride to this city and took the state road out of town.—Middletown (N. Y.) Dispatch to New York World.

Honest.

Dyer—What do you think has been most influential in shaping your career?

Ryer—Work.—Judge.

As Usual.

Englishman—The suffragettes saluted the prime minister this morning.

American—Did they fire 21 guns?

Englishman—No; houses.—Life.

EAS-IT

A PRESCRIPTION prepared especially for the immediate relief of all kinds of Headaches, Neuralgia, Nervousness, Malarial and Rheumatic Pains. Absolutely GUARANTEED. Money back if you want it. Contains NO OPIATE. Adv.

It's a good thing that poverty is no crime or half the world would be in jail.

Hard to Stand.

Skids—It's not every one that can stand prosperity.

Skittles—Particularly, if it's some one else's.—Judge.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. In Use For Over 30 Years. Children Gry for Fletcher's Castoria

Mole Trap the Best.

The best way to exterminate the ground mole is to use a mole trap. A good trap will probably be successful eventually.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Very Much So.

"Are those colors fast, Ann?"

"Well, to see the way they ran in the wash, I'd call 'em speeders."

How To Give Quinine To Children
FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

Occasionally you meet a man who is so chivalrous toward women that he is actually polite to his own wife.

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. P. W. LANSENG, Route No. 1, Florence, South Dakota.

Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Wretchedness of Constipation
Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

METAL ROOFING
Shingles, Spanish Tile
EVERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL
BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY
WE PAY THE FREIGHT WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES
THE M-EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO. COVINGTON - KY.

ONLY $21.90
f. o. b. factory for this nice 6 hole, nickel trimmed steel range without water tank. Add $3.50 for tank. Has Duplex Grates for coal or wood.
HIGH POINT NOVELTY WORKS HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Made of metal, can't spill or upset, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. All dealers or sent express paid for $1.00.

HAROLD SOMERS, 150 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

MEDALLION and PORTRAIT MEN
We have the latest and best selling Medallion on the market; fine profits. If you are a hustler send for our catalogue. CENTRAL MEDALLION CO., 464 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent Free. Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Successor to Dr. H. H. Greens Sons, Box C, Atlanta, Ga.

BE MASTER Stop wage slavery; formulas and instructions for manufacturing 5 big sellers and 100 business opportunities sent for 10c. HOBBS CO., BOX 631, LOUISVILLE, KY.

LADIES Don't ask a man for your toilet necessities, order by mail. Send for our FREE book; you will be interested. Write MAENNEH CO., 2841 Wyoming, St. Louis, Mo.

WHIRLWIND seller: absolutely new; everyone buys, big profits, repeats sure, particulars free. Guy A. Richard, Box 26, Livermore Falls, Me.

SCIENTIFIC method of saving 50% on your ice bill, 25c. Drawing extra 25c. Prof. G. B. Stephenson, 412 Bellvue Ct., Kalamazoo, Mich.

3 Reliable Salesmen Travel, appoint agents; salary $84 and expenses. Home Supply Mfg. Co., Sta. A, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

For Sale Attractive price, fifty million feet sawmill timber in Alabama; on railroad. Address G. W. Hughes, Alto, Texas.

Excel Laxative Sure cure for all liver and stomach troubles; 25 days treatment, 25c. W. C. MATTOX, Elberton, Georgia.

MEN in every locality make big money selling automobile tires puncture proof. Write P. Medlin, 329 Wyoming Bldg., Muncie, Indiana.

"CYCLOPEDIA HEALTH AND BEAUTY" Every woman wants it. Mailed free with catalog. Send your address. REX SPECIALTY CO., Anderson, Ind.

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Nervous Weakness

This is an ailment that affects women to a large extent, and is a particularly prominent symptom where there are irregularities and other disorders from which women only suffer.

DR. SIMMONS

Squaw Vine Compound

Is a Medicine for Women

It acts on the nerves, quiets irritation, strengthens weakened parts and restores the strength and energy of health. Nervous women who are run down, weak and discouraged from constant suffering revive at once under its powerful restorative influence. It promotes good appetite and digestion, sound refreshing sleep, steady nerves, the enjoyment of a healthy body and cheerful spirits. It is pleasant to take and acceptable to the most delicate stomach.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers. Price $1.00 Per Bottle

C. F. SIMMONS MEDICINE CO., ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

For sale by ALRED DRUG CO.

20 Teachers 700 Students

State Normal School

Florence, Alabama.

This institution has an honorable record of forty-one years in Traming Teachers For Efficient Service.

Seven hundred students were enrolled last session from thirty-six counties.

This school welcomes young men and women of intellect and character who wish to be fitted for the profession of teaching.

Our graduates are holding many of the most responsible positions in Alabama.

Twenty teachers in the faculty, including departments of domestic science and domestic arts. Manual training and applied agriculture together with a systematic study of rural problems will be organized.

Board may be had either in the dormitory or in private families.

The value of the grounds, buildings and equipment is conservatively estimated at $240,000.

Next session begins September 8. Write for catalogue.

Henry J. Willingham. LL.D., President. E. A. Henry, Secretary.

"AUBURN"

Alabama Polytechnic Institute

The Oldest School of Technology in the South

69 Professors and instructors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Laboratories

Summer Session July 24 to September 4, 1914.

Next Session Begins Wednesday, September 9, 1914.

New Buildings and New Equipment.

DEPARTMENTS

I. College of Engineering and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, and Mining Engineering, Architecture, Metallurgy, Mechanic Arts, Technical Drawing, Machine Design, etc.

II. College of Agricultural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture, Animal Husbandry, Botany, Entomology, Chemistry.

Department of Pharmacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and Two-Year Courses).

III. Academic Departments—History, English, Mathematics, Latin, German, French, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Psychology.

IV. College of Veterinary Medicine.

Expenses. Free tuition to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to non-residents. Board in Dormitory and with private families. For Catalogue and Further Information, Address

CHAS. C. THACH, LL. D., President, AUBURN, ALA.

For first class work, painting paper hanging, decorating, etc., see E. J. Townsend, Clanton Ala. He guarantees his work. Patronage of country people given attention 7 16 4

FOR SALE—10 head cattle; 2 milch cows and calves freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.

Alfred Popwell.

List of Letters

Remaining uncalled for at the Clanton Post Office for the week ending July 25, 1914:

Ladies Mrs. Mattie Cook, Miss Annie Lome, Miss Laura Shaw, Mrs. Nancy Smith.

Gentlemen James Barnes, Anson Johnson, Tom Jones William Stons, Oden Eincar, H. R Buckner, Anderson Johnsrn W. M. Sutton, George Holley, William Gibbs, Julias Fielns, Sam Bennett.

These Letters will be sent to the Dead Letter Office August 8, 1914. if not delivered before. In calling for the above, please say 'Advertised, giving date of list.

F. O. Dudley. P. M.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist.
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. F. C. Smith
Thorsby, Ala.
Office Masonic Bldg.
Hours—8 to 10 and 3 to 5.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —
MONUMENTS
AND GRAVESTONES
Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by
J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA

How Do You Feel After Eating.?

One should feel good natured and satisfied. That is the way one will feel if the digestive organs are working properly. No pain or distress should follow a hearty meal. If there is pain or distress your stomach needs the aid that POINDEXTER'S TONIC will give.

A dose directly after eating will prevent all trouble This remedy will stimulate the digestive organs thereby increasing the secretion of gastric juices.

Its use insures perfect assimilation and the greatest possible percentage of nutriment from what is eaten. Money back if you are not satisfied.

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 60 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan. 1.

EASES TORMENT OF ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER

For the discomfort and misery of asthma and hay fever use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It gives immediate soothing easing every breath, stopping the paroxysms, loosening and clearing congestion, ending the sleepless, gasping nights. Contains no opiates. Refuse substitutes. The only safe, sure relief. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

TAKING CALOMEL DANGEROUS

Calomel is a powerful chemical made from mercury—people should be careful about its use. The only sure way to avoid the danger of calomel is to take no calomel.

Dodson's Liver Tone, a vegetable liquid of pleasant taste, more than takes its place. Where calomel shakes you up and shocks your liver and often makes you really sick, Dodson's Liver tone mild but effective, builds up and strengthens. It "livens up the liver." You feel fine after taking it.

Dodson's may be taken without any restriction of diet or habits. You can give it to your children with fine results.

Get a large bottle for 50 cents Alred Drug Company and if it doesen't do all that you think it ought—if it doesn't make bilious spells mere trifles—if it doesn't "liven up your liver," your money will be waiting for you and be returned with a smile.

If you have struggled in privation

If you have dwelt with plenty and known a woman's love in either

Then you'll see yourself in

THE AMBITION OF MARK TRUITT

The Novel of a Typical American

Our Next Serial!

Watch for It!

Experienced Women Advise Mother's Friend

Because it is so perfectly safe to use and has been of such great help to a host of expectant mothers, these women, experienced in this most happy period, advise the use of "Mother's Friend."

Applied externally to the abdominal muscles its purpose is to relieve the undue tension upon the cords and ligaments resulting from muscular expansion. Beneath the surface is a network of fine nerve threads and the gentle, soothing embrocation, "Mother's Friend," is designed to so lubricate the muscular fibres as to avoid the unnecessary and continuous nagging upon this myriad of nerves. It is a reflex action.

Applied to the breasts it affords the proper massage to prevent caking.

Thousands of women have reason to believe in this splendid help under the trying ordeal of motherhood. Their letters are eloquent evidence of its great value to women. In use for many years it has come to be a standard remedy for the purpose.

There is scarcely a well-stocked drug store anywhere but what you can easily obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" and in nearly every town and village is a grandma who herself used it in earlier years. Expectant mothers are urged to try this splendid assistant to comfort.

Mother's Friend is prepared by Bradfield Regulator Co., 410 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Send for our little book.

If you have neglected your kidneys, and suffer from backache, weak back, headache, rheumatism and distressing bladder weakness, you will find Foley Kidney Pills to be the honestly made, healing and curative medicine you need to give you back your health and strength. They are tonic action, quick to give good results. They will help you. For sale by all dealers everywhere.

Unfreezable.

"Can any one name a liquid that doesn't freeze?" asked the teacher. There was a moment's silence, says the Berliner Illustrirte Zeitung. Then a voice in the rear of the room answered, eagerly, "Please, teacher, hot water!"

IF KIDNEY AND BLADDER BOTHER THEN FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS

Overworked kidneys will break down if not helped. When they can no long er protect the blood and the body from the poisons that come to them, then look out for Bright's disease, serious kidney trouble and bladder ailments. Foley Kidney Pills are your best medicine. Sold everywhere. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all druggists everywhere.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDOX

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Prompt Service Day or Night

Two New Five Passenger Cars

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone 3

SEASHORE EXCURSIONS

Every Saturday until August 30th

TO

Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola -	$6.65
Pascagoula - -	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.35
Biloxi - -	8.40	Gulfport - -	9.00
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis -	9.30

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fares with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply

L&N

J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton

J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

POWER

Man can view with equanimity the rush of the locomotive, the onward dash of the automobile, the graceful flight of the aeroplane, the majestic progress of the modern floating palace.

He can listen with security to the thunder of Niagara, the roar of the beasts in the jungle, the crash of burned cities falling.

Because, no matter how great the calamity, man has more power than any of these forces.

He can, through the power of his brain, repair the damage and prevent a repetition. He can, through the power of his brain, control the action of any of these forces.

Occasionally man builds a Titanic vessel. In the darkness, at sea, it jams an iceberg and sinks to the bottom. The horror is great, but the lesson is lost.

Man has an object lesson of faulty work and the consequences thereof. His power to overcome obstacles is more deeply stirred. Future generations get the benefit.

The L. & N. reminds the people of these things because the L. & N. is dependent for success upon the power of the people. You, the people, build locomotives, construct automobiles, harness Niagaras, tame wild beasts, fly in aeroplanes, sail in giant ships.

The L. & N. is the product and the servant of the people. Every mile of its rails, every tie on its roadbed, every locomotive in its roundhouses, every car in its depots, represent the power of the people to create modern freight and passenger traffic.

The officials and employees of the L. & N. represent the mental power of the people in their control of these mechanical forces, and conduct them in such manner as will result in the public good.

Man should take pride in his power, and use it with discretion. His tendencies are constructive, but if directed, his powers can be destructive.

The L. & N. wants to co-operate with the constructive element in our citizenship for the control of forces and the development of the territory through which the lines operate.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

THE

THE UNION 11th Ye

3

Great Mas

Shows up W

Much Interest Dis Was Keynote of 600 Voters

Splendid Speech of Col. Spirit of all for Vigorou Spoke of Conditio

As previously announced, a general mass meeting of the supporters of the Progressive party Chilton county was held at court house in Clanton Saturday. The meeting was in all completely harmonious one, and revealed the unanimity with which the party supporters are rallying together.

In the absence of the Chairman J. O. Middleton, the meeting was called to order by M. D. Foshee, When Prof. W. T. Bean was elected Chairman, and W. Gillespie, Secretary.

As the main business was to appoint delegates to the State, Senatorial and Congressional conventions to be held at Birmingham Wednesday, this matter was taken up and disposed of as follows: The Chairman was empowered to appoint a committee of five to suggest names for the committee.

The nominating committee were, L. O. Vickers, J. M. Grant, M. D. Foshee, J. N. Scott, and J. Y. Nix. In their report to the house the following recommendations for delegates to Birmingham were made, and accepted unanimously by the body:

Delegates to the State Convention—J. N. Scott, J, S. Dennis, J. Jones, W. F. Deshazo, M. D. Foshee, L. H. Reynolds, L. O. Vickers, W. L. House, T. L. Robinson, D. H. Gentry, R. L. Clark, T. Rockett, W. T. Bean, H. A Harris, W. E. Thomas.

Delegates to the Congressional Convention—J. N. Dennis, J. Collins, J. W. Moore, John Williams, J. P. Robinson, Grady Reynolds, W. S. Watkins, L. H. Reynolds, J. N. Scott, W. L. House, H. A. Harris, W. E. Thomas, R. J. Williams, S. E. Waldrup, T. J. Hubbard.

Delegates to the Senatorial Convention—L. H. Reynolds, L. O. Vickers, J. N. Scott, J. N. Dennis, W. T. Bean, J. W. Moore, W. C. Elder, W. M. Wyatt, J. E. Kelley, J. T. Rockett, W. F. Deshazo, W. H. Gillespie, D. H. Gentry, Grady Reynolds, J. M. Grant.

It was moved and carried that the delegates be instructed to vote as a unit on questions that might come before them.

When the Chairman announced that resolutions were in order, the following was introduced and read by M. C. Williams, and adopted by the convention:

Whereas it is the policy of the Democratic party to create debts, to waste the peoples money, and to dis-regard the wishes of the people whose tax money they are spending and wasting wherever they are in power.

Therefore be it resolved by the Progressive Party of Chilton County in mass-meeting assembled, that we are opposed to creating debts

Time Warra Issue, excep people.

Be it furthe favor good that all the spared each ty Treasurer
the various County.

The next people intro
W. M. Wyat
cussion, was ed by the co
imously pas follows.

Clanton
To the vote
The peop on the eve
campaign.
election, th
ty will deci
Sheriff, Rep missioners years. W carefully the Demo county, sta
if you can platforms t

New offi
ed and sa Democrats become a ers have b structions
the people
program
Democrats
tinue, that those wan
erty in ou consider pay the ta

Old so been cut point bec been wa
Graft, co prominen
There is Democra that the p
one that the last dorsed by in their la

We rea
all over were sto changed in the b forms of ticed in the party
all this b nees. W party wh what the
is. Has the leade voting t dice? I pledge o ocratic
have fa
people h

LEE MADDO
BILES FOR HIR
rvice Day or Nigh
Five Passenger Car
ANTON, ALA.
Phone 3

RE EXCURSIONS
rday until August 30th
TO Coast Resorts
RIP FARES FROM CLANTON
$6.65
8.00 Ocean Springs 8.35
8.40 Gulfport - - 9.00
9.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.30
en Days Return Limit
ALSO
until September 30th, regular round
rist Tickets at slightly higher fares
of October 31st.
For particulars apply
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

OWER
ith equanimity the rush of the loc
d dash of the automobile, the gra roplane, the majestic progress of t lace.
ith security to the thunder of a N
the beasts in the jungle, the cra lling.
ter how great the calamity, man
ny of these forces.
the power of his brain, repair nt a repetition. He can, through control the action of any of the an builds a Titanic vessel. In t it jams an iceberg and sinks to ror is great, but the lesson is the ct lesson of faulty work and the co
His power to overcome obstacles
d. Future generations get the be minds the people of these things is dependent for success upon t
ple. You, the people, build locom utomobiles, harness Niagaras, ta aeroplanes, sail in giant ships.
the product and the servant of t ile of its rails, every tie on its ro tive in its roundhouses, every co present the power of the people
eight and passenger traffic.
d employees of the L. & N. rep power of the people in their cont cal forces, and conduct them in su esult in the public good.
e pride in his power, and use it w endencies are constructive, but m ers can be destructive.
ants to co-operate with the constr r citizenship for the control of for nent of the territory through wh
LLE AND NASHVILL
ROAD COMPANY

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 17

Register Chanc'y 2 Apr12

Great Mass Meeting at the Court House

Shows up Well for the Progressives of Chilton County.

Much Interest Displayed, and Harmony Was Keynote of Proceedings; About 600 Voters In Attendance.

Splendid Speech of Col. M. W. Howard Roused the Spirit of all for Vigorous Action. Judge Reynolds Spoke of Conditions in Chilton County.

As previously announced, a general mass meeting of the supporters of the Progressive party of Chilton county was held at the court house in Clanton Saturday. The meeting was in all a completely harmonious one, and revealed the unanimity with which the party supporters are pulling together.

In the absence of the Chairman J. O. Middleton, the meeting was called to order by M. D. Foshee, When Prof. W. T. Bean was elected Chairman, and W. L. Gillespie, Secretary.

As the main business was to appoint delegates to the State, Senatorial and Congressional conventions to be held at Birmingham Wednesday, this matter was taken up and disposed of as follows: The Chairman was empowered to appoint a committee of five to suggest names for the committee.

The nominating committee were, L. O. Vickers, J. M. Grant, M. D. Foshee, J. N. Scott, and J. Y. Nix. In their report to the house the following recommendations for delegates to Birmingham were made, and accepted unanimously by the body:

Delegates to the State Convention—J. N. Scott, J. S. Dennis, J. L. Jones, W. F. Deshazo, M. D. Foshee, L. H. Reynolds, L. O. Vickers, W. L. House, T. L. Robinson, D. H. Gentry, R. L. Clark, T. Rockett, W. T. Bean, H. A. Harris, W. E. Thomas.

Delegates to the Congressional Convention—J. N. Dennis, J. H. Collins, J. W. Moore, John Mims, J. P. Robinson, Grady Reynolds, W. S. Watkins, L. H. Reynolds, J. N. Scott, W. L. House, H. A. Harris, W. E. Thomas, R. J. Williams, S. E. Waldrup, T. J. Hubbard.

Delegates to the Senatorial Convention—L. H. Reynolds, L. O. Vickers, J. N. Scott, J. N. Dennis, W. T. Bean, J. W. Moore, W. C. Elder, W. M. Wyatt, J. E. Kelley, J. T. Rockett, W. F. Deshazo, W. H. Gillespie, D. H. Gentry, Grady Reynolds, J. M. Grant.

It was moved and carried that the delegates be instructed to vote as a unit on questions that might come before them.

When the Chairman announced that resolutions were in order, the following was introduced and read by M. C. Williams, and adopted by the convention:

Whereas it is the policy of the Democratic party to create debts, to waste the peoples money, and to dis-regard the wishes of the people whose tax money they are spending and wasting wherever they are in power.

Therefore be it resolved by the Progressive Party of Chilton County in mass-meeting assembled, that we are opposed to creating debts on this county by Time Warrants, or by a Bond Issue, except by vote of the people.

Be it further resolved, that we favor good roads, and believe that all the money that can be spared each year out of the County Treasurer should be spent on the various public roads of the County.

The next was a letter to the people introduced and read by W. M. Wyatt, and after some discussion, was voted on and adopted by the convention, and unanimously passed. The letter is as follows.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 1, 1914.

To the voters of Chilton County:

The people of this county are on the eve of a very important campaign. In the November election, the people of the county will decide who will be their Sheriff, Representative and Commissioners for the next four years. We ask the people to carefully examine the card of the Democratic party, in this county, state and nation, and see if you can afford to endorse the platforms they are promulgating.

New offices have been created and salaries raised by the Democrats until our taxes have become a burden. Tax gatherers have been sent out with instructions to get more taxes from the people. We declaae, if this program inaugurated by the Democrats of our state is to continue, that it will not be long till those wanting to purchase property in our state will stop and consider whether or not they can pay the taxes.

Old soldiers' pensions have been cut off on every technical point because their money has been wasted by extravagance. Graft, corruption and stealing is prominent all over the state. There is not a single act by the Democratic party for years that the people are proud of; not one that they can boast; and yet, the last administrasion was indorsed by the Demoeratic party in their last primary.

We read in Democratic papers all over Alabama where votes were stolen; where they were changed after they were placed in the ballot box. In fact all forms of corruption were practiced in that primary, and yet the party expects you to indorse all this by electing their nominees. We ask the Democratic party what they stand for, and what their platform in Alabama is. Has it come to the place that the leaders can depend on you voting their ticket from prejudice? If there is any platform pledge or promise from the Democratic party in Alabama, we have failed to see it. Do the people know where they stand on any question? Have they promised to reduce the taxes or to raise them? Have they promised any reform? If the people vote for and elect their officers without any promise or pledge, won't they have the right to do as they please? Will it not be reasonable for us to expect the graft, corruption and stealing to continue? Can't we look for our taxes to still be raised?

We, the Progressives of Chilton county, in mass meeting here assembled, do hereby declare that we are opposed to this extravagance and waste of the peoples mneoy. We condemn the wao in which our state taxes have been used and wasted. We appeal to the people of Alabama to stop, look listen before they cast their ballot for the Democratic party this fall.

We appeal to our county officers not to place our county in debt, unless it is for something that we cannot do without. We look around us and find county after county that has gone in debt, their credit no good and paying high prices for what they get. We ask you to investigate the conditions in Shelby county. It is our information that the Democratic Board of Revenue of that county is paying 31 1-4 cents per yard for dirt to be moved on the same highway that is going through our county, where we are paying only 20 cents per pard. Ours is on cash basis and theirs is on time warrants. Just think of the difference.

We appeal to our county commissioners not to let the Clanton Press, by its sweet and nice complements, lead you into the trap, nor let the Judge of Probate lead you into issuing interest-bearing time warrants, contrary to the organic law of our state. The constitution of Alabama provides that before any bonded debt can be put on the people, the question must be submitted to them for their vote.

We ask the voters of our county, regardless of their political affiliations, if all our county officers were Democrats, what rights would the common people have? We ask you if there is not more dissatisfaction, worry and turmoil in our county today than ever before? Is it not a fact that the people are more uneasy about their rights than they have ever been?

We appeal to all qualified voters of our county to consider well before they cast their vote this fall. We believe that we have nominated a good, clean ticket—one that will listen to the people if elected. We opened the doors of our primary so all white men; the Democrats said to all Progressives and Republicans that they did want them in their primary; but now they have their nominees who are seeking your votes.

Voters, We ask you to harken to the call of right. Listen to the voice that will lead you into that which is most needed just now—a righteous and popular government. And it is the Progressive party that is calling for you, and offering you this.

Short speeches were made by some of those present in the business meeting. Judge Reynolds made a strong answer to some of the arguments that have been put forth by the Democrats regarding matters of our county government.

After all business was concluded, Judge Reynolds introduced Hon. M. W. Howard of Birmingham to address the meeting on whater lines he might choose. Mr. Howard came forward with one of the most powerful speeches ever heard in the defense of the Progressive platform, and its relation to the peoples rights. He covered the subject completely from a national standpoint down to our county affairs. No one can tell the strength of the impressions his speech made. It met with the most hearty approval of all who were so fortunate as to hear him.

Mr. Wallace C. Edler introduced the following resolution at the close of the address, which was voted heartily by the convention: Resolved, that we thank Colonel Howard most cordially for the splendid address he made in behalf of the Progressive cause.

A motion introduced by Judge Reynolds, to the effect that the mass meeting instruct its delegates to Birmingham to vote for Col. M. W. Howard as the Progressive cadidate for Governor, met with a hearty approval and indorsement of the members of the Convention.

After Mr. Howard's speech was concluded, the meeting adjourned. The pleasure of everyone at the enthusiasm which was displayed was indeed encouraging. Our people as attested by their interest in this meeting, are alive to their tasks, and are ready to fight for the cause of the party. Men have been shown the necessity for their action of late, and they are ready and anxious for the chance to show where they stand.

New Committee Is Organized

The new executive committee of the Progressive party which was elected in the primary last April, met Saturday immediately previous to the mass meeting for the purpose of organizing for the coming campaign, and electing the officers of the committee for the coming year.

Mr. W. H. Gillespie of Beat 10 was chosen as chairman, and M. D. Foshee was chosen as Secretary. The new officers take the place of J. O. Middleton and J. P. NanDerveer, Jr., respectfully, whose terms expired.

No other important business was done. General preparations were made for taking charge of the affairs of the party, and the management of the coming campaign.

Mass Meeting of Thorsby Citizens

Thorsby, Ala. August 1, 1914.

Editor Union-Banner:—I enclose report of Thorsby mass meeting which I wish you would print in next week's paper. This report was made out by me last week and I handed it over to Mr. Parnell who acted as Secretary and told him he could copy it for The Clanton Press if he wished, but that the original was for the Union-Banner. He sent his account to the Press, but did not send mine to the Union-Banner. I think it should be printed especially the "platform" as many of our state, county, and municipal officers act "after they get into office" as if they were the whole thing and that the people were not "in it" many men when they run for office can not say too much for the "dear peepul" but after they get the office their actions can only be accounted for by the phrase. "The people be d—d."

Wallace C. Edler.

Persuant to a call from the Mayor and Council of the Town, a mass meeting was held in the Public School house at Thorsby, on Friday, July 24, at 8 p. m.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Bice and asked to elect a chairman and secretary. Wallace C. Edler was elected chairman and W. M. Parnell Secretary.

Mayor Bice then addressed the meeting reciting his past service as mayor, and asked a re-election to the office. After discussion, a motion was made and carried that the chairman appoint a committee of five to prepare a platform for the nominees to stand on; the committee consisted of Messrs Norton, Soberg, Frazen, J. R. Parnell and Carl C. Peterson. It submited the following report:

"We, the qualified voters of Thorsby, Ala., in mass meeting assembled, do hereby declare the following basis on which we nominate candidates for office of Mayor and Council for the term 1914-16, and require that all officers nominated by this meeting do accept the following, if they accept the nomination:

1st. We deem that the maintenance of good public schools and the protection of the health of the community are the chief duties of our municipality, and the first object for which the money of the town shall be expended.

2nd. The streets of the town should be strictly kept in good condition.

3rd. We declare that it shall be the duty of the Town Clerk to make an itamized report of all monies received and expended, the source from which received, and the object for which expended, during the week following the first meeting of the Council in each alternate month—said report to be posted at the Post Office and some other public place.

On motion of Mr. Bice, and amended by Mr. Butler, a fourth clause was added, viz: We also demand that the prohibition laws be strictly enforced. The report as amended was adopted.

Nominations for mayor were, Sam W. Collins and M. C. Crumton; the chairman appointed Messrs. Butler and C. A. Peterson as tellers. The vote was, Collins 40; Crumpton, 21; Sam W. Collins was declared the nominee.

The following councilmen were nominated by a majority vote, viz: B. T. Franklin, Carl C. Peterson, Felix Eiland, W. M. Parnell, and E. F. Mead.

The nominees for School Board were W. L. Leavy, M. C. Crumpton, J. A. Carlson, J. W. Littleton and W. A. J. McClain.

The meeting then adjourned.

Wallace C. Edler, Chairman.

Free Springs

The people at this place have about all their crops laid by. The corn is going to be somewhat short this time on account ot the dry spring and summer; but cotton is looking well and will prabably turn out a full crop. Gardening has almost proven an absolute failure with most people.

Prof. Oden and sister are running a singing school at this place and are having a good attendance.

Mumps, which has been raging in this community has about died down; and the health all over the community is good at present.

The trade of selling beef is taking the day in this part of the county. Peddlers are almost as numerous as candidates before an election.

The protracted meeting will begin here the last of this week; and a grand, old time revival is predicted.

Grandma.

Report of the County Nurse

Visits to patients, 49.
Visits to parents, 12.
Lectures on Hygiene: Union Grove, 1; Lock 12, 3; Flint Hill, 2; Irving, 1; Free Springs, 1; Fairview, 1; Spring Creek, (Shelby Co.) 1: Total, 10.

Madison Invaded By Army Worm

Huntsville, August 3—Reports from several parts of Madison county today say that the army worm has arrived and is invading the cotton fields by the millions. The damp weather of the last few days has been very favorable to the propigation of these pests. Whether or not the worm can do any great damage this late in the season is the subject of debate among the farmers. Many claim that the worm can do small damage even if it spreads over all the fields.

Jacksons Chapel

There will be Sunday School here at 2:00 p.m. and singing following, next Sunday. Every one is invited to come out for Sunday School and bring your books for singing.

J. Bice.

SHERIFF M'ADORY SCORED IN REPORT

EXECUTIONS AMOUNTING TO SEVERAL THOUSAND DOLLARS ARE NOT SATISFIED.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Outstanding executions amounting to several thousand dollars have not been satisfied by Sheriff W. K. McAdory of Jefferson County, and he is criticised for not having these papers satisfied in a report filed with Governor O'Neal by W. R. Foster, Examiner of Public Accounts. Sheriff McAdory failed to satisfy executions amounting to $811 for the Supreme Court and to $269 for the State Court of Appeals. The amount due the Court of Appeals has been paid by the sheriff.

"It seems to me that many of the sureties on these executions should be made to settle them," declares the Examiner.

Many of the papers have been in the hands of the sheriff for almost one year without being satisfied. The sheriff told the examiner that some were uncollectable but that many were collectable and that he would make every effort to obtain the money on them.

"The investigation of feed bills paid him to December 31, 1913, show quite a number of errors both pro and con as to monthly payments. The sheriff owing the state 252 days, the state being due the sheriff 299 days, making an error of 47 days in the sheriff's favor, which as 30 cents a day, amounts to $14.10 due him by the state.

The number of prisoners handled in and out of this jail monthly is very great and you can readily see that some errors must of necessity occur both for and against the state. I wish to state that the warden has been very careful in the accounts of these feed bills as to his mittimuses, bonds and releases."

Etowah Convict Camp Criticised.

Etowah County's convict camp is in wretched condition and immediate improvement is needed, according to a report filed with Governor O'Neal by Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector. The county officials assured Dr. Oates that his recommendations will be carried out.

Dr. Oates criticises severely the sanitary conditions, the sleeping quarters, the kitchen and the methods used in cooking. He declares that the bedding upon which the convicts sleep has not been washed for more than a year and that there is not sufficient ventilation provided.

Four white boys between the ages of 18 and 19 were found in the camp by Dr. Oates and he recommended that the Governor parole these lads. They were convicted on a charge of riding trains and sentenced to thirty days each.

While in Etowah Dr. Oates inspected the county jail, the county almshouse and the Gadsden city jail. He praises the condition of the county jail and almshouse, but declares that the city jail needs improvement. This improvement will be made later, according to assurances received by Dr. Oates.

Want Negroes to Attend Institutes.

W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education, has written to all county superintendents, urging them to insist upon all negro teachers attending the teachers institutes. It has been reported to Mr. Feagin that many of the negro teachers are failing to report at the institutes. Mr. Feagin pointed out to the county superintendents that the penalty for non-attendance is the cancellation of the teachers licenses. He said all licenses of teachers who fail to attend institutes will be cancelled.

Macon County Books O. K.

Accounts of seven officials of Macon county are correctly and accurately kept, according to W. F. Wilkinson, examiner of public accounts, who has submitted a report of his examination to Governor O'Neal. Those whose books were examined were Judge Abercrombie, W. A. Cloud, clerk of circuit court; W. S. Daniels, sheriff; Walter Breedlove, tax collector; E. M. Hendon, tax assessor; G. S. Rodgers, former superintendent of education, and W. G. Swanson, treasurer of school funds.

Department Wants Information.

Further and more detailed information concerning the effects of pellagra in Alabama is being sought by the department of health, and inquiries to various county health officers also are being sent out by Dr. W. W. Dinsmore, director of the state hookworm commission. The facts that are obtained are to be published in the bulletins of the health department. Each county health officer will receive a list of the conditions in his county. The officers have been asked to return the answers as soon as possible.

County Conventions to Continue.

The series of County Sunday School Conventions, now under way in the state, will continue through August and September, according to the schedule of meetings announced by State Secretary, Leon C. Palmer.

At least one of the state field workers will co-operate with the local workers at every convention. In addition to the county sessions already held, the following have been arranged for the next several weeks:

Coosa County, August 6-7; St. Clair County, August 8-9; Lowndes County, August 9-10; Jackson County, August 11-12; Calhoun County, August 11-12; Morgan County, August 13-14; Talladega County, August 13-14; Franklin County, August 15-16; Cleburne County, August 15-16; Sumter County, August 18-19; Marion County, August 18-19; Greene County, August 18-19; Tuscaloosa County, August 20-21; Fayette County, August 25-26; Shelby County, August 25-26; Etowah County, August 27-28; Lee County, August 27-28; Marengo County, August 29-30; Cherokee County, August 29-30; Randolph County, September 3-4; Marshall County, September 5-6; Clay County, September 5-6; Autauga County, September 8-9; Baldwin County, September 8-9; Bibb County, September 10-11; Blount County, September 12-13; Choctaw County, September 12-13; DeKalb County, September 12-13; Limestone County, September 15-16; Colbert County, September 17-18; Washington County, September 19-20 Monroe County, September 19-20; Bullock County, September 22-23; Crenshaw County, September 24-25; Conecuh County, September 26-27.

Chambers Officials Owe State.

Officials of Chambers owe their county a total of $71,136, according to a report filed with Governor O'Neal by J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts, who has just finished an examination of the accounts of the Chambers officials. The bulk of the discrepancies of the Chambers officials resulted because the treasurer honored warrants which were illegally issued by the county commissioners, according to Examiner Gorman.

"The county treasurer is custodian of county monies, and is liable for all illegal payments," said Examiner Gorman. "The payment of illegal claims is a mis-appropriation of county money. The treasurer must not only know that claims have been legally allowed by the commissioners court but that the court had authority to allow them."

Amounts due the county are: By J. J. Robinson, probate judge, $497; Sheriff John W. Lane, $814; W. R. Chatfield, hard labor agent, $264; and Treasurer T. J. Burton, $69,559.

Accounts of the officials with the state were in good condition and only a few minor irregularities were discovered by the examiner. Nearly all these small discrepancies were immediately paid as soon as the attention of the officials were called to the matter.

In regard to the county accounts Mr. Gorman made a report to Judge S. L. Brewer of Tuskegee in which he points out the reasons for discrepancies. He quotes from opinions of the attorney general to uphold his contentions.

In reference to the commissioners' court, Examiner Gorman declared that it did not comply with the law in allowing claims.

Governor Issues Proclamation.

Proper representation for Alabama at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco next year is urged by Governor O'Neal in a proclamation issued. He urges every patriotic citizen of the state to aid in the efforts that are being made to raise funds for the construction of a building and the maintenance of an exhibit. He approves the plans for raising money suggested by the special commission appointed for this purpose.

"I fully concur with the commission in the statement that with the completion of the Panama canal, there will be no limit to the possibilities of business, agricultural, industrial and professional progress in Alabama," said the governor. "On account of our contiguity to the Panama canal, with a magnificent harbor at the mouth of two of the greatest rivers in the world the port of Mobile will be the gateway to an immense commerce."

Governor O'Neal declares that the state cannot afford to miss this opportunity to make an adequate showing and exhibit of her resources.

Rehearing Sought.

At the next session of the supreme court, an application for a rehearing will be filed by the state in the case of Cyrus B. rown, against the Pittsburg Life and Trust company, which was decided adversely to the state at the last session of the court. In this case the state contends that it can collect a license tax on premiums that are remitted directly to the home offices of foreign insurance companies. In the lower court the case was won by the state, but in the higher court the verdict was reversed.

Asked to Join Roads Association.

Governor O'Neal has been invited to become one of the incorporators of the Alabama Good Roads association, the invitation being extended by J. Asa Rountree of Birmingham, secretary of that organization. Mr. Rountree in a letter to the governor, declares that the scope of the Alabama Good Roads association is to be broadened and that for this purpose the association will be incorporated under the civil and fraternal laws of the state at an early date.

EXPLANATION OF EUROPEAN CRISIS IS HARD TO FIND

Diplomats and Observers Unable to Understand the Attitude of Austria.

RECENTLY STRONG FOR PEACE

Count Berchtold, Only a Few Weeks Ago, Bitterly Criticized the War Party, and His Change of Front Has Not as Yet Been Explained.

"Confusion worse confounded" is the one phrase that aptly characterizes the war situation in Europe. The leading newspapers and the most experienced observers are unable to agree on any explanation of the crisis. And the reason is not far to seek.

Only a few weeks ago the foreign minister of Austria, Count Berchtold, was earnestly defending the pacific and moderate policy he had been pursuing toward the Balkans and Russia.

Berchtold for Peace.

In a speech to the delegates at Budapest he vigorously answered criticisms of spokesmen of the war party, particularly of a delegate who was supposed to be expressing the sentiments of the then heir presumptive, the late Archduke Franz Ferdinand. Count Berchtold spoke of the aged emperor's sincere and resolute devotion to peace; he gave arguments of his own, moreover, in support of a policy of patience and peace.

Feared Loss of Prestige.

The frankness and directness of that speech impressed everybody except those who feared that Austria might be accused of timidity and weakness, might be misunderstood and in consequence might lose political and military prestige.

There were some among these who thought, moreover, that Russia, whose recuperative power was wonderful—whatever might be said of its efficiency and actual strength when pitted against a more civilized and free power—was getting too mighty and too confident, and was enjoying too much opportunity for rehabilitation and consolidation of its financial and military-naval resources.

These vaguely favored a bold and aggressive policy even at the risk of war, which had better come sooner than later, they held.

Sweden Takes Up Cry.

But Count Berchtold's view prevailed for the moment and excellent observers concluded that Austria, at any rate, was not going to add to the troubles, complications, and dangers of Europe by tempting fortune.

At that very moment Sweden was excitedly discussing "the Russian peril" and demanding new measures of defense, while a section of the German press was pointing to the "bear that walks like a man" as the foe to reckon with in the near future.

Yet the peace of Europe is broken not by Russia, not by a Balkan power desirous of revising the settlement imposed by Roumania and the concert of Europe at the Bucharest conference, but by Austria, and seemingly under Count Berchtold's direction.

What has happened in the short interval? If peace was necessary and desirable to Austria-Hungary a few weeks ago, why is war inevitable today?

To understand the situation it is essential to distinguish between glittering generalities, fanciful aspirations, literature, and rhetoric, on the one hand, and hard, grim, concrete facts on the other. It is essential to know what the conflict is not. It is not a war between Teuton and Slav. It is not a war between the Pan-German world party and the Pan-Slav world party. It is not war for the preservation of Hapsburg monarchy.

Move Is Anti-Austrian.

The Pan-German movement is anti-Austrian and cannot fail to be so. The success of that movement would destroy Austria as a political entity. The Pan-German extremists have had to be rebuked and repudiated by responsible German statesmen. As allies of Austria they could not countenance a movement which assumed and labored for the disruption and disappearance of Austria.

The Pan-Slav movement in Russia is manifestly anti-Austrian, as well as anti-German. It dreams of Slav rule "from the Adriatic sea to the Pacific ocean." It dreams of Slav union or confederation under the gentle and benevolent sovereignty of Russia.

Czar's Interest in Servia.

Pan-Slavism is, however, in a limited sense, unmistakably in evidence in the czar's profound interest in Servia and Montenegro. The czar's ministers have often blundered in the Balkans and have at times caused estrangement, gravitation toward Germany, bitter feeling against Russia. But the blunders were personal blunders of bungling politicians. Russia has always posed and often acted as the patron, friend, and protector of the Slavs everywhere, and especially of the Balkan Slavs. It has had and still has its eye on its "estate in reversion," Constantinople, and it cannot hope to plant its flag there without the consent and support of the Balkan Slavs. It is good "Pan-Slavism" to support Servia.

But in facing Austria, Russia confronts not a German power, but a power that is itself largely Slav. Slav will thus be fighting Slav and the Germans, whatever their colors, will be fighting for Slavs and with other Slavs and postponing the realization of the Pan-German ambitions and dreams.

Jealousy a Great Factor.

Here, then, is a strange paradox, but not the only paradox in a situation full of anomalies—anomalies inseparable from the very nature and complexion of the Austro-Hungarian empire, an empire, to repeat, that has been held together quite as much by the jealousies and differences of outsiders as by the dynastic and personal influence of the Hapsburgs.

If Austria cannot and does not represent German interests and German culture in this fight, what is it fighting for? Pan-Servian agitation did not endanger its existence, while the war does. Its own Slav elements at no time displayed an inclination to exchange its rule for that of the czar, although they were not averse to using Pan-Slav slogans in order to secure better representation and larger recognition.

Danger to Dual Monarchy.

The opinion of the soundest students of politics has long been that if Austria-Hungary was to be preserved, only a policy of peace, liberalism, greater autonomy, and home rule, conciliation of the various races and elements by reform measures, political and social, contained the promise of such preservation.

The war actually endangers the existence of the dual monarchy, for aside from the chances of defeat and disaster, there is the fact that the Slav subjects of the emperor cannot sympathize with it. The separatist and particularist tendencies feared by the court and government can only be deepened and strengthened by the conflict.

The army and navy may be loyal and obedient, as many assert. The army and navy may be "Austrian," if the nation is not. But popular sentiment is a potent factor in war and popular sentiment among the Austrian and Hungarian Slavs does ont favor fratricidal strife.

No wonder the intelligent world is puzzled and utterly at a loss to explain Austria's course.

TO LEAD SERVIAN ARMY

Crown Prince Alexander of Servia, who made a gallant record during the Balkan war, will lead his battle-scarred veterans against the Austrians.

GREAT WARS' COST IN LIVES AND MONEY

Wars—	Duration in Days.	Loss of life.	Cost in money.
England-France, 1793-1815	8,165	1,000,000	$[illegible]
Crimean war, 1854-56	724	[illegible]	[illegible]
United States Civil war, 1861-65	1,458	558,000	[illegible]
Franco-German, 1870-71	900	290,000	[illegible]
Russo-Turkish, 1877-78	234	[illegible]	[illegible]
United States-Spanish war, 1898	161	10,000	[illegible]
Boer war, 1899-1902	1,095	[illegible]	[illegible]
Russo-Japanese war, 1904-5	216	[illegible]	[illegible]
Balkan war, 1912-13	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

GREAT BRITAIN MOBLIZES FORCES MAY BE DRAWN INTO CONFLICT

Sir Edward Grey Reviewed the Situation, His Words Were Generally Taken to Mean that Great Britain is Committed to War—Few Reports of Military Movements.

London.—John Burns, president of the local government board, resigned from the cabinet, owing to disagreement over the war policy of the British government, and a late report says Viscount Morley, lord president of the council, was considering resigning.

Sir Edward Grey, in the commons, reviewed the situation, and although he used qualifying phrases, his words were taken generally to mean that England is committed to war.

The German ambassador at Paris was ordered by the Emperor to demand his passports, which lines up France with Russia, Servia and Montenegro against Germany and Austria.

The mobilization of most of the countries of Europe had been virtually completed. Holland has been invaded at Limburg by German troops, according to reports, and the Dutch people are said to b flooding the country to prevent the passage of soldiers.

Germany has issued a white book justifying her action with respect to Russia, at the same time German diplomats at London are using their utmost efforts to win Great Britain to a position of neutrality.

Few reports of actual military movements are being received, owing to the censorship.

Events Leading to War Outlined In Statement by Czar Nicholas

St. Petersburg.—Emperor Nicholas issued a manifesto outlining the events leading up to the declaration of war by Germany, and saying that "Russians will rise like one man and repulse the insolent attack of the enemy.

The text follows:

"By the grace of God, we, Nicholas II, Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, King of Poland and Grand Duke of Finland, etc., to all our faithful subjects make known that Russia, related by faith and blood to the Slav People, has never regarded their faith with indifference.

"But the fraternal sentiments of the Russian people for the Slavs have been awakened with perfect unanimity and extraordinary force in these last few days, when Austro-Hungary knowingly addressed to Servia claims inacceptable for an independent state.

"Having paid no attention to the pacific and conciliatory reply of the Servian government and having rejected the benevolent intervention of Russia, Austria-Hungary made haste to proceed to an armed attack and began to bombard Belgrade, an open place.

"Forced by the situation thus created to take necessary measures of precaution, we ordered the army and navy put on a war footing, at the same time using every endeavor to obtain a peaceful solution. Pourparlers were begun amid friendly relations with Germany and her ally Austria, for the blood and the property of our subjects were dear to us.

"Contrary to our hopes in good neighborly relations of long date, and disregarding our assurances that the mobilization measures taken were in pursuance of no object hostile to Germany demanded their immediate cessation. Being rebuffed in this demand, Germany suddenly declared war on Russia.

"Today it is not only the protection of a country related to us and unjustly attacked, that must be accorded, but we must safeguard the honor, the dignity and the integrity of Russia and her position among the great powers.

"We believe unshakably that all our faithful subjects will rise with unanimity and devotion for the defence of Russian soil, that internal discord will be forgotten in the threatening hour; that the unity of the Emperor with his people will become still more close, and that Russia, rising like one man, will repulse the insolent attack of the enemy.

"With a profound faith in the justice of our work and with a firm hope in omnipotent providence in prayer, we call God's blessing on Holy Russia, and her valiant army.

"NICHOLAS."

Statement Issued by Germany Charges France as Aggressor

Berlin.—A further official communication regarding French acts of hostility against Germany was published here. It said:

"The German troops hitherto have obeyed orders not to cross the French frontier. French, on the contrary, have made several attacks on the frontier posts without any declaration of war having been made.

"The French have crossed the border at several places in spite of the fact that the French government a few days ago informed us that it would not infringe on the unoccupied zone of six miles from the frontier, and companies of French troops have been in the occupation of a number of German villages.

"French army aeronauts have been flying over Baden and Bavaria and by throwing bombs have violated Belgian neutrality by flying over Belgian territory into the Province of the Rhine in an effort to destroy railways.

"In this way France has opened the attack upon us and has established a state of war which has compelled the German Empire to take measures for the security of its territory."

Germans Invade France and are Reported to Have Been Repulsed

London.—German forces began the invasion of France without, so far as is known a declaration of war having been made. Two German detachments entered French territory, moving in the direction of Paris.

One German force crossed the French frontier near the village of Cirey, between Nancy and Strassburg, and another German detachment, probably the twenty-ninth infantry, invaded the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg, neutral territory between Belgium and Germany, and continued the march on the French fortified town of Longwy.

The German force which came into France near Cirey, which is 40 miles from Nancy, is reported to have been repulsed with heavy losses.

U. S. Adds More than a Billion Dollars to Circulating Medium

Washington.—More than a billion dollars in currency will be added to the circulating medium in the United States by the action of Congress to meet the situation resulting from the European crisis. The new money, backed by prime assets of banks, may be issued under a modification of the bank law, passed in both House and Senate, then compromised in conference and approved by the administration for final action in both houses.

All national banks and all state banks and trust companies, members of the new federal reserve system, and those that have agreed to join, may issue notes under the Aldrich-Vreeland section of the bank law, up to 125 per cent of their combined capital and surplus.

There is approximately $1,760,000,000 such capital and surplus on which issue of notes may be based. Of this about $800,000,000 invested in government bonds is not available. Approximately $900,000,000 plus 25 per cent therefore is ready for a basis of issue. Bankers told administration leaders the issue available should meet more than care for the situation.

RUSSIAN FORCES CROSS THE GERMAN FRONTIER

Berlin.—Russia has begun the invasion of German Territory, Russian forces having crossed the German frontier at Schwinden, southeast of Bialla, while last night a Russian patrol entered Germany near Pickenreid, in Posen.

French Aviator Dropping Bombs.

A French aviator has been dropping bombs from an aeroplane in the neighborhood of Nuremberg, Bavaria, according to an announcement made [illegible] the German authorities [illegible] the French flag.

[illegible] state that this action was a violation against the rights of man, as there has been no declaration of war.

Garros Rams German in Air.

London.—The Standard publishes a report that a French aviator, Roland Garros, rammed and destroyed a German airship in midair, but failed to give the source of its story.

Firing in North Sea.

London.—The News of the World says it has received a wireless that heavy firing is proceeding in the North Sea.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Pike County farmers had a great meeting at Troy.

Chelsea neighborhood reports the best crop in its history.

Several plans to redistrict the state have been made.

Mobile is catching rats to shut out the bubonic plague.

An ice man has been fined $25 for short weight in Montgomery.

The new governor will be the first to get the $9500 a year and a house.

One hundred houses have been built at York and all are occupied.

Coosa republicans did not nominate a candidate for the legislature.

The Bell family had a reunion in Pike county with 52 relatives present.

Mobile's first bale of 1914 cotton was sold at auction for 15 cents a pound.

Work on the road from Eclectic in Elmore County to Birmingham is progressing.

Cherokee County Masonic Conference will meet at Spring Garden, August 18.

Seventy-five or more teachers attended the teachers' institute held in Luscumbia.

A lot of tainted groceries and canned goods have been seized by the government at Huntsville.

Jefferson as a congressional district is to have more population than any district yet suggested.

The teachers institute of Franklin county held at Russellville was well attended, 86 teachers enrolled.

The road from Athens to Decatur has been delayed because the people who were to have put up certain money did not put up.

Representative Mulkey, of Alabama, has been appointed chairman of the sub-committee of the District of Columbia committee on gas and electricity.

Because of the big prospects as to crops this year, and for other reasons, the expectations are that the attendance at the convention of the Farmers' Union of Alabama will be the greatest in the history of the organization. Preparations are being made here to give the farmers a royal reception and entertainment in Birmingham August 19, 20 and 21.

Tobacco growing is proving to be successful in some of the counties in north Alabama. Certain railroads are now showing, through their industrial departments, practical interest in tobacco as a commercial crop in Alabama.

Alabama is just entering upon the greatest era of good road construction known in her history, according to J. T. Gorman, Examiner of Public Accounts, who has prepared a statement showing the amount of work done on the roads of Alabama and treating in general with the good road movement in the United States. During the year the total aid given to road building by the state amounted to 36,000, according to Mr. Gorman. He declares that it is the earnest hope that the next legislature will increase the state appropriation for the construction of good roads.

Cotton picking time is getting close enough to figure by days. The bolls are beginning to burst and the fields are slowly turning white. In ten more days the black faces of the field hands and the white cotton piled high in the wagons will be a common sight in the southern counties. Even with picking time so close at hand, the size of the crop is a matter of uncertainty. Most of the counties are crying for rain and most of the farmers say that their cotton is parching and shedding. Many say that the last week has brought deterioration to the crop. The hot sun has been merciless, the rain has kept away from the cotton field and many of the counties that predicted a bumper crop earlier in the season have lost their optimism. The boll weevil, marching steadily eastward, has wrought havoc in some of the counties, and from these reports a good crop is doubtful. Yet with the batch of troubles and pessimistic reports there come many reports that sound a note of hope, and a few that claim the crop of their county to be a bumper.

Mobile claims 30 deserted from the city.

Western farmers are buying land in Dallas county.

First bale" sold in Eufaula fetched 24 1-4 cents per pound.

All government work in Mobile river and Mobile bay channel has been stopped as a result of the government appropriation having given out. Work in the Gulfport, Miss., harbor and on the Warrior river has been stopped and its continuance depends entirely on the passage of the rivers and harbors bill.

The "first bale" brought to Selma sold for 26 1-8 cents per pound.

J. D. Searcy, treasurer of Cullman county, and charged with embezzlement of $25,000 of county funds, was arrested in Rock Island, Ill., according to a wire to the George Bodeker National Detective Agency in Birmingham. Searcy will not fight extradition. The allegation is that in June Searcy sold bonds of Cullman county to Otto Bros. & Co., and then pocketed the proceeds realized. He purchased an automobile from a Birmingham firm and was touring.

BLIZES FORCES BAWN INTO CONFLIC

the Situation, His Words We that Great Britain is Com- orts of Military Movements.

of tenegro against Germany and Austri
d The mobilization of most of th
e. countries of Europe had been v tually completed. Holland has bee t invaded at Limburg by Germa
t troops, according to reports, and th
n Dutch people are said to b floodin e- the country to prevent the passage soldiers.

s. Germany has issued a white boo
h justifying her action with respect s Russia, at the same time Germa t diplomats at London are using the utmost efforts to win Great Brita
s to a position of neutrality.

e- Few reports of actual militar p movements are being received, o n- ing to the censorship.

to War Outlined by Czar Nichola

as obtain a peaceful solution. Pourpa he lers were begun amid friendly rel on tions with Germany and her all at Austria, for the blood and the pro nd erty of our subjects were dear to he "Contrary to our hopes in goo neighborly relations of long date, a disregarding our assurances that as mobilization measures taken were he pursuance of no object hostile to h nd Germany demanded their immedia h- cessation. Being rebuffed in this a, mand, Germany suddenly declar
he war on Russia.

ir "Today it is not only the prote tion of a country related to us and of justly attacked, that must be ve corded, but we must safeguard th m- honor, the dignity and the integri se of Russia and her position amo ry the great powers.

ms "We believe unshakably that nt our faithful subjects will rise w unanimity and devotion for the d
he fence of Russian soil, that interne he discord will be forgotten in th re- threatening hour; that the unity of the Emperor with his people will b ste come still more close, and that Ru be- sia, rising like one man, will repul en the insolent attack of the enemy.

"With a profound faith in the re- tice of our work and with a humb of hope in omnipotent providence nd prayer, we call God's blessing he Holy Russia, and her valiant troop to "NICHOLAS."

d by Germany rance as Aggresso

un- and companies of French troops ha os- been in the occupation of a numb ned of German villages.

"French army aeronauts have bo ave- flying over Baden and Bavaria a nch by throwing bombs have violat ry, Belgian neutrality by flying over B
the gian territory into the Province ra- the Rhine in an effort to destroy railways.

or- "In this way France has ope
the the attack upon us and has establi a ed a state of war which has co
it pelled the German Empire to ta ied measures for the security of its er, ritory."

e France and are lave Been Repulse the probably the twenty-ninth infant as invaded the Grand Duchy of Lux ing burg, neutral territory between B nts gium and Germany, and continued in march on the French fortified to of Longwy.

he The German force which came in of France near Cirey, which is 40 mi rg, from Nancy, is reported to have be ent, repulsed with heavy losses.

e than a Billion Circulating Mediu ion and those that have agreed to jo to may issue notes under the Aldri ted Vreeland section of the bank law, to to 125 per cent of their combin

the capital and surplus.

ney, There is approximately $1,760,0 nay such capital and surplus on which the sue of notes may be based. Of th and about $800,000,000 invested in gove fer- ment bonds is not available. Appro tra- imately $900,000,000 plus 25 per c ses. therefore is ready for a basis of ate sue. Bankers told administration bers ers the issue available should em. than care for the situation.

OSS THE GERMAN FRONTIER

in- state that this action was a c sian against the rights of man, as th man has been no declaration of wa of Garros Rams German in Air pa- London.—The Standard publish reid, report that a French aviator, R Garros, rammed and destroyed a G ing man airship in midair, but fa ish- give the source of its story.
Firing in North Sea.
ac- London—The News of the ade says it has received a ish heavy firing is go
ities North Sea.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

ke County farmers had a great ing at Troy.

Chelsea neighborhood reports the d crop in its history.

Several plans to redistrict the state n been made.

Mobile is catching rats to shut out bubonic plague.

An ice man has been fined $25 for er weight in Montgomery.

The new governor will be the first et the $9500 a year and a house.

One hundred houses have been lt at York and all are occupied.

Coosa republicans did not nomi- e a candidate for the legislature.

The Bell family had a reunion in e county with 52 relatives present.

Mobile's first bale of 1914 cotton s sold at auction for 15 cents a und.

Work on the road from Eclectic in ore County to Birmingham is pro- ssing.

Cherokee County Masonic Confer- e will meet at Spring Garden, Au- st 18.

Seventy-five or more teachers at- ded the teachers' institute held in lumbia.

A lot of tainted groceries and can- d goods have been seized by the vernment at Huntsville.

Jefferson as a congressional dis- ct is to have more population than y district yet suggested.

The teachers institute of Franklin unty held at Russellville was well tended. 86 teachers enrolled.

The road from Athens to Decatur been delayed because the people were to have put up certain mon- did not put up.

Representative Mulkey, of Ala- ma, has been appointed chairman the sub-committee of the District Columbia committee on gas and ectricity.

Because of the big prospects as to crops this year, and for other rea- the expectations are that the tendance at the convention of the ers' Union of Alabama will be greatest in the history of the or- nization. Preparations are being here to give the farmers a royal ception and entertainment in Bir- ngham August 19, 20 and 21.

Tobacco growing is proving to be ccessful in some of the counties in uth Alabama. Certain railroads e now showing, through their in- strial departments, practical inter- st in tobacco as a commercial crop Alabama.

Alabama is just entering upon the eatest era of good road construction own in her history, according to . Gorman, Examiner of Public Ac- nts, who has prepared a statement wing the amount of work done on roads of Alabama and treating general with the good road move- nt in the United States. During t year the total aid given to road ding by the state amounted to 0,000, according to Mr. Gorman. He lares that it is the earnest hope the next legislature will increase state appropriation for the con- ction of good roads.

Cotton picking time is getting close ough to figure by days. The bolls beginning to burst and the fields slowly turning white. In ten more s the black faces of the field hands the white cotton piled high in the pers will be a common sight in southern counties. Even with g time so close at hand, the size e crop is a matter of uncertain- Most of the counties are crying ain and most of the farmers say their cotton is parching and shed- g. Many say that the last week brought deterioration to the crop. hot sun has been merciless, the has kept away from the cotton and many of the counties that ected a bumper crop earlier in the son have lost their optimism. The weevil, marching steadily east- rd, has wrought havoc in some of counties, and from these reports good crop is doubtful. Yet with the batch of troubles and pessimistic ports there come many reports that and a note of hope, and a few that claim the crop of their county to a bumper.

Mobile claims 30 deserted from the ny.

Western farmers are buying land in llas county.

"First bale" sold in Eufaula ught 24 1-4 cents per pound.

All government work in Mobile river d Mobile bay channel has been pped as a result of the govern- nt appropriation having given out. rk in the Gulfport, Miss., harbor d on the Warrior river has been pped and its continuance depends ely on the passage of the rivers d harbors bill.

The "first bale" brought to Selma d for 26 1-8 cents per pound.

. D. Searcy, treasurer of Cullman nty, and charged with embezzle- nt of $25,000 of county funds, wasested in Rock Island, Ill., accord- to a wire to the George Bodeker ional Detective Agency in Birming- . Searcy will not fight extradition. allegation is that in June Searcy bonds of Cullman county to Otto rs & Co., and then pocketed the 00 realized. He purchased an au- bile from a Birmingham firm and ed touring.

MAP SHOWING RELATIVE ARMED STRENGTH OF COUNTRIES

SERVIAN CAPITAL BOMBARDED BY AUSTRIANS

General view of the city of Belgrade which was attacked and partly destroyed by the Austrian forces.

WAR SCENES AT TRIESTE, AUSTRIA'S ONLY SEAPORT

Austrian naval forces being rushed to the front in the war against Servia. The insert is Archduke Fred erick, commander-in-chief of the Austrian army.

PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRIA

Count Berchtold who, next to Emperor Francis Joseph, is the most important figure in Austrian affairs.

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL

One of Russia's fighting generals.

EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA STUDYING WAR PLANS

AUSTRIAN CAVALRY ON THE MARCH

SERVIAN ARTILLERY IN CAMP

WINCHESTER

W TRADE MARK

Light Weight Hammerless Repeating Shotguns

12, 16 AND 20 GAUGES, MODEL 1912

This is the lightest, strongest and handsomest repeating shotgun made. Although light, it has surpassing strength, because all the metal parts are made of Nickel steel, which is twice as strong as ordinary steel. It is simple to load and unload, easy to take down, and works with an ease and smoothness not found in repeaters of other makes. Look one of these guns over at your dealer's. They are

"THE MOST PERFECT REPEATERS."

A young man may fool a girl as to what wages he gets, but he can't fool her father.

For barbed wire cuts apply Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh liberally to stop the bleeding and cleanse the wound and to heal it quickly. Adv.

A married man who owns an automobile is in a position to acquire a lot of experience.

DON'T ITCH! USE RESINOL

Just put on a little of that soothing, antiseptic resinol ointment and the itching and burning stop at once. Soon all trace of eczema, prickly heat, poison-ivy, poison-oak, or other tormenting skin trouble is gone. Every druggist sells resinol ointment and resinol soap. Prescribed by doctors for 19 years.—Adv.

The Old Idea.

"What makes you so late?" asked his mother.

"The teacher kept me in because I couldn't find Moscow on the map of Europe," replied Johnnie.

Mother—And no wonder you couldn't find Moscow. It was burned down in 1812. It's an outrage to treat a child that way.

Cultured Tramp.

There came to the kitchen door of a certain household in Philadelphia a ragged hobo, who took his stand against the doorjamb and gazed longingly at food displayed on the kitchen table.

"You look strong," suggested the lady of the house. "Are you equal to the task of sawing and splitting half a cord of wood?"

"Equal to it, madam?" said the tramp, with a courtly bow. "The expression is inadequate. I am superior to it."

And he went away.

Good Angler.

Miss Rand—Why, Kate, how do you do? I haven't seen you for several years. Caught a husband yet?

Mrs. Reno—Goodness, yes. I've caught three and let two go.

Building Character.

We prepare ourselves for sudden deeds by the reiterated choice of good or evil that gradually determines character.—George Eliot.

NEW IDEA Helped Wisconsin Couple.

It doesn't pay to stick too closely to old notions of things. New ideas often lead to better health, success and happiness.

A Wis. couple examined an idea new to them and stepped up several rounds on the health ladder. The husband writes:

"Several years ago we suffered from coffee drinking, were sleepless, nervous, sallow, weak and irritable. My wife and I both loved coffee and thought it was a bracer." (Delusion.)

"Finally, after years of suffering, we read of Postum and the harmfulness of coffee, and believing that to grow we should give some attention to new ideas, we decided to test Postum.

"When we made it right we liked it and were free of ills caused by coffee. Our friends noticed the change—fresher skin, sturdier nerves, better temper, etc.

"These changes were not sudden, but increased as we continued to drink and enjoy Postum, and we lost the desire for coffee.

"Many of our friends did not like Postum at first, because they did not make it right. But when they made Postum according to directions on pkg., they liked it better than coffee and were benefited by the change."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. Made in the cup with hot water—no boiling. 25c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

VIEWS PHOTOS STUDIES PORTRAITS DEVELOPING

Films Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best
BERT C. COVELL
M. T. STRADFORD, Mgr.
3rd Ave. & 19th St. Dept. K Birmingham, Ala., Phone 1242

Mr. Hog-Raiser ATTENTION!
Why continue to lose pigs by old method of spaying when $1.00 will get you formula for brand new process guaranteed to produce desired results? Simple, harmless and easily applied. Write today.
HARRIS & VAIL, 848 Brown-Marx Building, Birmingham, Ala.

$15 Day selling Oil Lots by Sour Lake, $7.50 each, $2.50 down, $2.50 month, Warranty Deed, share in well if successful. We can never grow rich at hard labor, take this opportunity to make easy money for a trifle. Agents required to purchase one lot. Remit $2.50 today, ask for special agent's commission.
TRIANGLE OIL CO., Carter Building, HOUSTON, TEXAS

METAL ROOFING
Shingles, Spanish Tile
EVERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL
BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY
WE PAY THE FREIGHT WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES
THE M. EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO.
COVINGTON - KY.

—BIG OFFER—
Films Developed FREE
Prints from 2c to 5c each. We fill orders for fresh films promptly. Eastman agents.
GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

Eastman Kodak Agency
FILMS DEVELOPED FREE
Prints 2 cents to 5 cents each. Send for catalogue
F. W. BROMBERG, BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
JEWELRY AND KODAKS

LADIES Don't ask a man for your toilet necessities, order by mail. Send for our FREE book; you will be interested. Write MAENNER CO., 261 Wyoming, St. Louis, Mo.

Nothing New.

Apropos of certain fresh revelations of corruption in the realms of high finance, Thomas W. Lawson said at a dinner in Boston:

"Columbus found out that the world was round. But surely lots of investors before him must have found out that it was anything but square."

RUB-MY-TISM

Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

Among the curiosities of the English language is the bore, so called because he never comes to the point.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Hardly.

Traveler—Have you lived here all your life?

Native—Not yet.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood, and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

It is rather humiliating to be called a watchdog; but we had rather be a watchdog, guarding the people's interest, and ready al all times to warn them of pending danger, than one who is aspiring supposedly to dictate for the better and at heart a false ftiend, ready at any moment to fillibuster a few times and disappear all of a sudden, leaving someone else with the bag to hold.

It seems that some politicians who were greatly concerned about the Progressive mass meeting Saturday, but who were not disposed to show themselves for some unknown reason, are surprised and disapoointed at the manner of proceedings of said meeting. They must have been expecting the party leaders to go headstrong into something which they calculated would give the Democrats a clue at their opponents—and that is where they were mistaken. Perfect harmony dominated the whole afiair, And nothing was left undone, nor nothing done in a way that will be a discredit to the Progressive party in Chilton county.

Yes, you call us a watchdog of the county treasury, Mr. Press, and may we prove worthy of the trust. And we try to be watchful of other interests of our people too--not only their money; and do not forget that we are going to give warning of any danger we see. Do not try to put any of your thin woven Democratic yarns over the people of this county, pretending that they are rock-ribbed democracy and substantial logic. If you do, your watchdog will give the sound of danger to those whose interests are being jeopardized, and they will rise up and demand your justification. We just want to give you fair warning so you can save yourself from getting "up a tree" like Moses did a few weeks ago, it you are capable of exercising the proper judgment.

Last week the Clanton Press said there was not a word of truth in the statement of the Union-Banner that the county was in debt, and owed accounts on its current expenses. The best justification we could ask for in answering this accusation of the Press is the vote that was taken at the mass meeting last Saturday, and the editor of the Press was a personal witness to it. Those to whom the county was owing fees for conducting elections and enumerating school children, road work and other things, were asked to stand up and about thirty men in the room rose to their feet. The Press knew that the county owed these things. It also knows that these little items are just a small part of what the county does owe. It knows that there are debts on the county for road work, and current expenses that amount, as we said, to about fifteen thousand dollars. We say the Press knows these these things, because everybody else knows them, and consequently they are bound to know them too. If this incident is not sufficient to satisfy the people as to who is right regarding the matter of the county being in debt, we shall be glad to give further citation.

COL. HOWARD'S SPEECH

The address delivered by Col. M. W. Howard before the Progressive mass meeting last Saturday, was a powerful oration, and in point of estimation, far beyond our limited capacity of expression.

First of all, Mr. Howard is a man of broad knowledgs and ability with an exhaustless fund of information regarding the political history of our state and nation. This with his remarkable and expressive talent for public speaking made him able to draw out from the debths of his intelect, an address of the very best kind.

Throughout, it was imbued with the spirit of Progressiveism, making arguments for the principles of the party which no one can dispute.

He pictured the Progressive party as the party of the people, in rivalry with wicked Democracy, and showed the great necessity of the conflict. The hope which he expressed for the triumph of Progressiveism over its enemies was put in beautiful expression , and made the spirit of eagerness for a more popular government warm the soul of every man who heard him—every man from the gray haired veteran of the vanquished cause of the Populist party of years ago, who labored hard and dreamed intently for its success, to the young and vigorous champion of a civic reformation which is sure to come, at some time or other.

The following appeared in last week's issue of the Clanton Press: "The Union-Banner is either grossly ignorant of the financial condition of the county, or is willing to resort to any kind of scheme to deceive the people and discredit the present board of Commissioners without first ascertaining the facts. There is not a word of truth in the statement that the county has failed to pay the current expenses; nor is it true that the county owes several thousand dollars on accounts that have not been passed on by Commissioners Court."

In reply to this we want to ask the Press the following questions: Doesn't the county owe at this time six or seven thousand dollars on road work? Doesn't the county owe three thousand dollars on one of the roads machines? Doesn't the county owe over a thousand dollars to the managers and clerks of the elections that have been held this year, and to the school enumerators? Doesn't the county owe its own current expenses for the last four or five months? Will not all the above amount to about fifteen thousand dollars, and perhaps more? Is it not a fact that there is not a dollar in the general funds of the county? Do you know whether or not there are being held from the Commissioners several thousand dollars worth of claims, as there was during the campaign of two years ago, until after the November election? Now Mr. Press, we want answers to these questions. Let's not have any "beating the devil around the stump," as the saying is; let's have your answer plain and open. That will be enough to make every doubting mind satisfied.

If the Press will inform itself as to the correct answers to our questions this week, it will doubtless find itself not so well posted as they might have tried to make believe. Would the Press in the face of facts which everyone knows to be the answer of our questions, make the statement that this county does not owe anything, and has paid up its current expenses?

Dry Valley.

We are having plenty of rain at present, and a "bumper" cotton and corn crop will be made.

Miss Maud Killingworth, of Providence visited relatives here last week.

Mrs. John Garner and daughter, Ethel of Nocatee, Fla. are visiting friends here.

The revival will commence at the Baptist church Sunday. All are invited to attend.

HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Henry Russell Miller, the young Pittsburgh lawyer-novelist, who is known for his political stories which have appeared during the last few years, has distinguished himself again through the production of another story, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt" —a story of social and industrial Pittsburgh—which critics say is far better than either "The Man Higher Up" or "His Rise to Power," his two earlier political stories. We have secured this story as our next serial, and the first installment will appear in an early issue.

For a number of years Mr. Miller has exhibited a great interest in the steel industry. He has made the acquaintance of many of the big men as well as the laborers in the mill towns, and from them has learned a great deal about the game.

"The Ambition of Mark Truitt" is a story that is not only tremendously interesting, but one that will cause readers to stop and think.

FOR SALE--Jersey heifer 2 years old. Will sell cheap. Apply at Union-Banner Office.

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons. None.

H. J. Gilbert spent last Friday in Birmingham.

Miss Willetta Stringfellow returned to her home at Reform last Friday after an extended visit to Miss Bessie VanDerveer.

Miss Estelie Morgan visited the Capital City last Friday.

Mesdames W. I. Mullins and J. Watts Moore were visitors to Montgomery last Friday.

FOR SALE CHEAP—Good second hand coaster brake bicycle with new tires; all in fine shape. Come quick.
Higgins, the Jeweler.

Whole Family Benefited By Wonderful Remedy

There are many little things to annoy us, under present conditions of life. The hurry, hard work, noise and strain all tell on us and tend to provoke nervousness and irritability. We are frequently so worn out we can neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort. We are out of line with ourselves and others as well.

A good thing to do under such circumstances is to take something like to relieve the strain on the nerves. Mrs. J. B. Hartsfield, 82 Plum St., Atlanta Ga., writes:

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

"I have on several occasions been vastly relieved by the use of your medicines, especially the Anti-Pain Pills, which I keep constantly on hand for the use of myself, husband and two sons. Nothing in the world equals them as a headache remedy. Often I am enabled by the use of one or two of the Pills to continue my housework when otherwise I would be in bed. My husband joins me in my praise of the Anti-Pain Pills and Nervine."

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

are relied upon to relieve pain, nervousness and irritability in thousands of households. Of proven merit after twenty years use, you can have no reason for being longer without them.

At all Druggists. 25 cents per dose. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Chilton County Medical Society

Verbena, August 5.—The Chilton County Medical Society convened at the Verbena Academy Tuesday morning, Aug. 4, at eleven o'clock. The society was invited to Verbena by Dr. W. H. Bell, Formerly of Birmingham.

The meeting was opened by Dr. J. P. Hayes of Glanton, President of the society. After the reading of the minutes of last meeting by Dr. T. J. Marcus of Clanton, Secy., the following physicians of Chilton county answered to roll call: J. P. Hayes, T. J. Marcus, J. L. Kincaid, P. I. Hopkins, W. Wise, P. G. Eiland, N. S. Johnson, Arthur Johnson, Sam Johnson, H. W. Caffey and B. J. Baldwin.

Under the head of application for new membeship, Dr. Bell proposed the names—H. W. Caffey and B. J. Baldwin; both are retired physicians as honorary members of the society. They were accepted by vote and each expressed his appreciation of the honor. Dr. Caffav finished his medical studies at college in North Carolfna iu 1854.

The chief feattre of the meeting was the reading of a very enlightening paper on Pelegra by Dr. C. F. Rudolph of Birmingham. Dr. Rudolph is well known all over the state as an expert on Pelegra, having devoted much of his time and study to that disease. The appreciation of Mr. Rudolph's paper was expressed through Dr. J. P. Hayes.

Dr. Sam Johnson of Clanton gave an interestfng paper on maternal impression. Drs. Baldwin and Hayes made short talks on the subject, all of which were good.

The society being asked concerning the health of the county, each member present reported his locality as being "distressing healthy".

After seleeting Cooper for the next place of meeting and 1 o'clock, p.m., Sept. 1 the time, the convention adjotrnsd; and the physicians enjoyed s delicious dinner with Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Bell.

THE HIGH SCHOOL IS BEING BUILT

Work on the building for the County High School recently loceted in Clanton is being pushed rapidly. All excavations have been made; material is being collected, and bricklayers are busy at work. It will be completed in a few months.

Popwell & Jones

Have moved their business into the Chandler Building formerly occupied by Mr. H. Headley.

They will continue to cater to their friends with the best in the way of Cold Drinks, Ice Cream, Candies, Cigars, Tobaccos, etc.

YOUR TRADE IS SOLICITED.

Hard to Satisfy.

"Some men are not even satisfied when they marry and are supported in the style to which they have been accustomed," caustically remarked a woman.

Chronic Spring Fever.

Surprising as it may seem, a few people in the temperate zone, with four seasons a year, have chronic spring fever.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Hardware we sell is made mostly of steel and iron, yet this is the sort of a "golden rule" we practice--we sell good, honest, reliable stuff; we put a fair and square price on it, we charge everybody this same price.

Do you want to do business with this kind of a store?

Gamble Hardware Co.
Clanton, Alabama.

The Clanton
Com

During this month
our goods at a grea
room for our Fall
which will arrive ab
Come to see us fo

CLANTON ME
CLANTON, A

As Water Seeks Its Le
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Su
o particular and economical people
where are shown the latest styles
cs, ladies' furnishings and lingerie, st stock of general dry goods, marke
st prices consistent with quality.
It's Only Natural.

KEMP BROTHE
Clanton, Ala.

t Friday evening at the
t church there will be a stallation of the officers
nton Masonic Chapter. able that after the in-
there will be refresh-
erved at the Masonic

Louise and Roberta
f Montevallo are visit-es in Clanton this week

obinson of Salem was rday.

Mrs. McMorries
from a stay of se
Mineral Springs.

J. M. VanDerve
Chandler were visi
gomery Monday a

Commissioner H
ersville was presen
mass meeting of sives Saturday.

Baths at Palace
in the Headley bui

Shingles and Gasolin

Anyone wanting Shingles to cove onferring with me right away. Ha
to get your order in the next one.
I have a gasoline engine, tank, wi re to have city waterworks I will n cash or on time. Come and look t ell & Jones

L. H. REY

their business into the ding formerly occupied ley.

inue to cater to their best in the way of Cold
m, Candies, Cigars, To-

DE IS SOLICITED.

Chronic Spring Fever.
Startling as it may seem, a l
people in the temperate zone, four seasons a year, have chr spring fever.—Louisville Couriernal.

LOWEST PRICE TO ALL AND NO MONKEY BUSINESS IS THE RULE OF OUR STORE.

ve sell is made mostly his is the sort of a "golde
we sell good, honest, re fair and square price on ly this same price.
do business with this sto

Hardware Co.
, Alabama.

as Ball Bearings at all frictional points

a Good Operator

usiness world to-day is neat, produce this kind of "copy."

machine all lead to Type-

the carriage, the typebar bearing.

durability and efficiency.

d Catalog

. Typewriter
y Factory
. Y.
l cities

The Clanton Mercantile Company

During this month we are selling all of our goods at a great reduction to make room for our Fall and Winter Stock, which will arrive about September 1st. Come to see us for what you want.

CLANTON MERCANTILE CO.
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

As Water Seeks Its Level
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Sun

o particular and economical people seek the where are shown the latest styles of dress s, ladies' furnishings and lingerie, and the stock of general dry goods, marked at the t prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

KEMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

Program

District Sunday School Convention to meet with Mount Moriah Methodist Church on August 16th, one mile west of Wessington and five miles north west of Jemison.

10:00 a.m Devotional Exercise led by Rev. Job Reynolds.

10:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

10:45 a.m. The Ideal Superintendent by Rev. Winkler.

11:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

11:45 a.m. Report and pledges of all Sunday Schools in the district.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

1:30 p.m. Devotional Exercise by Rev. Job Reynolds.

1:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

2:15 p.m. Correlation of home and school by J. B. Kilpatrick.

2:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

3:15 p.m. Time and place of next Convention.

3:30 Adjournment.

W. H. Shaw, Dis. Pres.
Miss Odia Harsly Sec. and Tres.

FOR SALE—Good gentle family Horse. Will work anywhere. To sell cheap for cash or on time. J. T. Rockett
7-30-3t. Cooper Ala.

HOW CHILDREN GROW

Children grow by nourishment—not overloaded stomachs or rich foods but qualities that are readily converted into life-sustaining blood; too often their digestive powers cannot procure these qualities from ordinary foods which results in weakness, dullness and sickness.

If your children are under-size, underweight, catch cold easily, are languid, backward, pale or frail, give them Scott's Emulsion which is pure medicinal nourishment. It sharpens the appetite, builds healthy flesh, firm muscles and active brains. Scott's is growing-food for children. Refuse alcoholic substitutes.

t Friday evening at the
t church there will be a stallation of the officers
anton Masonic Chapter. able that after the in-
there will be refresh-
erved at the Masonic

Louise and Roberta
of Montevallo are visityes in Clanton this week

Robinson of Salem was rday.

Mrs. McMorries has returned from a stay of several weeks at Mineral Springs.

J. M. VanDerveer and H F. Chandler were visitors to Montgomery Monday night.

Commissioner Herrod of Plantersville was present at the county mass meeting of the Progressives Saturday.

Baths at Palace Pressing shop in the Headley building.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains conferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be to get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store.

I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale; as re to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bar- cash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

MARSHALL-HARLAN.

Cards have been issued this week announcing the Marriage of Charles Robert Marshall and Miss Helen G. Harlan, The Red Cross Nurse of Chilton County. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall will locate on a farm in the near future, and Mrs Marshall will continue her work throughout the county.

The shipping of watermelons from here seems to be still holding up well. There are several cars shipped every week.

M. D. Foshee and Judge Reynolds went to the Progressive Convention at Birmingham Wednesday.

H. A. Harris of Cooper was amoug those who went from this county to the Convention Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Parrish of Birmingham are visiting relatives here this week.

J. L. Gore is again on duty at L. H. Reynold's store, after a vacation of two weeks at his father's home near here.

Best cleaning and pressing in town is done at Palace Pressing shop in Headley building across railroad from Post office.

The mail carrier on Route 5 lost a chain off his auto last Tuesday; anyone returning same to the Union-Banner office will receive reward.

Does Your Stomach Trouble You?

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Successfully Taken in Cases of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments

And One Dose Has Often Dispelled Years of Suffering

MAYR'S Wonderful Stomach Remedy will change that Long Face!

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy can really be termed a wonderful remedy and the benefits that it gives in many of the most chronic cases of Stomach Trouble has spread its fame from one end of the country to the other. No matter where you live—you will find people who have suffered with Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments' etc., and have been restored to health and are loud in their praise of this remedy. There is not a day but what one hears of the wonderful results obtained from this remedy and the benefits are entirely natural, as it acts on the source and foundation of these ailments, removing the poisonous catarrh and bile accretions, taking out the inflamation from the intestinal tract and assist in rendering the same antiseptic. Sufferers are urged to try one dose—which alone should relieve your suffering and convince you that Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy should restore you to good health. Put it to a test today—the results will be a revelation to you and you will rejoice over your quick recovery and once again know the joys of living. Send for booklet on Stomach Ailments to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 156 Whiting St., Chicago, or better still, obtain a bottle from your druggist.

Rev. W. J. Armstrong is conducting a revival sereice this week at Highland church west of town.

Burnie Thompson has accepted a position as bookkeeper for the Clanton Mercantile Company.

Prof. W. T. Bean went up to Birmingham to attend the Progressive State Convention Wednesday.

Roland W. Taylor has resigned his position as bookkeeper for L. H. Reynolds, to take up traveling for Armour & Company. Mr. Taylor will have headquarters in Anniston.

Miss Mary Watson of Anniston is the guest of Miss Rilla Smith this week.

Mr. A. C. Smith and daughter, Miss Bertha, Left Tuesday afternoon for a trip through the east. They will visit Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, New York and other points.

Miss Katie Smith of Mountain Creek was a visitor to Clanton Saturday and Sunday.

J. R. Busby of Montevallo was a caller at our office Tuesday.

Judge Reynolds went to Shelby county Monday night to make a speech at a Progressive meeting.

Squire Waldrup of Jemison was at the Progressive mass meeting Saturday by a large majority.

Mr. Robert Rogers of Pine Hill visited friends in Clanton Friday.

Scrubs Fatten Quickly

You want your pigs to eat as much as possible when you fatten them. Give them a great variety of feed, keep the appetite keen and the digestion in good order, and you will obtain the desired result; especially if you mix with the grain ration a dose of

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

Whets the appetite—Helps digestion.

I put some scrubby-looking hogs in the pen to fatten and gave them Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE in their feed. I soon had fine, healthy-looking hogs, which netted me over 500 pounds.
H. Kisner,
Danlevie, W. Va.

25c, 50c and $1. per can.
At your dealer's.
P. B. 4

J. P. Rushing of Verbena called to pay his subscription Saturday while he was in town.

A. H. Collins of Thorsby was a visitor Saturday.

L. G. Posey of Jemison was among those attending the mass meeting Saturday.

J. N. Ervin of Randolph was in our city last Saturday.

P. C. Wilson, N. W. Askins, S. A. Kanjutzky, and W. M. Wyatt made a motor trip to Montgomery Sunday.

LOST, strayed or stolen from my place 8 miles north of Clanton on Calera road—one Jersy heifer yearling, about 18 months old, marked, crop and underbit in each ear. Was first strayed about a month ago. Reward for information to W. T. Robinson
8-6-3t. Clanton Route 8

W. C. Edler of Thorsby was in Clanton Saturday.

S. M. Edwards of Thorsby was a pleasant caller at this office last Saturday. He spoke encouragingly of political conditions in his community.

J. A. Langston of Lawley was a visitor to Clanton Saturday.

J. N. Scott of Jemison was here Saturday taking in the good things that were said and done at the Progressive mass meeting.

If you have struggled in privation
If you have dwelt with plenty and known a woman's love in either
Then you'll see yourself in

THE AMBITION OF MARK TRUITT

The Novel of a Typical American

Our Next Serial!

Watch for It!

COMMISSIOMERS SALE

The state of Albama, Chilton County: Probate Court.

In pursuance of the directions and terms of a Commission dated the 23rd day of May, 1914, issued by Hon. E. B. Deason, Judge of probate of said county, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder, for cash at public auction, on the 15 day of Aug., 1914 between the hours of 11 o'clock, a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m., at the court house, Clanton, Ala., the following described property:

S.E. fourth of N.W. fourth, and the S.W. fourth of the N.E. fourth of Sec. 16, Tp. 21, R. 14, in Chilton county, Ala.; 13 shares of stock in the Farmer's Warehouse and Storage Company, of Clanton, Ala., which said property is to be sold under the order of said Probate court, for the purpose of division and partition between the several joint owners thereof, viz:

Dewey Gallman, Harvey Gallman, Anderson Gallman, Leon Gallman, Deannia Parrish, Annie Watson, Odis Culpepper, Ensley Culpepper, Pauline Massey, Ruth Massey, Reed Gallman, Luther Culpepper.

This May 23, 1914.
Grady Reynoldss, Commissioner.

W. Y. Nix of Maplesville was a visitor to Clanton Saturday.

W. H. Gillespie of Beat 10 was here Saturday to attend the Progressive mass-meeting.

R. L. Clark of Mt. Creek was in town Saturday.

H. Z. Barnes of Randolph, a good old Progressive voter, was here Saturday at the mass meeting at the Court House.

H. A. Harris of Cooper was in Clanton Saturday shaking hands with his many friends.

Leave your suit at the Palace Pressing shop in rear of new barber shop in Headley building. First class work and satisfaction guaranteed.

Prof. J. W. Moore attended the Progressive Convention at Birmingham Wednesday.

Dr. Hyman was here Wednesday from Jemison, being treated for a tumor which Dr. Gragg recently removed from his head.

John S. Dennis of Cane Creek went to Birmingham Wednesday.

Miss Mary Will Stewart of Montgomery is visiting her mother here this week.

Miss Ward has returned to her home in Wetumpka after a pleasant visit to the family of Mr. W. D. Spigner.

You Are Not Wanted

Do you know that your efficiency is probably not much above the average—35%? And do you realize that no employer wants a man who is not efficient, even if his services are given free?

Do You Want to Acquire Efficiency for the Job of Life?

Do you want to be wanted by all men? Do you want to know that you cannot be replaced by a better man? Do you want to know just how and just where you can make a bigger profit on your time and effort?

Your Job for the Day, your Job of Life, and your Success for All Time demand that you make yourself efficient.

The Institute of Efficiency

Ours is the only school in existence where you can learn PERSONAL Efficiency. In twenty-four fascinating lessons, in your home, at your leisure, you learn of these wonder working truths that have saved railroads, industrial plants, and factories millions of dollars each year, and which have raised salaries, in many cases, one-hundred fold.

Harrington Emerson

the man who founded this school, and who wrote these twenty-four vital lessons, has spent his life in the study and practise of Efficiency. During the past twenty years, this world famous expert has been advising the leading industrial plants of the country. This vast experience he has put into this course of study so that you can reap the benefit.

What This Means For You

This course is for anybody who wants to make the most of his life—the professional man, business man, the young man hesitating to achieve—everyone who wishes to do so far as he can, do as much as he can, achieve the best that is in him—with the least effort. The coupon at the side, if mailed to us tonight, will bring by return mail a free copy of "The Story of Emerson," an outline of the Course, and full information.

The Institute of Efficiency
ROBERT D. CHASE, Sec'y
90 Institute Place, New York City

The Hollow Of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON: COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

"I thought perhaps he had written you about his plans."

"My father does not know that I have returned to New York."

"Oh, I see. Of course. Um—um! By the way, I think the colonel is a corker. One of the most amiable thoroughbreds I've ever come across. Ripping. He's never said anything to me about your antipathy toward him, but I can see with half an eye that he is terribly depressed about it. Can't you get together some way on—"

"Really, Mr. Wrandall, you are encouraging your imagination to a point where words ultimately must fail you," she said very positively. Booth could hardly repress a chuckle.

"It's not imagination on my part," said Leslie with conviction, failing utterly to recognize the obvious. "I suppose you know that he is coming over to visit me for six weeks or so. We became rattling good friends before we parted. My Jove, you should hear him on old Lord Murgatroyd's will! The quintessence of wit! I couldn't take it as he does. Expectations and all that sort of thing, you know, going up like a hot air balloon and bursting in plain view. But he never squeaked. Laughed it off. A British attribute, I dare say. I suppose you know that he is obliged to sell his estate in Ireland?"

Hetty started. She could not conceal the look of shame that leaped into her eyes.

"I—I did not know," she murmured.

"Must be quite a shock to you. Sit down, Brandy. You look very picturesque standing, but chairs were made to sit upon—or in, whichever is proper.

Booth shrugged his shoulders.

"I think I'll stand, if you don't mind, Les."

"I merely suggested it, old chap, fearing you might have overlooked the possibilities. Yes, Miss Castleton, he left us in London to go up to Belfast on this dismal business." There was something in the back of his mind that he was trying to get at in a tactful manner. "By the way, is this property entailed?"

"I know nothing at all about it, Mr. Wrandall," said she, with a pleading glance at her lover, as if to inquire what stand she should take in this distressing situation.

"If it is entailed he can't sell it," said Booth quietly.

"That's true," said Leslie, somewhat dubiously. Then, with a magnanimity that covered a multitude of doubts he added: "Of course, I am only interested in seeing that you are properly protected, Miss Castleton. I've no doubt you hold an interest in the estates."

"I can't very well discuss a thing I know absolutely nothing about," she said succinctly.

"Most of it is in building lots and factories in Belfast, of course. It was more in the nature of a question than a declaration. "The old family castle isn't very much of an asset, I take it."

"I fancy you can trust Colonel Castleton to make the best possible deal in the premises," said Booth drily.

"I suppose so," said the other resignedly. "He is a shrewd beggar, I'm convinced of that. Strange, however, that I haven't heard a word from him since he left us in London. I've been expecting a cablegram from him every day for nearly a fortnight, letting me know when to expect him."

"Are you going to California this winter for the flying?" asked Hetty.

Sara entered at that juncture, and they all sat down to listen for half an hour to Leslie's harangue on the way the California meet was being mismanaged, at the end of which he departed.

He took Booth away with him, much to that young man's disgust.

"Do you know, Brandy, old fellow," said he as they walked down Fifth avenue in the gathering dusk of the early winter evening, "ever since I've begun to suspect that damned old humbug of a father of hers, I've been congratulating myself that there isn't the remotest chance of his ever becoming my father-in-law. And, by George, you'll never know how near I was to leaping blindly into the brambles. What a close call I had!"

Booth's sarcastic smile was hidden by the dusk. He made no pretense of openly resenting the meanness of spirit that moved Leslie to these caddish remarks. He merely announced in a dry, cutting voice:

"I think Miss Castleton is to be congratulated that her injury is no greater than nature made it in the beginning."

"What do you mean by 'nature?'"

"Nature gave her a father, didn't it?"

"Obviously."

"Well, why add insult to injury?"

"By Jove! Oh, I say, old man!"

They parted at the next corner. As Booth started to cross over to the Plaza, Leslie called out after him:

"I say, Brandy, just a second, please. Are you going to marry Miss Castleton?"

"I am."

"Then, I retract the scurvy things I said back there. I asked her to marry me three times and she refused me three times. What I said about the brambles was rotten. I'll ask her again if I thought she'd have me. There you are, old fellow. I'm a rotten bad lot, I confess, but I confess to you just the same."

"You're learning, Leslie," said Booth, taking the hand the other held out to him.

While the painter was dining at his club later on in the evening, he was called to the telephone. Watson was on the wire. He said that Mrs. Wrandall would like to know if Mr. Booth could drop in on her for a few minutes after dinner, "to discuss a very important matter, if you please, sir." At nine o'clock, Booth was in Sara's library, trying to grasp a new and remarkable phase in the character of that amazing woman.

He found Hetty waiting for him when he arrived.

"I don't know what it all means, Brandon," she said hurriedly, looking over her shoulder as she spoke. "Sara says that she has come to a decision of some sort. She wants us to hear her plan before making it final. I—I don't understand her at all tonight."

"It can't be anything serious, dearest," he said, but something cold and nameless oppressed him just the same.

"She asked me if I had finally decided to—to be your wife, Brandon. I said I had asked you for two or three days more in which to decide. It seemed to depress her. She said she didn't see how she could give me up, even to you. She wants to be near me always. It is—it is really tragic, Brandon."

He took her hands in his.

"We can fix that," said he confidently. "Sara can live with us if she feels that way about it. Our home shall be hers when she likes, and as long as she chooses. It will be open to her all the time, to come and go or to stay, just as she elects. Isn't that the way to put it?"

"I suggested something of the sort, but she wasn't very much impressed. Indeed, she appeared to be somewhat—yes, I could not have been mistaken—somewhat harsh and terrified when I spoke of it. Afterwards she was more reasonable. She thanked me and—there were tears in her eyes at the time—and said she would think it over. All she asks is that I may be happy and free and untroubled all the rest of my life. This was before dinner. At dinner she appeared to be brooding over something. When we left the table she took me to her room and said that she had come to an important decision. Then she instructed Watson to find you if possible."

"'Gad, it's all very upsetting," he said, shaking his head.

"I think her conscience is troubling her. She hates the Wrandalls, but I—I don't know why I should feel as I do about it—but I believe she wants them to know!"

He stared for a moment, and then his face brightened. "And so do I, Hetty, so do I! They ought to know!"

"I should feel so much easier if the whole world knew," said she earnestly.

Sara heard the girl's words as she stood in the door. She came forward with a strange—even abashed—smile, after closing the door behind her.

"I don't agree with you, dearest, when you say that the world should know, but I have come to the conclusion that you should be tried and acquitted by a jury made up of Challis Wrandall's own flesh and blood. The Wrandalls must know the truth."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Jury of Four.

The Wrandalls sat waiting and wondering. They had been sent for and they had deigned to respond, much to their own surprise. Redmond Wrandall occupied a place at the head of the library table. At his right sat his wife. Vivian and Leslie, by direction, took seats at the side of the long table, which had been cleared of its mass of books and magazines. Lawyer Carroll was at the other end of the table, perceptibly nervous and anxious. Hetty sat a little apart from the others, a rather forlorn, detached member of the conclave. Brandon Booth, pale-faced and alert, drew up a chair alongside Carroll, facing Sara who alone remained standing, directly opposite the four Wrandalls.

The Wrandalls Leaned Forward in Their Chairs.

Not one of the Wrandalls knew why they, as a family, were there. They had not the slightest apprehension of what was to come.

The Wrandalls had been routed from their comfortable fireside—for what? They were asking the question of themselves and they were waiting stonily for the answer.

"It is very stuffy in here," Vivian had said with a glance at the closed doors after Sara had successfully placed her jury in the box.

"Keep still, Viv," whispered Leslie, with a fine assumption of awe. "It's a spiritualistic meeting. You'll scare the spooks away."

It was at this juncture that Sara rose from her chair and faced them, as calmly, as complacently as if she were about to ask them to proceed to the dining-room instead of to throw a bomb into their midst that would shatter their smug serenity for all time to come. With a glance at Mr. Carroll she began, clearly, firmly and without a prefatory apology for what was to follow.

"I have asked you to come here tonight to be my judges. I am on trial. You are about to hear the story of my unspeakable perfidy. I only require of you that you hear me to the end before passing judgment."

At her words, Hetty and Booth started perceptibly; a quick glance passed between them, as if each was inquiring whether the other had caught the extraordinary words of self-indictment. A puzzled frown appeared on Hetty's brow.

"Perfidy?" interposed Mr. Wrandall. His wife's expression changed from one of bored indifference to sharp inquiry. Leslie paused in the act of lighting a cigarette.

"It is the mildest term I can command," said Sara. "I shall be as brief as possible in stating the case, Mr. Wrandall. You will be surprised to hear that I have taken it upon myself, as the wife of Challis Wrandall and, as I regard it, the one most vitally concerned if not interested in the discovery and punishment of the person who took his life—I say I have taken it upon myself to shield, protect and defend the unhappy young woman who accompanied him to Burton's inn on that night in March. She has had my constant, my personal protection for more than twenty months."

The Wrandalls leaned forward in their chairs. The match burned Leslie's fingers, and he dropped it without appearing to notice the pain.

"What is this you are saying?" demanded Redmond Wrandall.

"When I left the inn that night, after seeing my husband's body in the little upstairs room, I said to myself that the one who took his life had unwittingly done me a service. He was my husband; I loved him, I adored him. To the end of my days I could have gone on loving him in spite of the cruel return he gave for my love and loyalty. I shall not attempt to tell you of the countless lapses of fidelity on his part. You would not believe me. But he always came back to me with the pitiful love he had for me, and I forgave him his transgressions. These things you know. He confessed many things to you, Mr. Wrandall. He humbled himself to me. Perhaps you will recall that I never complained to you of him. What rancor I had was always directed toward you, his family, who would see no wrong in your king but looked upon me as dirt beneath his feet. There were moments when I could have slain him with my own hands, but my heart rebelled. There were times when he said to me that I ought to kill him for the things he had done. You may now understand what I mean when I say that the girl who went to Burton's inn with him did me a service. I will not say that I considered her guiltless at the time. On the contrary, I looked upon her in quite a different way. I had no means of knowing then that she was as pure as snow and that he would have despoiled her of everything that was sweet and sacred to her. She took his life in order to save that which was dearer to her than her own life, and she was on her way to pay for her deed with her life if necessary when I came upon her and intervened."

"You—you know who she is?" said Mr. Wrandall, in a low, incredulous voice.

"I have known almost from the beginning. Presently you will hear her story, from her own lips."

Involuntarily four pairs of eyes shifted. They looked blankly at Hetty Castleton.

Speaking swiftly, Sara depicted the scenes and sensations experienced during that memorable motor journey to New York city.

"I could not believe that she was a vicious creature, even then. Something told me that she was a tender, gentle thing who had fallen into evil hands and had struck because she was unevil. I did not doubt that she had been my husband's mistress, but I could not destroy the conviction that somehow she had been justified in doing the thing she had done. My gravest mistake was in refusing to hear her story in all of its details. I only permitted her to acknowledge that she had killed him, no more. I did not want to hear the thing which I assumed to be true. Therein lies my deepest fault. For months and months I murdered her in my heart. [illegible]

she was innocent of the only crime I could lay at her feet. Now I come to the crime of which I stand self-accused. I must have been mad all these months. I have no other defense to offer. You may take it as you see it for yourselves. I do not ask for pardon. After I deliberately had set about to shield this unhappy girl—to cheat the law, if you please—to cheat you, perhaps—I conceived the horrible thought to avenge myself for all the indignities I had sustained at the hands of you Wrandalls, and at the same time to even my account with the one woman whom I could put my finger upon as having robbed me of my husband's love. You see I put it mildly. I have hated all of you, Mrs. Wrandall, even as you have hated me. Today—now—I do not feel as I did in other days toward you. I do not love you, still I do not hate you. I do not forgive you, and yet I think I have come to see things from your point of view. I can only repeat that I do not hate you as I once did."

She paused. The Wrandalls were too deeply submerged in horror to speak. They merely stared at her as if stupefied; as breathless, as motionless as stones.

"There came a day when I observed that Leslie was attracted by the guest in my house. On that day the plan took root in my brain. I—"

"Good God!" fell from Leslie's lips. "You—you had that in mind?"

"It became a fixed, inflexible purpose, Leslie. Not that I hated you as I hated the rest, for you tried to be considerate. The one grudge I held against you was that in seeking to sustain me you defamed your own brother. You came to me with stories of his misdeeds; you said that he was a scoundrel and that you would not blame me for 'showing him up.' Do you not remember? And so my plot involved you; you were the only one through whom I could strike. There were times when I faltered. I could not bear the thought of sacrificing Hetty Castleton, nor was it easy to thoroughly appease my conscience in respect to you. Still, if I could have had my way a few months ago, if coercion had been of any avail, you would now be the husband of your brother's slayer. Then I came to know that she was not what I had thought she was. She was honest. My bubble burst. I came out of the maze in which I had been living and saw clearly that what I had contemplated was the most atrocious—"

"Atrocious?" cried Mrs. Redmond Wrandall between her set teeth. "Diabolical! Diabolical! My God, Sara, what a devil you—" She did not complete the sentence, but sank back in her chair and stared with wide, horror-struck eyes at her rigid daughter-in-law.

Her husband, his hand shaking as if with palsy, pointed a finger at Hetty. "And so you are the one we have been hunting for all these months, Miss Castleton! You are the one we want! You who have sat at our table, you who have smiled in our faces—"

"Stop, Mr. Wrandall!" commanded Sara, noting the ashen face of the girl. "Don't let the fact escape you that I am the guilty person. Don't forget that she owed her freedom, if not her life to me. I alone kept her from giving herself up to the law. All that has transpired since that night in March must be placed to my account. Hetty Castleton has been my prisoner. She has rebelled a thousand times and I have conquered—not by threats but by love! Do you understand? Because of her love for me, and because she believed that I loved her, she submitted. You are not to accuse her, Mr. Wrandall. Accuse me! I am on trial here. Hetty Castleton is a witness against me, if you choose to call upon her as such. If not, I shall ask her to speak in my defense, if she can do so."

"This is lunacy!" cried Mr. Wrandall, coming to his feet. "I don't care what your motives may have been. They do not make her any less a murderess. She—"

"We must give her over to the police—" began his wife, struggling to her feet. She staggered. It was Booth who stepped quickly to her side to support her. Leslie was staring at Hetty.

Vivian touched her father's arm. She was very pale but vastly more composed than the others.

"Father, listen to me," she said. Her voice trembled in spite of her effort to control it. "We are condemning Miss Castleton unheard. Let us hear everything before we—"

"Good God, Vivian! Do you mean to—"

"How can we place any reliance on what she may say?" cried Mrs. Wrandall.

"Nevertheless," said Vivian firmly. "I for one shall not condemn her unheard. I mean to be as fair to her as Sara has been. It shall not be said that all the Wrandalls are smaller than Sara Gooch!"

"My child—" began her father incredulously. His jaw dropped suddenly. His daughter and had landed squarely in the midst of the Wrandall ranks.

"If you [illegible] husband sat down. Their jaws set hard.

"Thank you, Vivian," said Sara, surprised in spite of herself. "You are nobler than I—"

"Please don't thank me, Sara," said Vivian icily. "I was speaking for Miss Castleton."

Sara flushed. "I suppose it is useless to ask you to be fair to Sara Gooch, as you choose to call me."

"Do you feel in your heart that we still owe you anything?"

"Enough of this, Vivian," spoke up her father harshly. "If Miss Castleton desires to speak we will listen to her. I must advise you, Miss Castleton, that the extraordinary disclosures made by my daughter-in-law do not lessen your culpability. We do not insist on this confession from you. You deliver it at your own risk. I want to be fair with you. If Mr. Carroll is your counsel, he may advise you now to refuse to make a statement."

Mr. Carroll bowed slightly in the general direction of the Wrandalls. "I have already advised Miss Castleton to state the case fully and completely to you, Mr. Wrandall. It was I who originally suggested this—well, what you might call a private trial for her. I am firmly convinced that when you have heard her story, you, as her judges, will acquit her of the charge of murder. Moreover, you will be content to let your own verdict end the matter, sparing yourselves the shame and ignominy of having her story told in a criminal court for the delectation of an eager but somewhat implacable world."

"Your language is extremely unpleasant, Mr. Carroll," said Mr. Wrandall coldly.

"I meant to speak kindly, sir."

"Do you mean, sir, that we will let the matter rest after hearing the—"

"That is precisely what I mean, Mr. Wrandall. You will not consider her guilty of a crime. Please bear in mind this fact: but for Sara and Miss Castleton you would not have known the truth. Miss Castleton could not be convicted in a court of justice. Nor will she be convicted here this evening, in this little court of ours."

"Miss Castleton is not on trial," interposed Sara calmly. "I am the offender. She has already been tried and proved innocent."

Leslie, in his impatience, tapped sharply on the table with his seal ring.

"Please let her tell the story. Permit me to say, Miss Castleton, that you will not find the Wrandalls as harsh and vindictive as you may have been led to believe."

Mrs. Wrandall passed her hand over her eyes. "To think that we have been friendly to this girl all these—"

"Calm yourself, my dear," said her husband, after a glance at his son and daughter, a glance of unspeakable helplessness. He could not understand them.

As Hetty arose, Mrs. Wrandall senior lowered her eyes and not once did she look up during the recital that followed. Her hands were lying limply in her lap, and she breathed heavily, almost stertoriously. The younger Wrandalls leaned forward with their clear, unwavering gaze fixed on the earnest face of the young Englishwoman who had slain their brother.

"You have heard Sara accuse herself," said the girl slowly, dispassionately. "The shock was no greater to you than it was to me. All that she has said is true, and yet I—I would

"And So You Are the One We Have Been Hunting for All These Months."

so much rather she had left herself unarraigned. We were agreed that I should throw myself on your mercy. Mr. Carroll said that you were fair and just people, that you would not condemn me under the circumstances. But that Sara should seek to take the blame is—"

"Alas, my dear, I am to blame," said Sara, shaking her head. "But for me your story would have been told months ago, the courts would have cleared you, and all the world would have execrated my husband for the thing he did—my husband and your son, Mrs. Wrandall—whom we both loved. God believe me, I think I loved him more than all of you put together!"

She sat down abruptly and buried her face in her arms on the edge of the table.

"If I could only induce you to forgive her," began Hetty, throwing out her hands to the Wrandalls, only to be met by a gesture of repugnance from the grim old man.

"Your story, Miss Castleton," he said hoarsely.

"From the beginning, if you please," added the lawyer quietly. "Leave out nothing."

Clearly, steadily and with the utmost sincerity in her voice and manner, the girl began the story of her life. She passed hastily over the earlier periods, frankly exposing the unhappy conditions attending her home life, her subsequent activities as a performer on the London stage after Colonel Castleton's defection; the few months devoted to posing for Hawkright, the painter, and later on her engagement as governess in the wealthy Budlong family. She devoted some time and definiteness to her first encounter with Challis Wrandall on board the west-bound steamer, an incident that came to pass in a perfectly natural way. Her deck chair stood next to his, and he was not slow in making himself agreeable. It did not occur to her till long afterwards that he deliberately had traded positions with an elderly gentleman who occupied the chair on the first day out. Before the end of the voyage they were very good friends. . . .

"When we landed in New York, he assisted me in many ways. Afterwards, on learning that I was not to go to California, I called him up on the telephone to explain my predicament. He urged me to stay in New York; he guaranteed that there would be no difficulty in securing a splendid position in the east. I had no means of knowing that he was married. I accepted him for what I thought him to be: a genuine American gentleman. They are supposed to be particularly considerate with women. His conduct toward me was beyond reproach. I have never known a man who was so courteous, so gentle. To me, he was the most fascinating man in the world. No woman could have resisted him, I am sure of that."

She shot a quick, appealing glance at Booth's hard-set face. Her lip trembled for a second.

"I fell madly in love with him," she went on resolutely. "I dreamed of him, I could hardly wait for the time to come when I was to see him. I never came to the wretched little lodging house I have told you about. He met him outside. One night he told me that he loved me, loved me passionately. I—I said that I would be his wife. Somehow it seemed to me that he regarded me very curiously for a moment or two. He seemed to be surprised, uncertain. I remember that he laughed rather queerly. It did not occur to me to doubt him. One day he came for me, saying that he wanted me to see the little apartment he had taken, where we were to live after we were married. I went with him. He said that if I liked it, I could move in at once, but I would not consent to such an arrangement. For the first time I began to feel that everything was not as it should be. I—I remained in the apartment but a few minutes. The next day he came to me, greatly excited and more demonstrative than ever before, to say that he had arranged for a quiet, jolly little wedding up in the country. Strangely enough, I experienced a queer feeling that all was not as it should be, but his eagerness, his persistence dispelled the small doubt that had begun even then to shape itself. I consented to go with him on the next night to an inn out in the country, where a college friend who was a minister of the gospel would meet us, driving over from his parish a few miles away. I said that I preferred to be married in a church. He laughed and said it could be arranged when we got to the inn and had talked it over with the minister. Still uneasy, I asked why it was necessary to employ secrecy. He told me that his family were in Europe and that he wanted to surprise them by giving them a daughter who was actually related to an English nobleman. The family had been urging him to marry a stupid but rich New York girl and he—oh, well he uttered a great deal of nonsense about my beauty, my charm, and all that sort of thing—"

She paused for a moment. No one spoke. Her audience of judges, with the exception of the elder Mrs. Wrandall, watched her as if fascinated. Their faces were almost expressionless. With a perceptible effort, she resumed her story, narrating events that carried it up to the hour when she walked into the little upstairs room at Burton's inn with the man who was to be her husband.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Posts Put to Hard Labor.

The sixth grade of a certain school in a foreign settlement in South Dakota was learning the use of possessives.

The book required the pupils to correct and expand into a complete sentence the following expression: "Johnson and Shakespeare's works." Johnson handed in this sentence: "Milton and Shakespeare work dead mules."—Youth's Companion.

POULTRY FACTS

GOOD POULTRY HOUSE PLANS

Description of Structure Suitable for Accommodation of Fifty Hens—Can Be Enlarged.

The writer has noticed the repeated request by readers for plans of a good farm poultry house. For this reason I am giving you herewith the description and plans of a house large enough to accommodate 50 hens comfortably, writes F. W. Kazmeier in Wisconsin Agriculturist. If you desire to house more, build it longer.

This building is 24 feet long and 12 feet deep, 7 feet high in front and 4½ feet high in the rear. The foundation is of concrete about eight inches higher than surrounding ground. The floor is of cement laid on a layer of 6 inches of very coarse gravel. The house of course, faces to the south to obtain

Ground Plan.

all the sunlight possible for the welfare of the fowls. The studding, rafters, sills and plates are all of 2 by 4's. The uprights are placed 30 inches apart, roof timbers two feet apart. The frame is covered with a good grade of hemlock matched boards, which in turn is covered on the north side, east and west ends with a good grade of roofing paper. The south side is painted with two coats. The rear or north side of roof is not allowed to project. This makes possible to lap the roofing over this joint, making it practically air tight. The roosting closet is double boarded, including the west end. In very cold weather a muslin curtain is let down in front. This comes to within six inches of the bottom of the roost platform. This curtain should not be used except on exceedingly severe cases of cold weather.

There are in the front, two windows of glass, each light 9 by 12 inches. These windows are hinged on the inside, so as to swing in and against the wall when open. These windows are about two feet above the floor. There is also an opening 8 feet long by 3 feet wide, which is covered with inch poultry netting. Here also a muslin or burlap covered curtain frame is hinged to be lowered in severe weather. This curtain is so hinged as to swing up against the roof where it is fastened when open. This will admit plenty of fresh air which is essential.

The roost platform is 16 feet long and 3½ feet wide and 3 feet above

Front View.

the floor. There are two roosts 15 feet long, framed together and only 9 inches above roost platform. The nests are made like drawers, pulling from a shelf 24 inches wide and 18 inches high, along the west end of the house. There are ten of these nests. The top is built slanting to prevent hens from roosting on the same at night. Along the east end are a grit hopper; oyster shell hopper and a large dry mash hopper. This house will cost about sixty dollars for material. In some localities where lumber is high priced it may cost a little more.

End View.

The three sides, north, east and west, are built absolutely air tight. This is very important and should not be overlooked. The door should be at least forty inches wide and in some instances thirty-six inches is advisable. The house is entirely single boarded except where the roosting room is, here it is ceiled on the inside with matched material to within a few feet below roost platform and four feet up the north slope of roof.

Poultry Essentials.

Provide plenty of clean, wholesome food and water, and provide plenty of dry seats in a clean poultry house.

Clean Drinking Pans.

Keeping the fowls' drinking pans is as much as well as keeping them

CLOG ON

Threatened L
Goo

Immediate Adjo
Would Restore Duty of Den
the

Members of t are engaged in whether the cou
"hard times" or perity. Oppos proving that th rocks, and the
are showing th
was wrong whe psychological de that there is n
that business
breakneck speed
As usual, the two extremes.
as they should restoring confid
picking up.
There is one
so clear that it
by Republicans
The country is of, and not wi
or the administ
The governm
tating the wor
in making a li burden upon his not furnishing or developing ing the cost o
the home mark
ducer.
On the contr
and pending te business, a-ces an increase in an opening of t competition of tariff forces t
share the mark
while the forei
conspiracy to b
The producer l does not gain.
Granting tha
gress are anxio
about good tim legislation pass
clog on good ti
duty of all go gress to return
spective distric
more legislatio patriotic and they will powe
of nature and
congress to hur

What's

Senator Bora
ragua treaty ca
from some sin
corruption—or
—and would se
modern buccan
sea. Its iniqui
he says, even ate restraints.
Let's have t
tails. The tre
Its provisions s and far sighte orderly govern nation needs a
It would guar
pendence und would give th seem valuable compensation of $3,000,000 to indebtedness.
If this mon
wrong pockets correct the e consideration i
all involved.

Principl

In reply to overtures Harr
ive editor of News, says:
word 'Progres
ing against th
the Progressiv presidential members of th
the same enti
from the roo Principles a nothing. If kick out the t
be a mighty r
And as to Te on a man wh
the greatest r presidency, al

Is This C

President W
ment said "the
has been chie years by ente
great scale, an of the men c
have come to c est, incorrupti must have be check from th had been depo

Must E

Hope and co in the Democ
year.
It will be a c
start to finish candidate.
Neither the tribution of strength to t sentatives wh with apologie administration pledges and p

"If I could only induce you to forgive her," began Hetty, throwing out her hands to the Wrandalls, only to be met by a gesture of repugnance from the grim old man.

"Your story, Miss Castleton," he said hoarsely.

"From the beginning, if you please," added the lawyer quietly. "Leave out nothing."

Clearly, steadily and with the utmost sincerity in her voice and manner, the girl began the story of her life. She passed hastily over the earlier periods, frankly exposing the unhappy conditions attending her home life, her subsequent activities as a performer on the London stage after Colonel Castleton's defection; the few months devoted to posing for Hawkright, the painter, and later on her engagement as governess in the wealthy Budlong family. She devoted some time and definiteness to her first encounter with Challis Wrandall on board the west-bound steamer, an incident that came to pass in a perfectly natural way. Her deck chair stood next to his, and he was not slow in making himself agreeable. It did not occur to her till long afterwards that he deliberately had traded positions with an elderly gentleman who occupied the chair on the first day out. Before the end of the voyage they were very good friends. . . .

"When we landed in New York, he assisted me in many ways. Afterwards, on learning that I was not to go to California, I called him up on the telephone to explain my predicament. He urged me to stay in New York; he guaranteed that there would be no difficulty in securing a splendid position in the east. I had no means of knowing that he was married. I accepted him for what I thought him to be: a genuine American gentleman. They are supposed to be particularly considerate with women. His conduct toward me was beyond reproach. I have never known a man who was so courteous, so gentle. To me, he was the most fascinating man in the world. No woman could have resisted him, I am sure of that."

She shot a quick, appealing glance at Booth's hard-set face. Her lip trembled for a second.

"I fell madly in love with him," she went on resolutely. "I dreamed of him, I could hardly wait for the time to come when I was to see him. He never came to the wretched little lodging house I have told you about. I—I met him outside. One night he told me that he loved me, loved me passionately. I—I said that I would be his wife. Somehow it seemed to me that he regarded me very curiously for a moment or two. He seemed to be surprised, uncertain. I remember that he laughed rather queerly. It did not occur to me to doubt him. One day he came for me, saying that he wanted me to see the little apartment he had taken, where we were to live after we were married. I went with him. He said that if I liked it, I could move in at once, but I would not consent to such an arrangement. For the first time I began to feel that everything was not as it should be. I—I remained in the apartment but a few minutes. The next day he came to me, greatly excited and more demonstrative than ever before, to say that he had arranged for a quiet, jolly little wedding up in the country. Strangely enough, I experienced a queer feeling that all was not as it should be, but his eagerness, his persistence dispelled the small doubt that had begun even then to shape itself. I consented to go with him on the next night to an inn out in the country, where a college friend who was a minister of the gospel would meet us, driving over from his parish a few miles away. I said that I preferred to be married in a church. He laughed and said it could be arranged when we got to the inn and had talked it over with the minister. Still uneasy, I asked why it was necessary to employ secrecy. He told me that his family were in Europe and that he wanted to surprise them by giving them a daughter who was actually related to an English nobleman. The family had been urging him to marry a stupid but rich New York girl and he—oh, well he uttered a great deal of nonsense about my beauty, my charm, and all that sort of thing—"

She paused for a moment. No one spoke. Her audience of judges, with the exception of the elder Mrs. Wrandall, watched her as if fascinated. Their faces were almost expressionless. With a perceptible effort, she resumed her story, narrating events that carried it up to the hour when she walked into the little upstairs room at Burton's inn with the man who was to be her husband.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Poets Put to Hard Labor.

The sixth grade of a certain school in a foreign settlement in South Dakota was learning the use of possessives.

The book required the pupils to correct and expand into a complete sentence the following expression: "Johnson and Shakespeare's works." Jonas Nikodym handed in this sentence: "Milton and Shakespeare work in a coal mine."—Youth's Companion.

POULTRY FACTS

GOOD POULTRY HOUSE PLANS

Description of Structure Suitable for Accommodation of Fifty Hens—Can Be Enlarged.

The writer has noticed the repeated request by readers for plans of a good farm poultry house. For this reason I am giving you herewith the description and plans of a house large enough to accommodate 50 hens comfortably, writes F. W. Kazmeier in Wisconsin Agriculturist. If you desire to house more, build it longer.

This building is 24 feet long and 12 feet deep, 7 feet high in front and 4½ feet high in the rear. The foundation is of concrete about eight inches higher than surrounding ground. The floor is of cement laid on a layer of 6 inches of very coarse gravel. The house of course, faces to the south to obtain

Ground Plan.

all the sunlight possible for the welfare of the fowls. The studding, rafters, sills and plates are all of 2 by 4's. The uprights are placed 30 inches apart, roof timbers two feet apart. The frame is covered with a good grade of hemlock matched boards, which in turn is covered on the north side, east and west ends with a good grade of roofing paper. The south side is painted with two coats. The rear or north side of roof is not allowed to project. This makes possible to lap the roofing over this side, making it practically air tight. The roosting closet is double boarded, including the west end. In very cold weather a muslin curtain is let down in front. This comes to within six inches of the bottom of the roost platform. This curtain should not be used except on exceedingly severe cases of cold weather.

There are in the front, two windows of glass, each light 9 by 12 inches. These windows are hinged on the inside, so as to swing in and against the wall when open. These windows are about two feet above the floor. There is also an opening 8 feet long by 8 feet wide, which is covered with inch poultry netting. Here also a muslin or burlap covered curtain frame is hinged to be lowered in severe weather. This curtain is so hinged as to swing up against the roof where it is fastened when open. This will admit plenty of fresh air which is essential.

The roost platform is 16 feet long and 3½ feet wide and 3 feet above

Front View.

floor. There are two roosts 15 feet long, framed together and only inches above roost platform. The nests are made like drawers, pulling on a shelf 24 inches wide and 18 inches high, along the west end of house. There are ten of these nests. The top is built slanting to prevent fowls from roosting on the same at night. Along the east end are a grit hopper; oyster shell hopper and a large dry mash hopper. This house will cost about sixty dollars for material. In some localities where lumber is high priced it may cost a little more.

End View.

On three sides, north, east and west, is built absolutely air tight. This is very important and should not be overlooked. The door should be at least forty inches wide and in some instances thirty-six inches is advisable. The house is entirely single boarded except where the roosting room is, where it is ceiled on the inside with matched material to within a few inches below roost platform and four feet up the north slope of roof.

Poultry Essentials.

Need plenty of clean, wholesome food and water, and provide plenty of clean dry nests in a clean poultry house.

Clean Drinking Pans.

Keeping the fowls' drinking pans as clean as well as keeping them

CLOG ON BUSINESS

Threatened Legislation Retards Good Times.

Immediate Adjournment of Congress Would Restore Confidence—Plain Duty of Democrats Is to End the Session.

Members of the senate and house are engaged in a lively dispute as to whether the country is suffering from "hard times" or from too much prosperity. Opposition legislators are proving that the country is on the rocks, and the Democratic legislators are showing that their party leader was wrong when he said there was a psychological depression. They prove that there is no depression at all—that business is bounding along at breakneck speed.

As usual, the truth is between the two extremes. Times are not as good as they should be, but big crops are restoring confidence and business is picking up.

There is one thing, however, that is so clear that it ought to be admitted by Republicans and Democrats alike: The country is going ahead in spite of, and not with the aid of, congress or the administration.

The government, instead of facilitating the work of the ordinary man in making a living, is an additional burden upon his back. Washington is not furnishing freight for empty cars, or developing new territory, or reducing the cost of living, or preserving the home market for the home producer.

On the contrary, legislation passed and pending tends to a paralysis of business, a cessation of development, an increase in the cost of living, and an opening of the home market to the competition of low-wage labor. The tariff forces the home producer to share the market with the foreigner, while the foreigner joins the general conspiracy to boost the cost of living. The producer loses, but the consumer does not gain.

Granting that Democrats in congress are anxious to help in bringing about good times, and seeing that the legislation passed and pending is a clog on good times, it is obviously the duty of all good Democrats in congress to return at once to their respective districts without enacting any more legislation. By adopting this patriotic and highly intelligent plan they will powerfully aid the efforts of nature and everybody outside of congress to hurry good times along.

What's Wrong With It?

Senator Borah says that the Nicaragua treaty came malodorously forth from some sink hole of tyranny and corruption—or phrases to that effect—and would serve only the purpose of modern buccaneers in the Caribbean sea. Its iniquities must be revealed, he says, even if he has to break senate restraints.

Let's have the scandal with its details. The treaty recommends itself. Its provisions seem equitable and wise and far sighted. It would establish orderly government in a country this nation needs as an orderly neighbor. It would guarantee Nicaraguan independence under a protectorate. It would give this nation rights which seem valuable. It would contribute, in compensation for these rights, the sum of $3,000,000 to the relief of Nicaraguan indebtedness.

If this money is going into the wrong pockets let's have the story and correct the error, but the financial consideration is the least important of all involved.

Principles, Not Names.

In reply to the G. O. P. "harmony" overtures Harry Woods, the Progressive editor of the Wellington Daily News, says: "I care nothing for the word 'Progressive' and have no feeling against the word 'Republican.' If the Progressive leaders would steal a presidential nomination from the members of the party, I'd quit it with the same enthusiasm as I got away from the rotten Republican hulk. Principles are everything—names nothing. If the Republicans would kick out the thieving leaders it would be a mighty respectable organization. And as to Teddy, I couldn't go back on a man who in seven years made the greatest record ever made in the presidency, all things considered."

Is This Change of Opinion?

President Wilson in a formal statement said "the business of the country has been chiefly promoted in recent years by enterprises organized on a great scale, and that the vast majority of the men connected with what we have come to call big business are honest, incorruptible and patriotic." That must have been after that $12,000,000 check from the Riggs National bank had been deposited in the treasury.

Must Explain to Voters.

Hope and confidence have little part in the Democratic campaign of this year.

It will be a defensive campaign from start to finish with every Democratic candidate.

Neither the good crops nor the distribution of patronage will bring strength to the senators and representatives who have to face the voters [illegible]

Some people burn their bridges behind them, and others fireproof theirs.

For proud flesh use occasional applications of Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

Duty comes before pleasure. If you don't believe it, look in the dictionary.

For thrush use Hanford's Balsam. Get it into the bottom of the affected part. Adv.

When Comparison Is Odious.

"Why, say, a man's as safe in Mexico as he is in Chicago."

"Is it as bad as that?"—Life.

NOTHING SO EFFECTIVE AS ELIXIR BABEK For Malaria, Chills & Fever. Chief of Police, J. W. Reynolds, Newport News, Va., says: It is a pleasure to recommend Babek for Chills and Fever. Have used it when necessary for 20 years and have found no remedy as effective." Elixir Babek 50 cents, all druggists, or by Parcel Post, prepaid, from Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

A Good Move—Babek Liver Pills. 50 pills - - - - - - - - 25 cents

The Dear Girls.

"He seems determined to kiss me," remarked the girl who was fishing for a compliment. "I wonder why?"

"Hard to tell," said the other girl. "This is the season for freak bets."

THINK OF THE MILLIONS that have been relieved in the past 75 years by Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills and decide whether they are not worth a trial. They regulate the bowels, stimulate the liver and purify the blood. Adv.

Reprieve Angers a Murderer.

An unusual scene was enacted at Versailles (France) jail recently, when the public prosecutor went to inform two murderers that their death sentence had been commuted to penal servitude for life.

One, Joseph Brugen, received the news joyfully, but the other, Louis Louis, exclaimed: "What, you asked the jury for my head, and now you come to torture me by a reprieve? I do not want it; I must have liberty or the guillotine. I won't go to the galleys at any price."

So saying he rushed upon the public prosecutor, seized him by the throat and endeavored to strangle him. The keeper had great difficulty in releasing the official and putting the convict in a strait jacket.

Express.

A German princeling went to pay a visit of ceremony to a small but ancient and honorable city situated upon a branch line of railway. His serene highness had just stepped from his private car upon the bunting-decked station platform. Greetings had been exchanged with the local receiving party.

"And what," said the prince to the burgomaster, "are those children doing there on the tracks?"

"Serene highness," replied the burgomaster, bowing low, "those are the young maidens of the city who ran before and scattered flowers in front of the locomotive of your highnesses train."

The Other Side of It.

"The early bird catches the worm," observed the sage.

"Yes," replied the fool, "but look how much longer he has to wait for dinner time."

DANDRUFF COVERED SCALP

401 W. Adams St., Brownwood, Texas.—"I had a severe case of dry itching scalp. Then my head had blisters and pimples all over it and when I scratched it the irritation and itching were dreadful. They continued to hurt and smart and burn. My hair fell out badly and gradually my scalp was covered with dandruff as dry as powder. It was the same burning in my limbs, so bad that I could not sleep or rest night or day.

"Then I began with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and received almost instantaneous relief. I used the Cuticura Ointment freely all over my head once a week and the Cuticura Soap for cleansing as often as necessary until I was cured." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Clingman, Jan. 30, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

A poor girl generally has to marry an old man with money, or a young man without; her ideal seldom comes to time.

Only One "BROMO QUININE"

To get the genuine, call for full name, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 25c.

There is a screw loose in the eternal fitness of things when a man who wears a wig has to shave every morning.

How To Give Quinine To Children

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

After reaching the pinnacle of fame, many a climber has found it an uncomfortable roost.

His Method, Exactly.

The teacher in an East side school was reproaching Tommy, who had "licked" Heine in satisfaction for a grievance. Tommy's penitence was at a low ebb, and teacher's golden-rule admonishing fell on unreceptive ears. But at last she struck a responsive note.

"The right way to treat your enemies, Tommy," she said, "is to heap coals of fire on his head."

"Yes, ma'am, that's jes what I done," said Tommy, brightening. "I give him 'ell!"

Tetterine Conquers Poison Oak.

I enclose 50 cents in stamps for a box of Tetterine. I have poison oak on me again, and that is all that has ever cured it. Please hurry it on to

M. E. Hamlett.

Montalba, Tex., May 21, '08.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm, Itching Piles, Old Itching Sores, Dandruff, Chilblains and every form of Scalp and Skin Disease. Tetterine 50c; Tetterine Soap 25c. Your druggist, or by mail from the manufacturer. The Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

With every mail order for Tetterine we give a box of Shuptrine's 10c Liver Pills free. Adv.

Having to buy anything interferes with the spiritual pleasures of shopping.

All the Difference.

The four persons were having some trouble in getting seated as the train rolled out of the station. One, a truthful looking old lady, insisted on taking a seat facing the front of the train.

"You know, I can never ride with my back to the engine," she said.

"But, auntie, this train hasn't got any engine," suggested one of the younger ones selfishly. "It has a motor."

And the old lady, mollified, sat comfortably with her back to the motor.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

A popular man is one who doesn't say smart things at the expense of his friends.

For any sore use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. Adv.

Women outnumber the men in New York, Berlin, Paris and London.

An Ounce of Prevention

Most people who enjoy a frequent drink of beer or liquor fail to realize it's weakening effect on the kidneys.

Kidney weakness sets up backache, headache, rheumatic pain, nervousness, and disorders of the urine and if neglected leads to dropsy, gravel, and Bright's disease.

In the early stages kidney weakness can be corrected. Doan's Kidney Pills tone and strengthen weak kidneys and are used with success all over the civilized world. There's no other kidney remedy so well recommended.

A Mississippi Case

J. A. Padgett, prop. grocery & general store, N. Pearl St., Columbia, Miss., says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and the secretions pained in passage and contained sediment. My back ached constantly and it was hard for me to breathe. A specialist said my case was hopeless. Nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They drove away the pains in my back, I gained in weight and I am now in good health."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Children Cry For

Fletcher's

CASTORIA

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhœa. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

The New Catechism.

A well-known doctor of Savannah has two children—a little daughter, aged six, and a small son, aged four. One day he overheard the little girl putting her brother through an examination in Bible history.

"Do you know who the first man and the first woman were?"

"Yeth, I do," lisped the boy.

"I'll bet you don't know their names," pressed the sister.

"I'll bet I do!" replied the little fellow.

"Well, what were their names, then, Mr. Smarty?"

"Edem and Ab!" answered the little boy.—Saturday Evening Post.

EAS-IT

The NEW Scientific PRESCRIPTION for Headache, Neuralgia, Nervousness, Indigestion and Toothache. Guaranteed to give relief in fifteen to thirty minutes. Money back if you want it. Ask your druggist. Contains NO OPIATE. Adv.

No News.

"Pretty maiden, it is on the cards that you are going to marry."

"Of course it is, when we've just sent them out."

To Make Mucilage.

A mucilage which holds with surprising tenacity can be made by boiling a Spanish onion for a short time and then pressing the juice from it.

There are but two really great disappointments in life. One is not getting what you want and the other is getting it.

For sprains, bruises and all open wounds, Hanford's Balsam will give quick relief. These may happen any day and the prudent man will always keep a bottle on hand. Adv.

The Way of It.

"I suppose you sat at the captain's table?"

"The captain sat at our table," responded Mrs. Nurich, with dignity.

On the other hand, the way of the transgressor frequently seems to be pretty smooth.

Women are allowed to qualify as food inspectors in New York.

Some Headline.

At the time of the Volturno disaster a literary critic for a certain New York newspaper was acting as substitute for a copy reader who was ill. It fell to him to write a head for the sctory of the disaster. The story was full of thrills, of course, and he was told to condense them all in a big black line to extend across the page, leading the paper.

He thought for some time, tore up several attempts, and finally submitted this: "O Restless Sea!"

Not for Her.

"What did you say to him, dad?"

"I asked him if he could support you in the style to which you had become accustomed."

"And he?"

"He said he could."

"If he tries it I'll leave him."

Two Reflections.

Hicks—Trying to be a good fellow has sent many a man to the bad.

Wicks—True! And many a man has lost his own health from too frequently drinking other people's.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

It probably never occurs to an eighteen-year-old boy that he'll be a man some day and know as little as his dad.

Charity may begin at home, but you frequently find it out when you call.

Tutt's Pills

The dyspeptic, the debilitated, whether from excess of work of mind or body, drink or exposure in

MALARIAL REGIONS,

will find Tutt's Pills the most genial restorative ever offered the suffering invalid.

SORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion

relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures without pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for SALTER'S. Only from Salter Dispensary, 48 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

Why Scratch?

"Hunt's Cure" is guaranteed to stop and permanently cure that terrible itching. It is compounded for that purpose and your money will be promptly refunded WITHOUT QUESTION if Hunt's Cure fails to cure Itch, Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm or any other Skin Disease. 50c at your druggist's, or by mail direct if he hasn't it. Manufactured only by A. B. RICHARDS MEDICINE CO., Sherman, Texas

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists. 50c. large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

80 ACRE Kiowa Co. farm; $5 an acre; $100 cash, balance 5%, close to town. GEO. B. TARR, Cold Springs, Oklahoma

HEADACHE instantly cured; no harmful drugs. Dr. Goode's headache and fever tablets. Package 25c. Guaranteed. Buckeye Chemical Co., Akron, O.

AGENTS Handle remarkable money making, easy to handle, easy to sell; write quick. Carl Hoffman, 1336 Sherman Ave., Roxwood, [illegible]

WHIRLWIND seller; absolutely new; everyone buys, big profits, repeat sales, particulars free. Guy A. Richards, Box 20, Lawrence Ill., [illegible]

Drug Dead Sellers Get this new one. $25 daily sells on sight; repeats. Particulars Free. McGill, 27 Mission Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn.

COLORED AGENTS Send 35 cents for half-pound box Shaving Powder. Guarantee shave without razor. Makes hunger disappear. Write today. Good profits. Southern Specialty Co., Box 788, Memphis, Tenn.

523 ACRE Stock and dairy farm. Sullivan County, N. Y. 75 cultivated; good buildings. Daniel Richardson, Port Jervis, N. Y.

You Look Prematurely Old

Unity-Chilton Baptist High School

A High grade co-educational institution. Prepares for college classes or for Christian citizenship. Classical, General, Scientific and Business causes. Special departments in Piano, Voice and Expression. A Specially Trained Faculty.

High Grade Work at a REASONABLE Cost

We invite Comparrison with other four year High Schools. Board in good families $12 to $15, according to accommodations. The President and his wife will give special attention to girls. For further information call on or address

Rev. JOHN A. POOL, PH.D., Pres.

20 eachers 700 Students

State Normal School

Florence, Alabama.

This institution has an honorable record of forty-one years in Traming Teachers For Efficient Service.

Seven hundred students were enrolled last session from thirty-six counties.

This school welcomes young men and women of intellect and character who wish to be fitted for the profession of teaching.

Our graduates are holding many of the most responsible positions in Alabama.

Twenty teachers in the faculty, including departments of domestic science and domestic arts. Manual training and applied agriculture together with a systematic study of rural problems will be organized.

Board may be had either in the dormitory or in private families.

The value of the grounds, buildings and equipment is conservatively estimated at $240,000.

Next session begins September 8. Write for catalogue.

Henry J. Willingham, LL.D., President. E. A. Henry, Secretary.

"AUBURN"

Alabama Polytechnic Institute

The Oldest School of Technology in the South

69 Professors and instructors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Laboratories

Summer Session July 24 to September 4, 1914.

Next Session Begins Wednesday, September 9, 1914.

New Buildings and New Equipment.

DEPARTMENTS

I. College of Engineering and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, and Mining Engineering, Architecture, Metallurgy, Mechanic Arts, Technical Drawing, Machine Design, etc.

II. College of Agricultural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture, Animal Husbandry, Botany, Entomology, Chemistry.

Department of Pharmacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and Two-Year Courses).

III. Academic Departments—History, English, Mathematics, Latin, German, French, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Psychology.

IV. College of Veterinary Medicine.

Expenses. Free tuition to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to non-residents. Board in Dormitory and with private families. For Catalogue and Further Information, Address

CHAS. C. THACH, LL. D., President, AUBURN, ALA.

List of Letters

Remaining uncalled for at the Clanton Post Office for the week ending Aug. 1, 1914:

Ladies—Mrs. P. C. Swindel, Mrs. Ida Rice, Miss Hattie B. Home, Miss Annia Head, Miss Lillie Henderson, Mrs. Sallie Turner, Mrs. Emma Ganth, Miss Fannie Bower, Mrs. Lellie Guesby.

Gentlemen—Robert H. Harper P. Austin, Leon Longem S. C. Courtney, Oscar Maxwell, Philip J. McDonough, H. C. Maxwell, Eugene Mims, Charley Williams, Rev. W. I. Williams, Willie Turner.

These Letters will be sent to the Dead Letter Office August 15, 1914. if not delivered before. In calling for the above, please say 'Advertised, giving date of list.

F. O. Dudley, P. M.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist.
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. F. C. Smith
Thorsby, Ala.
Office Masonic Bldg.
Hours—8 to 10 and 3 to 5.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —
MONUMENTS
AND GRAVESTONES
Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by
J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA

For first class work, painting paper hanging, decorating, etc., see E. J. Townsend Clanton Ala. He guarantees his work. Patronage of country people given attention 7 16 4

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This conpon and 80 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan., 1.

You Can Be Strong

If you are easily exhausted it denotes weakness. Probably for some reason your system is not being properly nourished. It may be a lack of proper food or possibly the revitalizing elements of what you eat are not assimilated. In either case our POINDEXTER'S TONIC will work a speedy change in your condition. It makes rich blood, strong nerves, clear complexion, increases weight. If you follow our directions and be patient in the dosage you will be delighted with the results. It is sold by druggists everywhere. Price $1.00 per bottle.

Noticeto Teachers

The next teachers' institute for the white teachers of Chilton county will be held at Clanton, beginning on Monday, August 10th and continue five days. Every teacher, except those holding a life certificete, will be required to attend every day, and must be there by twelve o'clock, noon Monday.

You are requested by the instructor, T. W. Smith, to bring the Elementary Manual of the Course of study and Colgrove's "The teacher and the school."

W. T. Bean, Co. Supt. Ed.

An Aching Back and Bearing Down Pains

Only suffering womanhood knows what it means to struggle against the paralyzing influence of these symptoms. There is household work that must be done and only a weak, nervous, discouraged woman to do it. It is almost a hopeless prospect. No wonder these poor women find life a dreary burden. There is help at hand, however, for those who will use it.

DR. SIMMONS Squaw Vine Compound

Is a Woman's Medicine

It is as pleasant to take as the juice of a sweet orange yet it performs wonders. It puts an end to suffering, builds up the nervous system, strengthens the appetite and acts beneficially on women's delicate organism, promoting regularity, cheerfulness, a strong vigorous body and clear, healthy complexion.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers Price $1.00 Per Bottle

C. F. Simmons Medicine Co. ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

For sale by ALRED DRUG Co.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle; 2 milch cows and calves—freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.

Alfred Popwell.

Experienced Women Advise Mother's Friend

Because it is so perfectly safe to use and has been of such great help to a host of expectant mothers, these women, experienced in this most happy period, advise the use of "Mother's Friend."

Applied externally to the abdominal muscles its purpose is to relieve the undue tension upon the cords and ligaments resulting from muscular expansion. Beneath the surface is a network of fine nerve threads and the gentle, soothing embrocation, "Mother's Friend," is designed to so lubricate the muscular fibres as to avoid the unnecessary and continuous nagging upon this myriad of nerves. It is a reflex action.

Applied to the breasts it affords the proper massage to prevent caking.

Thousands of women have reason to believe in this splendid help under the trying ordeal of motherhood. Their letters are eloquent evidence of its great value to women. In use for many years it has come to be a standard remedy for the purpose.

There is scarcely a well-stocked drug store anywhere but what you can easily obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" and in nearly every town and village is a grandma who herself used it in earlier years. Expectant mothers are urged to try this splendid assistant to comfort.

Mother's Friend is prepared by Bradfield Regulator Co., 410 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Send for our little book.

FOR SALE—171 acres good, almost level land; one half is red land; one mile from Jemison. 2 good homes, 1 good barn; 80 acres in cultivation. Also have one extra good buggy-horse and buggy for sale. If interested see me. This is a bargain and you will have to hurry or it will be sold.

W. A. Reynolds,
6-8-2t Jemison, Ala.

CITROLAX CITROLAX GIVE IT TO THE CHILDREN

Finest physic in the world for children. They love to take it—it tastes like lemonade. It is mild—and suits their sensitive organs. It is thorough—and leaves their system cleansed, sweet and wholesome. It does the same for grown people. 25c. 50c. For sale everywhere.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDOX

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Prompt Service Day or Night

Two New Five Passenger Cars

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone 36.

Pilgrims Rest

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me space to say a few words.

Saturday was the closing day of our singing school,

On Sunday morning at 9:45 the people of the community and neighboring communities met and began singing praises unto Jehovah with hearts full of the spririt and love of Christ. The services were opened with a song by Prof. J. M. Williams, and prayer by C. W. Langston. The music for the morning was directed by J. M, Williams, R. M. Brigance, C. W. Langston, and A. A. Beard. A sermon was preached by Rev. W. H. Connell. Music for the afternoon was directed by Prof. James Franklin and others.

The day was greatly enjoyed by all present, and we thand all the singers for their splendid music.

We hope to have Prof. Williams teach us another school next summer, and we recommend him as being an efficient teacher.

R. W. Kendrick.

DON'T TAKE CALOMEL HERE'S A BETTER REMEDY

Taking calomel is mighty risky and often times dangerous.

You ought to get along without taking calomel yourself or giving it to your family, when you can get a remedy that takes its place. Dodssn's Liver Tone is an agreeable vegetable liquid that starts the liver to action just as surely as calomel does. But, unlike calomel, Dodson's Liver Tone does not stimulate the liver too much. It gives relief gently. Calomel acts so strongly that it may leave you worse than you were at first, and calomel also sometimes causes salivation. Dodson's Liver Tone works well and never harms.

A large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is sold for fifty cents by Alred Drug Company. It always has given such perfect satisfaction that your money will be given back to you with a smile if you buy a bottle and are not perfectly satisfied with it in every way.

FIFTH SUNDAY A

The Fifth Sunday M the Unity and Chilton Associations will meet loh church the fifth Sat Sunday in this month. all who can will come.

T. J. Deason,

GRIST MILL FOR

Outfit contains one inch corn rocks, corn crusher, corn sheller, P. gasoline engine, and All in good order. Call

F. E. Gro
Thors

Purifies Blood With Telling

Gives Conscious Ev Its Direct Acti

S. S. S., the famous blood talks as it sweeps its way circulation. Its action is so often in some forms of skin appearance of the eruption night, the itch and redness recovery begins immediately.

As a matter of fact, there ent in S. S. S. which serves pose of stimulating each the body to the healthy and tion of its own essential is why it regenerates the blood it has such a tremendous coming eczema, rash, pimples affections.

And in regenerating the has a rapid and positive upon all those irritating cause rheumatism, sore loss of weight, thin, pale weariness of muscle and erally experienced as spring bottle of S. S. S. at any a few days you will not energetic, but you will new life. S. S. S. is laboratory of The Swift Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. very Skilful Medical who have any blood disease nature may write freely special book of instructions everywhere by drug stores general stores. Get Do not accept Guess.

Card of

We want to t of our communi ness during th death of our John W. Boy richest blessing Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Mary Bo

THE

THE UNION 11th Year

RESSIVES FOR PRO- ION AND A SCIENTIF- RIFF COMMISSION

attitude of the Progres- arty on the tariff is per- xpressed in the Progres- atform adopted at Chicago gust 7, 1912, which reads ws:

elieve in a protective tar- h shall equalize conditions petition between the Unit- tes and foreign Counties, r the farmer and the man- er and which shall main- labor an adequate stand- iving.

blican tariffs used to be quite frankly by their iaries, by men who did ple to assert their private s, regardless of the gen- elfare. How much they ted to republiacn cam- nds in exchange for the e of taking what they lly wanted in the matter ction, rather than what siness needed, is a perti- uury.

o the election of Taft in people demanded a d revision of the tariff. blican party promised ion. The Taft adminis- nder the leadership of and Aldrich, miserably redeeming its promise merican people, and be- his earnest protest read Dolliver out of the re- party.

ast Democratic platform, hich Wilson was elected t, declared the imposi- he tariff to be illegal and itutional, except for the of revenue. It is there- parent that nothing can cted from the Democrats ay of protection. The ood bill has failed as ely to satisfy the people he Payne-Aldrich tariff. epresent the two extremes making.

Progressive party is op- o either extreme. We there must never again itical revision of the tar- country, and that the ation of what tariff rates dules will correctly and rry out the protective es should be committed xpert tariff commission, oved from the vicissitudes exigency and partisan ence. The republicans professing to favor the of a tariff commission. incerity of this pretense nstrated by the fact that ixty-first Congress they ee distinct opportunities such a measure, but in- passing the bill they beat nivance with the avow- ies of a tariff commis- violated the rules of use to do so. The re- congress and President to create such a tariff sion. The democratic s and President refused te such a commission. gressive party is the on- which offers the tired men and anxious work- king men of the country and conservative reme- ch will prevent for all the outrageous exac- Payne-Aldrich tariff ruinous consequences of Underwood tariff.

the Progressive party in a protective tariff. erican protective system me an established insti- tution, and when guarded and hone by a non-partisan, iff commission, abuses to which it by the overloads o ilege, will guard farmer and workin ery legitimrte wa American produc can market when est goods and sells est prices.

The Progressive es that the tari should have plen ascertain whether bor employed in p tries is receiving proportion of the protection and th nation should be the farmer.

Neither of the approves of the P for a tariff com Progressive party bill in Congress such a commision May 6, 1913. It the committee means, where it slumber until su people place the ment in the hand sive party.

Let every Prog shoulder to the w paign and let the the position of party on this impo W. H. Hinebewg

Ran Awa The Coun

Mr. W. A. Huc tendent of the c the support of th in our office last quested us to mal ment regarding farm who ran aw part of January Lizzie Pierce, heard of was i hood northwest information as bouts would be should be sent to the county farm, No. 8.

Business Closes fi

The branch Southern Busin Mobile, which h ing here for the under the manag G. O. Anderson, last week, and M for his home at E ing the term the of more than fo enrolled for the offered, most of ed the work, an mas. The scho was well condu times commande most hearty co-o who were in a teachers and pecially Mr. An themselves well in going away with them the r ation of every they had dealing

LEE MADDOX
ILES FOR HIRE
rice Day or Night
ive Passenger Cars
NTON, ALA.
Phone 36.

RE EXCURSIONS
day until August 30th
TO Coast Resorts
IP FARES FROM CLANTON
$6.65
8.00 Ocean Springs 8.35
8.40 Gulfport - - 9.00
9.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.30
n Days Return Limit
ALSO
ntil September 30th, regular round rist Tickets at slightly higher fares of October 31st.
For particulars apply
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

est

-Please
y a few sing day

t 9:45 the nity and ies met ises unto ll of the ist. The l with a Williams,
Langston.
ning was
ms, R. M.
ston, and
mon was
l. Connell.
n was di
Franklin

y enjoyed thand all
r splendid

Prof. Wil-her school we recom
n efficient

Kendrick.

EL R REMEDY

ighty risky
erous.
along with-yourself or amily, when y that takes Liver Tone
table liquid
o action just does. But, son's Liver
ate the liver
relief gently,
ongly that it
se than you calomel also salivation.
e works well

of Dodson's for fifty cents
pany. It al-
n perfect sat-money will be with a smile if d are not per-
it in every

FIFTH SUNDAY

The Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Unity and Chilton County Associations will meet with Mt. Moloh church the fifth Saturday and Sunday in this month. We invite all who can will come.

T. J. Deason, P.

GRIST MILL FOR SALE

Outfit contains one set of 38-inch corn rocks, corn and cob crusher, corn sheller, one 20 H. P. gasoline engine, and fixtures. All in good order. Call or write

F. E. Gronquist,
Thorsby

Purifies Blood With Telling

Gives Conscious Evi
Its Direct Actio

S. S. S., the famous blood p talks as it sweeps its way th culation. Its action is so often in some forms of skin appearance of the eruptions night, the itch and redness recovery begins immediately.
As a matter of fact, there ent in S. S. S. which serves pose of stimulating each the body to the healthy and tion of its own essential it has such a tremendous coming eczema, rash, pimples afflictions.
And in regenerating the
has a rapid and positive upon all those irritating cause rheumatism, some loss of weight, thin, pale weariness of mind and erally experienced as spring bottle of S. S. S. at any a few days you will not only energetic, but you will new life. S. S. S. is laboratory of The Swift Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.
very efficient Medical who have any blood
nature may write freely special book everywhere to see

ESSIVES FOR PRO-
ON AND A SCIENTIF-RIFF COMMISSION

titude of the Progresrty on the tariff is per-pressed in the Progres-form adopted at Chicago gust 7, 1912, which reads
ws:
elieve in a protective tar-
h shall equalize conditions petition between the Unites and foreign Countries,
r the farmer and the maner and which shall main-labor an adequate stand-living.
blican tariffs used to be quite frankly by their aries, by men who did ple to assert their private , regardless of the gen-are. How much they ed to republiacn camds in exchange for the
of taking what they ly wanted in the matter
tion, rather than what ness needed, is a perti-ury.
the election of Taft in people demanded a revision of the tariff.
blican party promised
on. The Taft adminis-
nder the leadership of and Aldrich, miserably redeeming its promise
merican people, and be-his earnest protest read Dolliver out of the re-
party.
ast Democratic platform,
hich Wilson was elected
t, declared the imposihe tariff to be illegal and itutional, except for the of revenue. It is there-parent that nothing can cted from the Democrats
ay of protection. The ood bill has failed as ely to satisfy the people
he Payne-Aldrich tariff.
epresent the two extremes
making.
Progressive party is op-either extreme. We there must never again
dical revision of the tar-country, and that the tion of what tariff rates
les will correctly and ry out the protective should be committed
pert tariff commission,
ved from the vicissitudes
exigency and partisan
nce. The republicans professing to favor the
of a tariff commission.
incerity of this pretense onstrated by the fact that Sixty-first Congress they ee distinct opportunities such a measure, but in-passing the bill they beat nivance with the avow-ies of a tariff commis-d violated the rules of use to do so. The re-congress and President to create such a tariff ion. The democratic
s and President refused
te such a commission.
gressive party is the on-which offers the tired men and anxious work-king men of the country and conservative reme-ch will prevent for all the outrageous exaca Payne-Aldrich tariff
ruinous consequences of Underwood tariff.
the Progressive party
in a protective tariff.
erican protective system
e an established institution, and when properly safeguarded and honestly regulated by a non-partisan, scientific tariff commission, free from the abuses to which it has been put by the overloads of special privilege, will guard the American farmer and working man in every legitimrte way against the American producer the American market when he makes honest goods and sells them at honest prices.

The Progressive party believes that the tariff commission should have plenary power to ascertain whether or not the labor employed in protected industries is receiving a fair and just proportion of the benefits of that protection and that no discrimination should be made against the farmer.

Neither of the old parties approves of the Progressive plan for a tariff commission. The Progressive party introduced a bill in Congress providing for such a commision under date of May 6, 1913. It was referred to the committee on ways and means, where it will peaceably slumber until such time as the people place the reins of government in the hands of the Progressive party.

Let every Progressive put his shoulder to the wheel in this campaign and let the people know the position of the Progressive party on this important issue.

W. H. Hinebewgh Chairman.

Ran Away From The County Farm

Mr. W. A. Huckabee, Superintendent of the county farm for the support of the paupers was in our office last week and requested us to make an announcement regarding an inmate of the farm who ran away in the latter part of January. Her name is Lizzie Pierce, and when last heard of was in the neighborhood northwest of Jemison. Any information as to her whereabouts would be appreciated, and should be sent to Dora Pierce, at the county farm, Clanton, R.F.D. No. 8.

Business College Closes first Term

The branch school of the Southern Business College of Mobile, which has been operating here for the past six months under the management of Prof. G. O. Anderson, closed its session last week, and Mr. Andeson left for his home at Biloxi, Miss. During the term there were a total of more than forty students who enrolled for the various courses offered, most of whom completed the work, and received diplomas. The school on the whole was well conducted, and at all times commanded the best and most hearty co operation of those who were in attendance. The teachers and management, especially Mr. Anderson, acquitted themselves well while here, and in going away certainly carry with them the respect and admiration of everyone with whom they had dealings while here.

Card of Thanks

We want to thank the people of our community for their kindness during the sickness and death of our brother and son John. W. Boyd. May God's richest blessings rest upon them.

Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Taylor, and Mrs. Mary Boyd.

Report of County Health Officer

To the Honorable Probate Judge and Commissioners of Chilton county.

Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit my report for the month of July. As required by law, I inspected the county jail and found it to be in good condition. I visited the poorhouse on July 6, and found same to be in good condition.

All doctors have reported births and deaths except the following: J. W. Maddox, Mt, Creek, J. J. Dubose, Stanton, W. A. Mason, Riderville, A. M. Wooley, Jemison.

All midwives have reported.

The vital statistics are as follows:

Births, white 56; colored 2; Total 58.

Deaths, white 18; colored 5; total 23.

The following cases of infectuous diseases were reported and have been carefully looked after: Typhoid fever, 18; tuberculosis, 2; diphtheria, 1; small-pox, 1.

During the past month I hove made three visits to the Thorsby neighborhood for the purpose of trying to surpress the typhoid epidemic in that section. I have also looked after a small pox case at Riderville and a diphtheria epidemic near Mineral Springs This is a typical type of the disease and demands a very careful attention from the attending physician, lest some of the cases be overlooked and the disease spread to an alarming extent. There is also a small epidemic of Typhoid existing at Maplesville. Owing to indisposition I have not yet been able to cover that ground, but detailed the county nurse to investigate and report, what she has done.

It seems that proper precautions are being taken and that the Mayor of Maplesville, Dr. W. E. Kay is putting forth an earnest effort to eradicate the disease.

Respectfully submitted,
V. J. Gragg, M.D.,
County Health Officer.

GRIST MILL FOR SALE

Outfit contains one set of 38-inch corn rocks, corn and cob crusher, corn sheller, one 20 H P. gasoline engine, and fixtures. All in good order. Call or write

F. E. Gronquist,
Thorsby, Ala.

Progressive State Ticket

At the State Convention of the Progressive party in Birmingham on Aug. 5, the following ticket was nominated to make the fight against the Democrats and Republicans in November:

For Governor, Dr. E. H. Gross of Gadsden.

For United States Senator, Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby.

For Congressman at large, G. A. Saylor of St. Clair.

For Lieutenant Governor, C. B. Forman of Etowah.

For Attorney General, Duncan Trimble of Etowah.

For Secretary of State, T. T. Nock of Jefferson.

For Auditor, J. W. Cochran of Madison.

For Treasurer, J. F. Suttcrer of Cullman.

For Commissioner of Agriculture, Sid Berry of Mobile.

For Railroad Commissioner, H. H. Bolton of Mobile.

For Railroad Commissioner, J. M. Green of Baldwin.

Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention will be held at Shilo church near South Calera, 1st, Sunday in September and Saturday before. Books used will be Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony. People coming by rail will get off at South Calera. Those wishing to be met will notify W. F. Armstrong, Calera, Alabama R. F. D. We are expecting several visitors at this session, among them we expect Miss Jackson the far famed director of the Birmingham class.

T. C. Jackson President, Z. J. Jones Secretary.

Notice

All music teachers and others, who may be interested, are requested to meet at Clanton, office of County Superintendent of Education August 15th, at 3:00 p. m. for the purpose of organizing a Music Teachers Institute. Done by order of Chilton County Singing Convention No. 1.

J. L. Harris
R. A. Smith } Committee
H. A. Glasscock

The Thorsby Institute

Thorsby, Ala.

A School that is thoroughly Christian but not sectarian. Well known throughout the County for its Good Equipment, Well Trained Teachers and Thorough Works.

Prepares for any grade of teachers' certificates, for college or for practical life.

Courses in Domestic Science, Manual Training, Scientific Agriculture, Bookkeeping, and Music.

Next Year opens Sept. 8, 1914.

For Catalogue and further Information, address

S. H. Herbert, Principal,
Thorsby, Ala.

The Ladies Aid Society Meet

The Methodist Ladies Aid Society Entertained at the Parsonage, on Monday evening last, in honor of their husbands. There was a lavish supper spread consisting of the very edibles the men love best which every one present enjoyed. In fact you would have thought the "old folk" were transformed into "young folk" could you have heard the merry voices, and the gay laughter. The only trouble the men had was to find a place to hide the chicken bones. The only trouble the ladies had was the fear of being sick on tomorrow. This was a supper right and no PAY Supper. The only ones who missed having a good jolly time were those who did not come. The Semi-Annual Election of Officers for the society were as follows: Mrs. Sam Johnston, President Mrs. J. H. Middleton Vice President, Mrs. E. A. Matthews, Secretary Mrs. W. W. Fox, Treasurer. Those present were: Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle and wife, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Callen, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Broadhead, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Matthews, Dr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Roper, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. H. Headley, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Gore, Mr. and Mrs. W.F. Longcrier, Mr D. Wilson.

The next regular monthly Business Meeting will be held with Mrs. Jennie Davis, on the second monday afternoon in September.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the good people of this community for their kindness and hospitality shown us during the sickness and death of our two little children. We also wish to thank Dr. Sam Johnson for his faithful service.

J. R. Robinson and wife.

Alabama Banks In Good Condition

Alex Walker, State Superintendent of Banking Department Says Optimism Reigns Among Alabama Bankers.

Alabama banks are in sound condition and Alabama bankers are optimistic and confident that they can handle the financial situation in this State with a firm grasp in case of unfavorable conditions that may arise from an European war, according to Alex E. Walker, superintendent of the State Banking Department, who has just returned from Birmingham where he held a conference with bankers from all parts of the State.

Mr. Walker declared yesterday that he talked with many of the leading bankers of Alabama and that they are unusually optimistic on conditions, despite the fact that the war cricis is upon the financial institutions of the world.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of expressing our gratitude and sincere thanks to our many friends for their beautiful floral offerings, kind help and sympathy given us at the death of our darling baby girl, Willie Margaret.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Pool.

Thorsby Has Clean up Day

Never in the history of Thorsby has the town had such a general cleaning up, as was given it on Friday. An epidemic of Typhoid Fever for the past two months has aroused the people to the necessity of exerting themselves to stamp it out.

Under the directions of Miss Helen Harlan, Red Cross Nurse for Chilton County, the ladies of the town have been organized as the Thorsby branch of the Chilton County Improvement Association; their first work was to discover the source of Typhoid infection which proved to be "open wells" receiving drainage or seepage from unprotected water closets, which were also accessible to flies, well known to be carriers of Typhoid germs. To prevent further contamination of food or water from this source, the Town Council passed an ordainance requiring all water closets to be provided with "Dry Pail System" and to be made fly proof, and to complete the work. The ladies have interested not only the Council members, but men women and children to devote a day to civic improvement cleaning the streets, cutting grass and weeds, gathering and hauling away rubbish and cleaning up generally.

The ladies provided a picnic dinner on Thorsby Institute Campus, and sold Ice Cream and cake to secure money for their treasury.

There have been no deaths from Typhoid Fever, and no recent cases at Thorsby. All patients are now convalescent and it is hoped that the disease is under control and with vigilence may be subdued.

Institute

The Teachers Institute of Chilton county convened at the court house in Clanton, Aug. 10, 1914.

The Institute was called to order by County Supt. W. T. Bean who made a brief talk, setting forth the advantages of Institute work, which was quite appropriate for the occasion.

The conductors were introduced by Supt. W. T. Bean, who were Mr. T. W. Smith of Montgomery and Miss Rosa Strickland of the Birmingham high school.

The Chilton county teachers are highly pleased with their conductors. Many interesting topics to teachers have already been discussed by Mr. Smith, who has succeeded in creating considerable interest in vocational training. Then, again, his explanation are far above the average. Miss Strickland is hard to excell in making people think for themselves.

The Institute had a rare treat yesterday by having the privilege of listening to Prof. E. M. Wright of Troy Normal school lecture on the science of teaching. He pointed out some interesting thoughts.

Ninety-two teachers have enrolled up to the present date.

A concise report of the week's work will appear in the county papers next week and one or two of the state papers.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle, 2 milch cows and calves—freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.

Alfred Pugsell.

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 18

THE UNION-BANNER

FRANCE BREAKS WITH AUSTRIA

FRENCH GOVERNMENT CHARGES AUSTRIANS VIOLATED THEIR PROMISES.

MAKE FORMAL STATEMENT

French Consider Austrian Troop Movement As Acting Against France.

Paris.—It was officially announced that France had broken off diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary. The French ambassador at Vienna has left the Austrian capital and the Austro-Hungarian ambassador to Paris has asked for his passports.

In announcing the breaking off of relations with Austria the French foreign office made the following statement:

"Contrary to assurances given by Austria to the French minister of foreign affairs that no Austrian troops were taking part in the Franco-German war, the French government has ascertained beyond any possible doubt that certain Austrian troops are at present in Germany outside the Austrian frontier. These troops, which have set free certain German troops destined to be employed in fighting the French, ought indubitably, de facto and de ure to be considered as acting against the French. In the circumstances the French ambassador was ordered to leave Vienna.

"The Austrian ambassador at Paris, on being informed as to France's decision, asked for his passports."

LIEGE FORTS REMAIN INTACT

Offical Dispatches Declare Stragetic Importance of City Not Affected By German Occupation.

London.—Messages received in official headquarters from the Belgian general staff assert that the occupation of the town of Liege by the German troops has not had the slightest influence on the stragetic situation.

It is declared that so long as the ring of forts around Liege remains intact, as it still is, the guns command three of the principal roads by which the German army can advance. This, it is pointed out, makes it impossible for the Germans, under the present circumstances, to receive supplies or ammunition.

Every line of railroad between Liege and the German frontier is alleged to have been destroyed and the Belgian troops are said to have blown away every bridge, tunnel and culvert.

The Belgian general staff declares it has received intelligence that the Germans, expecting to take Liege in a few hours, brought with them only sufficient food for a few days and little ammunition, their plan being to rush Liege and make it their prepared base of operations.

The same authority states that the German assertion of the capture of 4000 Belgian prisoners is baseless, and adds that not a single Belgian soldier remains in the town of Liege, as they all are stationed in the forts.

So far as can be learned by the Belgian general staff, some 120,000 German troops were engaged at Liege. They are said to have so weakened as to be unable effectively to attack the forts.

On the other hand, it is argued that it is not possible for the forts to concentrate their fire on the town of Liege, itself.

The next development in the situation is to be the arrival of the Belgian main army, reported to be advancing rapidly from Louvain, in the northwest, to attack the Germans occupying the town of Liege.

ONE HUNDRED SPIES KILLED

Belgium Covered By Network of German Spies, Says Report from Brussels—Private Signs Discovered.

Brussels.—Belgium has been covered by a network of German spies. Six hundred already have been arrested and 100 were shot.

Some of the Germans captured wore uniforms of gendarmes, civic guards, soldiers and officers of the Belgian army. Many were armed with bombs and revolvers and rode in automobiles bearing false numbers. They also had in their possession telegrams and letters with the counterfeit signature of the Belgian minister of war. Just before and after the fighting private signs were discovered on bridges, military works and aqueducts indicating that these structures should be blown up.

Severe precautions have now been taken by the military authorities. No one is admitted at the railway stations without a permit, and automobiles are halted at every mile.

The war minister has issued a proclamation that every German and Austrian who does not declare himself within 24 hours will be considered a spy. Since the Flanders provinces were placed under martial law more than 2000 have been arrested as spies.

Forty thousand volunteers have been enrolled and have been formed into 20 regiments of 200 each.

THE WAR IN BRIEF.

Fighting by land, sea and air has begun in what will probably prove the greatest war of modern times. Eight European nations are involved and their armies of 17,000,000 men are in the field.

Germans occupy City of Liege, but forts remain intact.

One hundred spies were shot at Brussels.

France has broken off diplomatic relations with Austria-Hungary.

French army invades lower Alsace.

The British cruiser Amphion has been sunk by contact with a mine, with the loss of more than a hundred men.

Russian cavalry, endeavoring to enter east Prussia, have been driven back by the German frontier guards.

The United States offers good offices in effort to bring about European peace. Russians defeat Uhlan cavalry and invade Teuton territory. Germans lose several thousand killed and wounded in defeat at Liege by Belgian troops. Martial law proclaimed in Holland.

"A state of war Between Germany and England was declared at 12:15 English time, Wednesday, morning Aug. 5, in London.

Austria and Servia, who opened the struggle, are fighting along the Danube and Drina rivers, but their struggle has been lost sight of in the great cataclysm.

English and French ships sink one and capture two boats in Mediterranean.

Austria-Hungary to regard as France.

Before retiring from Mechsuren German troops are said to have set fire to numerous buildings, especially warehouses, where food and forage were stored. The forest of Hard, near Kolmar, is said to have been razed.

Martial law has been established in Alsace, where it is said the Germans announced that any persons suspected of Sympathizing with the French would be executed.

Detailed orders were issued by both the French and Belgian governments making the industrial resources of the two countries common property while the arms factories in Franch and Belgium are co-operating in supplying military material. Coal and grain will be utilized in common by the two countries, and there will be complete coordination of military resources.

The governor general of French West Africa telegraphed to the colonial office that the French forces there, co-operating with an English warship, have occupied the German colony of Togoland. At the same time the British warship appeared off Port Lome and the French garrison of Grand Popo in Dahomey crossed the frontier and occupied the eastern part of the German colony.

All wireless stations in France and Algeria were suppressed except in case where special authorization had been given or where they were used for military purposes.

Joseph Caillaux, former premier, has joined the French army and has been attached to the treasury department as inspector of finance.

Two German steamers, the Neptune and Adriana, have been seized at Rouen. Their officers and crews of 30 men were imprisoned.

FRENCH GERMAN AND BRITISH TROOPS FORM JUNCTION

Brussels.—Belgian official reports received by the war office, record the important fact that a junction has been effected by Belgian, British and French troops across the line of the German advance through Belgium.

The location of the three armies was not revealed, but it is understood they will act together. At Liege, where the Belgian garrison has presented a stubborn front to the German attackers, fighting has ceased and the Belgian troops and citizens have strengthened the city's defenses. Between the forts lines of earthworks have been thrown up by men who have worked without cessation night and day.

Reports reached here by way of London that according to announcements in Berlin, Liege had fallen into the hands of German troops.

The sighting of a German cavalry patrol to the south of Namur as evidence of the activity of the German of Liege which supposed to indicate they were reconnoitering to discover the position of the defending armies.

25,000 GERMANS KILLED IN ATTACK ON LIEGE.

London.—A dispatch to the Post from Brussels says that the Belgians granted the armistice for 24 hours required by the Germans, and that the latter now are collecting their wounded and burying their dead. The Germans have withdrawn to a less exposed position to recuperate.

On the authority of the Belgian war ministry, the German casualties in the battle around Liege number 25,000, according to their own admission. An official statement issued from Berlin described the attempt on the Liege forttress as unsuccessful and the assault of the Germans as a "unique act of heroism," and added that it will not have the slightest influence on the larger operations of the German army.

German diplomats have been using their utmost efforts to win Itlay to the German side by negotiations and a direct appeal to King Victor Emmanuel, but without success.

AUSTRIANS CONTINUE TO BOMBARD BELGRADE.

Belgrade.—The bombardment of Belgrade by the Austrians, which began July 29, has continued almost steadily since. The capital was crowded with women and children when the Austrian artillery opened fire, and there was a rush for the country, but the people were obliged to return because of the concentration of food supplies here.

In the first few days of the fighting the people were terror stricken, but gradually they became calmer and the merchants reopened their shops.

The royal palace, the British and German legations, and most of the larger buildings of the city have been struck by shells.

The legations and consulates are filled with frightened nationals.

FRENCH ARMY INVADE ALSACE

Paris.—The invasion of lower Alsace by a French army under Gen. Joseph Joffre, the French commander in chief, has awakened great enthusiasm throughout France.

French military authorities, while recognizing the occupation of Altkirch and Meulhausen by French troops is not of high strategical importance, believe the successful advance of the French army far across the German frontier will have considerable moral effect.

It is reported unofficially that Kolmar, farther to the north, has fallen into the hands of the French. None of these three places was strongly fortified and all lie outside the line of real German defense, being regarded as outposts of the strongly fortified cities. Their German garrisons numerically were fairly strong, but it was understood that in case of attack they merely would endeavor to hinder the French advance before falling back.

Neu Briesach, where they are said to have retired, is east of Kolmar, and is strongly fortified, while Strassburg, some distance to the north, the center of a great aggregation of German troops, is strongly fortified and supposed to be prepared for a long siege.

Official reports of fighting between the French and German troops state that the French losses were "not excessive," while those of the Germans are declared by the French to have been "very serious."

The Alsatian inhabitants are said to have been so overjoyed at the appearance of the French army that they tore up the frontier posts.

Reports of the arrival of an Austrian army corps on the Swiss frontier near Basel were the object of close attention by French military authorities. It was said that several more Austrian army corps were being organized in the Tyrol, whence they later would bt sent toward the French frontier. In view of this the French government asked the Austro-Hungarian ambassador to France, who remains at his post, to explain the intention of

WILSON EXTENDS GOOD OFFICES TO WARRING NATIONS

Washington.—President Wilson has offered his good offices to all the European powers involved in the war.

The President has sent the following message to Emperor William, Emperor Nicholas, Emperor Francis Joseph, President Poincaire and King George:

"As official head of one of the powers signatory to The Hague Conventions, I feel it to be my privilege and my duty under Article Three of that convention to ask to be in a position of most earnest friendship, that I should welcome an opportunity to act in the interest of European peace, either now or any other time that might be thought more suitable as an occasion to serve you and all concerned in a way that would afford me lasting cause for gratitude and happiness. (Signed)

"WOODROW WILSON."

RUSSIAN AND GERMAN VESSELS ARE SUNK

London.—A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Tokio says that the Russian cruiser Askold and the German cruiser Emden both have been sunk after an engagement off Weihai Wai, China.

London.—The first naval battle in the Mediterranean has occurred and resulted in a crushing defeat for the German sea forces. Dispatches received state that the French and Brit[illegible] fleets effected a junction where [illegible] of German warships [illegible]

SPECIAL SESSION STILL CONSIDERED

GOVERNOR HAS NOT YET REACHED DECISION ON CALLING EXTRA SESSION.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

No decision as to whether or not he will call the Alabama legislature together in extraordinary session has been made by Governor O'Neal. The governor has been urged by citizens in many parts of the State to assemble the legislature and has also been urged not to call that body together by other leading citizens.

If the legislature is called together, it will be the new legislature, the members of which will be elected in November. It is not believed that the present legislature will be called together by the governor should he decide that an extra session is necessary.

It is pointed out by those desiring an extra session that much good can be done by such a session in the matter of providing relief to Jefferson county from the burdens of the fee system and the passage of laws which will bring about a reformation in the judiciary system of the State.

It is known that Governor O'Neal will insist on certain changes in the present judicial system in case an extra session is called.

Much legislation of a preliminary nature would be discussed at the extra session so that it can be whipped into shape for the regular session next January.

During the last few weeks many members of the new legislature have called on the governor and discussed with him the probable business that will be taken up should a session of the new legislature be called.

Quite a number of the members of the present legislature have also called on the governor recently, among whom was E. B. Almon, speaker. Judge Almon talked with the governor this week, but no announcement of the subject under discussion was made.

1000 Apply for Pension.

More than 1,000 applications for pensions were considered by the state pension board at its annual meeting. These applications have been filed in all the counties of the State and were reviewed by the State board for final action.

No cases involving the removal of names from the pension rolls were heard at the annual meeting of the board. The purging of the rolls of the names of illegal pensioners will be continued by the board at a special session which will be held in September. More than 1,200 persons have been cited to appear before the board at the September session so show cause why their names should not be dropped from the rolls.

Members of the State pension board are Capt. John C. Wood, Demopolis, chairman; Dr. M. L. Wood of Montgomery, and Gen. Fred S. Ferguson of Birmingham. W. B. Moore of the State auditor's office, is secretary of the board. General Ferguson has served for almost a year as special master for the board in the work of purging the rolls of the names of illegal pensioners.

Must Serve Sentence.

Robert L. Sears of Montgomery county must serve a three-year term in the penitentiary for shooting Bud Smith, a negro, last fall, according to action taken by Governor O'Neal in refusing to grant a temporary parole to the convicted man. Last week the governor declined to grant a parole to Sears and he announced that he had finally decided that he will not interfere with the sentence imposed by the Montgomery city court. A delegation in Sears' behalf appeared before the governor.

Court of Appeals Great Aid.

During the three years of its existence the state court of appeals has rendered final denisions in 1,728 cases, an average of 576 cases for each of the three judges, and has transacted other business which would have been a severe burden upon the supreme court had it been necessary for the supreme court to handle this business, according to a statement issued by Col. Alexander Troy, clerk of the court of appeals. At present the court of appeals has almost caught up with its work.

Jackson's Book, O. K.

Books and accounts of J. Kirk Jackson of Montgomery, as treasurer of the Alabama School for Juvenile Law Breakers at Mt. Meigs and the Negro State Normal School of Montgomery, are correct and accurately kept, according to J. T. Gorman, examiner of public accounts, who has filed a report of his examination with Governor O'Neal. At the reform school, co[illegible] during the year amounted to [illegible] and disbursements aggregated [illegible] at the Negro school [illegible] were [illegible]

Revision of Rates Petitioned.

Petitions requesting a revision on class rates I. L. M. and N. between Mobile and all points on the Louisville and Nashville were filed before the State railroad commission by that railroad. The claim is made that the rates on these classes now in force are discriminatory as against Birmingham, Montgomery, Selma and other points. The discrimination is said to be in favor of Mobile. The proposed revision will eliminate the discriminations according to the railroad attorneys.

The petitions ask for both advances and reductions in rates. This is an important case and will be heard by the commission in September. The petition refers only to car load lots.

Classes I. L. M. and N. include car load lots of wagons, barytes, sash, doors and blinds, brick, metal, charcoal, clay earthen cups, cotton seed meal, handles, ice, bridge materials, links and pins, cast iron and material, lumber, lathes, graders' outfits, earthern pipes, pitch, cement, salt, shingles, sand, cotton, stone and tar.

Girard Excise Commission Named.

The governor has appointed Dr. R. C. Prather chairman and C. T. Stillwell associate member of the Girard excise commission. The appointment of the two commissioners was made after several interviews and conferences with delegations from Girard, and those named for the offices are declared to be acceptable to all classes of citizens of that city

The governor several weeks ago appointed John Adams chairman of the commission, but in view of severe protest against his appointment, the governor withdrew his name.

In making the appointments the governor gave out the following statement:

"After repeated interviews and conferences with delegations of the city of Girard, it was the concensus of opinion that the following gentlemen would be competent and acceptable to all classes of people of that city, and hence I have accordingly appointed Dr. R. C. Prather, chairman, and C. T. Stillwell, associate member of the Girard excise commission.

"No charges were made reflecting upon the integrity or character of the present commissioners, but some friction was developed on account of the fact that these gentlemen had large business interests. It has been my policy, on that account, always to avoid appointing those who were engaged in the real estate or banking business as excise commissioners."

Would Advance Coal Rates.

Permission to advance rates on coal from the Birmingham mines to the Gadsden-Anniston-Talladega district is sought by the Louisville and Nashville railroad in a petition filed before the state railroad commission. The railroad desires to advance the rate on coal from 50 to 60 cents per ton and on coal used by certain manufacturing companies from 50 to 70 cents per ton. These manufacturing companies are located at Gadsden, Alabama City, Attalla, Anniston, Talladega and Sylacauga.

This is one of the most important cases the state railroad commission has ever been called upon to settle. The advance of 10 cents a ton on coal to the Birmingham group on account of the vast coal consumption at those points is a momentous question and the advance on coal for the manufacturing companies or 20 cents a ton is necessarily of utmost importance to those manufacturing cities.

September 11 has been set as the date for the hearing. It is probable that the cities affected by the rates will send delegations to appear before the commission.

Parole is Denied.

Because the trial judge refused to recommend clemency, Governor O'Neal declined to issue a parole to Burrell Grubbs, of Geneva county, who was sentenced to 20 years on a charge of second degree murder. It was claimed by Burrell's attorneys that the killing for which Grubbs was convicted was done by some one else.

Governor O'Neal took up the matter with the trial judge, and in a letter to the govenor the judge declined to recommend the extension of clemency. Several affidavits to the effect that Grubbs was innocent were presented to the governor and he referred them to the trial judge who refused to consider them.

Negroes Will Get Their Share.

Booker T. Washington, president of the Tuskegee Institute, called on governor O'Neal and discussed the distribution of funds in Alabama which will be made under the provisions of the Smith-Lever bill recently passed by Congress. Governor O'Neal told Washington that the fund for this year will be administered by Dr. C. C. Thach, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and that the negroes will be given their full share under the law.

At the next session of the legislature provision will be made for the administration of the funds that will be allotted to Alabama. It is probable that the legislature will anoint Dr. Thach as administrator.

Recently a special commission appointed by Governor O'Neal visited Tuskegee and inspected the Tuskegee Institute. Capt. Reuben F. Kolb was chairman of the commission. Recommendation was made that 50 per cent of the Smith-Lever fund be divided between the Tuskegee Institute and the negro school at Normal.

MRS. WILSON'S [illegible] LAID TO REST IN [illegible]

SIMPLE CEREMONY MARK[illegible] FUNERAL SERVICES A[illegible] WHITE HOUSE.

LESS THAN 200 PRE[illegible]

Services Were Conducted By [illegible] Sylvester Beach of Princ[illegible] New Jersey.

Washington.—While flags dr[illegible] half-mast throughout the capi[illegible] thousands gathered in the wide[illegible] before the closed gates of the [illegible] House grounds, the first serv[illegible] held over Mrs. Wilson's body [illegible] east room. The flags, the cro[illegible] closing of the government depa[illegible] in the afternoon, and the m[illegible] flowers which overflowed th[illegible] room, were the nation's only [illegible] expressing its sympathy.

In accordance with Mrs. W[illegible] wish, the service was of the si[illegible] There was no music; only the [illegible]

MRS. WOODROW WIL[illegible]

Whose Death in Washing[illegible] Plunged a Nation in[illegible] Grief.

of a few verses from the Bib[illegible] er by the Rev. Sylvester Be[illegible] church which the Wilson fam[illegible] ed during their years in Pri[illegible] J., and a benediction by the R[illegible] Taylor, at whose church the [illegible] has worshipped since he [illegible] Washington.

Less than 200 were present [illegible] the family there were a [illegible] mate friends, the members of [illegible] net and their wives, the co[illegible] from the Senate and the Ho[illegible] ed by the Vice President [illegible] speaker, and the employes [illegible] White House.

The casket was borne [illegible] White House by six member[illegible] city police force, who have [illegible] the home of the President [illegible] There were no honorary pall[illegible]

Few saw the funeral party [illegible] its way to the Union statio[illegible] the train awaited it. The d[illegible] made over less frequented st[illegible] only three closed automobile[illegible] the President and a dozen [illegible] tives or close friends of th[illegible] followed the hearse.

Services At Rome, Ga.

Rome, Ga.—The last simp[illegible] money over the body of Mrs. [illegible] Wilson took place in the quie[illegible] cemetery here, when the body [illegible] beloved woman was laid to [illegible] side the graves of her fath[illegible] mother.

Washington. — Mrs. Woodr[illegible] son, wife of the President [illegible] United States, died at the [illegible] House at 5 o'clock p. m., A[illegible] Death came after a brave str[illegible] months against Bright's dise[illegible] complications.

The president was compl[illegible] nerved by the shock and [illegible] was heart-rending. He bore [illegible] under the strain, however, a[illegible] ed himself to his daughters.

The end came while Mrs. [illegible] was unconscious.

Export Condition Shows Co[illegible]

Chicago. — Notable brok[illegible] of speculative business on c[illegible] companied the whirling of W[illegible] ain into a general European [illegible] spite the enforcement of 10 [illegible] margins, the public at large w[illegible] be restrained from taking [illegible] hand at trading in which r[illegible] changes covered a range of [illegible] 4 cents a bushel and which [illegible] as extreme net advance of [illegible] for wheat. Export conditio[illegible] greater confusion than a[illegible] since the war began.

[illegible]AN WEAK [illegible]AND NERVOUS

[illegible]s Health in Lydia E. [illegible]inkham's Vegetable Compound.

[illegible]ton, Iowa.—"I suffered with fe[illegible] troubles from the time I came into womanhood until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be so weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what [illegible]medicine had done for her and I [illegible]. It made me strong and healthy [illegible]r home is now happy with a baby [illegible] I am very glad that I took Lydia [illegible]kham's Vegetable Compound and [illegible] can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. [illegible]SCAMP, 504 E. Howard Street, [illegible]n, Iowa.

[illegible]ons of Roots and Herbs

[illegible]ed annually in the manufacture [illegible]dia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com[illegible] which is known from ocean to [illegible] as the standard remedy for [illegible] ills.

[illegible] forty years this famous root and [illegible]medicine has been pre-eminently [illegible]ful in controlling the diseases of [illegible] Merit alone could have stood [illegible]t of time.

[illegible]u have the slightest doubt [illegible]ydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta[illegible]mpound will help you, write [illegible]dia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. [illegible]dential) Lynn, Mass., for ad[illegible] Your letter will be opened, [illegible]nd answered by a woman, [illegible]ld in strict confidence.

[illegible]ke the Liver [illegible]its Duty

[illegible] times in ten when the liver is [illegible] stomach and bowels are right [illegible]R'S LITTLE [illegible] PILLS [illegible] firmly com[illegible] liver to [illegible]ty. [illegible] Con[illegible] in[illegible]

[illegible]tress After Eating.

[illegible] PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

[illegible]uine must bear Signature

Brent Good

[illegible]USANDS OF PIGS DIE [illegible]LY FROM SPAYING

[illegible]ed by Tennessee farmer—a brand [illegible]ess. Guaranteed in every particular. [illegible] and absolutely harmless. Can be [illegible] in 2 minutes—cost, $1. Satisfaction [illegible]edor money refunded. WRITE NOW. [illegible]S & VAIL, 848 BROWN-MARX [illegible]NG, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

[illegible]dakers, Listen

[illegible]velop your films absolutely FREE. [illegible] from 2c to 5c each. Send us your [illegible]or Eastman films. Fresh supply [illegible] on hand. Mail orders solicited.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL

[illegible]NGHAM ALABAMA

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

[illegible]U., Birmingham, No. 33–1914.

Missed It.

[illegible]ck is engaged, is he? And is [illegible] the bride-to-be?"

"She's the tried-to-be."

RUB-MY-TISM

[illegible]ure your Rheumatism and all [illegible] of aches and pains—Neuralgia, [illegible], Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, [illegible]ores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic [illegible]ne. Price 25c.—Adv.

She Wouldn't Squeal.

"If I squeeze you, will you [illegible]?"

"What do you think I am—a [illegible] doll?"

Where It Counts.

"[illegible]t Dinah, are you going to have [illegible] eliminated from the ceremony?"

"[illegible]chile; but I sho is gwinter hab [illegible]minated from de matrimony."—

Worse.

"[illegible]re's one good thing about liv[illegible] these times. We don't have [illegible]highwaymen."

"[illegible]t's true. But my iceman is just [illegible] or worse. He's a low-weigh[illegible]

[illegible]d Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.

[illegible] cases, no matter of how long standing, [illegible]ed by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. [illegible] Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves [illegible] Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

[illegible] man who can hold a fussy [illegible] for an hour without saying [illegible]y words is in the same class [illegible]

[illegible]ever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

[illegible] Old Standard Grove's Tasteless [illegible] Tonic is equally valuable as a [illegible] Tonic because it contains the [illegible] properties of QUININE [illegible] It acts on the Liver, Drives [illegible] Malaria, Enriches the Blood and [illegible] the Whole System. 50 cents.

NEWS ITE[illegible] ALABA[illegible]

School census at W[illegible] year 135.

Not a single burial [illegible] white person during [illegible]

Chambers county [illegible] ence met at Stroud A[illegible]

Ernest Beard's ho[illegible] county was burned [illegible]

At Malone in Ran[illegible] of land is offered for [illegible]

Rains have impro[illegible] crops in Colbert.

Several crops of p[illegible] planted in West Per[illegible]

Large acreage has [illegible] sweet potatoes in [illegible]

Steamer American [illegible] on a sand bar in the [illegible] floated.

Bullock grand ju[illegible] work in three days [illegible] criminals.

Location of the fo[illegible] Randolph has [illegible] the third Monday in [illegible]

Every indication a[illegible] the fact that Good[illegible] gust 14-15, will be [illegible] in every county in t[illegible]

On account of th[illegible] gress to pass the [illegible] appropriation bill, [illegible] 17, situated nearly [illegible] Tuscaloosa on the [illegible] stopped.

A death verdict [illegible] Cullman in the case [illegible] a young farmer, w[illegible] Enoch Clayburn, [illegible] as he sat before hi[illegible] to his wife from [illegible] was sentenced to [illegible] ber 25. It was [illegible] would be appealed [illegible] court.

Alabama banks a[illegible] tion and Alabama b[illegible] tic and confident th[illegible] the financial situa[illegible] with a firm grasp [illegible] ble conditions that [illegible] European war, ac[illegible] Walker, superinte[illegible] banking departme[illegible] from Birminghani[illegible] conference with ba[illegible] of the State.

Widely different [illegible] ton crop outlook i[illegible] ing the general rai[illegible] are expressed by [illegible] parts of the Satt[illegible] most farmers is th[illegible] has been highly [illegible] marked improvem[illegible] other plant life is [illegible] declare that the r[illegible] jurious, causing [illegible] much fruit. The [illegible] say. Taken as a [illegible] show that optimis[illegible] State as regards [illegible] some places the [illegible] such a stage tha[illegible] were ineffectual, i[illegible] ing, but most of [illegible] bama apparently [illegible] harvest a crop of [illegible]

Prohibition and [illegible] were made the l[illegible] platform adopted [illegible] State convention [illegible] The convention [illegible] teresting features [illegible] prohibition plank [illegible] ter a most exciti[illegible] tionists won thel[illegible] 35 to 27. A res[illegible] placing the conve[illegible] ing opposed to fu[illegible] with any other [illegible] the exception of [illegible] diciary a comple[illegible] nominated heade[illegible] of Gadsden, for [illegible] A. P. Longshore [illegible] United States Se[illegible] inees of the con[illegible] Congressman at [illegible] St. Clair; For Li[illegible] B. Forman of [illegible] General, Duncan [illegible] for Secretary of [illegible] Jefferson; for A[illegible] of Madison; for [illegible] terer of Cullman [illegible] Agriculture, Sid [illegible] Railroad Commi[illegible] of Mobile; for [illegible] er, John M. Gre[illegible] Crops in Polla[illegible] are fine.

Most of the c[illegible] are good.

In the munic[illegible] Ozark the vote [illegible] vote for mayor [illegible] W. Garner 116, [illegible] bent, 103. The [illegible] the military an[illegible] Garner.

According to [illegible] made there are [illegible] age in Tuscum[illegible] 608 are white [illegible] is an increase [illegible] census taken tw[illegible]

Supreme cou[illegible] vember.

The school c[illegible] was taken durin[illegible] not come up to [illegible] authorities. W[illegible] not available it [illegible] census will sho[illegible] over the past c[illegible]

Efforts are b[illegible] Eufaula and M[illegible] way, the propo[illegible] fore the board [illegible] county at its m[illegible] business men [illegible] of the county, [illegible] city.

MRS. WILSON'S B... LAID TO REST IN...

SIMPLE CEREMONY MARK... FUNERAL SERVICES A... WHITE HOUSE.

LESS THAN 200 PRE...

Services Were Conducted By ... Sylvester Beach of Princ... New Jersey.

Washington.—While flags dro... half-mast throughout the capi... thousands gathered in the wide... before the closed gates of the... House grounds, the first serv... held over Mrs. Wilson's body... east room. The flags, the cro... closing of the government depa... in the afternoon, and the ma... flowers which overflowed th... room, were the nation's only... expressing its sympathy.

In accordance with Mrs. W... wish, the service was of the si... There was no music; only the...

MRS. WOODROW WIL...

Whose Death in Washingt... Plunged a Nation In... Grief.

of a few verses from the Bible... er by the Rev. Sylvester Beach... church which the Wilson family... ed during their years in Princ... J., and a benediction by the Re... Taylor, at whose church the P... has worshipped since he c... Washington.

Less than 200 were present... the family there were a f... mate friends, the members of... net and their wives, the c... from the Senate and the Hou... ed by the Vice President... speaker, and the employes... White House.

The casket was borne fr... White House by six members... city police force, who have s... the home of the President for... There were no honorary pallbe...

Few saw the funeral party p... its way to the Union station... the train awaited it. The driv... made over less frequented stre... only three closed automobiles... the President and a dozen m... tives or close friends of the... followed the hearse.

Services At Rome, Ga.

Rome, Ga.—The last simple... money over the body of Mrs. W... Wilson took place in the quiet... cemetery here, when the body... beloved woman was laid to re... side the graves of her father... mother.

Washington. — Mrs. Woodrow... son, wife of the President of... United States, died at the... House at 5 o'clock p. m., Aug... Death came after a brave stru... months against Bright's disease... complications.

The president was completely... nerved by the shock and his... was heart-rending. He bore up... under the strain, however, and... ed himself to his daughters.

The end came while Mrs... was unconscious.

Export Condition Shows C...

Chicago. — Notable broade... of speculative business on c... companied the whirling of W... ain into a general European... spite the enforcement of 10... margins, the public at large w... be restrained from taking a... hand at trading in which ra... changes covered a range of m... 4 cents a bushel and which... an extreme net advance of... for wheat. Export conditions... greater confusion than ... since the war began.

...AN WEAK ...ND NERVOUS

...Health in Lydia E. ...kham's Vegetable Compound.

...n, Iowa.—"I suffered with fe... ...ables from the time I came into womanhood until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would have pains if I overworked or lifted anything heavy, and I would be so weak and nervous and in so much misery that I would be prostrated. A friend told me what ...edicine had done for her and I ... It made me strong and healthy ... home is now happy with a baby ... I am very glad that I took Lydia ...ham's Vegetable Compound and ... I can to recommend it."—Mrs. A. ...CAMP, 504 E. Howard Street, ..., Iowa.

...ns of Roots and Herbs

...d annually in the manufacture ...ia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Com... which is known from ocean to ... as the standard remedy for ... ills.

...orty years this famous root and ...edicine has been pre-eminently ...ful in controlling the diseases of ... Merit alone could have stood ...t of time.

...u have the slightest doubt ...dia E. Pinkham's Vegetable ...pound will help you, write ...ia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. ...ential) Lynn, Mass., for ad... Your letter will be opened, ...d answered by a woman, ...d in strict confidence.

...ke the Liver ...its Duty

...nes in ten when the liver is ... stomach and bowels are right

...'S LITTLE ...PILLS ...firmly com... liver to ...y. ...Con... in...

...ess After Eating.

...PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

...nine must bear Signature

Brent Good

...USANDS OF PIGS DIE ...LY FROM SPAYING

...d by Tennessee farmer—a brand ...s. Guaranteed in every particular. ...and absolutely harmless. Can be ...in 3 minutes—cost, $1. Satisfaction ...or money refunded. WRITE NOW. ...S & VAIL, 848 BROWN-MARX ...NG, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

...dakers, Listen

...velop your films absolutely FREE. ...from 2c to 5c each. Send us your ...for Eastman films. Fresh supply ... on hand. Mail orders solicited. ...GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL ...NGHAM ALABAMA

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff.
For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair.
50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

...U, Birmingham, No. 33–1914.

Missed It.

...k is engaged, is he? And is ...e bride-to-be?"

...She's the tried-to-be."

RUB-MY-TISM

...ure your Rheumatism and all ...of aches and pains—Neuralgia, ..., Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, ...ores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic ...e. Price 25c.—Adv.

She Wouldn't Squeal.

...—If I squeeze you, will you ...?

...—What do you think I am—a ...g doll?

Where It Counts.

...nt Dinah, are you going to have ... eliminated from the ceremony?"

...chile; but I sho is gwinter hab ...minated from de matrimony."—...

Worse.

...re's one good thing about liv... these times. We don't have ...highwaymen."

...at's true. But my iceman is just ...d or worse. He's a low-weigh...

...ld Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.

...ore cases, no matter of how long standing, ...ed by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. ... Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves ...d Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

...man who can hold a fussy ...for an hour without saying ...y words is in the same class ...Job.

...ver You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

...Old Standard Grove's Tasteless ...Chill Tonic is equally valuable as a ...Tonic because it contains the ...ove tonic properties of QUININE ...IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives ...Malaria, Enriches the Blood and ...ys the Whole System. 50 cents.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

School census at Ward is 175. Last year 135.

Not a single burial at Troy of a white person during July.

Chambers county Masonic conference met at Stroud August 11.

Ernest Beard's house in Chambers county was burned with contents.

At Malone in Randolph, 4860 acres of land is offered for sale for $5000.

Rains have improved and insured crops in Colbert.

Several crops of peanuts have been planted in West Perry.

Large acreage has been planted in sweet potatoes in Perry.

Steamer American, which has been on a sand bar in the Bigbee, has been floated.

Bullock grand jury completed its work in three days and indicted 116 criminals.

Location of the four sub-high schools in Randolph has been postponed till the third Monday in August

Every indication and report point to the fact that Good Roads Days, August 14-15, will be widely observed in every county in the State.

On account of the failure of Congress to pass the rivers and harbors appropriation bill, all work on Lock 17, situated nearly 20 miles above Tuscaloosa on the Warrior river, has stopped.

A death verdict was returned at Cullman in the case of George James, a young farmer, who shot and killed Enoch Clayburn, an aged neighbor, as he sat before his fireplace reading to his wife from the Bible. James was sentenced to be hanged September 25. It was announced the case would be appealed to the supreme court.

Alabama banks are in sound condition and Alabama bankers are optimistic and confident that they can handle the financial situation in this State with a firm grasp in case of unfavorable conditions that may arise from an European war, according to Alex E. Walker, superintendent of the State banking department, who returned from Birmingham, where he held a conference with bankers from all parts of the State.

Widely different views on the cotton crop outlook in the State following the general rains of the past week are expressed by farmers in various parts of the Satte. The verdict of most farmers is that the precipitation has been highly beneficial, and that marked improvement of cotton and other plant life is preceptible. Others declare that the rainfall has been injurious, causing the cotton to shed much fruit. The outlook is bad, they say. Taken as a whole the reports show that optimism prevails over the State as regards the cotton crop. In some places the plant has reached such a stage that the belated rains were ineffectual, if not actually damaging, but most of the farmers of Alabama apparently are getting ready to harvest a crop of unusual proportions.

Prohibition and woman's suffrage were made the leading planks in the platform adopted by the Progressive State convention held in Birmingham. The convention was replete with interesting features, and the fight of the prohibition plank was intense and after a most exciting fight the prohibitionists won their point by a vote of 35 to 27. A resolution was adopted placing the convention on record as being opposed to fusion or amalgamation with any other political party. With the exception of candidates for the judiciary a complete State ticket was nominated headed by Dr. E. H. Cross, of Gadsden, for governor, and Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby for the United States Senate. The other nominees of the convention follows: For Congressman at large, G. A. Saylor of St. Clair; For Lieutenant Governor, C. B. Forman of Etowah; for Attorney General, Duncan Trimble of Jefferson; for Secretary of State, T. T. Nock of Jefferson; for Auditor, J. W. Cochran of Madison; for Treasurer, J. F. Sutterer of Cullman; for Commissioner of Agriculture, Sid Berry, of Mobile; for Railroad Commissioner, H. H. Bolton of Mobile; for Railroad Commissioner, John M. Green of Baldwin.

Crops in Pollard's Bend in Cherokee are fine.

Most of the crops in Clarke county are good.

In the municipal primary held at Ozark the vote was a heavy one. The vote for mayor stands: Acker 44, R. W. Garner 116, Eason, present incumbent, 103. The young vote, most of the military and band vote, went to Garner.

According to the enumeration just made there are 1115 children of school age in Tuscumbia, of which number 608 are white and 507 negroes. This is an increase of 200 over the last census taken two years ago.

Supreme court is in recess till November.

The school census of Selma which was taken during the past month does not come up to the expectations of the authorities. While the figures were not available it is believed the present census will show but a slight increase over the past census.

Efforts are being made to connect Eufaula and Montgomery with a highway, the proposition being placed before the board of revenue of Barbour county at its meeting by a number of business men of the northern portion of the county, aided by those of the city.

FRENCH REGIMENT HURRYING TO THE GERMAN BORDER

France is hurrying her troops by the hundred thousand toward the German frontier and Belgium. One of the regiments is here pictured marching through a village, with an aeroplane in advance as scout.

LIBAU, RUSSIAN NAVAL STATION SHELLED BY GERMAN CRUISER

GERMAN CRUISER DRESDEN IN ATLANTIC

The German cruiser Dresden has been reported off Sandy Hook, presumably lying in wait to intercept the merchant ships of France and England.

LEADS HIS TROOPS TO WAR

King Albert of Belgium, who went to the front to command his army that bravely opposed the passage of German troops across Belgium to France.

ONE OF FRANCE'S GIANT DIRIGIBLES

FIRING ON AERIAL SCOUT

PROMOTE A CLEAR SKIN

With

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. They afford complete satisfaction to all who rely upon them for a clear skin, clean scalp, good hair, and soft, white hands.

Samples Free by Mail

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 12B, Boston.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent Free. Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Successor to Dr. H. H. Greens Sons, Box O, Atlanta, Ga.

Not Large.

Maude—Fred seems to be wandering in his mind.

Betty—Then he can't stray far.

EAS-IT

A PRESCRIPTION prepared especially for seemingly incurable Headaches. Your druggist sells and GUARANTEES Stutts' Eas-It to relieve any Headache in fifteen to thirty minutes. Money back if you want it. Contains NO OPIATE. Adv.

Right Name for Them.

"How much did your motor car cost?"

"Fifteen hundred dollars, exclusive of the excessories."

Woman Deserved Sharp Retort.

A white Pomeranian escaped from the arms of its mistress in Surf avenue, Coney island, the other night and ran in front of an automobile. A newsboy darted after the dog, caught it, and then fell in a mud puddle. He lost a dozen or so of papers but held on to the dog, which he returned to its owner slightly soiled.

"You impudent little scamp!" said the woman. "What made you get the dear little dog so dirty. You ought to be whipped."

"I am mighty glad I didn't save your life," replied the boy, and a score of onlookers applauded him.

Very Striking, Indeed.

Representative Wagner, at a picnic in a charming glen on the outskirts of Waco, advised a group of young ladies to avoid the international marriage.

"You've heard, no doubt," he said, with a smile, "of Lotta Golde.

"Lotta was running down international marriages.

"'They're all alike,' she said. 'I have had three husbands. The first, Lord Lacland, slapped me. The second, Comte L'Oignon, slashed me with a dog-whip. Prince Spaghetti, the third, hit me on the head with his fist. This proves that between all international marriages there exists a striking, a very striking, resemblance.'"

We Do the Cooking

You avoid fussing over a hot stove—

Save time and energy—

Have a dish that will please the home folks!

A package of

Post Toasties

and some cream or good milk —sometimes with berries or fruit—

A breakfast, lunch or supper

Fit for a King!

Toasties are sweet, crisp bits of Indian corn perfectly cooked and toasted—

Ready to eat from the package—

Sold by Grocers

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

The approval of the Progressives at Birmingham last Wednesday was registered for the system of taking convicts out of the mines and placing them on the public roads.

"The Peoples Advocate" of Columbiana observes from the Clanton papers that politics down in Chilton is getting rather hot. Yes, brother, such be the case. But we would say to you, "Come on in, the water's fine."

For time immemorial the first aid and inducer of conversation between two persons just met has been the weather. But it has changed now. The first thing which is asked these days is, "How's business?"

Probably the most interesting feature of the Progressive platform is the way it deals with the subject of taxation. It says plainly, "We condemn the present tax commission and method of raising the peoples taxes. We are opposed to any system that offers a premium on raising taxes."

A card from Mr. R. L. Edwards of Pletcher, dated August 8th, states that he found a genuine cotton worm in his cotton on that date. Mr. Edwards gave no detailed explination, but we suppose the worm which he found is a species of the army worm which so completely devastated cotton plants in this county some years ago.

The platform of the Progressive party deals with the matter of old soldiers pensions in a very commendable way. It says, "We shall urge increased appropriation to this interest, and condemn the policy of the present administration in technically dropping from the roll the old soldiers at this late date, which action leaves them unprovided for, and dependent upon others, who possibly already struggling under heavy burdens."

The plattorm of the Progressives of Alabama, which was adopted at the meeting in Birmingham last Wednesday is a broad and comprehensive document. It shows what the party stands for. It tells you what you are voting for when you vote for a Progressive candidate. It is divided into several sections, each devoted to treatment of such subjects as Temperance, Education, Good Roads, Old soldiers, Taxation, etc. Clear and definite assertions are made and in no case does it posses that quality which seems to guide the Democrats—to keep the people from proving what they stand for.

We can hardly blame the Democrats for having no platform in this state. First they have no principles from which to make a platform; and second so long as the people will give them the reins of government without any pledges, why should they go restrict their actions by saying what they are going to do. We believe there will come a day when they shall be called upon to give their pledges before they are elected, and there is where they fail, fer as to principles, they havent practiced any in such a long time that they would be as blank as a bareboot school boy in trying to make an ex-temporaneous speech on International arbitration.

It strikes us that it is not hardly so bad to have the Chairman and Secretary of a party committee be absent from a meeting as it is to try to get a committee together, and fail to have a quorum, taking officers and all together. It is true that the Chairman and Secretary of the Progressive Committee were absent from the mass meeting last Saturday; and iti s also true that the Democratic leaders have been trying for the past several weeks to get their crowd together, and they cant get enough of them interested in the matter to constitute a body capable of transacting business. As between the two conditions it seems to us that the Progresseves can feel that they have not the worst at all:

Regarding the subject of education in our state, we quote the following from the platform of the Progressive party in convention at Birmingham last Wednesday:

"We find that Alabama pays $4.00 per capita for the education of her children in the common schools—in fact all Democratic states pay from three to eight dollars—while on the other hand we find the anti-democratic states are paying from eleven to thirty-two dollars.

"We are in favor of the university system, but we believe there is something radically wrong in a system which appropriates $140 per annum to educate the boy who is able to attend college as against four dollars for the boy whose parents are unable to pay his expenses away from home.

"Education and all other interests alike suffer as a result of the one party system of government."

In its closing paragraphs the Progressive platform assails the Democratic machine rule with the following questions:

"We ask in all fairness, what does the Democratic party stand for? Think of the state of Alabama electing men to office without knowing where they stand on any public questions.

"We are opposed to fraud in both primary and general elections. If Democratic papers are to be relied on, the electorate of Alabama was corrupted with money. Votes were purchased as any other commodity. Votes were not counted as cast, for many were changed after they were put in the ballot box.

"We sre in favor of a state primary law in which all political parties shall participate and nominate their respective candidates for various state and county officers, on the same day each party to be fairly represented in the managers of said primary election; all expenses of the election to be borne by the state and counties."

Not Always Our Own Matter.

That which we are we shall teach, not voluntarily, but involuntarily Thoughts come into our minds by avenues which we never left open, and thoughts go out of our minds through avenues which we never voluntarily opened.—Emerson.

Stevenson on Life.

We are not meant to be good in this world, but to try to be, and fail, and keep on trying; and when we get a cake, to say, "Thank God!" and when we get a buffet, to say, "Just so: well hit!"—Stevenson.

Rifling a Barrel.

The grooves in a rifle barrel are made with special machinery, and unless one has this machinery could not do the work properly, no matter how skilled he was. When the grooves of a rifle barrel are filled with lead it is usually necessary to have an expert gunsmith clean them out.

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is," she asked, "that nearly all the great men of this world have been married?" "I suppose," replied the old bachelor, "it's because they had to do something to get their minds off the lives they had at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Henry Russell Miller, the young Pittsburgh lawyer-novelist, who is known for his political stories which have appeared during the last few years, has distinguished himself again through the production of another story, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt"—a story of social and industrial Pittsburgh—which critics say is far better than either "The Man Higher Up" or "His Rise to Power," his two earlier political stories. We have secured this story as our next serial, and the first installment will appear in an early issue.

For a number of years Mr. Miller has exhibited a great interest in the steel industry. He has made the acquaintance of many of the big men as well as the laborers in the mill towns, and from them has learned a great deal about the game.

"The Ambition of Mark Truitt" is a story that is not only tremendously interesting, but one that will cause readers to stop and think.

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons.

Joe Adams to Miss Adie Smith, M. L. Milford to Miss Mandy Roberts, John W. Cox to Miss Annie Mae Smith, T. V. Eiland to Miss Bettie Patterson, John Folmer to Miss Callie Connell.

"Clean Up the Bowels and Keep Them Clean"

There are many remedies to be had for constipation, but the difficulty is to procure one that acts without violence. A remedy that does not perform by force what should be accomplished by persuasion is Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets. After using them, Mr. N. A. Waddell, 315 Washington St., Waco, Tex., says:

"Almost all my life I have been troubled with constipation, and have tried many remedies, all of which seemed to cause pain without giving much relief. I finally tried Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and found them excellent. Their action is pleasant and mild, and their chocolate taste makes them easy to take. I am more than glad to recommend them."

"Clean up the bowels and keep them clean," is the advice of all physicians, because they realize the danger resulting from habitual constipation. Do not delay too long, but begin proper curative measures.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are a new remedy for this old complaint, and a great improvement over the cathartics you have been using in the past. They taste like candy and work like a charm. A trial will convince you.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory after trial, return the box to your druggist and he will return your money. Address MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

It has meat and backbone to it.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Forceful, sane, and convincing. In the idyllic phases the reader is reminded of James Lane Allen.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Contrasts in the quality of women's loves give wonderful color to Mark's career and his final contentment in limited ambition. A human interest novel convincingly [illegible] Chronicle.

Spelling Bee At Court House

There will be a spelling bee at the Court house to-night in connection with the Teachers Institute. Everybody is invited to come and participate. Prizes have been offered by business men of the town, and will be awarded to the best speller. Great fun is expected, and you don't want to miss it.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a declaration of fundamental principles deemed basic to the Constitution itself and borrowed from the English bill of rights of 1689. When the Constitution of the United States was framed and submitted to the people it did not have a bill of rights and it was so harshly criticized on this account that its friends promised to incorporate or add such a declaration, and the first ten amendments to the Constitution, made after the main instrument was adopted, were in fulfillment of this promise. All the State Constitutions now have bills of rights, practically identical with one another.

Keep a Thankful Heart.

The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find in every hour some heavenly blessings; only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Modesty.

Some folks who can't play a hand organ in this world expect to give harp-playing instructions in the next.—Atlanta Constitution.

Daily Thought.

Two things must be rooted out of man: conceit and distrust.—Epictetus

Divine Spark.

"I understand her sweetheart is a minister of the gospel." "Yes, she has the divine spark."

Wanted Information.

Half an hour after Mrs. Richly had given her new maid an order she became uneasy and went to investigate. "Well, Mary, what has detained you? Have you found my Keats, as requested?" "Lor', mum," Mary apologized, "I was just comin' back to ask what is a Keats."

Nuf Sed.

Helter—"What sort of town is New York?" Skelter—"Judge for yourself. Two of its burroughs are named after cocktails."—Judge.

Daily Thought.

"The best and greatest thing a man or woman is capable of doing is his or her sphere."—Wendell Phillips.

Daily Thought.

The man that loves and laughs must sure do well.—Pope.

E. C. POPWELL

Has acquired complete control of the business formerly oderated under the name of Popwell & Jones and will continue to operate in the Chandler Building. The place is new and well fitted to render the best service. Everything you want in the way of Cold drinks, Ice cream, Candies, Cigars, Tobacco, Cigarettes, etc.

New up-to-date Soda Fount

Hard to Satisfy.

"Some men are not even satisfied when they marry and are supported in the style to which they have been accustomed," caustically remarked a woman.

Chronic Spring Fever.

Surprising as it may seem, some people in the temperate zone, where four seasons a year, have chronic spring fever.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Hardware we sell is made mostly of steel and iron, yet this is the sort of a "golden rule" we practice--we sell good, honest, reliable stuff; we put a fair and square price on it, we charge everybody this same price.

Do you want to do business with this kind of a store?

Gamble Hardware Co.

Clanton, Alabama.

The Clanton
Com

During this month
our goods at a gre
room for our Fall
which will arrive a
Come to see us

CLANTON M CLANTON

As Water Seeks Its
AS THE FLOWERS TU
Their Faces to the
o do particular and economical pe ore where are shown the latest st abrics, ladies' furnishings and lin rgest stock of general dry goods, n owest prices consistent with quality.
It's Only Natural.

KEMP BROTH
Clanton, Ala.

Saves Fisherman Trouble.

ness to hold a fishing pole, so leave a fisherman's hands free manage his bait or catch, is an ish invention.

Lambasted.

ew trainer was engaged for the and was told to put a lion and b through an act. He seemed ous, and the next his boss asked ow he got along with the savage "Sure, the lion didn't bother uch," he said, "but that durned butted the daylights out of me!"

Trouble

Kitty—"The love makes th rie—"Maybe; eligible young ton Transcript

Qualit

Guard withi kindness. K out hesitation out regret, ho meanness. K your heart t be wanted in

Shingles and Gas

Anyone wanting Shingles t by conferring with me right away glad to get your order in the next

I have a gasoline engine, ta we are to have city waterworks I gain cash or on time. Come and

L. H. K

POPWELL

plete control of the busines
under the name of Popwell &
ntinue to operate in the Chan
he place is new and well fi best service. Everything yo of Cold drinks, Ice cream
Tobacco. Cigarettes, et

o-date Soda Fount

Chronic Spring Fever.

Surprising as it may seem, a people in the temperate zone four seasons a year, have spring fever.—Louisville Courie nal.

e we sell is made mostly t this is the sort of a "go
--we sell good, honest,
a fair and square price o
body this same price.
o do business with this

Hardware Co.
ton, Alabama.

riter has Ball Bearings at all frictional points

res a Good Operator

the business world to-day is neat, rors.
ilt to produce this kind of "copy."
this machine all lead to Type- se—the carriage, the typebar
ball bearing.
tion, durability and efficiency.
ustrated Catalog
Bros. Typewriter
mpany
ice and Factory
use, N. Y.
l principal cities

The Clanton Mercantile Company

During this month we are selling all of our goods at a great reduction to make room for our Fall and Winter Stock, which will arrive about September 1st.

Come to see us for what you want.

CLANTON MERCANTILE CO.
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

As Water Seeks Its Level
AS THE FLOWERS TURN
Their Faces to the Sun

o do particular and economical people seek the ore where are shown the latest styles of dress brics, ladies' furnishings and lingerie, and the gest stock of general dry goods, marked at the west prices consistent with quality.

It's Only Natural.

KEMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

Never Fisherman Trouble.

Darness to hold a fishing pole, st to leave a fisherman's hands free manage his bait or catch, is a ab invention.

Lambasted.

New trainer was engaged for the and was told to put a lion and through an act. He seemed and the next his boss asked how he got along with the savage "Sure, the lion didn't bother much," he said, "but that durned butted the daylights out of me!"

Trouble She Had Found.

Kitty—"They say, you know, the love makes the world go round." Ma rie—"Maybe; but it cannot make the eligible young men go round."—Bos ton Transcript.

Qualities to Develop.

Guard within yourself the treasure kindness. Know how to give with out hesitation, know how to lose with out regret, how to acquire without meanness. Know how to replace in your heart the happiness that may be wanted in yourself.—F. W. Faber

Program

District Sunday School Convention to meet with Mount Moriah Methodist Church on August 16th, one mile west of Wessington and five miles north west of Jemison.

10:00 a.m. Devotional Exercise led by Rev. Job Reynolds.

10:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

10:45 a.m. The Ideal Superintendent by Rev. Winkler.

11:15 a.m. Address by State worker.

11:45 a.m. Report and pledges of all Sunday Schools in the district.

12:00 m. Adjourn for dinner.

1:30 p.m. Devotional Exercise by Rev. Job Reynolds.

1:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

2:15 p.m. Correlation of home and school by J. B. Kilpatrick.

2:45 p.m. Address by State worker.

3:15 p.m. Time and place of next Convention.

3:30 Adjournment.

W. H. Shaw, Dis. Pres.
Miss Odia Harsly Sec. and Tres.

FOR SALE—Good gentle family Horse. Will work anywhere. To sell cheap for cash or on time. J. T. Rockett
7-30-3t. Cooper Ala.

WHY WEAK LUNGS?

The toll of tuberculosis is claiming more than 350 victims every day in the United States, yet few realize their grave condition until the critical period arrives.

Overwork, worry, weakness after sickness, catarrh, bronchitis, tender throats—all exert the weakening influence that invites consumption.

To guard against consumption, thousands of people take Scott's Emulsion after meals because its rich medicinal nourishment strengthens the lungs, puts vigor in the blood, and upbuilds strength to resist tuberculosis. Scott's Emulsion is nature's strength-builder. Refuse substitutes.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains by conferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be glad to get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store.

I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale; as we are to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bargain cash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. L. Hand of Newton was in Clanton Sunday night on his way to Sylacauga where he will conduct a revival service.

D. L. and Lonnie Hand of Deatsville were visitors to Clanton Monday.

Several people of this community went to the Chilton County Singing Convention at South Calera Sunday.

Prof. James Franklin of Thorsby was in Clanton Sunday.

Prof. O. F. Metz of Cullman is in Clanton this week attending the Teachers Institute. Mr. Metz is a prominent teacher of his home county, and is the nominee of the Cullman Progressives for their next member of the Legislature.

Rev. S. H. Herbert, Principal of Thorsby Institute, is in Clanton this week attending the Institute.

Caldwell Roper of Birmingham spent Sunday with his parents here.

Rev. M. W. Mims of Piedmont was in Clanton this week shaking hands with his old acquaintance.

W. H. Shaw of Jemison was in Clanton Monday attending Commissioners Court.

Mr. L. F. Gerald made a business trip to Montgomery Thursday night last.

Prof. W. J. Mims was a visitor to the Capital city last Thursday night.

Judge S. M. Adams went to Providence Saturday to preach the dedication sermon for the new church they have just completed there.

When you need to hire an automobile for a few hours or a day remember G. O. Foshee and Lee Maddox. Call them over Peoples Telephone.

Clothes cleaned and pressed at the Palace Pressing Shop are a mark of satisfaction. They call for and deliver your suit.

Get a bath at the Palace Pressing Shop. Most sanitary place in town.

Mr. Samuel A. Kanjutzky, chief clerk and soda-water slinger of the "Rexall Store" is taking his vacation visiting relatives in Birmingham and Walker county.

Mr. B. J. Sessions returned Monday from a visit of several days to friends in Abanda and Chambers county

The ladies must not forget to be at Higgins,' the jeweler auction sale of cut glass and china ware, Saturday morning, Aug. 15 Sale starts at 10 o'clock.

Prof. R. A. Smith of Goodwater is attending the teachers inctitute here this week.

Prof. J. L. Johnson of Maplesville is in Clanton this week.

Howard L. Foshee of Thorsby was here among the teachers at the institute this week.

F. B. Williams of Thorsby was a visitor to Clanton this week.

W. H. Conway, County Farm Demonstrator has been to the Summer school for farmers at Auburn for the past few days. He returned Tuesday night.

Words of Praise

For Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy

"How thankful we are to you for getting a hold of your wonderful Remedy. My wife could not have had but a short time to live if she had not taken your Wonderful Remedy when she did. One more of those paroxysm pains she was having would have killed her without a doubt. Now she is free from all pain, free from heart trouble and free from that disturbing Neuralgia—all the results of five treatments—and the expulsion of five or six hundred Gall Stones. Now she is able to eat anything she wants and her appetite is good and before taking your medicine she had no appetite and when she ate anything she would suffer death for so doing and could not sleep at night; since taking your treatment she sleeps well all night long. T. A. HALL, Beeville, Texas."

The above letter should convince you more than anything we could say in behalf of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Sufferers should try one dose of this Remedy—one dose should convince them that they can be restored to health. Nearly all Stomach Ailments are caused by the clogging of the intestinal tract with mucoid and catarrhal secretions allowing poisonous fluids into the Stomach and otherwise deranging the digestive system. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy thinks, removes these secretions without a surgical operation and puts an end to Colic Gastritis, Gases in the Stomach and Intestines and all of the most symptoms of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments. Ask your druggist about Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy, or send to Geo. H. Mayr, M.D., 827 Phillips St., Chicago, Ill. for pamphlet on Stomach Ailments free, and a trial bottle will be sent you postpaid. Regular size bottle 50c and $1.00.

Have You Poultry Troubles?

Cure the liver and you cure the bird. Nearly all poultry troubles are due to a disordered liver. Thousands of poultry raisers who use it all year round to keep their flocks in good health, highly recommend

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

It's a Liver Medicine.
Also a strengthing Tonic.

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE is a splendid cure for liver trouble, roup and chicken cholera. Given regularly with the feed, in small doses, it also makes an excellent tonic.
F. J. Stowe,
Purcell, Okla.

25c, 50c and $1. per can.
At your dealer's.
P. B. 5

LOST, strayed or stolen from my place 8 miles north of Clanton on Calera road—one Jersy heifer yearling, about 18 months old, marked, crop and underbit in each ear. Was first strayed about a month ago. Reward for information to W. T. Robinson
8-6-3t. Clanton Route 8

Prof. E. M. Wright of Troy was in Clanton Tuesday to deliver an address before the teachers at the institute.

Mr. J. Sterling Moran of the Rural Organization Service of the Department of Agriculture has returned from a stay of several weeks at his headquarters in Washington. He will resume his social and economic survey work in this section and continue it for the next year.

Miss Alma Tharpe of Montgomery is attending the Teachers Institute this week, and visiting Miss Emmette Matthews.

If you have struggled in privation
If you have dwelt with plenty and known a woman's love in either
Then you'll see yourself in

THE AMBITION OF MARK TRUITT

The Novel of a Typical American

Our Next Serial!

Watch for It!

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

REYNOLDS-MORGAN.

The following announcement appeared in the Montgomery Advertiser of last Sunday and will be of interest to our readers:

Mrs. Lillie Maye Morgan announces the engagement of her daughter, Estella, to Mr. Grady Reynolds, the marriage to take place on Thursday, September the tenth, in Clanton, Ala.

Both these young people are popular members of Clanton Society, and their many friends will receive the news of their engagement with much interest.

COMMISSIOMERS SALE

The state of Albama, Chilton County: Probate Court.

In pursuance of the directions and terms of a Commission dated the 23rd day of May, 1914, issued by Hon. E. B. Deason, Judge of probate of said county, I will proceed to sell to the highest bidder, for cash at public auction, on the 15 day of Aug., 1914 between the hours of 11 o'clock, a.m. and 4 o'clock p.m., at the court house, Clanton, Ala., the following described property:

S.E. fourth of N.W. fourth, and the S.W. fourth of the N.E. fourth of Sec. 16, Tp. 21, R. 14, in Chilton county, Ala.; 13 shares of stock in the Farmer's Warehouse and Storage Company, of Clanton, Ala., which said property is to be sold under the order of said Probate court, for the purpose of division and partition between the several joint owners thereof, viz:

Dewey Gallman, Harvey Gallman, Anderson Gallman, Leon Gallman, Deannia Parrish, Annie Watson, Odis Culpepper, Ensley Culpepper, Pauline Massey, Ruth Massey, Reed Gallman, Luther Culpepper.

This May 23, 1914.
Grady Reynoldss, Commissioner.

State Highway Will Be Built.

On Wednesday the Commissioners Court of Chilton County passed a measure which in effect will mean the construction by the county, of that section of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway which is within its borders. The order which was passed did not state what method would be employed to obtain the funds; that will be decided at a later date.

Ain't It So?

On an auto drive, an auto drive: auto drive carefully.—Woman's Home Companion.

You Are Not Wanted

Do you know that your efficiency is probably not much above the average—35%? And do you realize that no employer wants a man who is not efficient, even if his services are given free?

Do You Want to Acquire Efficiency for the Job of Life?

Do you want to be wanted by all men? Do you want to know that you cannot be replaced by a better man? Do you want to know just how and just where you can make a bigger profit on your time and effort?

Your Job for the Day, your Job of Life, and your Success for All Time demand that you make yourself efficient.

The Institute of Efficiency

Ours is the only school in existence where you can learn PERSONAL Efficiency. In twenty-four fascinating lessons, in your home, at your leisure, you learn of these wonder working truths that have saved railroads, industrial plants, and factories millions of dollars each year, and which have raised salaries, in many cases, one-hundred fold.

Harrington Emerson

the man who founded this school, and who wrote these twenty-four vital lessons, has spent his life in the study and practice of Efficiency. During the past twenty years, this world famous expert, has been advising the leading industrial plants of the country. This vast experience he has put into this course of study so that you can reap the benefit.

What This Means For You

This course is for anybody who wants to make the most of his life—the professional man, business man, the young man hoping to achieve—everyone who wishes to go as far as he can, do as much as he can, achieve the best that is in him—with the least effort. The coupon at the side if mailed at an early date will bring to you a Free copy of "The Story of Emerson," an outline of the Course, and full information.

The Institute of Efficiency
ROBERT B. CHASE, Sec'y
30 Irving Place New York City

The Hollow of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON : COPYRIGHT, 1912 BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued.

"I did not see the register at the inn. I did not know till afterwards that we were not booked. Once upstairs, I refused to remove my hat or my veil or my coat until he brought his friend to me. He pretended to be very angry over his friend's failure to be there beforehand, as he had promised. He ordered a supper served in the room. I did not eat anything. Somehow I was beginning to understand, vaguely of course, but surely—and bitterly, Mr. Wrandall. Suddenly he threw off the mask.

"He coolly informed me that he knew the kind of a girl I was. I had been on the stage. He said it was no use trying to work the marriage game on him. He was too old a bird and too wise to fall for that. Those were his words. I was horrified, stunned. When I began to cry out in my fury, he laughed at me but swore he would marry me even at that if it were not for the fact that he was already married. . . . I tried to leave the room. He held me. He kissed me a hundred times before I could break away. I—I tried to scream. . . . A little later on, when I was absolutely desperate, I—I snatched up the knife. There was nothing else left for me to do. I struck at him. He fell back on the bed. . . . I stole out of the house—oh, hours and hours afterward it seemed to me. I cannot tell you how long I stood there watching him. . . . I was crazed by fear. I—I—"

Redmond Wrandall held up his hand.

"We will spare you the rest, Miss Castleton," he said, his voice hoarse and unnatural. "There is no need to say more."

"You—you understand? You do believe me?" she cried.

He looked down at his wife's bowed head, and received no sign from her; then at the white, drawn faces of his children. They met his gaze and he read something in their eyes.

"I—I think your story is so convincing that we—we could not endure the shame of having it repeated to the world."

"I—I cannot ask you to forgive me, sir. I only ask you to believe me," she murmured brokenly. "I—I am sorry it had to be. God is my witness that there was no other way."

Mr. Carroll came to his feet. There were tears in his eyes.

"I think, Mr. Wrandall, you will now appreciate my motives in—"

"Pardon me, Mr. Carroll, if I suggest that Miss Castleton does not require any defense at present," said Mr. Wrandall stiffly. "Your motives were doubtless good. Will you be so good as to conduct us to a room where we may—may be alone for a short while?"

There was something tragic in the man's face. His son and daughter arose as if moved by an instinctive realization of a duty, and perhaps for the first time in their lives were submissive to an influence they had never quite recognized before—a father's unalterable right to command. For once in their lives they were meek in his presence. They stepped to his side and stood waiting, and neither of them spoke.

Mr. Wrandall laid his hand heavily on his wife's shoulder. She started, looked up rather vacantly, and then arose without assistance. He did not make the mistake of offering to assist her. He knew too well that to question her strength now would be but to invite weakness. She was strong. He knew her well.

"There Was Nothing Else Left for Me to Do."

She stood straight and firm for a few seconds, transfixing Hetty with a look that seemed to bore into the very soul of her, and then spoke.

"You ask us to be your judges?"

"I ask you to judge not me alone but your son as well," said Hetty, meeting her look steadily. "You cannot pronounce me innocent without pronouncing him guilty. It will be hard."

[illegible]

remember that it is I who am to be judged. Judge me as I have judged you. I am not asking for mercy."

Hetty impulsively threw her arms about the rigid figure, and swept a pleading look from one to the other of the four stony-faced Wrandalls.

They turned away without a word or a revealing look, and slowly moved off in the direction of the boudoir. They who remained behind stood still, motionless as statues. It was Vivian who opened the library door. She closed it after the others had passed through, and did not look behind.

* * * * * * *

Half an hour passed. Then the door was opened and the tall old man advanced into the room.

"We have found against my son, Miss Castleton," he said, his lips twitching. "He is not here to speak for himself, but he has already been judged. We, his family, apologize to you for what you have suffered from the conduct of one of us. Not one but all of us believe the story you have told. It must never be retold. We ask this of all of you. It is not in our hearts to thank Sara for shielding you, for her hand is still raised against us. We are fair and just. If you had come to us on that wretched night and told the story of my son's infamy, we, the Wrandalls, would have stood between you and the law. The law could not have touched you then; it shall not touch you now. Our verdict, if you choose to call it that, is sealed. No man shall ever hear from the lips of a Wrandall the smallest part of what has transpired here tonight. Mr. Carroll, you were right. We thank you for the counsel that led this unhappy girl to place herself in our hands."

"Oh, God, I thank thee—I thank thee!" burst from the lips of Sara Wrandall. She strained Hetty to her breast.

"It is not for us to judge you, Sara," said Redmond Wrandall, speaking with difficulty. "You are your own judge, and a harsh one you will find yourself. As for ourselves, we can only look upon your unspeakable design as the working of a temporarily deranged mind. You could never have carried it out. You are an honest woman. At the last you would have revolted, even with victory assured. Perhaps Leslie is the only one who has a real grievance against you in this matter. I am convinced that he loved Miss Castleton deeply. The worst hurt is his, and he has been your most devoted advocate during all the years of bitterness that has existed between you and us. You thought to play him a foul trick. You could not have carried it to the end. We leave you to pass judgment on yourself."

"I have already done so, Mr. Wrandall," said Sara. "Have I not accused myself before you? Have I not confessed to the only crime that has been committed? I am not proud of myself, sir."

"You have hated us well."

"And you have hated me. The crime you hold me guilty of was committed years ago. It was when I robbed you of your son. To this day I am the leper in your path. I may be forgiven for all else, but not for allowing Challis Wrandall to become the husband of Sebastian Gooch's daughter. That is the unpardonable sin."

Mr. Wrandall was silent for a moment.

"You still are Sebastian Gooch's daughter," he said distinctly. "You can never be anything else."

She paled. "This last transaction proves it, you would say?"

"This last transaction, yes."

She looked about her with troubled, questioning eyes.

"I—I wonder if that can be true," she murmured, rather piteously. "Am I so different from the rest of you? Is the blood to blame?"

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Mr. Carroll nervously. "Don't be silly, Sara, my child. That is not what Mr. Wrandall means."

Wrandall turned his face away.

"You loved as deeply as you hate, Sara," he said, with a curious twitching of his chin. "My son was your god. We are not insensible to that. Perhaps we have never realized until now the depth and breadth of your love for him. Love is a bitter judge of its enemies. It knows no mercy, it knows no reason. Hate may be conquered by love, but love cannot be conquered by hate. You had reason to hate my son. Instead you persisted in your love for him. We—we owe you something for that, Sara. We owe you a great deal more than I find myself able to express in words."

Leslie entered the room at this instant. He had his overcoat on and carried his gloves and hat in his hand.

"We are ready, father," he said thickly.

After a moment's hesitation, he crossed over to Hetty, who stood beside Sara.

"I—I can now understand why you refused to marry me, Miss Castleton," he said, in a queer, jerky manner. "Won't you let me say that I wish you all the happiness [illegible]

CHAPTER XXII.

Renunciation.

On the third day after the singular trial of Hetty Castleton in Sara's library, young Mrs. Wrandall's motor drew up in front of a lofty office building in lower Broadway; its owner stepped down from the limousine and entered the building. A few moments later she walked briskly into the splendid offices of Wrandall & Co., private bankers and steamship-owners. The clerks in the outer offices stared for a moment in significant surprise, and then bowed respectfully to the beautiful silent partner in the great concern.

It was the first time she had been seen in the offices since the tragic event that had served to make her a member of the firm. A boy at the information desk, somewhat impressed by her beauty and the trim elegance of her long black broad-tail coat, to say nothing of the dark eyes that shone through the narrow veil, forgot the dignity of his office and went so far as to politely ask her who she wanted to see and "what name, please."

"What's This?" He Demanded, Sharply.

The senior clerk rushed forward and transfixed the new boy with a glare.

"A new boy, Mrs. Wrandall," he made haste to explain. To the new boy's surprise, the visitor was conducted with much bowing and scraping into the private offices, where no one ventured except by special edict of the powers.

"Who was it?" he asked, in some awe, of a veteran stenographer who came up and sneered at him.

"Mrs. Challis Wrandall, you little simpleton," said she, and for once he failed to snap back.

It is of record that for nearly two whole days, he was polite to every visitor who approached him and was generally worth his salt.

Sara found herself in the close little room that once had been her husband's, but was now scrupulously held in reserve for her own use. Rather a waste of space, she felt as she looked about the office. The clerk dusted an easy chair and threw open the long unused desk near the window.

"We are very glad to see you here, madam," he said. "This room hasn't been used much, as you may observe. Is there anything I can do for you?"

She continued her critical survey of the room. Nothing had been changed since the days when she used to visit her husband here on occasions of rare social importance: such as calling to take him out to luncheon, or to see that he got safely home on rainy afternoons. The big picture of a steamship still hung on the wall across the room. Her own photograph, in a silver frame stood in one of the recesses of the desk. She observed that there was a clean white blotter there, too; but the ink wells appeared to be empty, if she was to judge by the look of chagrin on the clerk's face as he inspected them. Photographs of polo scenes in which Wrandall was a prominent figure, hung about the walls, with two or three pictures of his favorite ponies, and one of a ragged gipsy girl with wonderful eyes, carrying a monkey in a crude wooden cage strapped to her back. On closer observation one would have recognized Sara's peculiarly gipsy-like features in the face of the girl, and then one would have noticed the caption written in red ink at the bottom of the photograph: "The Trumbell's Fancy Dress Ball, January 10, '07. Sara as Gipsy Mab."

With a start, Sara came out of her painful reverie. She passed her hand over her eyes, and seemed thereby to put the polite senior clerk back into the picture once more.

"No, thank you. Is Mr. Redmond Wrandall down this afternoon?"

"He came in not ten minutes ago. Mr. Leslie Wrandall is also here. Shall I tell Mr. Wrandall you wish to see him?"

"You may tell him that I am here, if you please," she said.

"Pray don't let it disturb you, Mr. Bancroft. I shall not use them today."

"They will be properly filled by tomorrow."

"Thank you."

He disappeared. She relaxed in the familiar, comfortable old leather-cushioned chair, and closed her eyes. There was a sharp little line between them, but it was hidden by the veil.

The door opened slowly and Redmond Wrandall came into the room. She arose at once.

"This is—er—an unexpected pleasure, Sara," he said perplexed and ill-at-ease. He stopped just inside the door he had been careful to close behind him, and did not offer her his hand.

"I came down to attend to some business, Mr. Wrandall," she said.

"Business?" he repeated, staring.

She took note of the tired, haggard look in his eyes, and the tightly compressed lips.

"I intend to dispose of my entire interest in Wrandall & Co.," she announced calmly.

He took a step forward, plainly startled by the declaration.

"What's this?" he demanded sharply.

"We may as well speak plainly, Mr. Wrandall," she said. "You do not care to have me remain a member of the firm, nor do I blame you for feeling as you do about it. A year ago you offered to buy me out—or off, as I took it to be at the time. I had reasons then for not selling out to you. Today I am ready either to buy or to sell."

"You—you amaze me," he exclaimed.

"Does you offer of last December still stand?"

"I—I think we would better have Leslie in, Sara. This is most unexpected. I don't quite feel up to—"

"Have Leslie in by all means," she said, resuming her seat.

He hesitated a moment, opened his lips as if to speak, and then abruptly left the room.

Sara smiled.

Many minutes passed before the two Wrandalls put in an appearance. She understood the delay. They were telephoning to certain legal advisers.

"What's this I hear, Sara?" demanded Leslie, extending his hand after a second's hesitation.

She shook hands with him, not listlessly but with the vigor born of nervousness.

"I don't know what you've heard," she said pointedly.

His slim fingers went searching for the end of his moustache.

"Why—why, about selling out to us," he stammered.

"I am willing to retire from the firm of Wrandall & Co.," she said.

"Father says the business is as good as it was a year ago, but I don't agree with him," said the son, trying to look lugubrious.

"Then you don't care to repeat your original proposition?"

"Well, the way business has been falling off—"

"Perhaps you would prefer to sell out to me," she remarked quietly.

"Not at all!" he said quickly, with a surprised glance at his father. "We couldn't think of letting the business pass out of the Wrandall name."

"You forget that my name is Wrandall," she rejoined. "There would be no occasion to change the firm's name; merely its membership."

"Our original offer stands," said the senior Wrandall stiffly. "We prefer to buy."

"And I to sell. Mr. Carroll will meet you tomorrow, gentlemen. He will represent me as usual. Our business as well as social relations are about to end, I suppose. My only regret is that I cannot further accommodate you by changing my name. Still you may live in hope that time may work even that wonder for you."

She arose. The two men regarded her in an aggrieved way for a moment.

"I have no real feeling of hostility toward you, Sara," said Leslie nervously, "in spite of all that you said the other night."

"I am afraid you don't mean that, deep down in your heart, Leslie," she said, with a queer little smile.

"But I do," he protested. "Hang it all, we—we live in a glass house ourselves, Sara. I dare say, in a way, I was quite as unpleasant as the rest of the family. You see, we just can't help being snobs. It's in us, that's all there is to it."

Mr. Wrandall looked up from the floor, his gaze having dropped at the first outburst from his son's lips.

"We—we prefer to be friendly, Sara, if you will allow us—"

She laughed and the old gentleman stopped in the middle of his sentence.

"We can't be friends, Mr. Wrandall," she said, suddenly serious. "The pretence would be a mockery. We are all better off if we allow our paths, our interests to diverge today."

"Perhaps you are right," said he, compressing his lips.

[illegible]

ine about her. Strange to say, I have never disliked her."

"If you had made the slightest effort to like us, no doubt we could have—"

"My dear Mr. Wrandall," she interrupted quickly, "I credit you with the desire to be fair and just to me. You have tried to like me. You have even deceived yourself at times. I—but why these gentle recriminations? We merely prolong an unfortunate contest between antagonistic natures, with no hope of genuine peace being established. I do not regret that I am your daughter-in-law, nor do I believe that you would regret it if I had not been the daughter of Sebastian Gooch."

"Your father was as little impressed with my son as I was with his daughter," said Redmond Wrandall drily. "I am forced to confess that he was the better judge. We had the better of the bargain."

"I believe you mean it, Mr. Wrandall," she said, a note of gratitude in her voice. "Good-bye. Mr. Carroll will see you tomorrow." She glanced quickly about the room. "I shall send for—for certain articles that are no longer required in conducting the business of Wrandall & Co."

With a quaint little smile, she indicated the two photographs of herself.

"By Jove, Sara," burst out Leslie abruptly. "I wish you'd let me have that Gipsy Mab picture. I've always been dotty over it, don't you know. Ripping study."

Her lip curled slightly.

"As a matter of fact," he explained conclusively, "Chal often said he'd leave it to me when he died. In a joking way, of course, but I'm sure he meant it."

"You may have it, Leslie," she said slowly. It is doubtful if he correctly interpreted the movement of her head as she uttered the words.

"Thanks," said he. "I'll hang it in my den, if you don't object."

"We shall expect Mr. Carroll tomorrow, Sara," said his father, with an air of finality. "Good-bye. May I ask what plans you are making for the winter?"

"They are very indefinite."

"I say, Sara, why don't you get married?" asked Leslie, surveying the Gipsy Mab photograph with undisguised admiration as he held it at arm's length. "Ripping!" This to the picture.

She paused near the door to stare at him for a moment, unutterable scorn in her eyes.

"I've had a notion you were pretty keen about Brandy Booth," he went on amiably.

She caught her breath. There was an instant's hesitation on her part before she replied.

"You have never been very smart at making love guesses, Leslie," she said. "It's a trick you haven't acquired."

He laughed uncomfortably. "Neat stroke, that."

Following her into the corridor outside the offices, he pushed the elevator bell for her.

"I meant what I said, Sara," he remarked, somewhat doggedly. "You ought to get married. Chal didn't leave much for you to cherish. There's no reason why you should go on like

"Because I Love You So Dearly," Said Sara.

this, living alone and all that sort of thing. You're young and beautiful and—"

"Oh, thank you, Leslie," she cried out sharply.

"You see, it's going to be this way: Hetty will probably marry Booth. That's on dit, I take it. You're depending on her for companionship. Well, she'll quit you cold after she's married. She will—"

She interrupted him peremptorily.

"It Challis did nothing else for me, Leslie, he at least gave me you to cherish. Once more, good-bye."

The elevator stopped for her. He strolled back to his office with a puzzled frown on his face. She certainly was inexplicable!

The angry red faded from her cheeks as she sped homeward in the automobile. Her thoughts were no longer of Leslie, but of another [illegible] and closed her eyes, and

Workmen from a picture dealer's establishment were engaged in hanging a full length portrait in the long living-room of her apartment when she reached home. She had sent to the country for Booth's picture of Hetty, and was having it hung in a conspicuous place.

Passing the open library door Sara paused for an instant to peer within. Then she went on down the hall to her own sitting-room. The canary was singing glibly in his cage by the window-side.

She threw aside her furs, and, without removing her hat, passed into the bed-chamber at the left of the cosy little boudoir. This was Hetty's room. Her own was directly opposite. On the girl's dressing-table, leaning against the broad, low mirror stood the unframed photograph of a man. With a furtive glance over her shoulder, Sara crossed to the table and took up the picture in her gloved hand. For a long time she stood there gazing into the frank, good-looking face of Brandon Booth. She breathed faster; her hand shook; her eyes were strained as if by an inward suggestion of pain.

She shook her head slowly, as if in final renunciation of a secret hope or the banishment of an unwelcome desire, and resolutely replaced the photograph. Her lips were almost white as she turned away and re-entered the room beyond.

"He belongs to her," she said, unconsciously speaking aloud; "and he is like all men. She must not be unhappy."

Presently she entered the library. She had exchanged her tailor-suit for a dainty house-gown. Hetty was still seated in the big lounging chair, before the snapping fire, apparently not having moved since she looked in on passing a quarter of an hour before. One of the girl's legs was curled up under her, the other swung loose; an elbow rested on the arm of the chair, and her cheek was in her hand.

Coming softly up from behind, Sara leaned over the back of the chair and put her hands under her friend's chin, tenderly, lovingly. Hetty started and shivered.

"Oh, Sara, how cold your hands are!"

She grasped them in her own and fondly stroked them, as if to restore warmth to the long, slim fingers which gave the lie to Mrs. Coburn's declarations.

"I've been thinking all morning of what you and Brandon proposed to me last night," said Sara, looking straight over the girl's head, the dark, languorous, mysterious glow filling her eyes. "It is good of you both to want me, but—"

"Now don't say 'but,' Sara," cried Hetty. "We mean it, and you must let us have our way."

"It would be splendid to be near you all the time, dear; it would be wonderful to live with you as you so generously propose, but I cannot do it. I must decline."

"And may I ask why you decline to live with me?" demanded Hetty resentfully.

"Because I love you so dearly," said Sara.

THE END.

Pigeon Makes 700-Mile Trip.

Thirteen-year-old Marion Olram of Goldfield, Nev., is in her new San Francisco home today, and so is Dizzy, according to a dispatch to the New York Sun.

Dizzy is not a homer, but for an ordinary pigeon it has an acute traveling sense. It followed its little mistress all the 700 miles by train from Goldfield to San Francisco, and then to her home here. Marion kissed Dizzy good-by at Goldfield and then wept. She looked out of the car window—and there was Dizzy. She took it in, kissed it again and tossed it out once more.

But the pigeon wouldn't go back. When the Olrams got on the ferry at Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, Dizzy alighted on the girl's arm.

Island Paradise of Birds.

On one little island in Gatun lake, formerly known as Lion Hill, before the impounded waters of the Chagres river isolated it from the rest of the Canal Zone, are more species of birds than in any one locality in the western hemisphere. E. A. Goldman of the biological survey, department of agriculture, in two short collecting trips to Panama has procured about 300 different species, and it is estimated that a larger variety is to be found within the limits of the Canal Zone than in any one state in the United States—about 900.

In the neighborhood of Gatun, at the Atlantic entrance of the Canal Zone, no less than 250 species have been found.

Good Ones.

"Do you want me to misrepresent the goods and say they are fine when they are not?" asked the new salesman.

"Yes," sternly answered the unscrupulous dealer. "Always remember that our assets are your liabilities."

GAY PURIS HEARS THE CURFEW BELL

Martial Law for First Time Since Siege of Paris.

CALM FOLLOWS GREAT NOISE

War Scenes in the Frivolous French Capital—Citizens Must Be Indoors by 9:00 P. M.—Society Women Take Volunteers' Places.

Paris.—Martial law is in force for the first time since 1870, when Paris was in a state of siege. A visitor unaware of the situation would fancy himself in the midst of a national festival. This is on the outside only, for every home has its mourning. But life sits lightly on the Parisian.

The whole city is beflagged; the streets are a mass of color; hardly a building is there that is not gay with bunting. The English flag is conspicuous everywhere.

In the streets hawkers do a roaring trade selling little flags for the buttonhole, one the national tri-color, another the combined colors of the triple entente.

Horse and motor traffic are almost non-existent. Luckily the weather keeps fine. Immense crowds line the boulevards and chief thoroughfares.

Quietness Succeeds Noise.

A noticeable feature is the strange quietness which has come over the people. Wednesday there was a continuous roar; processions followed one another continuously Thursday it was as though the nation were dwelling on the death struggle with its fiercest enemy.

News sheets were snatched from runners for news of the Belgians' heroic opposition to the German advance. But, above all, the certainty that England is going to stand by transformed the thirst for street demonstrations. The crowd awaits events without noise or bluster. English and Italians are greeted in the cafes with lifted hat or a word of good fellowship. At the hotels the English visitors are treated with especial courtesy and deference. Americans rank in the popular mind with Britishers as friendly to France.

Curfew Law in Force.

The new law is now in force; all citizens are expected to be indoors at 9:00 p. m. The curfew bell warns all at eight, when the cafes close and streets are deserted. The theaters follow suit. The receipts at the Comedie Francaise on Monday were under $90. Twelve of the leading artists have gone to the front, among them Albert Carree and Georges Ricou. The Odeon theater has lost Paul Gavault. A few minor cafes chantant still try to draw, but the Moulin Rouge is closed. Maurice Barres, the eminent academician, has joined his regiment.

The police continue to be on the alert for spies. Many arrests have been made. Foreign residents have to apply to the police stations for permits to remain in the city. The gates are closed all around the fortifications at 8:00 p. m. Late arrivals by automobile have to run close examination. Carrier pigeons are the particular objects of suspicion to the police. The law of 1896 for bidding the importation of pigeons has been renewed. All the gun shops in Paris have been requisitioned to deposit their stock in warehouses to be held till martial law is abolished. Special municipal nurseries have been organized for the care of infants whose mothers have volunteered for the Red Cross or other work.

MEN AND THE MAN

Something over a hundred years ago the military genius was with France. Less than half a century ago Germany had the great leader.

However, much more men count than the man, yet the man does count. The spirit of the French people of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries was finer than the spirit of the German peoples of that time. The spirit of the German peoples of 1870 was finer than the spirit of the French

Workmen from a picture dealer's establishment were engaged in hanging a full length portrait in the long living-room of her apartment when she reached home. She had sent to the country for Booth's picture of Hetty, and was having it hung in a conspicuous place.

Passing the open library door, Sara paused for an instant to peer within. Then she went on down the hall to her own sitting-room. The canary was singing glibly in his cage by the window-side.

She threw aside her furs, and, without removing her hat, passed into the bed-chamber at the left of the cozy little boudoir. This was Hetty's room. Her own was directly opposite. On the girl's dressing-table, leaning against the broad, low mirror, stood the unframed photograph of a man. With a furtive glance over her shoulder, Sara crossed to the table and took up the picture in her gloved hand. For a long time she stood there gazing into the frank, good-looking face of Brandon Booth. She breathed faster; her hand shook; her eyes were strained as if by an inward suggestion of pain.

She shook her head slowly, as if in final renunciation of a secret hope or the banishment of an unwelcome desire, and resolutely replaced the photograph. Her lips were almost white as she turned away and re-entered the room beyond.

"He belongs to her," she said, unconsciously speaking aloud; "and he is like all men. She must not be unhappy."

Presently she entered the library. She had exchanged her tailor-suit for a dainty house-gown. Hetty was still seated in the big lounging chair, before the snapping fire, apparently not having moved since she looked in on passing a quarter of an hour before. One of the girl's legs was curled up under her, the other swung loose; an elbow rested on the arm of the chair, and her cheek was in her hand.

Coming softly up from behind, Sara leaned over the back of the chair and put her hands under her friend's chin, tenderly, lovingly. Hetty started and shivered.

"Oh, Sara, how cold your hands are!"

She grasped them in her own and fondly stroked them, as if to restore warmth to the long, slim fingers which gave the lie to Mrs. Coburn's declarations.

"I've been thinking all morning of what you and Brandon proposed to me last night," said Sara, looking straight over the girl's head, the dark, languorous, mysterious glow filling her eyes. "It is good of you both to want me, but—"

"Now don't say 'but,' Sara," cried Hetty. "We mean it, and you must let us have our way."

"It would be splendid to be near you all the time, dear; it would be wonderful to live with you as you so generously propose, but I cannot do it. I must decline."

"And may I ask why you decline to live with me?" demanded Hetty resentfully.

"Because I love you so dearly," said Sara.

THE END.

Pigeon Makes 700-Mile Trip.

Thirteen-year-old Marion Olram of Goldfield, Nev., is in her new San Francisco home today, and so is Dizzy, according to a dispatch to the New York Sun.

Dizzy is not a homer, but for an ordinary pigeon it has an acute traveling sense. It followed its little mistress all the 700 miles by train from Goldfield to San Francisco, and then to her home here. Marion kissed Dizzy good-by at Goldfield and then wept. She looked out of the car window—and there was Dizzy. She took it in, kissed it again and tossed it out once more.

But the pigeon wouldn't go back. When the Olrams got on the ferry at Oakland, across the bay from San Francisco, Dizzy alighted on the girl's arm.

Island Paradise of Birds.

On one little island in Gatun lake, formerly known as Lion Hill, before the impounded waters of the Chagres river isolated it from the rest of the Canal Zone, are more species of birds than in any one locality in the western hemisphere. E. A. Goldman of the biological survey, department of agriculture, in two short collecting trips to Panama has procured about 300 different species, and it is estimated that a larger variety is to be found within the limits of the Canal Zone than in any one state in the United States—about 900.

In the neighborhood of Gatun, at the Atlantic entrance of the Canal Zone, no less than 250 species have been found.

Good Ones.

"Do you want me to misrepresent the goods and say they are fine when they are not?" asked the new salesman.

"Yes," sternly answered the unscrupulous dealer. "Always remember that our assets are your liabilities."

GAY PURIS HEARS THE CURFEW BELL

Martial Law for First Time Since Siege of Paris.

CALM FOLLOWS GREAT NOISE

War Scenes in the Frivolous French Capital—Citizens Must Be Indoors by 9:00 P. M.—Society Women Take Volunteers' Places.

Paris.—Martial law is in force for the first time since 1870, when Paris was in a state of siege. A visitor unaware of the situation would fancy himself in the midst of a national festival. This is on the outside only, for every home has its mourning. But life sits lightly on the Parisian.

The whole city is beflagged; the streets are a mass of color; hardly a building is there that is not gay with bunting. The English flag is conspicuous everywhere.

In the streets hawkers do a roaring trade selling little flags for the buttonhole, one the national tri-color, another the combined colors of the triple entente.

Horse and motor traffic are almost non-existent. Luckily the weather keeps fine. Immense crowds line the boulevards and chief thoroughfares.

Quietness Succeeds Noise.

A noticeable feature is the strange quietness which has come over the people. Wednesday there was a continuous roar; processions followed one another continuously Thursday it was as though the nation were dwelling on the death struggle with its fiercest enemy.

News sheets were snatched from runners for news of the Belgians' heroic opposition to the German advance. But, above all, the certainty that England is going to stand by transformed the third day of mobilization was the big departure day. Men from twenty-eight to thirty left by the northern and eastern stations, which are barricaded to all but the military. Five hundred train loads left in one day. All was done in good order, with an absence of noisy manifestations. Many husbands break down when bidding wives and children adieu.

On the boulevards a superb automobile driven by a white-bearded man bears an inscription that it is for the free use of mobilized soldiers going to the eastern stations. As each soldier hails it and enters the old man hands him a well-stocked hamper and the crowd cheers.

The famous dressmakers have closed their doors. From the front doorways the midinettes stream out, carrying tri-color banners. From one establishment fifty young women emerge. At the head are three pretty girls who hold between them a huge banner. The rest follow, singing "La Marseillaise" as they march up the Rue de la Paix towards the boulevard.

Americans Offer Services.

"In the Montparnasse quarter, Holy Trinity lodge, a meeting house and hospital chiefly for the use of American artists, sculptors, etc., is now transformed into a military hospital. The members of the lodge unanimously offered their services for military work.

As the German ambassador left a street urchin crept through the lines of soldiers to the railway car. As the envoy entered the lad called out, "Give my compliments to William." The crowd enjoyed the joke more than the departing guest.

A smartly gowned young woman has on her arms a lad of fourteen, dressed in a Russian naval suit with a cap marked "Russia." A guard passes. The boy leaves his mother and cries at the top of his voice, "Long live the French army." The officer stops his men and kisses the boy on both cheeks.

A correspondent was approached by an officer in uniform and asked to witness the civil marriage of one of his men. Soldier Delaporte Jean Marie was united with Chomel Caux. Kissing his bride and shaking hands, he hastens off to fight for his country, leaving the bride sobbing convulsively.

Women Fill Men's Jobs.

The women of Paris rose to the emergency created by drafting the men of the city for the army. Society women took the place of men clerks in stores to sell necessities. Young girls sold tickets in the underground stations. Others acted as waiters in cafes. Grocery stores and meat shops were run by women. Small boys were put on as guards on the underground trains. The motormen are aged, gray-haired men, ineligible for service in the army. Paris enjoys the novelty of women doing men's work, and the women apparently do, too.

The war has leveled all classes. French society women have taken into their homes the destitute wives and children of private soldiers ordered to the front.

James Gordon Bennett Is Reporter.

The American adventurer gets the same treatment from the American embassy as the millionaire. James Gordon Bennett, millionaire owner of the New York Herald, is acting as a reporter for his newspapers, going daily to the American embassy to collect "stories."

Ambassador and Mrs. Herrick estimate that all Americans in the city have now been provided with the required police passports.

It was observed that Thomas Ryan, son of the American millionaire, and Oscar Underwood, son of the senator from Alabama, had to take their places in a line of Americans who desired to see the ambassador. Mrs. Howe, a sister of President Wilson, stood hours in line.

FRENCH ARMY OFFICERS

the thirst for street demonstrations. The crowd awaits events without noise or bluster. English and Italians are greeted in the cafes with lifted hat or a word of good fellowship. At the hotels the English visitors are treated with especial courtesy and deference. Americans rank in the popular mind with Britishers as friendly to France.

Curfew Law in Force.

The new law is now in force; all citizens are expected to be indoors at 9:00 p. m. The curfew bell warns all at eight, when the cafes close and streets are deserted. The theaters follow suit. The receipts at the Comedie Francaise on Monday were under $90. Twelve of the leading artists have gone to the front, among them Albert Carree and Georges Ricou. The Odeon theater has lost Paul Gavault. A few minor cafes chantant still try to draw, but the Moulin Rouge is closed. Mau-Barres, the eminent academician, has joined his regiment.

The police continue to be on the alert for spies. Many arrests have been made. Foreign residents have to apply to the police stations for permits to remain in the city. The gates are closed all around the fortifications at 8:00 p. m. Late arrivals by automobile have to run close examination. Carrier pigeons are the particular objects of suspicion to the police. The law of 1896 for bidding the importation of pigeons has been renewed. All the gun shops in Paris have been requisitioned to deposit their stock in warehouses to be held till martial law is abolished. Special municipal nurseries have been organized for the care of infants whose mothers have volunteered for the Red Cross or other work.

MEN AND THE MAN

Something over a hundred years ago the military genius was with France. Less than half a century ago Germany had the great leader.

However, much more men count than the man, yet the man does count. The spirit of the French people of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries was finer than the spirit of the German peoples of that time. The spirit of the German peoples of 1870 was finer than the spirit of the French people of 1870. Yet Napoleon and Von Moltke were supreme actors in the two periods.

Of the fateful Battle of the Boyne the Irish have always said that if their leader had been William and their enemies' leader James, a different story would have been written.

Will this European war develop a great military genius? Or will all depend on the higher average of the men and the war machines—on where is the greater discipline, the finer spirit, the greater staying power?

HUBBY GOT THE GOODS, BUT—

It Was the First Flush of the Honeymoon, and He Says "Never Again!"

"Never again," was the conclusion of a story told by a young bridegroom of the month, after he related his efforts to please his bride by fulfilling her every wish.

Sitting in his office a few days after the wedding he received a telephone call which was something like this: "Dearie, I do so hate to trouble you, but I have run out of lace for that dress I was making, and I can't finish it until I have another yard. Can't you stop at the store and get some as you come home—Oh, I can tell you what it is like—just four leaves, then a sprig, then four leaves, then a sprig, and so on—it's just two threads over an inch wide."

He hung up the receiver and mopped his brow. He walked by the store twice, finally entered and approached the lace counter. She was pretty, but he had been married only a week and was busy repeating in his mind: "Four leaves, then a sprig."

"Well, after looking at 500 samples of lace, I got it, but—"—Indianapolis News.

RESINOL STOPS DANDRUFF AND ITCHING SCALP

If you are troubled with dandruff, eczema or other scaly, itching scalp affection, try shampoos with resinol soap and an occasional treatment with resinol ointment. You will be surprised how quickly the trouble disappears, and the health and beauty of the hair improves.

Resinol soap and ointment also heal skin eruptions, clear away pimples and blackheads, and form a most valuable household treatment for sunburn, heat-rash, etc. Sold by all druggists. Prescribed by doctors for 19 years.—Adv.

No Airs About Her.

"Airs!" exclaimed the proud mother, and shook her head vigorously. "My Elsie, for all her learning, hasn't any more airs, so to speak, than her poor old dad."

"Then she won't turn up her nose at her old friends?" queried the visitor.

"La, no!"

"How refreshing! Most girls who go through college nowadays will hardly look at you after they're graduated."

"Well, they ain't like my Elsie, that's all I can say," retorted Elsie's ma. "She's become a carnivorous reader, of course, and she frequently importunes music. But stuck up—my Elsie? Not a bit. She's unanimous to everybody has a most infantile vocabulary, and what's more, never keeps a caller waiting while she dresses up. No, she just runs down, nom de plume, as she is."

Very Effective.

At an English provincial theater not long since the curtain rose on an empty stage in the second act of a play, and by and by a meek-looking young man with a dust-coat slung over his arm came on and loudly called, "Uncle—uncle!"

According to the book of the play he should have received no answer to his call, and after an appropriate pause should have gone on with a monologue. But a graceless "god" in the gallery took upon himself to answer the actor.

"All right, I'm coming in a moment. How much do you want on it?" he shouted.

The effect on the audience may be imagined.

Hot in the Superlative.

A preacher was describing the bad place to a congregation of shellbacks.

"Shipmates," he said, "you've seen the molten iron come running out of the furnace, sizzling and hissing, like some kind of snaky, horrible monster, Well, shipmates—"

The preacher pointed his forefinger at the awed shellbacks.

"Well, shipmates," he said, solemnly, "they use that stuff for ice cream in hell."

His Mistake.

"He's a self-made man."

"I know. He surely made a mistake in not consulting an expert."

Depends.

"Is a ton of coal very much, pa?"

"It depends on whether you are shoveling it or burning it."

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days

Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. The first application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

Both.

"Money talks," quoted the Sage.

"Yes, and it stops talk," added the Fool.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

How To Give Quinine To Children

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Vanilla Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle at factory.

Betting is an argument that is convincing only when one happens to win.

REVELATION WAS TOO MUCH

Picture of "Hollering Jones" at Favorite Diversion Caused Him to Reform.

A well-known illustrator, who makes interesting western pictures, once made the acquaintance of a noisy but good-natured cowboy who rejoiced in the appellation of "Hollering Jones."

In physical appearance this man was typical of his kind, and the artist made several studies of him, both in repose and in his favorite diversion of "hollering.' Some of the studies were sold by the artist to an eastern magazine. They showed Jones in his most violent state.

A year later the artist again visited the region. He was soon approached by Mr. Jones himself, bearing one of the pictures, which he had torn from the magazine in which its was printed. Pointing to it, he asked:

"Is that me?"

"Well," replied the artist, evasively, "I got the general idea from you, of course, but—"

"Oh, I ain't takin' no offense," Jones made haste to say. "It's all right; only if it's me, say so."

"If you put it to me that way," said the artist, "I can only reply that it is a fairly good portrait of you."

"The men here on the ranch agree with you. So I look like that when I holler, do I?"

"I think you do."

"In that case," said Hollering Jones, "all I've got to say is that Hollering Jones has hollered his last holler. Hereafter, when I celebrates, I does so with a tin horn. In my own opinion, no man has a right to look like that—not round white folks, anyhow."—Youth's Companion.

Rather Effeminate.

Congressman Peter J. Dooling of New York smiled the other evening when reference at a dinner was made to effeminate ways. He said he was reminded of the explanation of Smith.

Some time ago the Smiths attended a reception where they met a man named Brown. On the way home, while exchanging opinions of the guests, Brown was mentioned.

"Speaking of that man Brown," vigorously remarked Smith, "he certainly has an effeminate way of talking."

"Why, John," was the wondering rejoinder of Mrs. Smith, "how can you say that? He certainly has a very loud and masculine voice!'

"Yes, I know he has," explained Smith, "but what I mean is that he talks all the time."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Heartless.

Absorbed in her own sweet thoughts Miranda meandered through the meadow, coyly aware that in the distance her lover awaited her coming.

The sun just popped off this earth as Miranda was clasped in her lover's Sandow embrace.

"It has been the longest day in the year," he whispered ardently as he held her still closer.

How perfectly sweet of him, thought Miranda, as she closed her eyes in an ecstasy of happiness.

"Sweetheart," she breathed, raising her face to his, "why has it been so long?"

"Because—because," he answered lamely—"well, because, my dear girl, it's the twenty-first of June."

Perfectly Natural.

As Herbert Cory tells it, he went to a dinner once where Andrew Carnegie was a guest.

"After the eating was over and the speechmaking had started," said Corey, "Mr. Carnegie reached in his pocket for something and pulled out a handful of small change. A dime got away from him and fell on the floor, and at the first chance Mr. Carnegie got down under the table and looked for it."

"Did he find it?" asked one of the audience to whom Corey was narrating the incident.

"Did he find it?" echoed Corey. "He found 15 cents!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Some Weather.

College boys who put money in their purses by toil in Kansas wheat fields will not be discouraged by this story: "I think I smell burning meat," said the farmer, as he paused for a moment in the harvest field to mop his brow. "You do," said the raw harvest hand, wearily, as he stooped to get a couple more sheaves of golden grain. "The burning meat you smell is my liver frying. It is overdone." And with that the young fellow spat on a grasshopper and scalded it to death.—Atlanta Constitution.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

At Newport.

"So your daughter is down and out?"

"Yes; she took the count."—Chicago Journal.

A lucky chap is always out when trouble calls.

Even the baby in the cradle finds this is a rocky world.

Found Task a Hard One.

Whether a boy's ears belong to his face or his neck has always been a matter of washing convenience to the boy. One of two boys on a street car evidently had been told to wash his face, for his companion remarked: "You're all dirty back of your ears."

"Aw, I ain't either," remonstrated the accused.

"Well, you don't have to believe me," said the other; "you just look and see."

"Can the contortions," growled the conductor; and the boys became as quiet as boys can be."

Fortune Hunter.

"So Jack's married. Did he marry for beauty?"

"No, booty."

Many a man has taken a hand in politics and then put his foot in it.

Every new invention is expected to revolutionize things—but does it?

If the play is a frost the audience soon melts away.

For Thrush and Foot Diseases

Antiseptic, Cleansing, and Healing

HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh

For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.

Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00

All Dealers OR WRITE G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Of a Mixed Breed.

"Have you any turkey hash?"

"No."

"Chicken hash?"

"No."

"Corn beef hash?"

"No."

"Roast beef hash?"

"No."

"No hash at all?"

"Oh, yes! We've got plenty of hash, but it ain't thoroughbred'!"—Puck.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Your Druggist's 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye Free ask Druggists or Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

ONLY $21.90

f. o. b. factory for this nice 6 hole, nickel trimmed steel range without water tank. Add $3.50 for tank. Has Duplex Grates for coal or wood. HIGH POINT NOVELTY WORKS HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA

If you are learning the VIOLIN my book will save you years of blind, useless practice. Is that worth $1 to you? Information free. Samuel Howard, 1242 Wabash Ave., Chicago

METAL ROOFING

Shingles, Spanish Tile

EVERYTHING IN SHEET METAL BUILDING MATERIAL

BEST THAT MONEY CAN BUY

WE PAY THE FREIGHT. WRITE FOR CATALOG AND PRICES

THE M-EDWARDS CORRUGATING CO. COVINGTON - KY.

$15 Day selling Oil Lots by Sour Lake, $7.50 each, $2.50 down, $2.50 month, Warranty Deed, share in well if successful. We can never grow rich at hard labor, take this opportunity to make easy money for a trifle. Agents required to purchase one lot. Remit $2.50 today, ask for special agent's commission. TRIANGLE OIL CO. Carter Building, HOUSTON, TEXAS

NINE-TENTHS OF THE SPORTSMEN WHO see my dog catalog send me an order. Send for one today. Bird dogs, Coon hounds, fox hounds and beagles. J. A. Chask, Newport, Pa.

BIG MONEY; MAILING CIRCULARS FOR Others. Send 15c for copyrighted Instructions. Information Agcy., Dallas, Tex. B. 721

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll

Prints 3c and 4c Each

Prompt attention and work the best.

COVELL COMPANY

Department K Birmingham, Ala.

KING'S U-HAIR QUININE POMADE—The new preparation for growing hair, killing dandruff and making harsh, stubborn hair soft and luxurious. At your druggist or mailed direct on receipt of price, 25 cents. KING SPECIALTY CO., CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

WATCHES and DIAMONDS Sold on small monthly payments, no security, your credit is good; send for catalogue. B. H. Mayer, Manufacturer's Agent, 219 W. 12th St., Indianapolis, Ind.

DANDRUFF CURE SURE—SAFE—HARMLESS. Will do the work or money back. Send 50 cents to D. & S. Co., 804 Stricker St., Baltimore, Md.

WAGON BOLSTER SPRINGS Made by D. P. Tanner, Holland, N. Y. Will make your wagon ride like an automobile, write him for prices at once.

ADD to your family income knitting hosiery; no experience; constant work; machines furnished under contract; we take the product; make application today. Helping Hand Store, (Inc.), Chicago, Dept. 856.

BIG Money Mailing circulars for others. Send 25c for Doyle's copyrighted instructions. Pamaco, Pacific Mail Order Co., Box 256, Vallejo, California.

AGENTS No experience required; earn $5 a day; money selling household specialties; write today. Wm. Urquhart, 223 Pierce, San Francisco, Cal.

Young Man With Camera Send 10 cents for plans to make money. W. D. Browning, Collinwood, Ohio.

FROM ALASKA'S MINES—Gold nuggets and beautiful lockets filled with gold dust. Particles, 4c. Little Boulder Nugget Co., Tally, Alaska.

GET THE LONG GREEN coming your way. "Money Making Secrets Exposed" tells how. Write FRED V. REWORK, N. Y. Press, Rochester, N. Y.

Will Sell 10 shares par $10 Pennsylvania Investment Co. 6% stock 60 each. Fine Investment; need money. Box 520 Barnsdall, Pittsburgh, Pa.

LADIES Save your combings. Switches made 15c to $1. Work guaranteed. ETHEL BOTTLES, Hope Mills, N. C.

CONDUCT a mailing business; full instructions $1 postpaid. S. H. EASTWOOD, FT. DENAUD, FLA.

MAKE MONEY in wheat; big profits; safe, sure certain. Booklet tells how; agents wanted. J. B. Thompson, Mack Bldg., Denver, Colo.

OBTRUDE foot tablets for people who suffer from bunions, drops them upon their feet. Postpaid 25 cents. S. LIESER, STONE CREEK, OHIO

RAT POISON Harmless to human life and poisonous to rats. Formula 25c. L. E. KEUEGER, WITHEE, WIS.

$50.00 Confederate Money for $1; money back if not satisfied. C. C. McDonald, Gen. Del., Granite City, Ill.

$2 A DAY addressing envelopes at home; no boxes; either sex; supplies furnished free. F. W. REHULLAY, MARSHFIELD, WIS.

START a store for yourself. If you have $300 to invest, write me about it. JAKE FISK, HOT SPRINGS, ARKANSAS

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Unity-Chilton Baptist High School

A High grade co-educational institution. Prepares for college classes or for Christian citizenship. Classical, General, Scientific and Business causes. Special departments in Piano, Voice and Expression. A Specially Trained Faculty.

High Grade Work at a REASONABLE Cost

We invite Comparrison with other four year High Schools. Board in good families $12 to $15, according to accommodations. The President and his wife will give special attention to girls. For further information call on or address

Rev. JOHN A. POOL, PH.D., Pres.

20 eachers 700 Students

State Normal School

Florence, Alabama.

This institution has an honorable record of forty-one years in Traning Teachers For Efficient Service.

Seven hundred students were enrolled last session from thirty-six counties.

This school welcomes young men and women of intellect and character who wish to be fitted for the profession of teaching.

Our graduates are holding many of the most responsible positions in Alabama.

Twenty teachers in the faculty, including departments of domestic science and domestic arts. Manual training and applied agriculture together with a systematic study of rural problems will be organized.

Board may be had either in the dormitory or in private families.

The value of the grounds, buildings and equipment is conservatively estimated at $240,000.

Next session begins September 8. Write for catalogue.

Henry J. Willingham, LL.D., President. E. A. Henry, Secretary.

"AUBURN"

Alabama Polytechnic Institute

The Oldest School of Technology in the South

69 Professors and instructors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Laboratories

Summer Session July 24 to September 4, 1914.

Next Session Begins Wednesday, September 9, 1914.

New Buildings and New Equipment.

DEPARTMENTS

I. College of Engineering and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, and Mining Engineering, Architecture, Metallurgy, Mechanic Arts, Technical Drawing, Machine Design, etc.

II. College of Agricultural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture, Animal Husbandry, Botany, Entomology, Chemistry.

Department of Pharmacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and Two-Year Courses).

III. Academic Departments—History, English, Mathematics, Latin, German, French, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Psychology.

IV. College of Veterinary Medicine.

Expenses. Free tuition to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to non-residents. Board in Dormitory and with private families. For Catalogue and Further Information, Address

CHAS. C. THACH, LL. D., President, AUBURN, ALA.

List of Letters

Remaining uncalled for at the Clanton Post Office for the week ending Aug. 8, 1914:

Ladies—Miss Nellie Blackwood, Miss Laura Hardy, Florence Bowers.

Gentlemen—W. B. Barnet, L. S. Badgs, L. T. Dison, Jessie Green, Ben Mitchell, J. L. Mims, Esauw Williams, J. E. Parrish, H. C. Ashmead.

These Letters will be sent to the Dead Letter Office August 22, 1914, if not delivered before. In calling for the above, please say 'Advertised, giving date of list.

F. O. Dudley, P. M.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist.
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. F. C. Smith
Thorsby, Ala.
Office Masonic Bldg.
Hours—8 to 10 and 3 to 5.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —
MONUMENTS
AND GRAVESTONES
Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by
J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This conpon and 80 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan., 1.

How Do You Feel After Eating.?

One should feel good natured and satisfied. That is the way one will feel if the digestive organs are working properly. No pain or distress should follow a hearty meal. If there is pain or distress your stomach needs the aid that POINDEXTER'S TONIC will give.

A dose directly after eating will prevent all trouble. This remedy will stimulate the digestive organs thereby increasing the secretion of gastric juices.

"Its use insures perfect assimilation and the greatest possible percentage of nutriment from what is eaten." Money back if you are not satisfied.

Helping Kidneys By Clearing Blood

A Function Greatly Assisted By a Well-Known Remedy.

Most readers will be interested to more clearly understand why analysis of urine is so important. In the use of S. S. S. to purify the blood, its action is a stimulant to the myriad of fine blood vessels that make up the constructive tissues of the kidneys. All the blood from all over the body must pass through the kidneys. They act as testers and assayers. And according to what they allow to pass out in the urine, both as to quantity and materials, the health of the kidneys and the quality of the blood is determined. The catalytic energy forced by S. S. S. is shown in the urine. It is also demonstrated in the skin. And as the blood continues to sweep through the kidneys the dominating nature of S. S. S., acting as it does through all the avenues of elimination, shows a marked decrease of disease manifestations as demonstrated by urine analysis. This assistance is a great relief to the kidneys. The body wastes are more evenly distributed to the emunctories; their elimination is stimulated by the tonic action afforded the liver, lungs, skin and kidneys. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S., so it will enable the tissues to rebuild the cellular strength and regain the normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 527 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

The Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Unity and Chilton County Associations will meet with Shiloh church the fifth Saturday and Sunday in this month. We hope all who can will come.

T. J. Deason, Pastor.

Baby of Future is Considered

Much thought has been given in late years to the subject of maternity. In the cities there are maternity hospitals equipped with modern methods. But most women prefer their own homes and in the towns and villages must prefer them. And since this is true we know from the great many splendid letters written on the subject that our "Mother's Friend" is a great help to expectant mothers. They write of the wonderful relief, how it seemed to allow the muscles to expand without undue strain and what a splendid influence it was on the nervous system. Such helps as "Mother's Friend" and the broader knowledge of them should have a helpful influence upon babies of the future. Science says that an infant derives its sense and builds its character from cutaneous impressions. And a tranquil mother certainly will transmit a more healthful influence than if she is extremely nervous from undue pain. This is what a host of women believe who used "Mother's Friend."

These points are more thoroughly explained in a little book mailed free.

"Mother's Friend" is sold in all drug stores. Write for book. Bradfield Regulator Co., 411 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

FOR SALE—171 acres good, almost level land; one half is red land; one mile from Jemison. 2 good homes, 1 good barn; 80 acres in cultivation. Also have one extra good buggy-horse and buggy for sale. If interested see me. This is a bargain and you will have to hurry or it will be sold.

W. A. Reynolds,
8-6-2t Jemison, Ala.

SICKENED BY CALOMEL

If you ever saw anyone made sick by calomel you won't want any more calomel yourself. There's no real reason why a person should take calomel anyway, when fifty cents will buy a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a good remedy that perfectly and safetly takes the place of dangerous calomel, which is only another form of deanly and poisonous mercury.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting vegetable liquid which will start the liver just as surely as calomel, and which has absolutely no bad after-effects.

Children and grown people can take Dodson's Liver Tone without any restriction of habit or diet. Alred Drug Comdaury sell it and guarantee it to take the place of calomel, and will refund money promptly if it fails in this.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDOX

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Prompt Service Day or Night

Two New Five Passenger Cars

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone 36.

SEASHORE EXCURSIONS

Every Saturday until August 30th

TO

Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola	$6.65
Pascagoula	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.35
Biloxi	8.40	Gulfport	9.00
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis	9.30

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fares with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply

L&N

J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton

J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

What You Make Us

We—the L. & N.—are what you—the people—make us.

True, you are not responsible for our errors of judgments and our clerical mistakes—

But you influence them.

You—the people—in proportion that you are greater than the L. & N., exert an influence over us that is beneficial or detrimental to both of us in proportion to our relative importance.

You have it in your power to make or break the L. & N., just as you have it in your power to make or break a bank in your community.

And while the bank might have to close its doors, liquidate and go out of business, some of you—the people—would suffer.

On the contrary, mutual trust and co-operation can make of us a strong, a powerful influence for good in the community.

And in proportion that you are greater than the L. & N. you will be benefited.

Every grade on the road should be reduced, every curve should be straightened, every tie kept sound, every rail made secure, in order that you, the people, will get the best transportation possible to be had.

Depots should be cool in summer and warm in winter—clean at all times; coaches should be well lighted at night, clean and well ventilated at all times. Engines should be powerful, fast and safe. Employees should be considerate and polite.

These are things for which we are constantly striving, and you—the people—can help us, and by helping us help yourselves.

Remember, in spite of our rules and discipline we have among our employees, just as there are among you, the even-tempered and the irascible, the happy natured and the grouch. They must come into contact with men, women and children; the old and the newly-born; the white and black; the halt, the lame and the blind, the decrepit, the exuberant, the drunk, the sober, the well-behaved, and the tough.

Remember, in the transportation of freight we handle mllions of consignments; the carload lot and the small package; the shipments from Bombay and Birmingham; the freight from Mandalay and Montgomery.

We need your help in our effort to render satisfactory service to all sorts and conditions of human beings in our freight and passenger departments.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

THE

THE UNION 11th Y

GILLESPIE'S REPLY TO MR. J. F. GOODGAME

Clanton, Ala., August 17.

Editor Union-Banner: If you kindly permit me, through the columns of your paper, I would like to reply to the personal cast upon me in last weeks issue of the Clanton Press by Mr. J. F. Goodgame.

I wish to call the attention of the people to my letter in the Union-Banner of July 30, and ask Mr. Goodgame answered the facts I stated in that letter. I think everyone will agree that my letter was written in a broad general sense and not narrow and personal. But Mr. Goodgame failed to see it that way and in attempting to answer it he directly poured his "shot" of personalities upon me.

I wish to say that I am in favor of good roads and believe the county should spend as much money each year on the public roads of the county as they can spare. However I am opposed to the issuance of warrants and putting the county in debt, as I believe such practice is against the best interests of the county, against the wishes of at least 90 cent of the people of the county. I do not take this stand because it affects me so much personally, but because I believe it is for the masses of the people of the county.

However I am not surprised at Mr. Goodgame coming out for the issuance of the warrants for the Democratic ticket, for I heard some time ago that he was saying that the people in the county were not competent to decide what they need, and that the warrants should be issued even if the majority of the people was against it, and a highway built. This seems to be the policy of the democratic party in this county, and no wonder you have decided to throw your lot with them, since you have decided that just a few men in Clanton were the only people in the county who were competent to say what the people need.

It says that he knows three men who pay large taxes, in favor of warrants; does he take this as evidence that the warrants should be issued without further question of the people? Are the democratic party going to depend on these three men to carry their ticket? I do not care what these three men are nor what they are worth, I am not in favor of them dictating what is best for the people. I believe that the people should have the right to say for themselves what they want, and not be run over by two or three in Clanton.

Do you believe in any three men dictating to the people of the county what to to do? Does the man whom you are supporting for Sheriff believe as you do in running over the wishes of the people and not giving them a chance to say what they want? Is it fair for the Democrats of the county to put the county in debt over the wishes of the people? It seems from your letter and from your talk that you do not believe that a poor man in the county should have any voice at all in the management of the county affairs. Is this true and isn't this about the way the democrats run things when they are in power? Does your man for sheriff believe on these questions as you do? He surely is, or you would not be advocating them and his cause in the same letter.

W. H. Gillespie.

Teache

The most that has yet county close Ninety-four rolled. Th Prof. T. W. visor of the ty schools, a land of the Training S of the coun ed with th Smith is an to explain to know. practical in to do the Strickland ors in maki themselves the best sent out by of Educati

Among of the Inst sis placed ing and th nature of At three o the men a shops for and the la tion to sev the close ducts of work form exhibit. ed by the sewing st most imp week's w work giv the above be like ground."

Mrs. H cross Nu addresse times on proving the close lution ap unanimo

On Tu of Clant a very i ing and old fash held, wl siasm a crowd. fered fo folowin Miss Ru Miss Ri Duncan prize 3; prize 4; 5. The ceived grand J. J. Mi pelle prize The means stitute.

Duri W. W Schoo teresti of 1 e many well a of his

The tions cation schoo the co prove and g

Pro Presi next Secre Presi ment Harr

An spiri

LEE MADDOX
ILES FOR HIRE
vice Day or Night
ive Passenger Cars
NTON, ALA.
Phone 36.

E EXCURSIONS
ay until August 30th
TO
oast Resorts
FARES FROM CLANTON
.65
.00 Ocean Springs 8.35
.40 Gulfport - - 9.00
.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.30
Days Return Limit
ALSO
l September 30th, regular round
Tickets at slightly higher fares
October 31st.
For particulars apply
A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

ou Make Us
re what you—the people—make sponsible for our errors of judgmistakes—
nem.
proportion that you are great-kert an influence over us that is al to both of us in proportion ance.
r power to make or break the ave it in your power to make or community.
might have to close its doors,
of business, some of you—the tual trust and co-operation can powerful influence for good in that you are greater than the nefited.
road should be reduced, every ghtened, every tie kept sound,
, in order that you, the people, nsportation possible to be had.
l in summer and warm in win-coaches should be well lighted ll ventilated at all times. En-ful, fast and safe. Employees and polite.
which we are constantly striv-le—can help us, and by helping of our rules and discipline we yees, just as there are among d and the irascible, the happy
h. They must come into con-and children; the old and the and black; the halt, the lame repit, the exuberant, the drunk,
aved, and the tough.
ansportation of freight we han-ments; the carload lot and the pments from Bombay and Birfrom Mandalay and Montgomn our effort to render satisfac-
s and conditions of human bed passenger departments.
AND NASHVILLE
AD COMPANY

THE UNION-BANNER

Register Chancy 2 April 2

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 19

GILLESPIE'S REPLY TO R. J. F. GOODGAME

anton, Ala., August 17.
r Union-Banner: If you
dly permit me, through olumns of your paper, I like to reply to the person-cast upon me in last weeks
f the Clanton Press by Mr.
oodgame.

h to call the attention of ple to my letter in the Banner of July 30, and ask Goodgame answered the l stated in that letter. I everyone will agree that er was written in a broad neral sense and not narand personal. But Mr.
ame failed to see it that nd in attempting to an-it he directly poured his hot" of personalities upon h to say that I am in fa-good roads and believe nty should spend as much each year on the public

f the county as they can However I am opposed suance of warrants and g the county in debt, as e such practice is against interests of the county, nst the wishes of at least ent of the people of the
I do not take this stand it affects me so much lly, but because I believe for the masses of the of the county.

wever I am not surprised
r. Goodgame coming out
e issuance of the warrants
r the Democratic ticket,
l heard some time ago that saying that the people
the county were not com-
t to decide what they need, hat the warrants should be d even if the majority of eople was against it, and ighway built. This seems the policy of the democratrty in this county, and no er you have decided to your lot with them, since ave decided that just a few n Clanton were the only s in the county who were cent to say what the peods.

ys that he knows three o pay large taxes, in fawarrants; does he take evidence that the war-should be issued without
r question of the people?
e democratic party going to d on these three men to their ticket? I do not care these three men are nor t they are worth, I am not avor of them dictating what st for the people. I believe the people should have the t to say for themselves what want, and not be run over two or three in Clanton.

Do you believe in any three dictating to the people of county what to do? Does man whom you are support-for Sheriff believe as you do nning over the wishes of the ple and not giving them a ce to say what they want?
t fair for the Democrats of county to put the county in over the wishes of the peo-
It seems from your letter from your talk that you do believe that a poor man in county should have any ce at all in the management the county affairs. Is this and isn't this about the way democrats run things when are in power? Does your for sheriff believe on these tions as you do? He surely , or you would not be advo-
g them and his cause in the letter.

W. H. Gillespie.

Teachers Institute

The most successful Institute that has yet been held in Chilton county closed Friday, Aug. 14. Ninety-four teachers were enrolled. The conductors were Prof. T. W. Smith, Rural Supervisor of the Montgomery county schools, and Miss Rosa Strickland of the Birmingham Teacher Training School. The teachers of the county were highly pleased with their condutors. Prof. Smith is an excellent instructor to explain what he wishes others to know. Then, too, he is so practical in having the teachers to do the actual work. Miss Strickland has very few superiors in making people think for themselves; she ranks as one of the best assistant conductors sent out by the state department of Education.

Among the prominent features of the Institue were the emphasis placed on Vocational Training and the eminently practical nature of the work presented. At three o'clock each afternoon the men adjourned to the nearby shops for manual training work, and the ladies turned their attention to sewing and cooking. At the close of the Institute the products of the manual training work formed a very interesting exhibit. The work acomplished by the ladies in cooking and sewing stands out as one of the most important features of the week's work. The value of the work given by the conductors in the above subjects will no doubt be like "seed sown in good ground."

Mrs. Helen G. Marshall, Red cross Nurse for Chilton county, addressed the teachers several times on the importance of improving sanitary conditions. At the close of the Institute a resolution approving her work was unanimously adopted.

On Tuesday night the people of Clanton joined the teachers in a very interesting social gathering and on Thursday night an old fashioned spelling bee was held, which created much enthusiasm and brought out a large crowd. Several prizes were offered for the best spellers. The folowing ladies received prizes: Miss Ruby Downs, grand prize; Miss Rilla Smith, prize 1; Mrs. Duncan, prize 2; Mrs. Adams, prize 3; Miss Martha Jane Mims, prize 4; Mrs. Lela Mullins, prize 5. The following gentlemen received prizes: S. H. Herbert, grand prize; H. L. Davis, prize 1; J. J. Mims, prize 2; F. H. Chappelle prize 3; F. B. Williams, prize 4; J. J. Pickens, prize 5. The spelling bee was by no means a small feature of the institute.

During the Institute, Prof. E. W. Wright of the State Normal School of Troy, delivered an interesting address on the science of Teaching. He brought out many interesting thoughts as well as created laughter at many of his humorous sayings.

The Institute adopted resolutions favoring compulsory education, consolidation of rural schools, local taxation with the the county as a unit, school Improvement Associations, boys and girls corn and tomato clubs.

Prof. S. H. Herbert will be President of the Reading Circle next year and Mr. W. M. Bean, Secretary; and Mr. J. L. Johnson, President of the School Improvement Association, and Mr. J. L. Harris, Secretary.

An excellent and co-operative spirit dominated during the entire Institute. Much favorable comment was heard on every hand of the most excellent and practical work that was done both by the conductors and the teachers. Thus the teachers who attended went home with many valuable suggestions on Vocational Training, teaching grammar, telling interesting stories to pupils, opening exercises, community pride, citizenship etc.

Progressives To Have Speakings

There will be speakings in the interest of the Progressive ticket at the following times and places:

Cane Creek, Beat 11, 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 24.

Poplar Springs, Beat 4, 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 25.

Providence Beat 16, 7 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 26.

Maple Springs, Beat 4, 7 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 27.

Baker School House Beat 4, 7 p.m. Friday, Aug. 28.

The following speakers will address the people at the above named times and places: Judge L. H. Reynolds, Hon. P. E. Alexander, Prof. J. W. Moore and Prof. W. T. Bean. Some of the above named speakers will speak at the places named above.

The Democrats are hereby invited to meet in joint debate at any or all the above named places, provided they will give our Chairman two days notice of the time and place, that they intend to meet us and who their speaker will be.

Other speakings will be announced next week.

All persons regardless of political affiliations are cordially invited to attend these meetings. The ladies are especially invited to come.

M. D. Foshee,
Chairman Progressive Campaign Committee.

Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention will be held at Shilo church near South Calera, 1st, Sunday in September and Saturday before. Books used will be Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony. People coming by rail will get off at South Calera. Those wishing to be met will notify W. F. Armstrong, Calera, Alabama R. F. D. We are expecting several visitors at this session, among them we expect Miss Jackson the far famed director of the Birmingham class.

T. C. Jackson President, Z. J. Jones Secretary.

Mt. Pleasant

The Press accuses The Union-Banner of being the watch dog over the county treasury. We will suggest for the Press man to act as watch dog over the State treasury, and he could also do some good watching over in Cullman county over some of his Democratic friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Price of near Mt. Carmel spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Price.

Mr. G. D. Melton made a business trip to Alexander City last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Manning of Mulberry spent one night last week with Mr. and Mrs. Lee Vickers.

Mr. Bentley Dupriest is in Birmingham this week on business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lewis spent Saturday night with the latters parents Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Hawkins near Cooper.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Woodfin and mother spent part of last week with Rev. W. C. Woodfin.

Mr. Kernie Scroggins recently made a trip to Birmingham.

Mr. Silas Kelley and son John T. have just returned from a visit to relatives near Rockford.

Mrs. J. A. Crawford and children of Shelby spent part of last week with her sister Mrs. G. H. Massey.

Mr. J. P. Thomas and family visited near Cooper Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Ama Zinnerman of Birmingham is visiting friends here.

Mr. W. J. Blankenship and family were visitors at Mr. E. J. Evans last Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Duke were visitors at Mr. W. J. Morris Sunday.

Mr. A. D. Low has just returned from Birmingham.

Mr. W. A. Dozier recently visited in Elmore County.

Al Jennings the reformed bandit who made a good race for Governor of Oklahoma in the Democratic Primary says that he was counted out and he is going to carry the election to the courts so that the fraud can be exposed. And Jennings says that there were gross frauds, that he concede the nomination of nobody, and that he is going to put some of the election officers, where he once was—behind the bars.

If the Press man would look after such as the above is in his own party, he wouldn't have so much time to look after the other fellow. From Democratic reports such things exist in the Democratic party of Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bailey of Coosa is visiting at Mr. J. A. Lewis.

Little Viewer

Thorsby Institute

Thorsby, Ala.

A School that is thoroughly Christian but not sectarian. Well known throughout the County for its

Good Equipment,
Well Trained Teachers,
Thorough Work.

Prepares for any grade of Teachers' Certificates, for College or for Practical Life.

Courses in Domestic Science, Manual Training, Scientific Agriculture, Bookkeeping, and Music.

Ninth Year opens Sept. 8, 1914.

For Catalogue and further Information, address

S. H. Herbert, Principal,
Thorsby, Ala.

Resolutions Of Interest

To Every citizen of the county—Adopted by Teachers Institute

The Committee on Resolutions appointed by the Chilton County Teachers' Institute reported the following Resolutions:

1. We hereby express to our County Supt., Prof. W. T. Bean, our highest appreciation and heartiest thanks for his kindness and fairness manifested to the teachers of the county during the year.

2. We believe that the teachers Institute, as at present conducted, is of incalculable value to all who are teachers, or hope to be; but we believe that its value would be increased if it were held during the school term, and we believe the teachers should be paid for the time spent in attending.

3. We urge our legislature to change the school year so that it will begin July 1st, thus making it possible for teachers to make contracts before school begins. (This will necessitate some other changes, such as the election of Trustees in March, etc.)

4. We believe our Districts should be consolidated, instead of being further divided; and to that end we urge our Legislature to pass a law allowing a certain amount of public school funds to be used for the transportation of pupils in cases where Districts can be consolidated to advantage. We urge our county board to make no further division of Districts, but to plan for consolidation.

5. We urge our legislature to pass a law making some State funds available for the equipment of rural schools.

6. Realizing the necessity of an education for the masses of the peeple, we ask the Legislature to pass a Compulsory Attendance Law.

7. We favor the elimination of all but two of the white Normal Schools. We favor the abolition of the District Agricultural Schools as such, believing that no distinctive agricultural school will be needed if our County High Schools become increasingly Agricultural High Schools. We believe that the Fertilizer tag Tax should be appropriated to the rural schools.

8. We urge the adoption of a Constitutional amendment providing greater revenue for school purposes, and we suggest the following provisions: A state tax of five mills; a county tax not to exceed three mills, levied by vote of the people of the county; a District tax for construction, repairs and equipment to be levied by vote of the people of the District.

We heartily approve of the course of study outlined by the Teachers Reading Circle, and pledge ourselves to adopt said course.

10. Whereas, our efficient county board of education has token steps to secure the adoption of the Reading Circle course,

Be it resolved, that we endorse such action of said Board as will require the presentation of a Reading Circle Certificate with the last monthly report for the school year beginning Oct. 1, 1914.

11. We wish to go on record as favoring a more complete and systematic organization of the teachers of Chilton county.

12. We, the teachers of Chilton county, pledge ourselves to organize at least one agricultural club and a School Improvement Association in our respective communities during the next school year.

13. We favor the elimination of all High School subjects from one and two room schools, believing that the teaching of such subjects in these schools can only be done by robbing the smaller children of the teacher's time which belongs to them. We believe that the consolidation of Districts and larger revenue for school purposes will make possible the placing of at least a Junior High School within reach of every country boy or girl.

14. We believe no teacher can do his best work in a community during his first year, and therefore, we urge our District Trustees and our teachers to work for longer terms of service.

15. We express our gratification at the fact that our county has secured a County High School, and that the building is in course of construction, and we hope for mutual co-operation between the teachers of the county and the County High School in the upbuilding of the public school system of the county. We request that our next Institute be held in the County High School building.

16. We endorse the action of the county board of education and the Commissioners court in helping to secure the service of a Red Cross Nurse for Chilton county, and we urge every teacher in the county to co-operate heartily in the movement for better health.

17. We wish to thank the Sheriff for his generous service in cleaning up the court room for the Spelling Bee.

18. We are much indebted to the good people of Clanton for their generous hospitality while in their midst, and especially to Mrs. James Middleton and others who assisted in entertaining us so splendidly at the social; to Mrs. Johnson for opening her home for the cooking demonstration, to the blacksmith shops and planing mill for furnishing places for the work of the Manual Traing Classes, the business men for their generosity in providing so generously for the cost of the Social and the prizes for the Spelling Bee.

We wish especially to thank Mr. J. J. Pickens and his efficient committees for their untiring efforts which contributed so largely to the success of the Institute, Social and the Spelling Bee.

We feel further indebted to Miss Rosa Strickland and Mr. T. W. Smith for their faithfullness in conducting the Institute, and to the visitors who added to its pleasure and value, for we feel that this has been the most successful Institute yet held in the county.

Signed:
S. H. Herbert, Chm.,
Lottie Johnson, Secy.,
Committee on Resolutions.

The Chairman of the Committee would be glad to receive from readers of this paper any comments on the Resolutions as adopted. The desire in drawing up the Resolutions was not to express the feelings of the Committee, but of the body of teachers as a whole.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle, 2 milch cows and calves—freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.
Alfred Powell.

PROHIBITION FIGHT IS ON

STANDING COMMITTEES TO BE APPOINTED—FACTIONAL IS PROMISED.

AT THE STATE'S CAPITAL

Interesting News Budget of Happenings in Various Departments of State.

—Montgomery.

Interest in the next legislature now centers in a dispute about the authority to appoint standing committees of the senate. Thomas E. Kilby, lieutenant governor-to-be, and prohibitionist, claims he has authority to name the committees. Local optionists maintain the president pro tem is the person clothed with such prerogative. Mr. Kilby says he will appoint the committees and local optionists say he will not. Thus has the fight begun.

Each side is backed by precedents. When the new constitution was adopted in 1901 Russell M. Cunningham was lieutenant governor. He contended that the distinction between executive and legislative departments of government should be maintained and for that reason would not appoint standing committees. This duty passed into the hands of the president pro tem.

Henry B .Gray succeeded Mr. Cunningham as lieutenant governor. He attacked the former position and won. Standing committees were appointed by him, and in order to make certain that they were legal the senate adopted a resolution ratifying his action. This gave prohibitionists the precedent they are relying upon now.

Walter D. Seed, a member of the same political faith as Gray, was elected lieutenant governor, but he made no fight to maintain the position of his predecessor, and Hugh Morrow, president pro tem, named the committees. The senate then adopted a rule providing that the president pro tem shall appoint standing committes.

This rule is still a senate provision, and says: "The president pro tem of the senate shall appoint the chairmen and members of the standing committees, and he shall appoint all other committees of the senate, both special and joint." But this rule is for the senate which will no longer exist after November. Each senate has power to make its own rules and regulations, and has authority to disregard any former action.

The question is purely for consideration of the senate. If prohibitionists control Lieutenant Governor Kilby will appoint. If they do not, the president pro tem will select the personnel of committees. Local optionists realize that all may be gained while nothing can be lost. If they don't fight they know one of an opposite political belief will select committees that best serve the cause he represents. They have convinced themselves that they have a majority in the senate and that they will elect a president pro tem.

Rains Improve Crops.

Good rains during the past week and a general improvement in the cotton crop are reported in the weekly summary of weather and crop conditions issued by the weather bureau.

The report states, however, that the complaints of rust and shedding are considerable. The report follows:

"In the cotton states east of the Mississippi river, good rains caused general improvement and the cotton crop progressed satisfactory. Early planted cotton is opening rapidly and picking has begun, but somewhat delayed in some portions by rainy weather.

"There are considerable complaints of rust and shedding. West of the Mississippi river beneficial showers occurred in Arkansas and Louisiana and the crop made satisfactory progress. In most of Oklahoma the weather has continued dry. Early planted cotton made some progress, but late planted deteriorated. Heavy rains broke the drought in Texas, and the outlook is much improved.

"In the trucking districts of the south, good, general rains greatly benefited citrus fruits and late crops."

In Executive Session.

Members of the state railroad commission are in executive session in connection with some matters of the department. Secretary Sam P. Kennedy said the nature of the meeting would be given out later. It was believed at the capitol that the meeting had to do with the question of adjusting freight rates on the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

Artillerymen Break Camp.

Members of the three batteries of artillery, which have been in camp in Mobile have broken camp and the officers and men have returned to their respective homes. One of the batteries is located in Montgomery and the other two are stationed at Birmingham. According to word received at the Office of Adjutant General Joseph Scully, the camp has been a successful one in every respect. The artillery camp was under command of Major I. S. Derrance of Birmingham.

Capitol Practically Deserted.

Governor O'Neal, W. F. Feagin, state superintendent of education; W. S. Keller, state highway engineer; Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector; Adjutant General Joseph B. Scully, Capt. Rueben F. Holb, commissioner of agriculture; Lee Cowart, commissioner of immigration; John Mooring, chairman of state tax commission, two or three supreme court justices and several other state officials are absent from the capitol and as a consequence there is little doing at the state house outside of transaction of routine business.

Pythian Home Certain.

The committee named by the grand lodge of Knights of Pythias last May to investigate the feasibility of establishing a Pythian widows' and orphans' home in Alabama and to receive proposals for the location, will meet in Birmingham early in September to adopt final plans for subission to the next grand lodge, according to the announcement of Grand Chancellor L. G. Waldrop of Anniston here.

Four of the 13 Pythian district conventions which have met thus far have unanimously endorsed the movement. The Chambers of Commerce of Gadsden, Anniston, and Montgomery have submitted tentative propositions in an effort to obtain the home. The committee is composed of Jacob D. Bloch, Mobile; Herman Beck, Birmingham, and A. G. Patterson, Decatur.

Incorporation Papers Filed.

Articles of incorporation were filed in the office of Cyrus B. Brown, secretary of state, by six Alabama corporations. The Southern Mining and Milling company of Tuscumbia was the largest company formed, its capital being $100,000, of which $50,000 is paid in. This company will engage in the mining business in Colbert and other North Alabama counties. H. W. Green, E. W. Bishop and others are the incorporators.

Other companies incorporated were the Marengo Cotton Oil company of Faunsdale, capital stock $7500; the Branchville Bottling Works, Branchville, $2000; Spiro and Merrill Heating and Roofing Company, Birmingham, $7000; Dallas Cotton Gin Company, Selma, $1770, and the Pickens County Land and Development Company, Carrollton, $1000.

Take up Montgomery Tax Cases.

The state tax commission will go over the heads of county boards of revenue that refuse to docket cases of tax assessments brought by county tax commissianers, according to John S. Mooring, chairman, who declared that the commission will take up Montgomery county cases which the county board of revenue refused to consider.

The refusal of the Montgomery county board of revenue to take up the cases brought before it by Tax Commissioner Frank Peabody will have no effect on the ultimate action of the state commission, Mr. Mooring said. As soon as its work in other parts of the state is finished the work in Montgomery will be taken up.

K. of K. Committee to Meet.

Announcement of the findings of a special Knights of Pythias committee, appointed to determine the feasibility of establishing a widows' and orphans' home in Alabama, will be made at a meeting of the committee in September. E. G. Waldrop, grand chancellor of the order, made this statement here.

Montgomery, Gadsden and Anniston have made application for the home. It is expected that other towns will make application.

The committee is composed of Herman Beck of Birmingham, A. G. Patterson of New Decatur and Sol D. Block of Mobile.

Oil Painting for State.

An oil painting of Judge Alexander Clitheral, register of the treasury of the Confederacy, was presented to the state department of archives and history by Judge J. J. Willett of Anniston. Judge Willett's father was a law partner of Judge Clitheral at one time. The painting has been in the Willett family more than 50 years.

New Bank at Berry:

Organization of a second bank at Berry, in Fayette county, has been announced in an application from J. C. Shepherd, a merchant of that place and one of the organizers. The application was forwarded to the state banking department.

Gen. F. S. Ferguson Returns Home.

Montgomery.—General Fred S. Ferguson, special master of the State Pension Board, left for Birmingham where he will remain for some time. The annual meeting of the State Board was scheduled, but because of the illness of Captain John C. Webb, of Demopolis, chairman, it was postponed until later. At the meeting the Board will consider the applications for pensions filed by more than 1,100 persons.

To Probe Pure Food Violations.

Several violations of the state pure food law in Birmingham have been reported to C. H. Billingsley, state pure food and drug clerk, and he has gone to Birmingham where he will investigate the cases

Hibernians Will Meet.

Montgomery.—Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians from all sections of Alabama will attend the biennial convention here August 24. At the same time the Ladies Auxiliary wil hold its meeting.

COTTON CONGRESS O. K'S. WINGO BILL

ISSUANCE OF FEDERAL RESERVE NOTES ON STAPLE ARTICLES IS AUTHORIZED.

RELIEF PLANS ARE ADOPTED

Committee Instructed to Co-operate with Authorities—Crop Curtailment Urged—Ask Growers to Get 12½c on Middlings.

Washington.—The Southern Cotton Congress, after indorsing various plans for relief in the cotton market crisis resulting from the European war, authorized committees to co-operate with federal and state authorities in their efforts to enable planters to secure a fair price for the present crop.

After indorsing the work so far done by southern representatives in congress in the matter of furnishing transportation for the export trade, and providing currency to finance the crop, the congress indorsed a bill introduced in the house by Representative Wingo of Arkansas, authorizing the issuance of federal reserve notes on cotton.

Later the report from the resolutions committee was adopted, outlining a plan to meet the entire situation. This provided for the appointment of a committee of five members to cooperate with congress, the treasury department and the federal reserve board, to seek means of "financing and marketing the crop without unnecessary loss to the farmer."

It urged the federal reserve board and the secretary of the treasury to place $300,000,000 in the banks of the south on the basis of the cotton produced i neach state. It then proposed that every farmer should have the right to go to his bank and secure a loan on notes maturing in six months, but renewable for six months, secured by his cotton, on one-half of the crop he raised, to 80 per cent of the value of the cotton, based on the average price for the last five years. These notes, the report recommended, should be made rediscountable in the federal reserve banks.

CARBAJAL IS AT VERA CRUZ

Will Leave on Steamer Marie Cristina for Spain—Federals Not Coming to Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz.—The retiring provisional president of Mexico, Francisco Carbajal, arrived here by special train.

Senor Carbajal was received at the station by a few personal friends and by Brig-Gen. Funston, accompanied by two staff officers. Only a small percentage of the population had learned that Senor Carbajal was on his way here. Even his friends were notified only at the last moment.

It is understood Senor Carbajal will embark on the steamer Marie Cristina, due to sail for Spain. Discussing events in the capital, Senor Carbajal said:

"I am confident there will be no further difficulty. I do not anticipate a continued conflict. I have faith that the constitutionalists will maintain order."

Senor Carbajal's assurance that the federal army evacuating Mexico City had no intention of crowding into Vera Cruz brought distinct relief to American army headquarters. The problem of caring for them would have been embarrassing, it is said.

THROUGH CANAL IN 8 HOURS

This Will Probably Be the Average Time for Ships—Record Set by Cristobal.

Washington.—The first steamship to pass through the Panama canal—the Cristobal—made the trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific in eleven and a half hours.

The return trip, however, was made in eight and a half hours, which probably marks the average time that will be consumed by merchantmen, when all of the machinery of the canal is in smooth operation.

It is reported that everything is in perfect order for the formal opening of the canal, when the Ancon, sister ship to the Cristobal, belonging to the Panama Canal Railway company and of 9,606 tons, will make the official trial trip.

Disposes of Wild Story.

San Francisco.—The arrival at Victoria of the British sloop-of-war Shearwater in convoy of the cruiser Rainbow clears up the naval situation on this coast. It is now positive that the flotsam cast up outside Golden Gate was woodwork jettisoned by the Rainbow when she cleared for action.

Nordica's Will Filed.

New York.—A copy of the will of Lillian Nordica, the singer, who died last May, provides that her entire estate, value not stated, except for bequests aggregating $36,000, be divided among her three sisters.

Bonds For Security.

Washington.—Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi has introduced a bill to authorize the secretary of the treasury to accept the bonds of certain cities as security for gov. moneys deposited.

ELLIOTT MARSHALL

Elliott Marshall, a prominent lawyer of New York and New Jersey, and worth $500,000, whose strange disappearance is mystifying the police of many cities.

WILSON ORDERS PRICE PROBE

Would Punish Any Who Artificially Manipulate Food Prices — War Taken as Pretext.

Washington.—President Wilson set the machinery of the federal government in motion to determine whether the cost of living is being increased "upon the pretext of the conditions existing in Europe." He called upon Attorney-General McReynolds to report if criminal prosecutions were warranted, and if any new law were necessary The president may send a special message to congress in the latter event

"Certainly the country ought to be defended," the president wrote to the attorney-general, "if possible, against men who would take advantage of such circumstances to increase the price of food and the difficulties of living."

Attorney-General McReynolds at once set at work the bureau of investigation of the department of justice, with hundreds of agents throughout the country. Agents of the department of commerce also were started upon the inquiry and Secretary Redfield conferred with Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture.

Within a few hours from the time the president acted three of the executive departments of the government were moving to learn the cause of the soaring prices of food throughout the country.

Some officials who believe the great proposition of price increases have no connection whatever with the European war, but are the result of manipulations, attempts at corners of individual efforts of the dealers, contend that the "conspiracy" section of the Sherman law covers the situation. Attorney-General McReynolds, however, will give an opinion on that feature to the president later.

BAILEY TO TRY FOR SENATE

Makes Announcement at Texas Democratic Convention—Lose Fight on the Floor.

El Paso, Texas.—Former United States Senator Joseph W. Bailey will be a candidate for the senate in 1916, according to his announcement at the state democratic convention here.

Mr. Bailey was defending his three platform resolutions denouncing national prohibition and national woman suffrage and demanding legislation to limit campaign expenses. He said that if the resolutions were defeated he would take the issue before the people of Texas as a candidate for senator. The resolutions were rejected—645 to 107.

PERMIT PURCHASE OF SHIPS

Conferees of House and Senate Agree on Measure Regarding Foreign-Built Ships.

Washington.—Opening of United States coastwise trade to foreign built vessels admitted to American registry during the next two years, under the pending Panama canal act amendment, was agreed upon by the house and senate conferees. All such proposals have been fought by shipping and shipbuilding interests, and presentation of the conference report is expected to precipitate vigorous opposition.

Foodstuffs Go Abroad.

Philadelphia.—Three trans-Atlantic steamers flying the British flag sailed from Philadelphia for English ports, carrying more than a half million bushels of wheat and other foodstuffs.

Wheelers at Hull.

London.—Post Wheeler, recently appointed secretary of the American embassy at Tokyo, and Mrs. Wheeler, who were compelled to turn back at Berlin while on their way to Japan, arrived at Hull from Copenhagen, accompanied by 30 stranded Americans.

Stranded Americans Relieved.

Geneva.—Secretary of State Bryan advised Pleasant A. Stovall, the American minister, that he had deposited $50,000 gold with a New York bank to help American

JAPAN SENDS ULTIMATUM

LOOKS LIKE WHOLE EASTERN HEMISPHERE WILL GET ENVOLVED

ULTIMATUM IN FULL SENT

Papan Minister Says American Interests Will Be Safeguarded.

Japan sent an ultimatum to Germany demanding the withdrawal of German warships from the Orient and the evacuation of Kiau-Chau.

Takaaki Kato, Japanese foreign minister, simultaneously with the dispatch of the ultimatum, conferred with George W. Guthrie, American ambassador, and made to him a broad statement calculated to assure the United States that American interest in the far east would be safeguarded and the integrity of China upheld.

Owing to doubts whether communications with Berlin were assured, Japan, to insure the arrival of the ultimatum, forwarded it to Berlin by six channels, including Washington, London and Stockholm. The government also notified Count Von Rex, German ambassador to Japan, and likewise retarded the time limit for a reply until August 23.

The Ultimatum Issued by Japan.

"We consider it highly important and necessary in the present situation to take steps to relieve the causes of all disturbances of the peace in the far east and to safeguard the general interests as contemplated by the agreement of an alliance between Japan and Great Britain.

"In order to secure a firm and enduring peace in eastern Asia, the establishment of which is the aim of the said agreement, the imperial Japanese government sincerely believes it to be its duty to give the advice to the imperial German government to carry out the following two propositions:

"1. To withdraw immediately from Japanese and Chinese waters German men of war and armed vessels of all kinds, and to disarm at once those which cannot be so withdrawn.

"2. To deliver on a date not later than September 15 to the imperial Japanese authorities without condition or compensation the entire leased territory of Kiau-Chau, with a view to the eventual restoration of the same to China.

"The imperial Japanese government announced at the same time that in the event of it not receiving by noon on August 23, 1914, an answer from the imperial German government signifying its unconditional acceptance of the above advice offered by the imperial Japanese government Japan will be compelled to take such action as she may deem necessary to meet the situation."

News of Ultimatum in Washington.

Washington.—The Japanese ambassador, Baron Chinda, delivered to Secretary Bryan the written announcement of Japan that an ultimatum had been addressed to Germany, requesting the latter's withdrawal from her field of activity in China.. At the same time he communicated Japan's assurances to the United States that the utmost endeavor would be exercised to safeguard .interests of this country and all others not immediately concerned in the present operations.

The United States, it became known after Baron Chinda's call on Mr. Bryan, does not intend to be drawn in any way into the controversy, regarding it as a matter purely between Germany and Japan.. The American government considers satisfactory the promise of Japan of "eventual restoration to China" of the territory of Kaiu Chau.

Battle in Adriatic Sea.

"A naval battle between French and Austrian warships took place off Budua, Austria, in the Adriatic. The French squadron, coming from the southwest, attacked the Austrian warships. Two Austrian ironclads were sunk, one was set on fire, and a fourth fled northward toward Cattaro. The fight lasted over an hour."

Aliens Cannot Be Taken

Washington.—In answer to many appeals for information from naturalized citizens and foreign residents as to conditions under which they may be returned to their native lands for military service, Secretary Bryan today issued a statement saying the United States was not a party to any treatise under which such persons might be compelled to return for military service and saying there was no way in which they might be forced to join the armies so long as they remain in the United States.

Panama.—The United States War Department Steamship Ancon made the trip through the Panama Canal, and transit through the waterway is now officially open to the traffic of the world. The Ancon left her berth at Cristobal at seven o'clock this morning and made her way to the end o fthe deep water channel from the Atlantic to the Gatum Locks. She went through the locks in seventy minutes and then continued through the waterway from deep water on the Atlantic to deep water on the Pacific [illegible]

STATE HAPPENINGS

New saw mill at Sanford, Covington county, is ready.

Mrs. George Cook, of Eutaw, has gone to Nevada.

W. H. Ector and Miss Nettie Hall were married at Heflin.

Cleburne county Masonic conference was very successful.

Pinkney Holley and Miss Lela Harper were married near Heflin.

Road from Union Springs to the Russell county line is being worked.

Henry King of Midway broke his arm cranking a car.

Gin room of the Demopolis cotton mill was burned.

Raymond Riddle and Miss Ada Pope were married in Geneva county.

Mayor C. Q. Borland of Hartford has been elected for another term.

Geneva chancery court has been postponed until October.

Eufaula has called off its idea of boring an artesian well.

Polk Arthur, of Collinsville, is visiting in Texas.

Mrs. Hiram T. Graves, of Albertville, is dead.

Masonic conference at Boaz was well attended.

Rev. W. B. Feagins has charge of the Baptist church at Gallion.

The 42,000 school children of Birmingham need a lot of school rooms.

Roanoke is starting a clean up campaign.

Electric light plant at Wedowee closed down.

Dr. and Mrs. Parker will move from Wedowee to Lineville.

Mrs. Adele Messer died in Randolph.

Mrs. Walter McQueen died in Randolph county.

Andalusia has let the contract for a lot of street paving.

Every bug with a nose is a boll weevil in south Alabama.

A fine crop of velvet beans is maturing in Coffee county.

Typhoid fever prevails about Colough in Coffee.

Cleburne county Masonic conference was very successful.

Gin room of the Demopoils cotton mill was burned.

Geneva chancery court has been postponed until October.

Mrs. C. D. Sawyer, 69, died at Interprise.

Doc Pouncey of Ozark, stuck a nail in his foot.

The ford of the creek at Ladiga in Calhoun county is bad for autos.

Rains have helped the crops in Crenshaw.

Work has started on the new hotel at Rockford.

Emperor William's war and the boll weevil are making hard times for the cotton crop in Alabama.

Residence of C. E. Ward was burned at Talladega with contents; no insurance.

There is a row about the road law of Crenshaw county, according to the Luverne Journal.

E. C. Owens sold the first bale of Crenshaw cotton for 11 cents. It weighed 510 pounds.

More watermelons in Chilton this year than ever before and more money.

First Methodist church of Eufaula has accepted plans for a new church building.

The second bale of cotton received in Mobile was from Wilcox and went for 15 cents.

In Escambia county is is estimated that cotton will make from a bale to a bale to the acre.

Nearly every town in the state reports from one to twenty men caught in Europe by the war.

W. I. Manning, 84, formerly of Randolph, died in Virginia and was buried in Randolph county.

There will soon be a passenger and freight automobile service between Sylvania and Fort Payne.

Fourth district agricultural school at Sylacauga has been repaired and painted.

Miss Sallie Shell, of Pigeon Creek in Butler, has an orchard of 1,000 peaches.

A receipt for cotton in a warehouse is better than commercial paper, say some Alabama financiers.

Shelby county high school will have 75 to 100 boarding students this term.

W. L. Pitts has bought the Presbyterian property adjoining the church at Uniontown.

H. B. Overstreet and family, of Point, Miss., have moved to Gadsden and have taken the Tilton house.

The big barbecue of merchants for Confederate veterans in Eufaula has been called off.

First Methodist church of Rockford has accepted plans for a new church building.

Work on the school house at Cellor, in Geneva county, is being pushed.

H. H. Brown and J. R. Bullock, of Bullock county, are boring artesian wells on their farms.

William Johnson and Miss Ada White of Covington county, were married in Florida.

The second bale of cotton received in Mobile was from Wilcox and went for 15 cents.

Three boys, Cecil Foster, Aaron Powell and Aaron Turner, were struck by lightning at Andalusia and Foster and James died from the shock.

Randolph wants a good road from Wedowee to Roanoke.

Charles H. Jones of Boston has bought the kennels and forty acres of land from Mr. Babcock in Randolph county.

HYMN BEFORE AC[TION]

By RUDYARD KIPLI[NG]

The earth is full of anger,
The seas are dark with wrath,
The nations in their harness
Go up against our path;
Ere yet we loose the legions—
Ere yet we draw the blade,
Jehovah of the Thunders,
Lord God of Battles, aid!

High lust and forward bearing,
Proud heart, rebellious brow—
Deaf ear and soul uncaring,
We seek Thy mercy now!
The sinner that forswore Thee,
The fool that passed Thee by,
Our times are known before Thee—
Lord, grant us strength to die!

From
Rev Light
Pro Cloak
Mak
In sil
To

LIBAU VITAL POINT THEI[SEA]

[Port] Bombarded by the Germans Means Much to Czar.

Russia's Great Naval Base for the Baltic, Constructed at Vast Expense, and Center for Her Submarine Flotillas.

[With] the bombardment of Libau by a German warship was effective, then Russia was certainly wounded in one of her most important naval strategic stations. To Russia Libau is a port of very great concern and one that vitally in time of war should be of the importance to her, especially in the winter time.

St. Petersburg is substantially ice-bound for months each year. This is a reason for Libau's military significance. This Baltic city lies far enough south of the capital to be substantially an open port the year round, and by a moderate use of an ice breaker continuous intercourse by sea is maintained in winter through by vessels running to Germany, England and the United States. In fact, Libau is the home port for the Russian volunteer fleet as the ships enter New York.

Originally Libau offered poor inducements for either a naval base or a commercial port, the town lying upon a stretch of low sandy coast directly exposed to the sweep of the Baltic while the water off shore deepened so gradually that its shallowness offered a very nasty sort of sea. However, it was a matter of necessity and money was not allowed to count.

Accordingly, the Russian authorities resorted heroic measures and set about building of an artificial harbor in characteristic extravagance the work was started and carried through in the face of many difficulties.

Today Libau boasts two harbors, one military, the other commercial, both lie behind a great breakwater more than four miles long, pierced by a narrow and heavily guarded entrance. Once inside of that shelter a very large fleet can anchor securely no matter how hard it may blow in the Baltic without. It was there that Admiral Rozhdestvensky assembled his ships before setting out for the East and the fateful battle of Tsushima.

The breakwaters are commonly built of great masses of piled rock capped with a coping of cut stone. But ordinary stone was out of the question at Libau and the engineers were soon faced with a serious difficulty. Rocks were scarce in that sandy region, and the small stones could be gathered only by dint of a good deal of searching.

To overcome the dearth of desirable material of nature's making and to avoid the impracticable alternative of a rock overland by very inadequate facilities, it was decided to make monster blocks of concrete, weighing 30 tons apiece, out of the available sand. In this way millions of dollars were spent in the making of artificial stone, and these huge units were dumped upon the floor of the Baltic until they reached above the water's surface.

For some years Libau has been the Russian Baltic center for Russia's submarine flotillas and an instructional station for these craft. Indeed, the admiralty has been engaged for some time in working out a general system of submarine defence for the Baltic and any grave damage to the port would seriously affect her strategic position for those waters.

Although bombarded by the Germans it is doubtful if any material damage has been done the navy yard, the destruction of the town, unlike Hamburg, naval basin and docks, would not hamper the port in a military sense.

It must not be forgotten that Libau is finally an important railway terminus with lines running both back into the Russian-German frontier along the coast to the other seaports, with a northern terminal at Petersburg. For purposes of war it is therefore of the greatest importance to Russia to hold the harbor open to her shipping and to her craft bringing her contraband. The German attack was logical, but it will be learned whether or not the results were conclusive. If so, the Russians scored heavily against the Kaiser should the present struggle run into the winter months.

People
o

Unguessa
Bullion
tions
to Europe

when the was drea of Europ result, n hoarded ranging to tens tria-Hung away $17
000 and This traced in the Balka war start sum there
city of ground.
Russia
thousands utterly in amount of Russia ha into the c
sign of w ing of the
the men w immense Vast su have gone lets go of chest has anything, chests—gol
might draw sale, or bor
or opportu
fore denied England
one knows but there nothing like in continen armies have boundary li their enemi have been more lost i ever know hoarding ha which arm down the de cities and could give an enemy.
Spain has silver, pear lost in a monasteries ings. In Spain impor
gold and s and faithless great sums
—and many
it.
India is world's gold ported $300 never been India was n and precious of India the 000,000 in pr
stones.
If the hoa tapped—if th
ropean cities vading armi loot in jewels
beyond comp
sible would hundreds of gold which m
army sustena olden times w reckoning fro victors. War
The war ch posed to cont
in gold coin a bilities of lo
some measur one considers 50,000 tons of mention is ma
monds, rubies
in peril.

RUSSIA

Of all the n
European war
the only inde
gold mines in S weight of that Russia. It is a the empire. R borrow money only nation of Furthermore, R
great army. S that has. Tha claimed that sh
has the whoat
truth of her cla
[illegible]

[Modern] Wars Are Short.

[Since] modern the war the shortest to be, especially when only Europe is involved. For example (in actual fighting): Austro-[illegible] war of 1866, seven weeks; Franco-Prussian war of 1870, a month; [illegible] war, ——?

STATE HAPPENINGS

New saw mill at Sanford, Covington county, is ready.

Mrs. George Cook, of Eutaw, gone to Nevada.

W. H. Ector and Miss Nettie H were married at Heflin.

Cleburne county Masonic con ence was very successful.

Pinkney Holley and Miss Lela per were married near Heflin.

Road from Union Springs to Russell county line is being worke

Henry King of Midway broke arm cranking a car.

Gin room of the Demopolis co mill was burned.

Raymond Riddle and Miss A Pope were married in Geneva cou

Mayor C. Q. Borland of Hartf has been elected for another term.

Geneva chancery court has postponed until October.

Eufaula has called off its idea boring an artesian well.

Polk Arthur, of Collinsville, is iting in Texas.

Mrs. Hiram T. Graves, of Alb ville, is dead.

Masonic conference at Boaz well attended.

Rev. W. B. Feagins has charge the Baptist church at Gallion.

The 42,000 school children of mingham need a lot of school room

Roanoke is starting a cit paign.

Electric light plant at Wed wee closed down.

Dr. and Mrs. Parker will from Wedowee to Lineville.

Mrs. Adele Messer died in dolph.

Mrs. Walter McQueen died in dolph county.

Andalusia has let the contract a lot of street paving.

Every bug with a nose is a weevil in south Alabama.

A fine crop of velvet beans is turing in Coffee county.

Typhoid fever prevails about Colough in Coffee.

Cleburne county Masonic co ence was very successful.

Gin room of the Demopolis co mill was burned.

Geneva chancery court has postponed until October.

Mrs. C. D. Sawyer, 69, died at terprise.

Doc Pouncey of Ozark, stuck a in his foot.

The ford of the creek at Ladig Calhoun county is bad for autos.

Rains have helped the croy Crenshaw.

Work has started on the new at Rockford.

Emperor William's war and boll weevil are making hard for the cotton crop in Alabama.

Residence of C. E. Ward was ed at Talladega with contents; surance.

There is a row about the road of Crenshaw county, according to Luverne Journal.

E. C. Owens sold the first ba Crenshaw cotton for 11 cents weighed 510 pounds.

More watermelons in Chilton year than ever before and money.

First Methodist church of has accepted plans for a new building.

The second bale of cotton re in Mobile was from Wilcox an for 15 cents.

In Escambia county is is esti that cotton will make from a bale to a bale to the acre.

Nearly every town in the sta ports from one to twenty pe caught in Europe by the war.

W. I. Manning, 84, formerly of dolph, died in Virginia and was in Randolph county.

There will soon be a passenge freight automobile service be Sylvania and Fort Payne.

Fourth district agricultural c at Sylacauga has been repaire painted.

Miss Sallie Shell, of Pigeon in Butler, has an orchard of peaches.

A receipt for cotton in a house is better than commerci per, say some Alabama financie

Shelby county high school e 75 to 100 boarding students term.

W. L. Pitts has bought the P terian property adjoining the church at Uniontown.

H. B. Overstreet and famil, of Point, Miss., have moved to and have taken the Tilton house

The big barbecue of merchant Confederate veterans in Eutaw been called off.

First Methodist church of has accepted plans for a new building.

Work on the school house at cellor, in Geneva county, is pushed.

H. H. Brown and J. R. Bulloc Bullock county, are boring wells on their farms.

William Johnson and Miss White of Covington county, we ried in Florida.

The second bale of cotton in Mobile was from Wilcox for 15 cents.

Three boys, Cecil Foster Powell and Aaron Turner, were by lightning at Andalusia and James died from the sho Randolph wants a good Wedowee to Roanoke.

Charles H. Jones of Bostonia bought the kennels and forty land from Mr. Babcock county.

HYMN BEFORE ACTION

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

arth is full of anger,
e seas are dark with wrath,
nations in their harness
up against our path;
yet we loose the legions—
re yet we draw the blade,
ehovah of the Thunders,
Lord God of Battles, aid!

h lust and forward bearing,
roud heart, rebellious brow—
ear and soul uncaring, seek Thy mercy now!
sinner that forswore Thee,
fool that passed Thee by,
times are known before Thee—
Lord, grant us strength to die!

From panic, pride, and terror
Revenge that knows no rein,
Light haste and lawless error,
Protect us yet again.
Cloak Thou our undeserving,
Make firm the shuddering breath,
In silence and unswerving
To taste Thy lesser death!

E'en now their vanguard gathers,
E'en now we face the fray—
As Thou didst help our fathers,
Help Thou our host today!
Fulfilled of signs and wonders,
In life, in death made clear—
Jehovah of the Thunders,
Lord God of Battles, hear!

BAU VITAL POINT

Bombarded by the Germans Means Much to Czar.

ussia's Great Naval Base for the tic, Constructed at Vast Expense, and Center for Her Submarine Flotillas.

the bombardment of Libau by a n warship was effective, then was certainly wounded in one most important naval strategic ns. To Russia Libau is a port ry great concern and one that lly in time of war should be of importance to her, especially in nter time.

Petersburg is substantially ice- for months each year. This is son for Libau's military signifi- This Baltic city lies far enough of the capital to be substantially en port the year round, and by a te use of an ice breaker contin- ntercourse by sea is maintained nter through by vessels running rmany, England and the United In fact, Libau is the home the Russian volunteer fleet ships enter New York.

ally Libau offered poor induce- for either a naval base or a cial port, the town lying upon h of low sandy coast directly to the sweep of the Baltic hile the water off shore deep- gradually that its shallowness a very nasty sort of sea. How- was a matter of necessity and was not allowed to count.

ingly, the Russian authorities heroic measures and set about ding of an artificial harbor. racteristic extravagance the s started and carried through ce of many difficulties.

y Libau boasts two harbors, military, the other commercial, both lie behind a great breakwater than four miles long, pierced by row and heavily guarded en- Once inside of that shelter large fleet can anchor securely er how hard it may blow in tic without. It was there that l Rozhdestvensky assembled ps before setting out for the st and the fateful battle of ima.

kwaters are commonly built of sses of piled rock capped with ping of cut stone. But ordinary ce was out of the question at Li- d the engineers were soon face with a serious difficulty. Rocks carce in that sandy region, and mall stones could be gathered dint of a good deal of search-ercome the dearth of desirable of nature's making and to impracticable alternative of ock overland by very inade- facilities, it was decided to nster blocks of concrete, 00 tons apiece, out of the available sand. In this way of dollars were spent in the g of artificial stone, and these units were dumped upon the the Baltic until they reached e water's surface.

me years Libau has been the Baltic center for Russia's sub- otillas and an instructional for these craft. Indeed, the ad- has been engaged for some n working out a general sys- submarine defence for the Bal- any grave damage to the port ously affect her strategic pro- for those waters.

ugh bombarded by the Ger- it is doubtful if any material has been done the navy yard, destruction of the town, unlike den naval basin and docks, not hamper the port in a mili- se.

not be forgotten that Libau ally an important railway ter- with lines running both back the Russian-German frontier along the coast to the other ports, with a northern terminal Petersburg. For purposes of it is therefore of the greatest to Russia to hold the harbor open to her shipping and to craft bringing her contraband. man attack was logical, but it be learned whether or not the were conclusive. If so, the ld scored heavily against the uld the present struggle run this winter months.

odern Wars Are Short.

ns modern the war the short- d to be, especially when only Europe is involved. For ex- actual fighting): Austro- war of 1866, seven weeks; sian war of 1870, a month; war, ——?

THEIR GOLD HIDDEN

People of Europe Are Hoarders of Immense Wealth.

Unguessable Quantity of Coin and Bullion Buried in the Ground—Nations' War Chests Estimated to Contain $2,000,000,000.

European authorities figured that when the Balkan war began and there was dread among the common people of Europe that a general war might result, nearly $350,000,000 in gold was hoarded in three countries in sums ranging from a gold piece or two up to tens of thousands of dollars. Austria-Hungary was credited with hiding away $150,000,000, Germany $65,000,000 and France $130,000,000.

This was money which had been traced into those countries just before the Balkan hostilities began and after war started. In addition to this vast sum there was an unguessable quantity of gold already buried in the ground.

Russia is believed to have tens of thousands of hoarders of money. It is utterly impossible to guess at the amount of gold which the people of Russia have put into the ground or into the cellars of their homes. The sign of wealth would mean the coming of the tax collector, and among the men who look poor are owners of immense weight in gold.

Vast sums of gold and silver coin have gone into Russia, which seldom lets go of it. The great imperial war chest has behind it, if the signs mean anything, other sums in little war chests—gold which the government might draw out if it offered lands for sale, or bonds the people would trust, or opportunities in commerce heretofore denied them.

England has its hidden hoards, no one knows how large or how many, but there is concealed in England nothing like the amount that is hidden in continental Europe, where foreign armies have only to cross a surveyed boundary line or a little creek to raid their enemies. Turkey, whose people have been terrorized for ages, has more lost hoards than the world will ever know about, because there the hoarding has gone on for ages, during which armies have swung up and down the denuded lands, tearing down cities and destroying everything that could give comfort or sustenance to an enemy.

Spain has millions of dollars in gold, silver, pearls and gems buried and lost in a thousand ancient castles, monasteries and other public buildings. In the heyday of her glory Spain imported countless millions of gold and silver from the Americas and faithless officials made away with great sums in bullion, hiding it away—and many of them never recovered it.

India is the bottomless pit of the world's gold. In one year India imported $300,000,000, and there has never been a time, apparently, when India was not importing gold, silver and precious jewels. In the temples of India there are said to be $1,800,000,000 in precious metal and precious stones.

If the hoards of Europe could be tapped—if the hidden treasures of European cities should be tapped by invading armies—the possibilities of loot in jewels and precious metals are beyond compute. But all the loot possible would not compensate for the hundreds of thousands of ounces of gold which must be paid each day for army sustenance and equipment. In olden times wars paid for themselves, reckoning from the viewpoint of the victors. Wars were then for loot.

The war chests of Europe are supposed to contain about $2,000,000,000 in gold coin and bullion. What possibilities of loot this indicates is in some measure understandable when one considers that this means about 50,000 tons of yellow metal—and no mention is made of the bushels of diamonds, rubies, pearls and gems also in peril.

RUSSIA RICHEST OF ALL.

Of all the nations involved in this European war probability, Russia is the only independent one. She has gold mines in Siberia and not a pennyweight of that gold ever gets out of Russia. It is all in the gold vaults of the empire. Russia doesn't have to borrow money for her war. She is the only nation of Europe that does not. Furthermore, Russia has food for her great army. She is the only nation that has. That is to say, she has claimed that she has the money, and has the wheat. This war will test the truth of her claims.—Birmingham Ledger.

SPIRITED FRENCH INFANTRY IN ACTION

GERMAN INFANTRY IN TRENCHES NEAR LIEGE

GUIDE FOR AVIATORS

This is one of the powerful flares which send a vertical ray that serves to guide the French army aviators at night.

SIR JOHN FRENCH

Field Marshal Sir John French who commands the English forces sent across the channel to help the French and Belgians against the Germans.

AMERICAN WOMEN CAUGHT IN BELGRADE

American women waiting anxiously at the railway station in Belgrade for the last train that left that city. Before they got away Austrian shells fell at the very spot where they had been sitting.

FRENCH WOMEN AVIATORS ENLIST

Helene Dutrieu, one of the many women aviators who are acting as scouts for the French army.

REPORTED CUT TO PIECES BEFORE LIEGE

These are the famous Uhlans of the German army that are reported to have been annihilated in the battle of the Belgian frontier.

DOES YOUR SKIN ITCH AND BURN?

If you are suffering with eczema, ringworm, heat-rash or other tormenting skin eruption, try resinol ointment and resinol soap. You will be surprised how quickly the itching stops and the skin becomes clear and healthy again. Prescribed by doctors for 19 years. All druggists sell resinol ointment (50c and $1.00), and resinol soap (25c).—Adv.

Many a man fails to get there because he never starts.

For poisoned wounds use Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

Men without enemies have but few friends.

Sore Eyes, Granulated Eyelids and Sties promptly healed with Roman Eye Balsam. Adv.

It's better to offend some people than to oblige them.

If your horse is kicked, or cut by barbed wire, apply Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

A man can treat the crowd in a barroom and still be a bore the morning after.

Dr. Peery's Vermifuge "Dead Shot" kills and expels Worms in a very few hours Adv.

The gentleman with the cloven hoof may trot with the gentleman who has a cloven breath.

MONEY GIVEN BACK.

After all other so-called remedies have failed try Stutts' EAS-IT for Headache, Neuralgia or Indigestion. Good for The Next Morning After The Night Before. Your money back if you want it. Ask your druggist. Contains No Opiate. Adv.

A Doubtful Statement.

"Ma, I would like to have a donkey. Did anybody ever give you a donkey for a present?"

"Yes, child, your father did when he married me."

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Might Be a New Drink.

"Say, Bill, what's a mixed metaphor?"

"Dat's a new one on me. Let's go over an' ask de bartender."

The Drawback.

"I see where the women abroad are offering to fight at the front, but women will never make soldiers."

"And why not?"

"For one thing, each one would stop in a hot engagement to powder her nose."

Unreasonable.

George Bernard Shaw is one of the few vegetarians who have remained true to the faith, and in a recent letter to a woman, reproaching her for her fight against the aigrette when she still ate meat, Mr. Shaw said:

"The lack of logic prevails everywhere! We call the tiger a ferocious and ravaging beast, but what would you ladies be called if, for example, the lamb chop had a voice?"

Well Meant.

On one occasion when the king and queen of Great Britain visited together very elaborate preparations were made for their reception.

The city was lavishly decorated and one enterprising tradesman, desiring to display his loyalty, has the words, "Heaven bless them both!" outlined in paper flowers across the front of his shop. Unfortunately he forgot to remove a large business sign that was just above.

The result read:

"Ham and beef sandwiches."

"Heaven bless them both!"

DISAPPEARED

Coffee Ails Vanish Before Postum.

It seems almost too good to be true, the way headache, nervousness, insomnia, and many other obscure troubles vanish when coffee is dismissed and Postum used as the regular table beverage.

The reason is clear. Coffee contains a poisonous drug—caffeine—which causes the trouble, but Postum contains only the food elements in choice hard wheat with a little molasses.

A Phila. man grew enthusiastic and wrote as follows:

"Until 18 months ago I used coffee regularly every day and suffered from headache, bitter taste in my mouth, and indigestion; was gloomy and irritable, had variable or absent appetite, loss of flesh, depressed in spirits, etc.

"I attribute these things to coffee, because since I quit it and have drank Postum I feel better than I had for 20 years, am less susceptible to cold, have gained 20 lbs. and the symptoms have disappeared—vanished before Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala. as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

We ask the Clanton Press to explain whether or nor the Democrats in the state have any platform, and what they intend to do if elected in November.

We have a candidate for Governor of Alabama whom we all know stands for licker; we have another who stands flat footed against it; we have still another who doesn't stand for anything. Now take your choice.—Collinsville Courier.

Look out for the speaking dates in the interest of the Progressive party in Chilton county. The announcements appear in this paper. Read them and go to the speakings. You will learn some things you need to know.

We wanted to make some comments on the resolutions adopted by the teachers institute last week, but were hindered from doing so by that universal pretext behind which all editors find refuge—lack of space. However the resolutions are being published, and we hope to give some discussion of them later.

What do the Democrats in this county stand for? Have they come out for anything except putting the county in debt over the wishes of the people? This is the only thing we can see that they have done. We would be glad to hear from the official organ of the party on these questions. The people are justly entitled to know these things, so lets be fair and tell them such things of great importance.

Will the Clanton Press kindly explain to the people of the county who was the first man to suggest to the Commissioners Court the issuance of time warrants, and placing the county in debt over the wishes of the people? Will they also explain if this officer did not advocate the issuance of $125,000 worth of time warrants? Didn't he fight continuously for the issuance of these warrants from then up to this time?

Can the Clanton Press tell the people which two of their candidates made speeches in the Democratic meeting, and urged the Democrats of the county to put up the bars, and keep all men out of their primary except straight Democrats? We feel that the people should know these two, therefore we ask the Clanton Press to give their names. Can these two candidates now ask any except straight Democrats to vote for them? Surely not, as they did not want their help in getting the nomination.

According to telegrams received by New York banks and bankers, cotton planters in the south are much alarmed over the foreign situation in its relation to their interests. Some of the telegrams stated in substance that a continuance of the war would reduce the demand for cotton by fully 35 per cent.

In response to one of these communications, A. B. Hepburn, Chairman of the Chase National Bank of New York City, has sent the following telegram to Congressman Underwood at Washington: "The south is unnecessarily alarmed over the prospective reduction in the price of cotton in view of the general European war. European manufacturers may not require the usual amount of cotton, but American manufacturers will require it all. It is inevitable that all over-sea trade of Germany will be at the mercy of any nation which first seeks it and can best serve the former patrons of Germany. Of all the nations, the United States is in the best position to take and hold the trade. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers and statesmen should work together for that purpose. First liberalize our shipping laws. Germany supplied the coarse and cheaper cotton trade of Mexico and Central and South America, Africa, Asia and the Orient generally. There will be no embargo on the commerce of the Pacific. Our cotton should go abroad as the finished product, and not as raw material, and when the war of Europe is over we should hold largely the trade that now is waiting to fall into our hands."—The Birmingham News.

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is," she asked, "that nearly all the great men of this world have been married?" "I suppose," replied the old bachelor, "it's because they had to do something to get their minds off the troubles they had at home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Thorsby Fruit Growers Picnic

The people of Thorsby and vicinity laid aside their regular occupations Tuesday and turned out en-masse at the annual picnic of the Thorsby Fruit and Truck Growers Association, held on the Campus of Thorsby Institute. This organization now numbers upwards of 100 members, who with their families and friends made a large gathering, not the least among them being a considerable contingent of the boys and girls who in the season are depended on to gateer the big crops as they mature. The Thorsby Brass Band under the leadership of Mr. J. O. Johnson, furnished music which was greatly appreciated. Several good speakers were provided for the occasion, and after a bountiful dinner in the grove the afternoon was given over to sports, among them being finding a quarter hidden in a pan of flour which had to be accomplished by rooting for it with the face and picking it up in the mouth, great fun for the boys; an egg race for the girls; a tug-of-war; a sack race; and a base ball game. The day was simply perfect and so full of enjoyment that many remained for supper on the ground.

MARS HILL.

Here I come again on the same Progressive "band wagon" that I was on two years ago. I want to let all the boys know that I am still in the game. Everything about our wagon is running smoothly, and she is going to land us safely in November. We want everybody to get in line and help in this great race.

Let me call the attention of you fellow citizens, that we need this new Progressiveism in our dear old state. The old and worn out schemes of the Democrats have for many years consumed all the means the farmer was able to rake and scrape, and if they continue in their reckless course, bankruptcy awaits us in the near future. I fail to see how any good man can vote the Democratic ticket with all its rottenness. How can the good men who were supporting Henderson or Comer either continue to vote for them after all the frauds were perpetrated in the primary? There are good democrats who did not do these things, but aren't they endorsing them when they vote the ticket?

No wonder they wanted to put up the bars and keep the Progressives out. They were afraid they would be told on for some of their rotten schemes. Progressives believe in a square deal in all things; and when a man gets into office and doesn't conduct it fair and square, it is our policy to apply the recall dismiss him, and get someone in the place who WILL do those things which are to the interest of the people. Until such conditions exist you will find crooked officers doing as they please, and disregarding the peoples' wishes.

We invite all qualified white voters to come in with us this fall and help us give to this county and state a universal, popular and economic government. The men we have nominated will do it, and we can look any man square in the eye and tell him that our ticket is worthy of his support.

Yours for success,
J. N. SCOTT.

Jemison, Ala., Aug. 18, 1914.

NOTICE BANKRUPT SALE.

Persuant to an order made by the United States District Court. Northern Division, Middle District of Alabama, in Bankrupcy, I as Receiver of A. C. Wells, Bankrupt, will offer to the highest bidder, for cash, during legal hours of sale, subject to approval of said Court, on the 25th. day of August 1914 at the United States Government Building at Montgomery, County of Montgomery, State of Alabama, stock goods, wares and fixtures and book accounts, now located at Jemison, Ala.

Right reserved to sell seperate or as whole. Inventory now on file.

Stock drygoods, shoes, groceries, $962.47 Appraised $1796.70.

Fixtures, $17.75 appraised $12.40.

Book Accts. $210.90 appraised Nil.

Montgomery, Ala., August 13, 1914.

George Stuart, Receiver.

OUR NEXT SERIAL STORY.

In this issue of the Union-Banner we are beginning another serial story, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt," by Henry Russel Miller. It is nothing less than a high class modern piece of fiction in the form of a newspaper serial. The story epitomizes, in the life of one big man; his big foes and big friends, the strifes, the hopes and the aspirations of modern America. Involved with his ambition is the ambition of the laborer, of the capitalist, of the progressive, of the humanitarian, of the socialist, of the society woman, and of the woman who gives all for love. The opportunity of giving our readers such rare literary treats as are contained in these serial stories is accorded us thru the excellent ready-print syndicate service of the Western Newspaper Union. We hope our readers will utilize this advantage by beginning now and following the story through the series.

UNION SPRINGS.

On the 9th inst. this section was visited by a rain that fell in great torrents.

Fodder pulling is the order of the day in west Chilton.

A large new school building is to be erected just south of the Erven Schoolhouse.

Mrs. Langston of Pletcher has been visiting in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Smith have been quite sick but are better.

Mr. LaFayett Smith of Chattanooga visited here last week.

The music school of Prof. M. V. Lawley of Montevallo closed on the 13th. It was a decided success from first to last. He teaches the songs of Zion—the songs of the church, some of them favorites probably more than a century ago. This music is worth preserving, and leaving it off probably accounts for the spiritual decline in some of our churches.

Mr. J. A. Rogers of Oak Hill visited the singing last week.

Miss Mae Waldrup is visiting at Jemison.

Mr. Vandiver of Montevallo visited the singing last week.

Mrs. Honeycutt and daughter of Jemison visited here last week.

Mr. Grady Nix went to Free Springs Sunday.

Claud Hodgins of Birmingham visited here last week.

John S. Waldrup has been spending several days in the capital city.

Mrs. Ella Pate is visiting at Pletcher.

Rev. J. N. Scott of Mars Hill spent several days in the music school here.

We believe the doctrine of the Progressive party accords to the least tax payer in Chilton county a full right to his voice as to how the commissioners should deal with the time warrants and road question. We believe 100 per cent of the tax payers in this part aae against issuing time warrants.

LOST, strayed or stolen from my place 8 miles north of Clanton on Calera road—one Jersy heifer yearling, about 18 months old, marked, crop and underbit in each ear. Was first strayed about a month ago. Reward for information to W. T. Robinson
8-6-3t. Clanton Route 8

Guard Your Children Against Bowel Trouble

Many children at an early age become constipated, and frequently serious consequences result. Not being able to realize his own condition, a child's bowels should be constantly watched, and a gentle laxative given when necessary. Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are especially well adapted to women and children. The Sisters of Christian Charity, 531 Charles St., Luzerne, Pa., who attend many cases of sickness say of them:

"Some time ago we began using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets and find that we like them very much. Their action is excellent and we are grateful for having been made acquainted with them. We have had good results in every case and the Sisters are very much pleased."

The form and flavor of any medicine is very important, no matter who is to take it. The taste and appearance are especially important when children are concerned. All parents know how hard it is to give the average child "medicine," even though the taste is partially disguised. In using Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, however, this difficulty is overcome. The shape of the tablets, their appearance and candy-like taste at once appeal to any child, with the result that they are taken without objection.

The rich chocolate flavor and absence of other taste make Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets the ideal remedy for children.

If the first box fails to benefit the price is returned. Ask your druggist. A box of 25 doses costs only 25 cents. Never sold in bulk. Single tablets are never sold.

Mother's Friend Before Baby Arrives

During several weeks of expectancy there is a splendid external embrocation in our "Mother's Friend" in which thousands of women have the most unbounded confidence. They have used it and know. They tell of its wonderful influence to ease the abdominal muscles and how they avoided those dreaded stretching pains that are so much talked about. This safe external application is gently used over the skin to render it amenable to the natural stretching which it undergoes. The myriad of nerve threads just beneath the skin is thus relieved of unnecessary pain-producing causes and great physical relief is the result as expressed by a host of happy mothers who write from personal experience.

It is a subject that all women should be familiar with as "Mother's Friend" has been in use many years, has been given the most severe tests under most all trying conditions and is recommended by women who to-day are grandmothers and who in their earlier years learned to rely upon this splendid aid to women.

"Mother's Friend" is declared by a multitude of women to be just what expectant motherhood requires.

You can obtain "Mother's Friend" at almost any drug store. Get a bottle to-day and then write for our little book. Address Bradfield Regulator Co., 412 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the good people of this community for their kindness and hospitality shown us duaing our sickness. We also wish to thank Dr. F. C. Smith for his faithful service.

Fletcher Parker and wife.

GRIST MILL FOR SALE

Outfit contains one set of 38-inch corn rocks, corn and cob crusher, corn sheller, one 20 H P. gasoline engine, and fixtures. All in good order. Call or write

F. E. Gronquist,
Thorsby, Ala.

FARMERS OF CHILTON.

We want you to know that the ginnery of the Chilton Fertilizer Company is now ready and in first class condition to gin your cotton for you. All our machinery has been overhauled, and the saws have been renewed. The gins this season will be operated by Walter Maddox, the oldest and best ginner in the county. The patronage of all the farmers in this section is solicited.

CLANTON FERTILIZER COMPANY,
By P. D. Wilson, Manager.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in (City) can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundreds of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhere will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 50 cents brings the Tribune for one year for 52 weeks. Of-

E. C. POPWELL

Has acquired complete control of the business formerly oderated under the name of Popwell & Jones and will continue to operate in the Chandler Building. The place is new and well fitted to render the best service. Everything you want in the way of Cold drinks, Ice cream, Candies, Cigars, Tobacco, Cigarettes, etc.

New up-to-date Soda Fount

Rheumatic Throat Is Common Trouble

Should Be Treated in Blood To Prevent Recurrence.

There are successful gargles that stop soreness in the throat, but to prevent their incessant return, the blood must be put in order. The best remedy is S. S. S., as it influences all the functions of the body to neutralize the irritants or waste products and to stimulate their excretion through the proper channels.

Rheumatic sore throat is a dangerous indication, as it means that the blood is loaded with more uric acid than the kidneys can excrete, and may thus lead to serious general disturbance.

The action of S. S. S. stimulates cellular activity. It prevents the accumulation of irritants in local spots. It enables the arteries to supply quickly the new red blood to replace worn-out tissue.

For this reason uric acid that finds the throat an easy prey to its breaking-down influence, is scattered and eliminated. In other words, S. S. S. prevents chronic conditions by enabling all the mucous linings of the body to secrete healthy mucus. Its influence is shown in a marked improvement of the bronchial tubes, whereby the huskiness of voice with thick, grayish expectorations is overcome. S. S. S., well diluted with water, means a blood bath, since it is welcome to any stomach and at once gets into the blood.

S. S. S. is free of all minerals and contains ingredients wonderfully conducive to well-balanced health.

You can get it at any drug store, but do not accept anything else. There is danger in substitutes. S. S. S. is prepared only by The Swift Specific Co., 528 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Our Medical Dept. will give you free instruction by mail on any subject of blood disorders. Write today.

Colored People Organize League

A branch of the Law and Order League has been organized in Clanton by Rev. I. N. Fitzpatrick, the Grand Royal Scribe Archon of America. The work that is given the Colored people by this league is of a high character and is fostered by the intellects of the foremost characters of the colored race. It teaches the negro that the Southern white man is his best friend, and that the southland is the best home for the race. It endeavors to make peace between the negro and his white neighbor by teaching the former to utilize the opportunities of learning the ideas with which he comes in contact.

Rev. Fitzpatrick will deliver a speech to-night at the courthouse describing fully his work. Both white and black are assured that their time will be well spent if come out and hear him.

The organization, if carried out, will certainly result in much good, and it is to be hoped that the colored people will cooperate with the organizer, Rev. Fitzpatrick, and do all they can to insure the ultimate outcome which should be to insure the best results.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

Thorsby Institute

Thorsby Institute will open for the school year 1914-15 on Tuesday, September 8. There is good prospect for a largely increased attendance, and conditions will be more favorable than ever. A strong faculty has been employed, grounds and buildings have been improved, there is an air of general prosperity quite noticeable.

Miss Hoopes, Matron of Dormitory and teacher of Domestic Science, who was seriously ill soon after school opened, has fully recovered and is already superintending preparations for the reception of students.

Farms! Farms!! Farms!!!

1,000 farms for sale. Prices reasonable. Small cash payments.

Balance six years or longer if necessary.

You may own a home in the Best part of Alabama

We will help you. Special inducements to first answer. Write now.

MARBURY LUMBER CO.
MARBURY, ALABAMA.

he Clanton
Com

uring this month
r goods at a grea
om for our Fall
hich will arrive ab
me to see us f

CLANTON ME
CLANTON,

he Wearing of S
ns the Tramping of Dollars Und
For even the product of the best tories, which use the best mater will eventually wear out.
It behooves you, therefore, to buy best for the least money.
'll Always Find Them

EMP BROTHE
Clanton, Ala.

Fisherman Trouble.

To hold a fishing pole, so a fisherman's hands free his bait or catch, is an ention.

Wanted Information.

Hour after Mrs. Richly had new maid an order she be and went to investigate. what has detained you? ed my Keats, as request- mum," Mary apologized, comin' back to ask what

Mrs. Clara Mu day for New Yo Millinery for The Company.

Lamba

A new trainer wa circus and was told a lamb through an nervous, and the ne him how he got alon llon. "Sure, the l me much," he said, lamb butted the day

Shingles and Gasoli

Anyone wanting Shingles to co conferring with me right away. H to get your order in the next one I have a gasoline engine, tank, are to have city waterworks I will cash or on time. Come and look

L. H. RE

POPWELL

lete control of the business
under the name of Popwell &
tinue to operate in the Chan-e place is new and well fit-est service. Everything you
of Cold drinks, Ice cream,
Tobacco. Cigarettes, etc.

-date Soda Fount

Colored People Organize Leagu

A branch of the Law and der League has been organi in Clanton by Rev. I. N. F patrick, the Grand Royal S Archon of America. The wo that is given the Colored peo by this league is of a high ch acter and is fostered by the tellects of the foremost charact of the colored race. It teac the negro that the South white man is his best friend, a that the southland is the b home for the race. It endeav to make peace between the gro and his white neighbor teaching the former to utilize opportunities of learning ideas with which he comes contact.

Rev. Fitzpatrick will deliv speech to-night at the courth describing fully his work. white and black are assured their time will be well spent come out and hear him.

The organization, if car out, will certainly result in m good, and it is to be hoped the colored people will co-ope with the organizer, Rev. Fitz rick, and do all they can to m the ultimate outcome w should be to insure the best sults.

OPKINS

rer of Cement Blocks for ing purposes; Cement Pipe ater-Proof Brick for Burial
nds of Cemetery Work.
for all kinds of cement
ng.
carefully furnished.

les' Phone
n, Alabama.

ings have been improved there is an air of general perity quite noticeable.

Miss Hoopes, Matron o Dormitory and teacher of mestic Science, who was s riously ill soon after school ed, has fully recovered a already superintending pre tions for the reception o dents.

rms!! Farms!!

or sale. Prices reas ll cash payments
s or longer if necessary.
e in the Best part of Alabam
you. Special induc
answer. Write no
LUMBER CO.
URY, ALABAMA.

he Clanton Mercantile Company ring this month we are selling all of r goods at a great reduction to make om for our Fall and Winter Stock, hich will arrive about September 1st.

me to see us for what you want.

CLANTON MERCANTILE CO.
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

he Wearing of Shoes
s the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot
For even the product of the best facories, which use the best materials, ill eventually wear out.
behooves you, therefore, to buy the st for the least money.
Always Find Them Here.

EMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

Fisherman Trouble.

o hold a fishing pole, s a fisherman's hands free his bait or catch, is a tion.

Wanted Information.

r after Mrs. Richly had maid an order she be and went to investigate. what has detained you? d my Keats, as request- um," Mary apologized, min' back to ask what

Mrs. Clara Mullins leaves today for New York to buy fall Millinery for The Cash Millinery Company.

Lambasted.

A new trainer was engaged for the circus and was told to put a lion and a lamb through an act. He seemed nervous, and the next his boss asked him how he got along with the savage lion. "Sure, the lion didn't bother me much," he said, "but that durned lamb batted the daylights out of me!"

Mt. Creek Society

Miss Cowley entertained a party of pretty girls and several Mesdames at a lawn luncheon and music. The following were present: Pearl Culver, Lottie Arledge, Myrtle Hollin, Liller Thomson, Anna Damson, Maud Cooper, Fffie Damson, Effie Arledge, Kate Smith, Williesee Cooper, Lina Arledge, Exie Arledge, Ruth Thornton, and Mesdames B. G. Baxent, F. L. Ellis, Ruby Knox.

The daughter of Dr. J. W. Maddox has typhoid fever.

Postmaster E. V. Speer has greatly improved the appearrnce of the Post Office at this place.

Misses Minnie and Laura Sims of Thorsby were in Clanton last Sunday afternoon.

Rev. W. J. Armstrong and Rev A. R. Aldridge have been conducting revival services at Concord church this week. They have had a splendid meeting.

We are glad to note that Mr. Crit Jones is able to be up again after a long and serious illness.

Mesdames F.W. Denty and M. A. Butler are visiting relatives in Birmingham. this week.

Misses Ora and Esther Shaw of Jemison were visitors to Clanton last Saturday.

Miss Harriette Swan of Thorsby attended the Teachers Institute here Friday of last week.

H. A. Harris of Cooper, Progressive candidate for Sheriff of Chilton county was in Clanton Tuesday to attend a meeting of the Campaign committee.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains onferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be o get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store. I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale; as e to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bar- cash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

NEIGHBORS-MOON.

The following wedding invitations have been mailed to the friends of the contracting parties:

"Dr. and Mrs. William Henry Moon request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter, Nell, to Mr. Thomas Herbert Neighbors, on the evening of Thursday, the eighth of September, at six o'clock, at their home, Goodwater Alabama."

Rev. Dunn of the Baptist Orphanage was in Clanton Sunday soliciting funds for the support of the Home. He preached at the Baptist Church, and secured a donation of over a hundred dollars.

J. B. Gibson of Woodlawn is visiting the family of W. D. Spigener.

Miss Wall of Wetumpka, who has been visiting Miss Bessie Thomas for several days, returned to her home last Friday.

B. M. Roberts went to Birmingham Friday night last.

The many friends of the family of the Mrs. A. C. Harper here will regret to learn that they have removed to Wetumpka, where Clark and Courtney will take up work for the Wetumpka house of the Gamble Hardware Compauy.

Mr. Victor J. Heard is spending the week with friends in Decatur.

The Editor of the Union-Banner spent Saturday last with friends in Birmingham.

Mr. G. H. Denson of Bessemer visited relatives here Sunday.

W. H. Gillespie of Bethel was in town Monday.

Mr. A. C. Smith and daughter, Miss Bertha, returned Saturday from an extended tour through the East and North.

RHEUMATISM ARRESTED

Many people suffer the tortures of lame muscles and stiffened joints because of impurities in the blood, and each succeeding attack seems more acute until rheumatism has invaded the whole system.

To arrest rheumatism it is quite as important to improve your general health as to purify your blood, and the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is nature's great blood-maker, while its medicinal nourishment strengthens the organs to expel the impurities and upbuild your strength.

Scott's Emulsion is helping thousands every day who could not find other relief. Refuse the alcoholic substitutes.

L. C. Reynolds of Rutherford is spending several days with his parents here.

Don't forget the Palace Pressing Shop when you need a suit cleaned or pressed. The place is in the Heatley building across the railroad from the Post Office.

Yes, come to Clanton Saturday if you know the way. One sale at ten o'clock A. M., one at three P. M., one at eight o'clock Saturday night.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

If You Wish To Obtain Complete and Permanent Results Try

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy

One Dose Will Convince You

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is well known throughout the country. Many thousand people have taken it for Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments and report marvelous results and are highly praising it to others. Astonishing benefits sufferers have received even from one dose are heard everywhere and explain its tremendous sale. It rarely ever fails and those afflicted with Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments, Indigestion, Gas in the Stomach and Intestines, Dizziness, Fainting Spells, Colic Attacks, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., should by all means try this remedy. The benefits stomach sufferers who have taken Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy have received is in most cases a lasting one. After you have taken this Remedy you should be able to digest and assimilate your food, enable the heart to pump pure red blood to every part of the body, give the nerves nerve strength to fibre and muscle, lighten and warm to the eye, clearness and color to the complexion and activity and brilliancy to the brain. Do away with your pain and suffering and this is often possible with one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Sensitive Dyspepsia, Acid Stomach, Sour Stomach, Belching, Flatulence, Heartburn, Nervous Dyspepsia, Dizziness, Insomnia, Palpitation, Pain in Side and Back, Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Nervous Headaches, and kindred troubles. Obtainable at all reliable druggists.

What "Bee Dee" Means

"Bee Dee" on the label means REAL VALUE inside the package, and RESULTS and SATISFACTION after the contents have been used. Always ask for "Bee Dee" when you buy a stock or poultry remedy. "Bee Dee" remedies are prepared from pure, medicinal ingredients, in a scientific way, and are genuine medicines that you can depend on.

After using the Bee Dee Remedies generally for sometime, we take pleasure in saying that they are giving entire satisfaction, and we cheerfully recommend them.
McMillen Stock Farm, Waco, Texas.

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE LINIMENT—DIP
Bee Dee Healing Powder—Bee Dee Colic Remedy

You can get them at your dealer's.
P. B. 6

Very desirable shower baths for 25¢ at the Palace Pressing Shop. Hot or cold water at any time you want it.

Don't miss Higgin's $5,000 auction sale next Saturday, August 22. Watches, Diamonds, and Jewelry.

Miss Duncan of Prattville visited Mrs. Phillips a few days this week.

Grady Reynolds went to Montgomery Tuesday on business.

Mr. Walker of Goodwater, a promising young lawyer, has opened offices in the Johnson building, and will practice his profession here. We welcome him to our town and wish him the greatest success.

Squire Waldrup of Jemison, candidate for county commissioner, was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

Commissioner Shaw of Jemison came to Clanton Tuesday on business.

W. I. Mullins went down to Montgomery Tuesday on business.

W. E. Thomas of Jemison was in Clanton Tuesday in the interest of his candidacy for the Legislature.

A team belonging to George Tackett became frightened on streets late Tuesday afternoon, and cut a lively caper around in front of the court house. No one was hurt and no damage done, except to the harness.

Clanton High School

The Clanton High School will open its next session Monday, September 7th.

The course of study for the upper grades is the same as that of the County High Schools, therefore pupils of such grades will be transfered without examination on Jan. 1, to the county school.

Tuition $1.50 to $2.50 per month for first four months.
Board $10.00 to $15.00 per callandar month.
For further Information, Call on or address.

J. J. Pickens, Principal,
Clanton, Ala.

MARRIAGES

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons.

Joe Adams and Miss Adie Smith, E. H. Jones and Miss Katrina Culp, W. J McDaniel and Miss Vena Dutton, Horace Collum and Miss Malissa Yarden.

Gosh! Get up your whole crowd and come to Higgins' auction sale next Saturday, August 22nd. $5000. 00 worth of watches, diamonds, cut glass, silverware necklaces, brooches, bracelets, and all the pretty gold rings will be sold to the highest bidder, one piece at a time, FOR CASH. Be there.

FOR RENT OR SALE

One new brick store, 25x100 feet. One block from new oil mill. Apply to.
Marbury Building & Improvement Company, Marbury, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Teel visited Thorsby Tuesday.

Mr. Joseph L. Sims and wife of Selma are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Littlejohn this week.

Miss Hattie Goodwyn of Montgomery is visiting here this week.

Clothes cleaned anb pressed at Palace Pressing Shop while you are in the bath room.

You Are Not Wanted

Do you know that your efficiency is probably not much above the average—35%? And do you realize that no employer wants a man who is not efficient, even if his services are given free?

Do You Want to Acquire Efficiency for the Job of Life?

Do you want to be wanted by all men? Do you want to know that you cannot be replaced by a better man? Do you want to know just how and just where you can make a bigger profit on your time and effort?

Your Job for the Day, your Job of Life, and your Success for All Time demand that you make yourself efficient.

The Institute of Efficiency

Ours is the only school in existence where you can learn PERSONAL Efficiency. In twenty-four fascinating lessons, in your home, at your leisure, you learn of these wonder working truths that have saved railroads, industrial plants, and factories millions of dollars each year, and which have raised salaries, in many cases, one-hundred fold.

Harrington Emerson

the man who founded this school, and who wrote these twenty-four vital lessons, has spent his life in the study and practice of Efficiency. During the past twenty years, this world famous expert, has been advising the leading industrial plants of the country. This vast experience he has put into this course of study so that you can reap the benefit.

What This Means For You

This course is for anybody who wants to make the most of his life—the professional man, business man, the young man starting to make his way, or anyone who wishes to go as far in life as he can, and achieve the full measure of success his efforts. The coupon at the side, if mailed to us promptly, will bring to you a Free copy of "The Story of Efficiency," an outline of the Course, and full information.

The Institute of Efficiency
ROBERT D. CHAMB, Sec'y.
30 Irving Place New York City

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of

"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

This story epitomizes, in the life of one big man, his big foes and big friends, the strife, the hopes, and the aspirations of modern America. Involved with his ambition is the ambition of the laborer, of the capitalist, of the progressive, of the humanitarian, of the socialist, of the society woman, and of the woman who gives all for love.

CHAPTER I.

Dreams.

He drifted into the delectable land that lies between sleep and waking, tasting the fleeting savor of his dreams—the epic visions of full-blooded youth. They had passed just beyond memory, leaving a confused yet glowing sense of sharp combats waged, of victories won. A golden haze enveloped him. Through it filtered a dwindling resonance, as of some noble processional sung by a departing far-distant choir.

A wave of delight rippled over him. Then the thought that, not sharing his somber, had painted his colorful dreams, worked to the surface.

"My last day here!"

He awoke slowly. Before him, seen through the unshuttered window, lay a world somber enough to one tugging against its restraints, lovely when it was to be left behind. He saw the September sun peep over the hills at the head of the valley, rise majestically and swing clear, a golden disk hung in the sky, symbol of the reward of men's struggles; its radiance, streaming into the little room, dispelled shabbiness with a mellow glow he could almost feel. The matin sounds arose, according finely with the lingering echoes of his dream music. He reveled in a new perception.

He was twenty years old.

He was not one to loll. He sprang from bed and stood naked; supple beautiful youth, too slender for great strength but with the unconscious grace of the wild animal.

He dressed and stood by the window in the attitude of a listener. Intently he sought to define the faint otherworld resonance that still seemed to vibrate about him. But the theme eluded him.

His illusion was effectually shattered. Into the subdued melody of the Sabbath morning thrust a profane intruder, the jerky wheezing notes of a cabinet organ in the day's hymns, played by some one who aspired beyond endowment.

He frowned, then threw back his head and laughed silently—a trick he had sometimes—at the absurd anticlimax.

"I'm still in Bethel. It's a long way from here to—there." He drew a long deep breath.

A question halted him. "There—where?"

He shook his head vigorously, as though to throw off the query, and went down to the kitchen.

The odor of frying ham saluted his nostrils; he sniffed it hungrily. A man, apparently old, was placing heavy, chipped ironware dishes on the table. He nodded briefly in response to the youth's blithe greeting.

"I'll be ready," he said in a dull flat voice, "time ye're back from the stable," and continued his slow precise setting of the table.

In a few minutes the other returned, the horses fed and his own hands and face scrubbed in cold water from the cistern. They sat down without speaking. The youth ate eagerly, gulpingly.

When the first keenness of appetite was gone, burning to talk of the great hour at hand, he broke the silence. "Well, father, this is my last day in Bethel."

The old man merely nodded, keeping his eyes on his plate.

Boyishly the son began to set forth his plans and hopes and expectations; they were not small. But the old man maintained his silence. The youth conceived him to be an unsympathetic audience.

"Guess you're not interested," he said a trifle sulkily.

"Yes, I'm interested, Mark," the father answered, "but there ain't anything to say." He raised his glance to the window. "Guess I couldn't say anything that'd help much."

The sweep of the youth's anticipation faltered before a quality in the old man's words. Old, "old Simon;" as his neighbors called him. Yet he was not really old, but in the noonday of life wore the gray mantle of age. For he, too, had dreamed his big golden dreams. Below the village stood a dismantled rotting forge, monument to their futility. After his failure he had returned to his shop and trade, shoeing his neighbors' horses, mending their wagons and plows, a dull-eyed, taciturn, spiritless plodder.

Simon Truitt rose and began to clear the table. The son moved toward the door. There he paused vaguely sensing in a sorrow to which some anything more was to be said. But the words would not come to clips articulate. As such was often the way between them.

In the stable he curried the horses, lingering over the pretty brown mare—latest and finest trophy of his horse-trading—until her coat shone satiny. This labor of love ended, he lighted a pipe and sat in the stable doorway.

He sat there until from across the town came a flat unmusical clamor, the cracked church bell calling the faithful—that is to say, all Bethel save one—to worship. He rose reluctantly. Soon he emerged from the little house, shaved to the blood and clad in the discomfort of Sunday clothes.

Always on warm Sabbath mornings Simon Truitt was to be found sitting on the stoop, and always facing the north; the dismantled forge lay to the south. He was that one for whom the cracked bell tolled in vain; he was supposed to be an atheist.

"Goin' to church?" he asked in the expressionless tone that was his habit.

"I guess so," answered Mark. "Unless," with sudden understanding, "you'd like me to stay."

Simon hesitated, then shook his head. "No, ye'd better go same as always. Courtney'd want ye to."

"I owe him a lot."

Simon nodded. "More'n to—anyone else here. Think a good deal o' him, don't ye?"

"Yes. Sometimes he's kind o' queer, though."

Simon nodded again. "D'ye," he asked unexpectedly, "d'ye believe what he preaches?"

"Why, yes!" said Mark. "Yes, I s'pose so," he amended.

The dull glance momentarily sharpened. "Not very much, I expect. Better believe it hard—or not at all. It's most time fur church."

Mark swung heavily down the path. The father's eyes followed him wistfully.

Mark joined the straggling procession that moved, stiffly decorous, toward the house of worship. Once, during the short journey, a spring wagon overtook and passed him; a girl in the rear seat turned and nodded. A wave of red surged into his dark face. Until the wagon drove into the churchyard, his glance clung to the mass of yellow hair under the pink hat. Unconsciously his step quickened.

He found an empty pew near the door, and entering, leaned back, half closing his eyes. He followed the congregation as it rose and sat in hymn and prayer and lesson, but he moved mechanically, without thought of worship. His glance sought the far corner where a shaft of morning sunshine had set a mass of yellow hair ashimmering. The sight and his dreams gave him a new and daring resolve. The hour sped swiftly.

He went quietly from the church; in the yard he took a station by which the farmer folk must pass to their vehicles and there, as he had resolved, boldly, in the eyes of all, he waited for her.

She appeared, a slender girl who, as she moved slowly around the church, wove a spell over the betrousered portion of Bethel, even where she had not the subtle aid of dreams. She was not small, but, neatly made, gave an effect of daintiness not characteristic of the maids of that valley. Unity was supposed to be "delicate," hence was spared those arduous tasks that leave so little time to study of beauty hints and fashions. If there were some to suggest that "Squire Martin's family let Unity make fools of 'em," at least no males were among these critics.

"To the City? For Good?"

Self-conscious to the finger-tips but not betraying it, she picked her dainty way among the gossiping groups, tossing gay little smiles to this and that intoxicated youth, blissfully deaf to an occasional feminine titter in her wake.

She came to a halt beside Mark, looking up with a smile that made him forget curious observers.

"Good morning, Mark!"

"Unity!" His voice was low, tense, as though he announced some tragic happening. "I'm going away tomorrow."

The vivacity fell from her face, leaving it very serious.

"To the city. For good."

"I am glad."

"Glad!" he stammered. "I thought—I wanted you to be sorry."

"Yes," she nodded emphatically. "I'm glad—for you," she added more softly.

He remained silent, an unreasoning, indefinite disappointment lingering. Something he wanted—he could not say what—was lacking in her words.

"Aren't you glad?"

"Yes, but—" He dismissed the doubt. His eagerness returned. "I'm going driving this afternoon."

She became girlish again. "Is that an invitation?" with a demure little smile.

"If you want to go."

"Of course, Mister Solemn! Aren't you—" She stopped, apparently overcome with confusion for her boldness.

"Say it!" he besought thirstily.

There was a delicious moment of uncertainty, a breathless little laugh.

"My lover. There! I'll be waiting for you, just after dinner." And the butterfly fluttered away.

He went from the churchyard and followed the street past the point where it returned to its native state of dusty, weed-flanked, country pike. He came to a place where the road rose sharply and fell again. Mounting to the crest, he threw himself on the roadside and waited; thither Richard Courtney would come on the after-service walk that was his custom.

Up the rise, village-bound, leisurely creaked an ancient top buggy. In it slouched a middle-aged man upon whose face were written humor and patience, qualities of which he had great need just then. His horse labored heavily at its task, head hanging low; not the bellows in Simon Truitt's smithy puffed louder or harder. At the crest it stopped without urging. Mark frowned impatiently. Then he noted the sad state of the horse and a grin displaced the frown.

"Hear you're going away," "Doc" Hedges remarked. "For the good of the town?"

Mark nodded, the grin widening. "Maybe you'd like to help pay my fare?"

"I have helped," the doctor rejoined dryly. "Going to get rich, ain't you? They all think that."

"It happens sometimes."

"You might, though. Any man ought to get rich that could sell me this—would you call it a horse?"

"Hmm!" Mark considered the animal judicially. "Well, it has four legs."

"So's a billy goat," drawled the doctor. "Goat'd be more use to me, too."

"What did you buy it for, then?"

"I ain't squealing. Pretty slick customer, ain't you?"

The grin returned. "I can sell horses," Mark modestly admitted, "to some people."

"Humph! Only a fool'd buy 'em of you," the doctor agreed. "What'll you take for the brown mare?"

"The brown mare isn't for sale."

"Any horse is for sale," the doctor insisted, "at the right price. Give you a hundred and fifty."

"I wouldn't sell her for two-fifty."

The doctor sighed and clucked to the weary horse.

Out of the dusty cloud trailing behind the creaky buggy emerged a tall stooping figure, clad in the rusty black of the country clergyman. He walked slowly, and when he came to the rise, with a slight effort; evidently he was a frail man physically. At the crest he stopped, breathing hard.

"Taking a good-by look at it?" he asked between breaths.

"No. Just waiting for you."

The preacher smiled faintly; the worn dispirited face lighted up a little. He turned his glance to the valley.

"It's worth a farewell. You'll be homesick for it sometimes—I hope. Shall we walk a bit farther?"

At his lagging pace they tramped along the road, constantly rising and descending but always reaching up toward a higher level. They kept the frank silence of those who have been companions often.

Ten years before Richard Courtney had resigned the city congregation that was steadily withering under his ministry and had come to shepherd the little flock of Bethel. It proved to be a life sentence, but in the end he stayed, if not gladly, at least with such Christian fortitude as a quivering sensitive soul could summon; having found—so he put it—a need to which he could minister. In the early days of his new service he had discovered a neglected, unlettered, moody youngster suffering under the blight of his relation to Simon Truitt, who, for his supposed atheism, was accounted a little less than respectable. Some quality in the boy caught the preacher's fancy. Tactfully he sought to win into Mark's heart, not a very difficult task once the lad learned that ministerial conversation was not confined to graphic pictures of eternal torment. And then, not quite realizing how this new interest had sprung out the Christing brotherhood just mentioned, he set about to make Mark over. From Richard Courtney the blacksmith's son had had his first and strongest impulse toward decent living and aspiration. Unknowing, he had set before the boy a model of what a man should be, and Mark, quick to see and emulate good, had begun to shape himself in the image of his friend.

This was the man who, Mark felt, should be the first to know of his great good fortune. It should be told him there in the place where they had talked so many times of what Mark might do if the opportunity came. It would be a pleasant thing to see the light of pride in the eyes that had shone with such kindly interest upon him during the years of his struggle for—for what? He had never quite formulated what he had striven for except that it was something that would make him a worthy companion for Unity Martin. It would be pleasant to see the light of pride in her eyes, too, to have her say that she had always believed in him, that she had known he would succeed. It would be pleasant to have her—

He had been over this ground many times during the long hours of his journey, but he went over it again eagerly, searching for the place he had lost when his thoughts had been interrupted by the preacher's question about his plans for the future.

He had been planning to buy a piece of land on the other side of the village and start a small poultry farm. He had saved a little money from his wages at the smithy and his father had promised him a small sum when he came of age. It would be pleasant to have Unity see the place he had chosen and to tell her how he meant to make it a beautiful place for her to live in when he had won her. He had been sure that she would approve of his plan to wait until he had something to offer her before he asked her to share his life. It had been pleasant to think of her as his wife, but it had been pleasant to think of many things that he did not do in his day of dreaming. It would be most pleasant of all to have her say that she had been waiting for him to ask her, that she had been sure he would come some day to tell her that he loved her.

He had been sure that she would be glad that he had won something better than money or position or power to offer her. He had been sure that she would understand that he had been striving to be worthy of her in the place he had chosen

d led offer.
mare
But need have pleastance ges."
t you
e one erted them food l top ough hill" rous where nato-
that.
bad.
his l, as nato-some dea."
would are?"
t to e, he sup-many self-fact sort had was e in r, or his hole-
his egan d an many thity loma p pertain ll its n. afthind ctedday.
gaz-
His
hed.
lying d apg of oved held y of had miled n an ness.
p de-home
the r, on e to pted as a im-t-like riper
him upon e to
His ne a hity pil's
not com-n, as bath
and h a
the
and pink usan while into un-
the
and,
alled
it!"
ou're did ow?"
p me here we place until some nd—
it. I
But,
, be-
—and gave t de-

"Oh, Unity, how can you so?"

She was able to answer him point in a way to satisfy him leave him humbly grateful vast good fortune.

The shadows were quite lon
they espied a great flat roc clearing a little way from th
And there, in a delicious intima they solemnly asserted was but taste, they remembered to e lunch put up by the thoughtful Afterward they spent a rap hour watching the sun glide do meet the hills.

She broke a long silence t dreamily, "You're going to be rich, aren't you?"

He laughed. "Maybe. It is ways so easy to get rich, you
"But everybody says you w
"Everybody—in Bethel—ma know." Then he added firmly, will—for you. And then—"

He got down from the roc lifted his arms to her. She sto certain, looking down at him glow of the sunset was still her; in her eyes was another from within, for him.

She measured the distance ground—it was almost her own
—then, with a gasp for her darin sprang into his arms. He caug and held her, kissing her aga again, thirstily. She began to re her arms tightened around his she clung very close.

She cried tremulously, "Oh,
you won't forget me—out there couldn't bear—that."

"I will not forget."

A last bright shaft reflected the crimson west flooded their clearing, fell upon her. And th the picture of her he carried there"—Unity in the sunset eyes and cheeks aflame with lo siring him only and not that he win.

* * * * * *

"Little late, ain't ye?" Simon ed Mark. But there was no re in the words, and no question;
sumed no right to pry into his affairs.

"I've been taking a drive," answered.

Simon rose and went into th
try. He returned, carrying a p of milk and a plate piled high buttered bread.

"I kept this ready fur ye. Th ye might be hungry."

Mark was not hungry, but h with a show of great relish. So stinct told him not to decline little service.

"Guess ye're purty glad to git from here?"

In the morning Mark would answered with an unqualified
Now he said, "I am—and I'm
He drew a long breath that w most a sigh. "It's like going in ming in April."

"Ye're right to go," Simon sa wouldn't want ye to stay. There any prospect fur a young man
here."

He rose, and going to the cupb fumbled among the dishes. Wh returned, he laid before Mark a

"If You Ever Get Rich—Come Here and Build a Steel Plant" pocketbook of leather. Mark op

it and glanced at its contents.
He looked up questioningly.
there must be 'most a thousand lars!"
"Jest that. I've been savin' ye."
Impulsively Mark pushed it toward Simon. "But I can't ta
It won't leave you anything.
don't need it. I've got more hundred of my own."
"I'd rather ye'd take it," Simo
sisted heavily. "It'll come in h
If ye don't need it, ye can find a place fur it. An' ye can pay it if ye ever git rich. I," he re
"I've be'n savin' it fur ye. I kn ye'd go away some day an' I w ye to take somethin'—frum me."
Mark's hand went slowly to pocketbook. "All right, father."
words fell awkwardly. "I'll pa back some day. And—thank y
"Ye're quite welcome," answ
Simon with quaint formality.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Fishes That Emit Sounds.

There is a fish in the Tagus emits sounds resembling the tions of a deep-toned bell, pedal pipe of an organ. He when the net has been drawn them, have been observed to same, and similar accounts of the river bullhead. An siluroid fish on being taken hand, is said to shriek, and the blennies emit similar Field.

POULTRY

IN HOUSE AND YARD

Importance Only to High Vigor and Health of Poultry Stock.

(By RAYMOND PEARL.)

Everybody knows instances of more or less successful poultry keeping in the most unsanitary and unhygienic of conditions, so similarly people are able when forced to live under unhygienic conditions.

But every civilized country in the world believes that the most vital insurance against the loss of national wealth which prevalence of disease involves, is the enforcement of sanitary regulations throughout its domain. In poultry keeping many may be successful for a time in managing their birds in defiance of the laws of sanitation and hygiene. A very few may be suc in this practise for a long time, in the long run the vast majority will find that thorough, careful and intelligent attention to these laws will be one of the best guaranties of permanent success that they can find. It may be said that the essentials in the successful management of poultry are: Good houses; clean air; clean food; clean water; clean yards and clean or clean incubators and brooders; healthy birds, outside and inside.

View of Trough—Slats Removed Laid Across Top for Use of Small Chicks.

No great stress cannot be laid on the importance of fresh air in the poultry house if the birds are to be in good condition. And it must be remembered that "fresh" air and stagnant air are two very different things. Sunlight is nature's great disinfectant. Its importance is no less than in human sanitation. Nothing there is no greater assistance to the diseases of poultry than dark damp houses, and dark houses are usually damp. The poultry house should be airy, light and dry. The place where poultry are housed must be dry if the flock is to be productive and free from disease.

As with housing as a prime factor in poultry sanitation goes feeding. The discussion of the compounding of rations and such topics will not be considered here, but there are, however, certain basic principles of sanitary feeding which must always be followed after if one is to avoid disease. These are: Purity of food; healthy feeding; green food; fresh drinking water, and clean troughs or receptacles for the food.

The type of slatted feed trough, used by many poultrymen, in feeding young chickens is open to certain objections. It is very difficult to keep the grain dry in it in wet, stormy weather. Furthermore, the fact that small chickens cannot use this trough entails additional labor. The improved trough devised by Mr. Tenney, obviates all disadvantages and has many points to recommend it. The improvements consist, in making the slatted front of the trough removable as a whole, and then a flat board bottom with a slat in front of it an inch high to keep the grain in place. With the front removed the trough duplicates the conditions of the flat chick board, used by many poultry men for feeding chicks during the first two or three weeks of life. As the chicks grow older this slatted front can be put on the trough and in place with hooks.

View of Trough, With Slats in Place—For Large Chickens.

Of course it is entirely possible to make troughs in accordance with the principle of this improvement, with movable slatted openings on both sides to be set down in the middle of the birds so that the birds can get at the feed from both directions. Convenient dimensions are as follows: Length, 8 feet 4 inches; height to top, 1 foot 6 inches; width at bottom, 4 inches; width at widest part, 8 inches; height of front opening, 4 inches; width of roof boards (and back the same) 11 inches. A strip of canvas keeps the hinged joint of the roof dry.

Infertile Eggs Best.

Eggs will keep better during summer if no males run with the hens. It is the germ in the egg that starts the decay and when the male is absent, the keeping quality of the eggs is considerably improved.

VOTERS IN REVOLT

Democratic Party Weakness Increasingly Apparent.

Broken Platform Pledges Have Alienated the Rank and File—Demoralization Apparent in Almost Every State.

The lesson of Democratic disorganization and Democratic loss of voters was revealed in the returns of the election in November, 1912, and it is a poor politician of any party who does not learn from it the weakness of the strict party vote of that year.

The Republican recruits of 1912 have, in nearly every instance, departed from the Democratic camp, while the real Democratic voters are alienated, disappointed, dissatisfied.

The Democratic forces today in nearly every county, district, and state are totally demoralized.

The rank and file have always been proud of their leaders keeping faith with the people as to platform pledges and campaign promises, and they can no longer retain that pride or point with pleasure to the record which is now black with repudiation of the platform pledge and the stains of broken promises.

The platform pledges and the candidates' promises are all that the voters of the Union are offered by any political party; when those pledges are worthless and the promises valueless, candidates of the party have little reason to expect either popular support or popular approval.

There is a firmly grounded moral sentiment in the voters of the United States which is in revolt at the recent blows to political morals and national honor.

It is reported in California, in Colorado, in Louisiana, in Indiana, in Pennsylvania, in New Jersey, in Massachusetts now, and next November will bring news of it in every district and every state of the union.

The Democratic line of voters is much thinner than it was in 1912.

War Is Against the Bosses.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt disclaimed any idea of building up a reunited Republican-Progressive party for the campaign of 1916. "The Progressives are appealing to the voters of the Republican and other parties who want to see the bosses downed," he said. "We are not seeking fusion anywhere for the mere sake of winning an election. We realize that the boss issue is the one dominant factor this year in many of the states. Whenever possible we shall join the Republicans in those states that war on the bosses.

He said the Progressives were not thinking now of the presidential nomination, as there would be time enough for that after the autumn election.

Limit to Generosity.

We—meaning the United States—probably can, as Secretary Bryan says, afford to be generous with Colombia. We may even at this time afford to pay her $25,000,000 and throw in an apology to boot for our part in fomenting and assisting to a successful conclusion the revolt of Panama and the setting up of the new Isthmian republic. But it is strongly to be doubted if the United States will be able to afford many similar generosities at the end of the Democratic administration unless some new method of producing revenue to take the place of the tariff deficit is devised.—Springfield Union.

Committee Likely to Ponder.

Twenty peace treaties negotiated by Secretary Bryan have been sent to the Senate with the announcement that the President desires their ratification at the present session. With the little joker in the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and the $25,000,000 apology in the Colombian treaty fresh in their minds, the Foreign Relations committee will not be blamed if it regards twenty treaties as rather more than a day's work.

The Work Is the Thing.

You can always depend on Theodore Roosevelt doing what he believes will best advance the causes he has at heart, without regard to the effect his action may have on his own personal fortunes.

As in the case of all really great men, the thing he is doing absorbs him. The consequences to himself hardly reach the level of consciousness.—Kansas City Star.

Roosevelt's Personality.

The Chicago Progressive club furnishes an interesting little sidelight upon the power of the Roosevelt personality. In the first twenty days of May the club had no applicants for membership. In the next ten days it had twenty-five voluntary requests for admission. T. R. landed from South America on May 21.

Tired of Hollow Promises.

The great elements of American life—business, labor, and agriculture—are out of patience with Democracy. The good times promised did not come. Cheaper cost of living did not come. The square deal at Panama did not come. The tariff plan worked the wrong way. The business world was kept in terror of drastic and inquisitorial laws.

The Democratic party goes into the Congressional race handicapped with a mountain of resentment and outrage to climb.

Films Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
Department K Birmingham, Ala.

For Sale Plantation containing 156 acres, situated 6 miles north of Evergreen and 2 miles west of Owassa, on 2 graded public roads; near good churches and good schools; 100 acres cleared and under fence, balance woodland and pastures; cleared land practically level; balance rolling; all well improved. This place is well situated for raising truck, peach orchard or stock farm. Price $4,500; ½ cash; balance on terms to suit purchaser. If you mean business address WILD BROS. HDW. COMPANY, EVERGREEN, ALA.

Mr. Hog-Raiser Quit Losing Your Pigs
New process which does away with spaying. Absolutely no danger. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Send $1.00 now and get this wonderful formula.
HARRIS & VAIL, 848 Brown-Marx Building, Birmingham, Alabama

$15 Day selling Oil Lots by Sour Lake, $7.50 each, $2.50 down, $2.50 month, Warranty Deed, share in well if successful. We can never grow rich at hard labor, take this opportunity to make easy money for a trifle. Agents required to purchase one lot. Remit $2.50 today, ask for special agent's commission.
TRIANGLE OIL CO.
Carter Building, HOUSTON, TEXAS

$10 DAY for live agents. Big line household specialties. Write quick, territory going fast. Household Specialty Co., Dallas, Texas

PIGS Registered Berkshire pigs; fanciest breeding, choicest individuals; prolific breeders; big type kind. A. C. Phillips, Watertown, Tenn.

FROM ALASKA'S MINES—Gold nuggets and beautiful lockets filled with gold dust. Partic. 4c. Little Boulder Nugget Co., Tofty, Alaska.

UNION MIGHT BE POSTPONED

Matter-of-Fact Serelda's Two Good Reasons for Hesitating About Setting the Day.

The Blanks' maid of all work was a practical young woman of about twenty-seven years. One day when her mistress was making some plans for the future the matter-of-fact Serelda said:

"I don't know, ma'am. It might be that I won't be with you much longer, an' then mebbe I will. I ain't sure yet."

Knowing that a young man had called a good many times to see Serelda, her mistress said:

"Are you thinking of getting married, Serelda?"

Without the least show of embarrassment or enthusiasm Serelda said:

"Well, yes, to tell the truth, I am. Then again I don't know if I will. I've got a good place here with good pay, and he's such a fool mebbe I'll stay on with you!"

BABY HAD SCALP TROUBLE

Carthage, Texas.—"My little girl had some kind of breaking out on her head that came in white blisters and when the blisters burst they formed something like scales. If I washed her head and combed the scales off they would come again in just a few days. The trouble looked something like dandruff but was hard and scaly and when the scales would come off all of the hair came also and would leave the head raw.

"I had tried salves which only softened the scales so I decided to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed her head with warm water and Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment and let it remain over night. I used only one box of Cuticura Ointment and one bar of Cuticura Soap and her head was well." (Signed) Mrs. Luella Biggs, Jan. 28, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Ought to Feel Tired.

Bobbie—Don't you feel tired, Mr. Bibble?

Guest—No, Bobbie. Why do you ask?

Bobbie—'Cause pa said he met you last night and you were carrying an awful load.

The wise wife increases her hold on her husband by holding her tongue occasionally.

Hanford's Balsam is a liniment for external use only. Adv.

Bradford, England, is to have an electrical exposition in October.

A man has to be of some consequence to meet a Waterloo.

Only One "BROMO QUININE"
To get the genuine, call for full name, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 25c.

The Remedy.

"What guttural notes that singer has!"

"Then let's curb them."

How To Give Quinine To Children
FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

A cat will not look at a king if there is a mouse in sight.

WELL, HE MADE THEM LAUGH

Speaker at Banquet Intended to Be Humorous, and Quite Unconsciously He Was.

Henry returned from the dinner and faced his expectant wife with a proud and smiling face.

"Yes, thank you, my dear," he said, in answer to her anxious inquiry. "The dinner was most pleasant, and my speech was the success of the evening."

"What did you say, darling?"

"Oh, well, I can't remember exactly, you know. But until I spoke all the speech had fallen rather flat, so I thought I would give them a little humor. And I succeeded, too! I had hardly said more than six words when there was a pleased giggle round the huge table. In a few minutes I had them all rolling about with laughter, and when at last I sat down the applause was tremendous—tremendous!"

At this point Henry removed his overcoat.

"I am glad your speech was such a success, dear," answered his wife, dutifully. "But next time you have to speak in public would it not be better to put a waistcoat under your dress-coat, especially when you wear a dickey?"

No Menace in Sanatorium.

Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, who built the first tuberculosis sanatorium in the United States in 1885, says:

"When I bought the first land on which the Adirondack Cottage sanatorium is built, I paid $25 an acre for it, but the price was then thought absurdly high. My last purchase of five acres cost me $5,000. To my knowledge, there has never been an employe who came to the sanatorium in sound health who developed tuberculosis while there; and a sanatorium can no more endanger the health of the neighborhood in which it is built, even if the residences are at its very gates, than it could if it were placed on top of a high mountain miles away from habitation."

Invitation and Answer.

Mr. F. C. Phillips in his book, "My Varied Life," tells how the late Sir George Honeyman, an infamous writer, sent down from the bench to a friend of his, a leading Q. C., a little note. Not able to make head nor tail of it, the barrister scribbled something equally undecipherable upon a half-sheet of notepaper, and passed it up to the judge. Sir George looked annoyed, and when the court rose, said to his friend: "What do you mean by this? I asked you to come and dine with me tonight." "Yes," said the barrister, "and I replied that I should be extremely glad to do so."

Possible Chance.

A young man who last month received his diploma has been looking around successively for a position, employment and a job. Entering an office the other day he asked to see the manager, and while waiting for that gentleman to become disengaged he said to the office boy:

"Do you suppose there is any opening here for a college graduate?"

"Well, dere will be," was the reply, "if de boss don't raise me salary to t'ree dollars a week by termorrer night."—Boston Evening Transcript.

The Difference.

A man whose income is $800 a year or over is entitled to be called a gentleman in England. A man who earns that much is entitled to be called a gentleman in America.

RUB-MY-TISM
Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

In Siberia.

"Pleasure party?" asked the first Cossack.

"You might say so," answered the other. "We're going for a knouting."

IF YOU'RE GROUCHY
it is likely that your liver needs stirring up. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills will set you right quickly. Adv.

No Improvement.

"How does Percy De Soft improve his time?"

"He doesn't."

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

The Great Moving Picture.

Knicker—Been to the movies?

Bocker—Well, I looked at a map of Europe.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

A dashing widow says that old maids are embers from which the sparks have fled.

WOULD MAKE A POLITICIAN

Little Willie's Capacity for Sticking to One Idea Singularly Like Way of Rabid Partisan.

"The late Adlai E. Stevenson," said a Republican leader of Bloomington, "hadn't, after all, much use for politics. He once explained to me why this was.

"He said that party politicians believed their side to be always right, and the other side to be always wrong. Whatever the other side advocated, it was horrible and infernal; whatever their own side advocated was holy.

"He said the partisan couldn't understand that you might arrive at the right thing by more ways than one—and thus the partisan was like the urchin whose teacher said:

"'Willie, what does six plus four make?'

"'Eleven.'

"'No. Try again.'

"'Twelve.'

"'No.'

"'Thirteen.'

"'No, no, no. You're just guessing. But why couldn't you have guessed that six plus four makes ten?'

"'Because it don't make ten,' said Willie. 'Five and five makes ten— I remember that.'"

Teacher's Boast.

A teachers' meeting was in progress and it was decided that the more difficult subjects should come in the morning, and those that required less application later in the day. History was last on the list, and Miss Wheeler, the young teacher, protested.

"But it certainly is easier than science or mathematics," the principal insisted.

"As I teach it," replied the young teacher, "no subject could be more difficult and confusing."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Continuing the Argument.

"You prefer swords to pistols when you engage in a duel?"

"Yes," replied the Frenchman. "Swords enable you to get in more gestures."

The young man who has been jilted thinks that all the trouble in the world wears petticoats.

Backache Is a Warning
Nature always gives fair warning whenever anything is going wrong inside the body. When warned of kidney weakness by an aching back or disordered urination, give the kidneys prompt help and avoid more serious troubles.

Kidney trouble is a dangerous thing, because the kidneys are the blood filters, and weak kidneys soon upset the healthiest system, causing rheumatic attacks, gravel, dropsy and Bright's disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills is a most reliable kidney remedy. Doan's are used successfully all over the civilized world and publicly recommended by thousands of grateful people.

An Alabama Case.

Mrs. David Gibson, 610 W. 14th St., Anniston, Ala., says: "Backache kept me in misery and I was stiff and lame. The kidney secretions were in awful shape and one of my limbs swelled to twice its natural size. My joints were stiff and I had awful rheumatic pains all through my body. After five doctors failed, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They restored me to good health and I haven't had any trouble since."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box
DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N.Y.

DRIVE MALARIA OUT OF THE SYSTEM
BABEK for That Tired Feeling
A GOOD TONIC AND APPETIZER

SORE EYES
Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion
relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures without pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for SALTER'S. Only from Reform Dispensary, 66 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

IF YOU HAVE
Malaria or Piles, Sick Headache, Costive Bowels, Dumb Ague, Sour Stomach, and Belching; if your food does not assimilate and you have no appetite, Tutt's Pills
will remedy these troubles. Price, 25 cents.

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 34—1914.

What is Castoria

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhœa. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Once Too Often.

Parson Black (sternly)—Did you come by dat wateh-melyun honestly, Bruddeh Bingy?

The Melon Toter—'Deed I did, pahson; ebry day fo' nigh on two weeks! —Puck.

One Standard Oil Company district manager wrote: "We have used Hanford's Balsam for galled horses with most excellent success. In fact, we have no hesitancy in saying that we have obtained better results from the use of this than from any other remedy we ever used." Adv.

Sad Result.

"What was the fruit of your enterprise?"

"Mostly lemons."

Never refuse to marry a girl because her father is rich. It is false modesty.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Tunis is reviving cultivation of the date palm.

For lameness apply Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

Usually a lazy man is a dead loss to himself.

FREE
Kodak Films Developed Absolutely Free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Mail orders given prompt attention.
GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

KING'S U-HAIR QUININE POMADE—The new preparation for growing hair, killing dandruff and making harsh, stubborn hair soft and lustrous. At your druggist or mailed direct on receipt of price, 25 cents. KING SPECIALTY CO., CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

15 BEAUTIFUL POSTCARDS of the mountains or city views, no 2 alike, by return mail for 25c silver. Al Lien, 2609 Lawrence St., Denver, Colo.

Ladies' Sanitary Necessity Big seller, agents coin money. Sample 50 cents. Particulars free. WA7503, 1126 Paseo, Kansas City, Mo.

Get These! "Willet's Fall Catalogue" and "Willet's Bulletin." Fall Legumes, Grains, Forage, Humus and Clover crops. Willet Seed Co., Augusta, Ga.

AGENTS $25 weekly; $35 worth perfumes and case; sells 55c size, costs you $3. Empire Perfume Co., 515 Broadway, Denver, Colo.

Registered Jerseys males and females; also high-grades. Fresh in milk. Write your wants. R. C. Vaughn, R. D., Kinder, La.

50c buys scientific marvel. Cleans painted silver, 3 minutes. Agents wanted. Reisner Supply Company, Franklinville, N. Y.

MARVELOUS Play piano immediately; 12 complete charts with instructions, $1. KEYNOTE CHART CO., 60 Grace St., Buffalo, N. Y.

LIQUID SOAP Only cost 5c to make 5 gallons; 10c gets formula, guaranteed. J. E. JOHNSON, Chateworth, Ga.

DON'T BE BALD Hair without tonics. Easy method; use at home. Instructions $1.00. K. D. DEWEY, Box 2881, Syracuse, N. Y.

GOVERNMENT examinations easy. Send stamp for information. No correspondence school. F. E. Gaston, Box 1466, Washington, D. C.

WINCHESTER
"Repeater" Smokeless Shells.
If you want a good low-priced Smokeless powder "load," Winchester Factory Loaded "Repeater" Shells will surely suit you. They are loaded with the standard brands of powder and shot, good wadding and with that same care and precision which have made the Winchester "Leader" the most popular and satisfactory high-grade shell upon the market. Some shooters insist that Winchester "Repeaters" are better than other makers' highest grade shells. A trial will tell the tale. Don't forget the name: Winchester "Repeater."
THE YELLOW SHELL WITH THE CORRUGATED HEAD.

You Look Prematurely Old

Unity-Chilton Baptist High School

A High grade co-educational institution. Prepares for college classes or for Christian citizenship. Classical, General, Scientific and Business causes. Special departments in Piano, Voice and Expression. A Specially Trained Faculty.

High Grade Work at a REASONABLE Cost

We invite Comparrison with other four year High Schools. Board in good families $12 to $15, according to accommodations. The President and his wife will give special attention to girls. For further information call on or address

Rev. JOHN A. POOL, PH.D., Pres.

20 eachers 700 Students

State Normal School

Florence, Alabama.

This institution has an honorable record of forty-one years in Traming Teachers For Efficient Service.

Seven hundred students were enrolled last session from thirty-six counties.

This school welcomes young men and women of intellect and character who wish to be fitted for the profession of teaching.

Our graduates are holding many of the most responsible positions in Alabama.

Twenty teachers in the faculty, including departments of domestic science and domestic arts. Manual training and applied agriculture together with a systematic study of rural problems will be organized.

Board may be had either in the dormitory or in private families.

The value of the grounds, buildings and equipment is conservatively estimated at $240,000.

Next session begins September 8. Write for catalogue.

Henry J. Willingham, LL.D., President. E. A. Henry, Secretary.

"AUBURN"

Alabama Polytechnic Institute

The Oldest School of Technology in the South

69 Professors and instructors. 820 Students. 20 Equipped Laboratories

Summer Session July 24 to September 4, 1914.

Next Session Begins Wednesday, September 9, 1914.

New Buildings and New Equipment.

DEPARTMENTS

I. College of Engineering and Mines—Civil, Electrical, Mechanical, Chemical, and Mining Engineering, Architecture, Metallurgy, Mechanic Arts, Technical Drawing, Machine Design, etc.

II. College of Agricultural Sciences—Agriculture, Horticulture, Animal Husbandry, Botany, Entomology, Chemistry.

Department of Pharmacy (Four-Year, Three-Year, and Two-Year Courses).

III. Academic Departments—History, English, Mathematics, Latin, German, French, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Psychology.

IV. College of Veterinary Medicine.

Expenses. Free tuition to residents of Alabama, $20.00 to non-residents. Board in Dormitory and with private families. For Catalogue and Further Information, Address

CHAS. C. THACH, LL. D., President, AUBURN, ALA.

NEW HARDWARE FIRM

Clanton Hardware Co. Purchases Local Store of Gamble Hardware Company.

The Clanton Hardware Company, incorporated to do a general hardware business in the town of Clanton, filed its incorporation papers in the Probate office on August 5th. The new company has a paid up capital of $20,000.00, and the incorporators are C. F. Jones, J. D. Martin and L. A. Collins. These three gentlemen compose the board of directors of the company.

C. FENN JONES

Mr. Jonee is the President of the new company, and is Clanton's pioneer in the exclusive hardware business. He, with Mr. W. D. Spigener, formed the first hardware firm in Clanton about twelve years ago. They operated for several years under the name of Spigener & Jones, but finally sold out the business to the Gamble Hardware Company of Wetumpka. Mr. Jones at once formed a connection with that company, and was made manager of the Clanton branch. In that capacity he has worked for the past five years. As a result of his zealous efforts and far reaching business ability he has in this time seen a steady growth in the business, till it is now the equal of any in the state. It is this business which the new firm has purchased, and will continue, with some improvements and additions.

L. A. COLLINS

Mr. Collins, who is Vice-President of the new firm, comes to Clanton from Wetumpka, where he has been sales manager for the Wetumpka branch of the Gamble Hardware Company for a number of years. He is the only member of the new firm who is married, and is bringing his family to Clanton. For the present he will occupy a residence in the Gowan addition.

The Secretary and Treasurer of the new Clanton Hardware Company is Mr. J. D. Martin, the very pleasing likeness of whom is paesented below. He Secretary of the Gamble Hrrdware Company, and Secretary and Treasurer of Alabama Retail Hardware Dealers Association. He was born and reared in Elmore County, and has been living at Wetumpka for several years.

We join the citizens of Clanton in extending to these enterprising business men a hearty welcome to our town and county. May we be able to accord to them such warm feelings of friendly citizenship that they may not have the least cause to regret casting their lots among us.

J. D. MARTIN, Sec. & Treas.

BALL GAME.

On Saturday Aug. 15 Cross Roads ball team accepted the challenge of Lomax team, and took the game 18 to 5.

FOR SALE—171 acres good, almost level land; one half is red land; one mile from Jemison. 2 good homes, 1 good barn; 80 acres in cultivation. Also have one extra good buggy-horse and buggy for sale. If interested see me. This is a bargain and you will have to hurry or it will be sold.

W. A. Rockett.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

The Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Unity and Chilton County Associations will meet with Shiloh church the fifth Saturday and Sunday in this month. We hope all who can will come.

T. J. Deason, Pastor.

FOR SALE—Good gentle family Horse. Will work anywhere. To sell cheap for cash or on time. W. W. Rockett.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDO

AUTOMOBILES FOR HI

Prompt Service Day or Ngh

Two New Five Passenger Ca

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone

CHILTON COUNTY MUSIC TEACHERS INSTITUTE

Pursuant to a call issued by a committee of the leading music teachers of the county, several persons interested in the teaching of music met at the office of the County Superintendent of Education last Saturday for the purpose of organizing the Chilton County Music Teachers Institute. R. A. Smith was elected President pro tem, and W. T. Bean Secretary pro tem. These officers were elected for permanent offials after the body was formally organized, with the addition of A. H. Glasscock as Vice-President.

Talks were made by A. H. Glass, James Franklin, R. A. Smith, W. T. Bean, and W. O. Rich, on better co-operation, and how to create better interest in all day singings.

The meeting adjourned to meet again at such time and place as might be designated by the officers.

CALOMEL MAY HURT YOUR LIVER

Every time you take this powerful drug you are in danger. Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead. Calomel is made from mercury, and while mercury has many valuable uses, it is a dangerous things to swallow. If calomel stays in the system very long it salivates. Even when it works naturally, its after-effects are often bad.

Alred Drug Company will sell on Dodson's Liver Tone, which is positively guaranteed to take the place of calomel. Liver Tone stimulates the liver just enough to start is working, and does not make you sicker than ever—as calomel often does. You feel good after taking Dodson's and it won't force you to stop eating or working after taking it. It is as beneficial for children as for adults.

Try a large bottle for fifty cents, under the guarantee that you money will be given back cheefully if you're not satisfied.

GRADY REYNO Attorney at Law Office, Gowan B Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & D Lawyers, Office, Gowan B Clanton, Al

V. J. GRAGG, Surgery and Disea Women and C Given Special A Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1 Smith Building, - Cl

Dr. F. C. S Thorsby, Al Office Masonic Hours—8 to 10 a

DR. J. P. CRUPTON Office, Wilson B Clanton, Al

Dr. P. I. HO PHYSICIAN & SU Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. Special attention given Ear, Nose and Th Office 7th Street, Cl solutions of The W. O. W.

THE

3 THE UNION 1

e Consul Commander and vereighs of Clanton Camp.

, the undersigned committee three heretofore appointed draft and present resolu upon the death of our late reign, Ernest Mahan, beg to submit the following:

vereign Mahan was born in on county, Ala., near Clan- n September 2nd 1887, and t his residence in Clanton, on the 8 day of June, 1914.

vereign Mahan became a ber of our order while re- in the state of Texas, and with this camp by card. nsurance certificate was is- o Sovereign Mahan prior marriage and was payable niece.

January 20, 1914 Severeign was married to Miss lton Marcus who survives the time of his death Sov- Mahan was a member of amp in good standing; he uried at the cametery in on with full honors of our ity.

efore, be it resolved, that death of Sovereign Ma- is camp has lost a worthy er; that his wife has lost a and affectionate husband; r community a good citifurther resolved, that we to the widow of our de- Sovereign, our heartfelt thy; and commend her to vereigns, as one worthy of are and good will.

further resolved, that a f these resolutions be pub- in each of the county pa- hat a copy be furnished idow; and that they be upon the minutes of this

espectfully submitted,
Culpepper,
rumpton,
Willis, } Committee.

e Consul Commander and reigns of Local Camp No. Woodmen of World.

he committee appointed to draft resolutions on of Sovereign Rudolph , report as follows:

reas, God has seen fit to from this forest one f its trees, whose branch- ier the bleak and helpless; this tree decayeth, the emblem mark the len.

Resolv Camp, N its faithfu affectiona dren, a ki the comm ed, a frier Resolv of these r his widc they be p county p spread up Camp.

Resolv Sovereign ber just was in g family is e ceive all t calls for; a be erected Woodmen W. F. Cul G. W. Wil E. F. Sart

Attra The

Mr. J. N. manager o informed tractions which hav exhibition It is a serie tainment, everyone course wil to the mai of the occ

Free Di Diving Ve ful exhib each after a 75 foot la water. A tions of sw Athletic boxing a with local

Show fo Dog, pony Twenty-fiv gent anima but talk,

The Kat land of bev through th new novel

Ferris W massive g weighing 2

Busy Ci munity rep of urban l and examp

SEASHORE EXCURSION

Every Saturday until August 30th TO

Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola	$6.65
Pascagoula	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.5
Biloxi	8.50	Gulfport	9.0
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis	9.5

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fares with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply

L&N J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orleans

Thorsby Insti

Thorsby, Ala.

A School that is thoroughly C ot sectarian. Well known th County for its

Good Equipment,
Well Trained Te cher
Thorough

Prepares for any grade of Tea es, for College or for Practical Courses in Domestic Scien aining, Scientific Agriculture, Music.

Ninth Year opens Sept. 8,

Catalogue and further Information,

S. H. Herbert, Prin
Thorsby, Ala.

EE LEE MADD
IOBILES FOR HI
Service Day or Ngh
w Five Passenger Ca
CLANTON, ALA.
Phone

Y MUSIC TITUTE issued by a ding music ty, several he teaching
office of the nt of Educa-or the purhe Chilton
rs Institute.
ected Presi-
. T. Bean
ese officers nanent offi-s formally addition of Vice-Presi-
by A. H. klin, R. A. nd W. O.
eration, and interest in ned to meet
nd place as
by the offi-

T OUR LIVER
e this pow-
in danger.
r Tone in-made from ercury has
it is a dan-
ow. If calon very long en it works effects are ny will sell Tone, which ed to take Liver Tone
ist enough
d does not n ever—as You feel dson's and top eating g it. It is dren as for for fifty rantee that given back satisfied.

GRADY REYNO
Attorney at Law
Office, Gowan B
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DE
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bl
Clanton, Al

V. J. GRAGG,
Surgery and Diseas
Women and Ch
Given Special A
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1-3
Smith Building, - Cl

Dr. F. C. S
Thorsby, Al
Office Masonic Hours—8 to 10 an

DR. J. P. CRUPTON
Office, Wilson B
Clanton, Ala

Dr. P. I. HOP
PHYSICIAN & SU
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m.
Special attention given
Ear, Nose and Th
Office 7th Street, CLA

— FOR — MONUME AND GRAVEST
Remember you ca better than buy the
and reliable kind w
sold by
J. K. T. Da
CLANTON,

NOTICE
I desire to announ
people that my hors
the Comer horse, is aeady for service, sub
Will be in Clanton and Honeycutt mill

HOME EXCURSION
Saturday until August 30th
TO Coast Resorts
ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON
$6.75
8.60 Ocean Springs 8.
8.60 Gulfport - - 9.0
9.15 Bay St. Louis - 9.
Ten Days Return Limit
ALSO
Daily until September 30th, regular round Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fa limit of October 31st.
For particulars apply
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A.G.P.A., New Orle

THE UNION-BANNER

Register Chancery April 2

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, AUGUST 27, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 20

Resolutions of The W. O. W.

Consul Commander and ereighs of Clanton Camp.

the undersigned committhree heretofore appointdraft and present resoluupon the death of our late reign, Ernest Mahan, beg to submit the following:

vereign Mahan was born in county, Ala., near Clan- September 2nd 1887, and his residence in Clanton, on the 8 day of June, 1914.

vereign Mahan became a er of our order while re- in the state of Texas, and with this camp by card. surance certificate was is- Sovereign Mahan prior marriage and was payable niece.

January 20, 1914 Severeign was married to Miss ton Marcus who survives

e time of his death Sov- Mahan was a member of mp in good standing; he ied at the cametery in with full honors of our re, be it resolved, that th of Sovereign Ma- camp has lost a worthy that his wife has lost a nd affectionate husband; community a good citifurther resolved, that we to the widow of our de- Sovereign, our heartfelt y; and commend her to vereigns, as one worthy of are and good will.

further resolved, that a f these resolutions be pub- in each of the county pa- hat a copy be furnished idow; and that they be upon the minutes of this

espectfully submitted,
Culpepper,
rumpton,
Willis, } Committee.

Consul Commander and eigns of Local Camp No. oodmen of World.

committee appointed draft resolutions on f Sovereign Rudolph port as follows:

God has seen fit to from this forest one trees, whose branch- the bleak and helpless; this tree decayeth, the emblem of Woodcraft will ever mark the place where it has fallen.

Resolved first that Clanton Camp, No. 322, has lost one of its faithful members; his wife, an affectionate husband, his children, a kind and loving father; the community in which he lived, a friend and neighbor.

Resolved second, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished his widow and children; that they be published in each of the county papers; and a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Camp.

Resolved third that, though Sovereign Cleckler was a member just two short months, he was in good standing and his family is entitled to, and will receive all the benefits his policy calls for; and a monument will be erected to his memory by the Woodmen of the World.

W. F. Culpepper,
G. W. Willis,
E. F. Sartor, } Committee.

Attractions at The County Fair

Mr. J. N. Dennis, the business manager of the Chilton Fair has informed us of the following attractions and entertainments which have been arranged for exhibitions at the fair this fall. It is a series of high class entertainment, and something which everyone will enjoy. This of course will only be a supplement to the main agricultural purpose of the occasion.

Free Diving—"Merimaid," the Diving Venus, will give wonderful exhibitions of high diving each afternoon and evening from a 75 foot ladder into three feet of water. Also scientific exhibitions of swimming.

Athletic Show — Professional boxing and wrestling. Bouts with local champions.

Show for little folks—Dog, pony and monkey circus. Twenty-five clever and intelligent animals that do everything but talk.

The Katz-Kaz—A trip to the land of bewilderment, and return through the land of surprise. A new novel, fascinating device.

Ferris Wheel—75 feet high; massive giant of amusement weighing 20 tons; absolutely safe

Busy City—A thriving community representing every phase of urban life. A study in skill and examples of industry.

"Oberitr"—The show beautiful, known as the ladies' delight, a gigantic electric illusion, a marvelous and mystifying exhibition. Carloads of special scenery.

Carry us all—The oldest and newest of ammusement devices with a charm that never fails.

Seven in one — Seven big shows, composed of the largest collection of freaks ever concentrated under one canvas.

Italian Band—Antonio Olivetto's Royal Italian Band; Superb artists, musicians and soloists. Concerts every afternoon and evening.

Motordome — Thrilling race with death by three high-power motorcycles traveling on a 90 deg. angle, ridden by famous dare-devils.

Tango Girls--Depicting and demonstrating all the the modern fad dances in their grace and beauty. Krouse, proprietor of the greater shows, represents every attraction as clean, meritorious, instructive and educational

Death of Mrs. F. L. Heaton

The wife of Prof. F. L. Heaton was called to higher life Wednesday evening, Aug. 19 at Cedar Head, Ga. Mrs. Heaton was a model wife and made many friends during her stay here, who with her husband mourn her loss until they meet in the infinite. Prof. Heaton was connected with the Business College here at its organization last spring. — Bullock County Breeze.

Mrs. Heaton will be remembered by the many friends of her and her husband. While in Clanton they won the love of all with whom they came in contact, and it will be with much sorrow that they learn of her death. The kindest sympathy of many people in Clanton goes out to the bereaved husband in his sad hour of affliction.

PUBLIC SPEAKINGS

There will be speakings in the interest of the Progressive ticket at the following times and places:

Corinth, Beat 5, 7 p.m., Monday, Aug. 31.

Enterprise, Beat 6, 7 p.m. Tues-

Sardis, Beat 15, 7 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 2.

day, Sept. 1.

Smith School House, Beat 12, 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 3.

Mars Hill, Beat 2, 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4.

The following speakers will address the people at the above named times and places: Judge L. H. Reynolds, Hon. J. O. Middleton, Hon. P. E. Alexander, Prof. J. W. Moore and Prof. W. T. Bean. Some of the above named speakers will speak at the places named.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

The stockholders of the Farmers Warehouse at Clanton, have elected officers for the ensuing year:

L. H. Reynolds, President; J. N. Dennis, Secretary and Treas. For directors—R. J. Williams, J. H. Duncan, W. C. Jones, G. L. Foshee, S. S. Scott, together with the president and secretary. J. H. Duncan was unanimously re-elected business manager.

Higgins the Jeweler will sell a fine Hamilton watch at auction Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

MUSIC TEACHERS FOR THORSBY INSTITUTE.

Miss Ruth Lassfolk of Chicago, Ill., has been secured as Music Teacher for Thorsby Institute for the coming school year. Miss Lassfolk is a graduate of the High School at Benton Harbor, Mich., and has studied both Vocal and Instrumental Music for several years at Kalamazoo College. She has also spent a year at the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, taking work in Bible Study and Sacred Music. She is very highly spoken of by those who know her, both as a musician and as a woman of pleasing personality and high Christian character. She will give instructions on the Organ and the Piano, and will also conduct classes in Sight-Singing, Harmony, and the leading of chorouses. All who desire to take special work in Music will find an excellent opportunity here. School begins on Tuesday, September 8th.

Mt. Pleasant

There will be preaching at this place next Sunday at eleven o'clock, singing and Sunday school to begin at nine.

Mrs. J. W. Harris of Cooper recetlyvisited her sister, Mrs, B. F. Sims.

Mr. J. V. Best and family spent Sunday with Mr. J. D. Blankenship.

Rev. B. H. Vickers and family were visitors at Mr. B. F. Massey's Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Jones spent Friday night with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Culp.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Blankenship spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Grover Blankenship, near Salem.

Mr. T. C. McHerg and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Dozier.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cooper of Poplar Springs spent Saturday and Sunday with Relatives here.

Mrs. Sudie Collman of Stewartville, recently visited her father, Rev. Jim Nelson.

Mr. J. P.Cost and family visited at J. A. Duncan's Sunday.

Mr. L. H. Price visited Mr. L. O. Vickers Sunday.

Prof. John Guy of Jemison spent Sunday with Mr. Naman Dozier.

Little Viewer.

First Cotton Ginned Here

Last Thursday, just as we were beginning to print our paper for that week, the first bale of cotton of this season's crop was brought to the gin here by Mr. Ben Edwards. There were two other bales ginned here on the same day.

Work Finished At Lock Twelve

The work of constructing the big power plant and dam at Lock 12 on Coosa River near here, which was begun about two years ago, has been completed, and all the workmen have left the place, except those who are required to keep the electrical machinery in operation. The plant is in operation every day and power is being furnished by the plant to Birmingham, Gadsden, and other cities of north Alabama.

CHILTON COUNTY IS AGAIN TO THE FRONT

There has just been discovered in the northern part of the county within three miles of the main line of the L. & N. railroad, a mine of the finest structural and roofing slate in America. It varies in colors, principal among which are purple and unfading green, and the supply is inexhaustible. Investigations and reports have been made on the product by Capt. Thomas Evans of Lithonia, Ga., an expert in the work for many years. Sample of the slate and Col. Evans report may be seen at W. I. Mullins, W. H. Sartor's and J. B. Downs'.

Baker School House

There will be an all day singing at this place next Sunday August 30th. Books used will be Harp and Harmony. Everybody is invited.

E. B. Culpepper.

CHILTON DELEGATES TO FARMERS UNION.

Prof. S. H. Herbert of Thorsby who with County Secretary J. M. Smith and Rev. W. S. Cox attended the State Meeting of the Farmers' Union as delegates from Chilton County, reports a very interesting and profitable meeting. State Supt. Feagin, Mrs. Thomas M. Owen of Montgomery, National President Charles S. Barrett, and other speakers of note brought messages of inspiration and information, and many measures affecting the welfare of the farmer were discussed and acted upon. The Farmers' Union promises to be more and more a force for good in this County and the State.

Singing Convention

The Chilton County Singing Convention will be held at Shilo church near South Calera, 1st, Sunday in September and Saturday before. Books used will be Sacred Harp and Christian Harmony. People coming by rail will get off at South Calera. Those wishing to be met will notify W. F. Armstrong, Calera, Alabama R. F. D. We are expecting several visitors at this session, among them we expect Miss Jackson the far famed director of the Birmingham class.

T. C. Jackson President, Z. J. Jones Secretary.

Politics Discussed

Editor Union Banner: Please allow me a few words in regard to the political conditions in Chilton county at present.

I am always in favor of everybody getting on peacably and quiet, but it seems that the democrats of Chilton county think it something honorable to speak disrespectfully of the Progressive party and everybody else but their brother Demies.

The Clanton Press devotes a great deal of its time in criticizing the works of the Progressive party; and how gloomy the future is for them. If they fail out as the Press predicts, we poor people had better look out. They just want to show us how they rule a county, state and nation; and I think we are getting a pretty fair example of their work from the present administration of Woodrow; and the Press wishes to give everybody a general good soaking.

If the democrats are doing so much good work over the nation, it does seem like we could see the effect of it some time. I have never seen any prosperity come from a Democratic administration in any county, state or nation at any time.

Always when bad times come in during a democratic administration, they are right ready to lay the cause of the hard time to something done by the other party just before they got into office. People, and fellow Progressives, you had better prepare for hard times again, real hard times like you had to endure back in Cleveland's administration of hard times, panics and everything to despair.

I shall close for this time but may come again if this escapes the waste basket; but in closing I wish to say to the Progressive brethren and to the dear old Union-Banner, just rally together for the support of the nominees in November, and pay no attention to what is said in the Clanton Press in regard to the outlook of our party, for they are trying to defeat our ticket by windwork and the excessive use of their natural gas. Just stick to your post and we'll together rejoice over the election of our nominees in November.

I am as always, a Progressive.

Uncle Pete.

You'd better buy your bridal present from Higgins the Jeweler before he closes his great reduction sale Saturday night at 12 o'clock August 29th. The cheapest way out the best, come quick.

Thorsby Institute

Thorsby, Ala.

A School that is thoroughly Christian but not sectarian. Well known throughout the County for its

Good Equipment,
Well Trained Te chers,
Thorough Work.

Prepares for any grade of Teachers' Certificates, for College or for Practical Life.

Courses in Domestic Science, Manual Training, Scientific Agriculture, Bookkeeping, and Music.

Ninth Year opens Sept. 8, 1914.

For Catalogue and further Information, address

S. H. Herbert, Principal,
Thorsby, Ala.

Something For Your Money

We will send you the MONTGOMERY DAILY TIMES and the UNION-BANNER one year for $2.00.

We will send you The UNION-BANNER and the ALABAMA WEEKLY TIMES one year for $1.00.

These prices are strictly cash-in-advance, and are applied to old and new subscribers of The Union-Banner.

This is the best newspaper offer ever made, and should appeal to every reader of this advertisement. Think of what it means. A first class daily paper carrying all the news of the world the nation and the state, and your weekly home paper with all the county news—both of these for ONLY TWO DOLLARS.

Send your order now to

The UNION-BANNER,
CLANTON, ALA.

POPE PIUS X DIES IN ROME

HEARTRENDING SCENE AS DYMAN PROTESTS AGAINST EUROPEAN STRUGGLE.

ILL ONLY FOR SHORT TIME

Alarming Symptoms Developed Early Wednesday Morning, Bronchial Trouble Direct Cause

Rome, August 20.—Pope Pius X died at 1:30 o'clock this morning. He had been ill several days, but alarming symptoms did not develop until recently.

Throughout the day Doctors Marchiafava and Amici devoted their utmost energies to stimulating their patient and keeping him alive.

The cardinals were notified of the pope's grave condition and some of them who entered the sick room describe the scene as heartrendering, especially when the pontiff, rousing himself from time to time, spoke. Once he said, "In ancient times the pope by a word might have stayed the slaughter, but now he is impotent."

Prayers were said by thousands and church bells sounded when the sacrament was exposed upon all the altars. When the court learned of the pope's condition there was the deepest concern. King Victor Emmanuel personally informed Queen Helena and the news was communicated to the queen mother.

Extreme unction was administered by Monsignor Zampini, sacristan to his holiness, amid a touching scene. The pope's sisters and his niece were overcome with grief. Cardinal Merry Del Val knelt by the side of his bed, where other cardinals joined him, members of the household intoning prayers.

The dying pope, in a moment of lucidity, said

"Now, I begin to think as the end is approaching that the Almighty in His inexhaustible goodness wishes to spare me the horrors Europe is undergoing."

Wednesday was one of the most anxious days in the history of the papacy. The whole world knew that the pope was indisposed, but it was supposed he was suffering from usual ailment, the gout. Up to noon even the members of the household were unaware of the seriousness of the developments. Almost without warning came the word that the pontiff was at death's door.

LATE WAR NEWS

Paris. — The official communication of the French war office says:

"The French troops have occupied all the region to the west of Fenetrange, 32 miles inside the German frontier in Lorraine. Our troops poured through from the valley of the River Seille, of which a number of passes have been evacuated by the Germans. Our cavalry is at Chateau Salins.

"We have conquered the majority of the valleys of the Vosges upon the slope of Alsace, from where we will soon attain the plain.

"To the south of Saarburg, in Lorraine, 40 miles east of Nancy, the enemy had organized in front of us, strongly fortied, in a position held by heavy artillery. The Germans retreated precipitately and our cavalry pursued them."

London. — A Reuter dispatch from Brussels says the Germans made another attempt to cross the Meuse by a bridge not far from Dinant, where cannon firing was resumed. The French artillery repelled the attack with considerable loss.

London. — An official dispatch to the French embassy, says:

"The Germans have abandoned Sarrebourg, where they were strongly established with heavy artillery."

Washington. — Japan has asked the United States to take over her embassy in Berlin "case of an emergency."

London. — The British official press bureau announces that some desultory fighting occurred Tuesday between the British patrolling squadrons and flotillas and German cruisers, which were reconnoitering. No losses are reported.

FRENCH AND BRITISH SUFFER A REVERSE

Allies are Forced to Retire Following a Bloody Encounter With the German Army.

LOSSES REPORTED AS HEAVY

Offensive Plans Against the Kaiser's Troops Checked Along Long Battle Line.

Paris. — The French and British troops, opposing the invasion of the German army in Belgium have suffered a serious reverse, according to the official announcement issued by the French war office. In the battle line, which extends from Mons to the Luxemburg frontier, several army corps, composed of both British and French, took the offensive on Sunday against the Germans, but their plan of atatack failed, owing to the "unforeseen difficulties" as described by the official statement, and the troops retired on the covering positions.

The losses on both sides are reported as extremely heavy, and the French officials describe the Germans as being obliged to establish themselves in fresh positions in Lorraine.

The French have abandoned those portions of Alsace and Lorraine which they previously had occupied and now look for heavy fighting in French territory.

Detachments of German cavalry, operating on the extreme right, have reached Roubaix, a few miles north of Lille. This territory is defended only by reservists.

At Tsing-Tau, capital of Kiauchau, the German protectorate in China, the German forces have prepared for a bombardment by the Japanese fleet by dynamiting all the tall structures there which might be used there by the attacking forces as sighting points. They also have taken all possible measures to oppose the advance of a Japanese field army.

There is a report emanating from Rome and Avlona that the Albanian insurgents have entered Avlona and raised their flag.

Emperor Nicholas of Russia is reported to have gone to the headquarters of the Russian army which has taken the offensive in full strength and is said to be advancing rapidly in east and west Prussia.

A late dispatch from Copenhagen gives further reports from Austria that Emperor Francis Joseph is in a grave condition.

COTTON CONFERENCE HELD

Producer Must Be Assisted and Assistance Must Be Immediate—Southerners Attend.

SMITH BILL PASSES.

Washington. — The Senate, without roll call, passed the so-called cotton warehouse license bill, proposed by Senator Hoke Smith originally to add value to cotton warehouse certificates by means of government inspection and certification of the grades of cotton stored in licensed warehouses.

Washington. — Three points were emphasized above all others at the conference held here by Secretary McAdoo, the Federal reserve board and representatives of the cotton planters, manufacturers, merchants and bankers to discuss ways and means for carrying the cotton crop to the close of the European war.

First, the producer is the man to be assisted rather than the manufacturer, the banker, the merchant or, above all, the speculator.

Second, any help to be fully effective must be immediate.

Third, the planters are not asking for "rescue," but are to be entrusted as men capable of handling them, with the means of tiding themselves over the present period of emergency.

The first two points were brought out by representatives of the cotton interests in Alabama and the third was voiced by President Wilson in an address to the visitors at the White House.

Beyond this, Secretary McAdoo said the treasury was prepared to handle the situation and indicated that "with warehouse facilities, cotton warehouse receipts could be made the basis for the issue of the national bank circulation." With the federal reserve system in operation, he estimated that the banks of the south would be able to secure national bank currency to finance 4,000,000 bales at $40 a bale. A total of $160,000,000.

Open Reserve Banks at Same Time.

Washington. — After many days' consideration the federal reserve board has decided that it will open all 12 federal reserve banks at the same time and launch the new banking system simultaneously all over the country. The board is expected to take up the selection of "Class C" directors of the 12 banks. This may take several days, but enough probably will be chosen in each district before the end of the week to make organization of the banks possible.

KIT INSPECTION OF BRITISH NAVAL VOLUNTEERS

Last inspection at the headquarters of the Royal Naval Volunteer reserves the day they were mobilized in consequence of the king's proclamation.

TREAT FOR BRITISH TROOPS ON THE MARCH

Country women giving apples to British soldiers who are marching to the front. At the right a British bluejacket kissing his child good-by at Waterloo station.

KIEL HARBOR LIGHTHOUSE

The extinguishing of this light might enable the German fleet to slip by the British fleet, which is supposed to have been waiting to engage the enemy outside of Kiel harbor.

SERVIAN RED CROSS NURSE

Serbian women from all walks of life have joined the Red Cross.

AUSTRIANS SHELLING THE SERVIANS

Austrian fieldpiece firing at the Servians during the battle near Semlin

HIGHLAND REGIMENT MOVING TO THE FRONT

ENGLISH NURSES LEAVE FOR BELGIUM

JAPAN DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY

IMPERIAL RESCRIPT IS ISSUED WHEN KAISER FAILS TO ANSWER ULTIMATUM.

PASSPORTS TO AMBASSADORS

Proclamation Sends Thrill Through Japanese People—Crowds Cheer in Street and Cheer.

Tokio.—The Emperor of Japan declared war on Germany. This was taken at the expiration of the time limit of Japan's ultimatum to Germany demanding the surrender of Kiao Chow.

The Japanese government had ordered the beginning of operations by land and sea.

The imperial rescript declaring war on Germany was issued. It also inaugurates hostilities in the east as a result of Germany's failure to reply to the Japanese ultimatum.

The proclamation of the emperor sent a thrill through the country. Japan's entrance upon the side of her obligations to her ally Great Britain, responds to the popular desire. In one end of the land to the other cheering crowds assembled before public buildings and there were stern processions through the streets. The popular manifestations, however, do not approach the enthusiasm that preceded the war with Russia.

Count Von Rex, the German ambassador, has been handed his passports. He probably will return to America. George W. Guthrie, the American ambassador, will return to Germany The diet has been called in special session for September [illegible].

The Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elisabeth, which latterly was at Tsingtau, the seaport of Kiao Chow, is believed to have sailed. She perhaps will go to a neutral port and disarm. It is believed that this act will keep her out of the war in the Orient, unforeseen circumstances may compel Japan to change this policy. The attitude has been taken relative to Austria and the foreign office has stated that Japan will remain friendly if Austria adopts an attitude not regarded offensive.

It is reported here that Germany has been trying to transfer her China railroad in Shan Tung to America. Tokio believes, however, that the United States, pursuing the policy of neutrality outlined by President Wilson, will not accept it.

The text of the imperial rescript:

"Issued at Tokio, August 23.

"We, by the grace of heaven emperor of Japan, seated on the throne occupied by the same dynasty from immemorial, do hereby make the following proclamation to all our loyal and brave subjects:

"We hereby declare war on Germany and we command our army and navy to carry on hostilities against that empire with all our strength, and we also command our competent authorities to make every effort, in pursuance of their respective duties to attain the national aim by all means within the limits of the laws of nations.

"Since the outbreak of the war in Europe, the calamity of which we view with grave apprehension, we, on our part, have spared no hopes of preserving the peace of the east by the maintenance of our neutrality, but the action of Germany has compelled Great Britain to open hostilities against that country, and Germany is at this time leased territory in China, making warlike preparations, while her vessels cruising the seas of East Asia are threatening our commerce and that of our ally. Peace in the far east is thus in jeopardy.

"Accordingly, our government and that of his Britannic Majesty, in full and frank communication with each other, agreed to take such measures as may be necessary for the protection of the general interests contemplated in the agreement of alliance, and we on our part being bent on attain that object by peaceful means, commanded our government to act with sincerity an advice to the imperial German government. But the day appointed for the purpose by our government failed to receive an answer accepting their advice. We with profound regret that we, for the sake of our ardent devotion to the cause of peace, are thus compelled to open war, espicially at this early date in our reign and while we are mourning for our lamented mother.

"It is our earnest wish that by the loyality and valor of our faithful subjects, peace soon may be restored and the glory of the empire enhanced."

PROTESTS TREATY VIOLATION

Note is Presented by Minister Whiting German Invasion.

Washington.—Mr. Havenstein, the Belgian minister, has presented to the state department a formal protest against violation by Germany of the treaty of 1839, which guarantees the neutrality of Belgium. The protest will be delivered to the foreign offices of all neutral and allied nations.

BELGIAN'S PLUCK IS SHOWN ANEW

Diest and Aerschot Vie With Diest and Tirlemont in Heroism

GERMANS OCCUPY BRUSSELS

Flee Belgian Capital as Fears of Kaiser Approach—Story of How Teutonic Army Took the City.

By ERNEST SMITH.
(Correspondent of the London Daily News.)

[illegible]d.—After the heroic defense of [illegible]nd Tirlemont it was the turn [illegible]ain and Aershot to try with [illegible] of troops to keep the invader [illegible] while the main Belgian army [illegible]orming its position.

[illegible]attle of Tuesday before Tirle[illegible]d gone on till ten o'clock at [illegible]and even after that, during [illegible] hours before daybreak, rifles [illegible] out the notice there would [illegible]eep in the land that night.

[illegible] the cover of darkness the [illegible]general staff and army was si[illegible]oving to its new position. To[illegible]ught where it was at that [illegible] would have given away all [illegible]antages of the allies and [illegible]ave been to risk heavy loss, [illegible]haps defeat.

[illegible]rmans Charge Trenches.

[illegible], however, not to do military [illegible] work that I started to write [illegible] rather to follow the fortunes [illegible]lucky rear guard of Belgians [illegible]nd to harrass the oncoming [illegible].

[illegible]n on Wednesday I saw the [illegible] hotly attacking the trenches [illegible] been filled up during the [illegible]th fresh men. Part of them [illegible] the famous Liege field force [illegible] decimated the Germans who [illegible]ed the trenches before the [illegible]rt. They had begged to be [illegible] to Liege to meet the en[illegible] there. This could not be [illegible] they had their opportunity [illegible]perate one, it is true, for [illegible] those men knew he was [illegible]own to be sacrificed if nec[illegible] the interest of the plans of [illegible]ne.

[illegible]r Scouts Get Range.

[illegible]rman aeroplanes flying auda[illegible]w swept over the trenches to [illegible]hey were held. Almost im[illegible] afterward the German ar[illegible] the range of the trenches [illegible]menced bursting shrapnel [illegible]m. Infantry and machine [illegible]e quickly at work and the [illegible] of defenders settled down [illegible]e enemy's masses of troops [illegible] long as possible.

[illegible]o'clock the attack was gen[illegible] the whole line, but it was [illegible]ly violent in front of Aer[illegible]ere was a pitiless and deter[illegible]laught in which the German [illegible]ers showed the same disre[illegible]he loss of men as elsewhere. [illegible] heroic regiments from Liege [illegible]brunt of the attack in the po[illegible]rtheast of town. They were [illegible]red by ten to one, but they [illegible]heir positions with the cour[illegible]peration and inflicted a fear[illegible] the Germans. Their own [illegible]e terrible.

[illegible]mans Enter Louvain.

[illegible]clock the Germans were in [illegible]They had brought their in[illegible]machine guns up by motor [illegible] quickly. As the civil [illegible] had been disbanded, [illegible] only the rear guard in [illegible] harass the enemy as long [illegible].

[illegible] the same story at Diest, [illegible] and Aerschot. A brief hero[illegible]e was followed by the in[illegible]volvement of the vast [illegible] Germans were pushing for[illegible]re were desperate combats [illegible]lice and Lovenjoul and the [illegible] retreat had been sounded [illegible].

[illegible]NGS FLEE BRUSSELS.

By John Banister.
(Standard Correspondent.)

[illegible]—The Germany are in Brus[illegible] knowledge is brought home [illegible]ly forcibly as each hour [illegible]esh flock of fugitives from [illegible] These are not so much the [illegible] Brussels as inhabitants [illegible]ns between Liege and the [illegible] have been wearily making [illegible] towards the coast to evade [illegible] of the war.

[illegible]ssels at 10 o'clock on Wed[illegible]ht. The streets were full [illegible] civilians who were crowding [illegible]unsmiths' shops clamoring [illegible]. At that time the civilian [illegible] of Brussels was bent on [illegible] city against the invaders [illegible]rgent advice by the Belgian [illegible] and the proclamation of [illegible]

[illegible] WILL FIGHT [illegible] LAST DROP OF BLOOD

[illegible] A Marconi wireless mes[illegible] Berlin tells of the German [illegible]arewell address to the [illegible] of Foot Guards.

[illegible] assembled, the emperor [illegible] that German arms might [illegible] that they should be able [illegible] the flag of the father[illegible] the envy of its enemies. [illegible] the sacrificing of [illegible] the last drop of [illegible]

The sword w[illegible] remain in its [illegible] decade, and whi[illegible] decide. He dec[illegible] sheathed again [illegible] honor. This war [illegible]ing in Almighty [illegible] the glorious day [illegible]

The command[illegible] newed the oath [illegible] claimed the re[illegible] thirst for victor[illegible] tion to fight to [illegible]

the burgom[illegible] keepers an[illegible] kaiser's h[illegible] solved to s[illegible] than give [illegible] without a [illegible]

Crowd[illegible]

At that t[illegible] with fugiti[illegible] Brabant. [illegible] that night [illegible] front of the [illegible] tinued their [illegible]

Early Th[illegible] the civil gu[illegible] moved were [illegible] the Belgian [illegible] titude. [illegible]

The Germ[illegible] nine o'clock [illegible] when an a[illegible] later many [illegible] flames.

Ostend is [illegible] all classes [illegible] on the sand [illegible] best they ca[illegible] is black wit[illegible] are in grea[illegible] and having [illegible]

Tell[illegible]

The fugit[illegible] more detail[illegible] capital by t[illegible]

The Germ[illegible] Brussels Th[illegible] ceded by a [illegible] whom carrie[illegible] that the Ge[illegible] committing [illegible] menaced by [illegible]

The office[illegible] tified the b[illegible] mans had ta[illegible] The convers[illegible] cold courte[illegible] burgomaster [illegible] he had taken [illegible] and the Ger[illegible] ance that t[illegible] not be meles[illegible] perfect order[illegible]

Citize[illegible]

The Germ[illegible] by considera[illegible] who marche[illegible] silence. Th[illegible] by the citiz[illegible] demonstratio[illegible] troops occup[illegible] and others a[illegible] spaces of the[illegible]

In front of [illegible] before the [illegible] are encampe[illegible] while others [illegible] in different [illegible]

Communica[illegible] maintained [illegible] German army [illegible] fro carrying [illegible] point.

Many of t[illegible] the Germans [illegible] to their ser[illegible] compelled [illegible] number of lo[illegible] the local pri[illegible]

All station[illegible] around Bruss[illegible] man troops, [illegible] over the wate[illegible] gas reservoirs [illegible]

Military [illegible]

German m[illegible] claimed and s[illegible] been issued [illegible] habitants, wh[illegible] from being o[illegible] o'clock at ni[illegible] seized a numb[illegible] their number [illegible] to be held as [illegible] havior of the [illegible] itants.

The German [illegible] sorts of provi[illegible] wholesale stor[illegible] ing the price [illegible] fix for the goo[illegible] motor cars als[illegible] service by the [illegible]

Portugal's [illegible]

The particip[illegible] great war is [illegible] tance as is g[illegible] has colonies [illegible] square miles, [illegible] 9,000,000 peopl[illegible] would be expo[illegible] many and Aus[illegible] gal, therefore, [illegible] On the other [illegible] England has [illegible] Portugal of t[illegible] possessions.

Sends [illegible]

Paris.—Sub-[illegible] the only son [illegible] just left the Po[illegible] attached to his [illegible] Friday last Co[illegible] an officer to v[illegible] practically a [illegible] was the first t[illegible] nel Folque app[illegible] sion, and a few [illegible] lieutenant fell [illegible]

Paris to Na[illegible]

London.—Acc[illegible] patch to the [illegible] pany, the coun[illegible] French capital [illegible] posal to renam[illegible] as the Rue de J[illegible] de Berlin as the [illegible]

JAPAN DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY

IMPERIAL RESCRIPT IS ISSUED WHEN KAISER FAILS ANSWER ULTIMATUM.

PASSPORTS TO AMBASSADORS

Proclamation Sends Thrill Through Japanese People—Crowds Gather In Street and Cheer.

Tokio.—The Emperor of Japan declared war on Germany. This was taken at the expiration of the time limit of Japan's ultimatum to Germany demanding the surrender of Kiao Chow.

The Japanese government ordered the beginning of operations by land and sea.

The imperial rescript declaring war on Germany was issued. It opens inaugurates hostilities in the East as a result of Germany's failure to reply to the Japanese ultimatum.

The proclamation of the Emperor sent a thrill through the country at Japan's entrance upon the fulfillment of her obligations to her ally, Great Britain, responds to the popular will. At one end of the land to the other cheering crowds assembled before public buildings and thereafter formed processions through the streets. The popular manifestations, however, do not approach the enthusiasm that preceded the war with Russia.

Count Von Rex, the German ambassador, has been handed his passports. He probably will leave America. George W. Guthrie, American ambassador, will remain in Germany. The diet has been called in special session for September 3.

The Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elisabeth, which latterly was at Tsingtau, the seaport of Kiao Chow, is supposed to have sailed. She perhaps will go to a neutral port and disarm. It is believed that this act will keep her out of the war in the Orient, unless unforeseen circumstances make Japan to change this policy. No action has been taken relative to the Austrians and the foreign office has expressed that Japan will remain friendly if Austria adopts an attitude not regarded offensive.

It is reported here that Germany has been trying to transfer the Chinese railroad in Shan Tung to America. Tokio believes, however, that the United States, pursuing the policy of neutrality outlined by President Wilson, will not accept it.

The text of the Imperial rescript is:

"Issued at Tokio, August 23.

"We, by the grace of heaven, emperor of Japan, seated on the throne occupied by the same dynasty from time immemorial, do hereby make the following proclamation to all our loyal and brave subjects:

"We hereby declare war on Germany and we command our army and navy to carry on hostilities against that empire with all our strength, and we also command our competent authorities to make every effort, in pursuance of their respective duties to attain the national aim by all means within the limits of the laws of nations.

"Since the outbreak of the European war in Europe, the calamity of which we view with grave concern, we, on our part, have entertained hopes of preserving the peace of the east by the maintenance of strict neutrality, but the action of Germany has compelled Great Britain, our ally, to open hostilities against Germany, and Germany is at Kiao Chow, leased territory in China, making warlike preparations, while her vessels cruising the seas of East Asia are threatening our commerce and that of our ally. Peace in the far east is thus in jeopardy.

"Accordingly, our government, in view of his Britannic Majesty's full and frank communication to each other, agreed to take such measures as may be necessary for the protection of the general interests contemplated in the agreement of alliance, and we on our part being desirous to attain that object by peaceful means, commanded our government to act with sincerity an advice to the imperial German government. But to the day appointed for the purpose neither our government failed to receive an answer accepting their advice, but with profound regret that we have of our ardent devotion to the cause of peace, are thus compelled to open war, espicially at this early date of our reign and while we are observing for our lamented mother.

"It is our earnest wish that our loyality and valor of our faithful subjects, peace soon may be restored and the glory of the empire enhanced."

PROTESTS TREATY VIOLATION

Note is Presented by Minister Protesting German Invasion.

Washington.—Mr. Havenith, the Belgian minister, has presented a formal protest to the state department against violation by Germany of the treaty of 1839, which guarantees the neutrality of Belgium. The protest will be delivered to the signatories of all neutral and allied nations.

BELGIAN'S PLUCK IS SHOWN ANEW

Diest and Aerschot Vie With Diest and Tirlemont in Heroism

GERMANS OCCUPY BRUSSELS

Many Flee Belgian Capital as Rumor of Kaiser Approach—Story of How New Teutonic Army Took the City.

By ERNEST SMITH.

(Correspondent of the London Daily News.)

Holland—After the heroic defense of Diest and Tirlemont it was the turn of Louvain and Aershot to try with handfuls of troops to keep the invader back while the main Belgian army was forming its position.

The battle of Tuesday before Tirlemont gone on till ten o'clock at night and even after that, during the hours before daybreak, rifles rang out the notice there would be no sleep in the land that night.

Under the cover of darkness the Belgian general staff and army was silently moving to its new position. To the eyes of the right where it was at that time would have given away all the advantages of the allies and would have been to risk heavy loss, perhaps defeat.

Germans Charge Trenches.

I, however, not to do military duty work that I started to write rather to follow the fortunes of the plucky rear guard of Belgians detailed to harrass the oncoming Germans.

Even on Wednesday I saw the Germans boldly attacking the trenches had been filled up during the night with fresh men. Part of them were the famous Liege field force decimated the Germans who manned the trenches before the forts. They had begged to be allowed to Liege to meet the enemy there. This could not be granted they had their opportunity in a desperate one, it is true, for those men knew he was doomed to be sacrificed if necessary in the interest of the plans of the general.

Boy Scouts Get Range.

German aeroplanes flying audaciously swept over the trenches to see they were held. Almost immediately afterward the German artillery the range of the trenches commenced bursting shrapnel over them. Infantry and machine guns came quickly at work and the handful of defenders settled down to the enemy's masses of troops as long as possible.

At 5 o'clock the attack was general along the whole line, but it was strongly violent in front of Aerschot. There was a pitiless and determined slaughter in which the German officers showed the same disregard for the loss of men as elsewhere. The heroic regiments from Liege bore the brunt of the attack in the northeast of town. They were overpowered by ten to one, but they held their positions with the courage of desperation and inflicted a fearful loss on the Germans. Their own loss was terrible.

Germans Enter Louvain.

Meanwhile the Germans were in force. They had brought their infantry machine guns up by motor cars quickly. As the civil guard had been disbanded, there was only the rear guard in Louvain to harass the enemy as long as possible.

The same story at Diest, Tirlemont and Aerschot. A brief heroic defense was followed by the invasion of the vast hordes of Germans were pushing forward there were desperate combats at Diest and Lovenjoul and the retreat had been sounded.

REFUGEES FLEE BRUSSELS.

By John Banister.

(Standard Correspondent.)

The Germany are in Brussels. Knowledge is brought home to us forcibly as each hour passes fresh flock of fugitives from the city. These are not so much the people of Brussels as inhabitants of towns between Liege and the frontier have been wearily making their way towards the coast to evade the horrors of the war.

Brussels at 10 o'clock on Wednesday night. The streets were full of civilians who were crowding the gunsmiths' shops clamoring for arms. At that time the civilian population of Brussels was bent on resistance against the invaders despite the urgent advice by the Belgian authorities and the proclamation of the burgomaster prevented the shopkeepers and artisans from facing the kaiser's hordes. They seemed resolved to sell their lives dearly rather than give up their beloved capital without a blow.

Crowded With Fugitives.

At that time Brussels was crowded with fugitives from the province at Brabant. Many of the fugitives slept that night in the big open space in front of the railroad station and continued their pilgrimage on foot.

Early Thursday morning those of the civil guard who had not been removed were disarmed and ordered by the Belgians to maintain a pacific attitude.

The Germans entered Louvain at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, and when an abbe left an hour or two later many of the houses were in flames.

Ostend is overrun with fugitives of all classes. Hundreds are camping out on the sands and others are living as best they can in the fields. The Digue is black with fugitives, many of whom are in great distress, having lost all and having no means of support.

Tell of Brussels' Fall.

The fugitives from Brussels bring more details of the occupation of the capital by the Germans.

The German cavalry which entered Brussels Thursday afternoon was preceded by a group of horsemen, one of whom carried a white flag to indicate that the Germans had no intention of committing any act of hostility unless menaced by the civilian inhabitants.

The officer in command formally notified the burgomaster that the Germans had taken possession of the city. The conversation was carried on with cold courtesy on both sides. The burgomaster mentioned the measures he had taken to pacify the inhabitants, and the German officer gave his assurance that the civil population would not be molested in any way so long as perfect order was maintained.

Citizens Watch Entry.

The German cavalry was followed by considerable bodies of infantry, who marched into Brussels in perfect silence. Their arrival was watched by the citizens, but there was no demonstration of any kind. German troops occupy the public buildings, and others are encamped in the open spaces of the city.

In front of the Hotel Metropole and before the principal railway station are encampments of German troops, while others have taken up quarters in different parts of town.

Communication between them is maintained by military cyclists, and German army automobiles dash to and fro carrying officers from point to point.

Many of the shops are closed, but the Germans pressed the bakeries into their service, each bakery being compelled to supply a certain fixed number of loaves per day in return for the local prices of bread.

All stations and railway lines in and around Brussels are guarded by German troops, who also are watching over the water and electric works and gas reservoirs.

Military Law Proclaimed.

German military law has been proclaimed and stringent regulations have been issued for the control of the inhabitants, who are strictly prohibited from being outside their doors after 7 o'clock at night. The Germans also seized a number of prominent citizens, their number being given as 18 to 20, to be held as hostages for the good behavior of the remainder of the inhabitants.

The Germans are commandeering all sorts of provisions and supplies from wholesale stores and retail shops, paying the price which they themselves fix for the goods supplied. Horses and motor cars also are being pressed into service by the invaders.

Portugal's Stake in the War.

The participation of Portugal in the great war is not of such little importance as is generally believed. She has colonies comprising over 800,000 square miles, inhabited by more than 9,000,000 people. All of these colonies would be exposed to seizure were Germany and Austria successful. Portugal, therefore, has a big stake involved. On the other hand, the alliance with England has been a guarantee to Portugal of the permanence of her possessions.

Sends Son to Death.

Paris.—Sub-Lieut. Vincent Folque, the only son of Colonel Folque, had just left the Polytechnic and had been attached to his father's regiment. On Friday last Colonel Folque called for an officer to volunteer for what was practically a forlorn hope. His son was the first to come forward. Colonel Folque appointed him to the mission, and a few hours later the young lieutenant fell mortally wounded.

Paris to Name Street for Liege.

London.—According to a Paris dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company, the council of ministers at the French capital has approved the proposal to rename the Rue d'Allemagne as the Rue de Jean Jaures and the Rue de Berlin as the Rue de Liege.

BELGIANS WILL FIGHT TO LAST DROP OF BLOOD

A Marconi wireless message from Berlin tells of the German Crown Prince's farewell address to the regiment of Foot Guards.

The regiment assembled, the emperor said that German arms might be victorious that they should be able to carry the flag of the fatherland, the envy of its enemies, and called the sacrificing of the last drop of German blood.

The sword which he had allowed to remain in its sheath decade after decade, and which he now drew, must decide. He declared it could not be sheathed again without victory and honor. This war found the nation trusting in Almighty God and remembering the glorious days of old.

The commander of the regiment renewed the oath of loyalty and proclaimed the regiment's [illegible] thirst for victory and its determination to fight to the death.

GOOD SHOWING IS MADE AT ASYLUM

Gorman in Report Comments on Excellent Showing Made by Institution at Tuscaloosa.

DOINGS AT STATE CAPITAL

Proceedings of Public Events—News of An Important Nature Given.

Montgomery.—Books and accounts of the Bryce Insane Hospital, located at Tuscaloosa, are in excellent condition, and the institution is a model of its kind, according to Public Accountant J. T. Gorman in a report to the Governor of Alabama.

The report of the examiner covered a period extending from October 1, 1912, to July 31, 1914, during which period the total receipts from all funds amounted to $724,348.30, and disbursements $699,593.53.

Examiner Gorman declared that on August 1 last there were 1434 patients in Bryce Hospital and 775 patients in the Mt. Vernon Hospital, colored.

"No state in the United States has a better and more modern asylum for the treatment and protection of its unfortunate insane population than Alabama."

CORPORATION LAWS CODIFIED.

Daniel W. Troy Prepares Handbook Dealing With Subject.

Montgomery.—Foreign corporation laws in Alabama have been codified and compiled in documentary form by Daniel W. Troy, special counsel for the state in foreign corporation cases. The volume is just off the press and it will supply a strong demand among the lawyers of the state.

Mr. Troy is considered one of the leading authorities in the state on every phase of the corporation law and his handbook has already met with much favor among the lawyers of the state.

GOVERNOR OFFERS REWARD.

Pomp Dickerson of Lee County Is Charged With Brutal Killing.

Montgomery.—Details of one of the most horrible crimes ever committed in Alabama have been received at the office of Governor O'Neal from Lee County and as a result a reward of $100 was offered for the conviction of Pomp Dickerson, charged with wife murder.

It is alleged that Dickerson killed his wife and hid the body in a swamp where it was found a few days later. It was horribly mutilated. Dickerson disappeared.

The request that a reward be offered for the arrest of Dickerson was made by Sheriff G. P. Butler and Solicitor G. A. L. Samford.

Must Prove Title to Lands.

Montgomery. — Claimants of unpatented Sixteenth Section school lands in the State of Alabama who have failed to establish their title to these lands must pay the state for them, according to W. J. Martin, State Land Agent, who issued a statement that suit would be brought against the claimants immediately. Mr. Martin will act in accordance with instructions received from Governor O'Neal.

"Some time ago the governor gave instructions that all the unpatented Sixteenth Section lands in the state which were claimed and occupied by various persons should be recovered, by suit, if necessary, except in cases which might be compromised," said Mr. aMrtin.

"Following publication of this announcement hundreds of applications were filed and proof in support of the applicants' claims to the property was submitted. These cases are being compromised and settled, and, of course there will be no suit in any of them.

"In all other cases, where the parties claiming these lands have failed to respond to the notices sent them, it is taken for granted that they are unable to make proof as to sufficient possession to entitle them to the property, and action will be brought to recover the lands claimed by them."

New Banks Begin Business.

Montgomery.—Papers reporting the incorporation of the Wilsonville State bank of Wilsonville, Shelby county, have been filed in the office of the secretary of state. The bank began business with a paid in capital of $10,000, A. H. Smith and several others are interested.

The Tuskegee State bank of Tuskegee, Macon county, is another new one. The new institution will have a paid-in capital of $42,000.

Moffatt Left "In Charge."

Montgomery.—John Moffatt, recording secretary to Governor O'Neal, has the "reins of government" in his hands during the absence of Governor O'Neal, who has gone to Tate Springs, Tenn., for a short rest. Kirkman O'Neal, son of the governor, and his secretary, is also away, hence Mr. Moffatt is in full charge.

The governor said that he would be away for about a week. He has been extremely busy during the past few weeks [illegible]

DESTROY INTEREST COUPONS.

Huge Sum Represented Interest on State's Debt in January.

Montgomery.—Destruction of interest bearing coupons for $60,955, representing the interest on the state's debt in January, has been reported to the governor by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, who verified the amount and payments and assisted Treasurer John Purifoy in burning the coupons.

The examiner reported that records of the state's debt are being properly kept. His investigation showed that $35,000 is credited to the bond redemption fund in the American National bank of New York.

FURBEARERS TO BE PROTECTED.

Wallace Says Game Laws Should Be So Amended.

Montgomery.—Game laws of Alabama will be amended at the next session of the legislature so as to provide protection for fur-bearing animals, according to John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner. Mr. Wallace believes that a season for fur-bearing animals should be prescribed and that adequate punishment should be provided for those who disregard the law.

"No semblance of protection has ever been furnished even the most valuable of our fur-bearing animals, such as beaver, otter and mink," said Mr. Wallace. "They have been taken at will at all seasons of the year, regardless of the fact that during the spring, summer and early fall months the fur is practically worthless and now these valuable quadrupeds are nearing the point of extinction.

"Many states prohibit the taking of otter and beaver at any season of the year. The constantly diminishing resources of this state, as it consists in fur-bearing animals, should be protected by providing that these quadrupeds can only be taken during the winter months, and that those trapping for them on the lands of others cannot do so legally without first having had duly issued to them a trapper's license."

Alabama Exhibit at Frisco.

Montgomery.—The European war will have no effect on the plans for Alabama representation at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, which will be held next year at San Francisco, according to a telegram sent by Lee Cowart, secretary of the Alabama exposition commission, to Charles C. Moore, president of the exposition. Mr. Cowart's telegram was sent in answer to a request from President Moore that Alabama's position and intention be outlined so that the information can be included in a statement to be issued soon by William Jennings Bryan, secretary of state.

"Our national government, through the department of justice, desires to proclaim to the world that there will be no postponement of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition," wires President Moore.

Suit Against Sheriff Filed.

Montgomery.—In a suit filed in the city court the State of Alabama claims $750 from Sheriff Horace Hood for funds alleged to have been illegally collected from the state by the officer's feed bills, which the state claims were irregular.

The suit grew out of a report made by Examiner Townes to Governor O'Neal, who charges irregularity in the feed bills and the illegal payment of such. Sheriff Hood denies owing the state any money and recently informed the state board of compromise that he would not pay any such amount unless ordered by the court.

Pope Given Respite.

Montgomery.—Governor O'Neal has granted a four weeks' respite to Ervin Pope, condemned negro murderer of Calhoun county, who was to have been executed Friday, August 22. Notice of the respite was telegraphed to the sheriff of Calhoun county and the prisoner has been transferred to the Jefferson county jail for safe-keeping.

Injunction Against Headland.

Montgomery.—An injunction to restrain the town of Headland, Ala., from enforcing its license tax of $500 against the Buckeye Cotton Oil company was granted the corporation by Judge Gaston Gunter in the city court in equity.

Road Contracts for Greene and Marion

Montgomery.—Contracts for the construction of state-aid roads in Greene and Marion counties have been let by the state highway department. The new road in Greene county will cost $7000, of which amount the state will pay $3271.

Sues Railroad.

Montgomery. — Injuries received while in the employ of the Western Railway of Alabama caused Will Smith to bring suit against the road for $10,000 damages.

Montgomery. — Announcement was made by the state military department that Sergeant A. J. Pahnke, United States army, will spend September in Birmingham instructing the hospital corps of that city. The following month he will instruct the Mobile corps.

During the year Sergeant Pahnke has organized the hospital corps and put it into serviceable condition. His assignment to Alabama is for three years without [illegible]

HAPPENED IN ALABAMA

The crop conditions are extra good around Oneonta, it is reported, except that cotton is making too much stalk.

Extensive repairs wil be made to the court house at Gadsden as a result of a decision reached by the county commissioners.

The Civic League of Huntsville has placed itself on record as being against the fee system in Madison County and will memoralize the state legislature to free Madison County from the system next year.

Many northern tourists are visiting Baldwin county to test the summer climate there.

J. W. Roberts of Baldwin is exhibiting three stalks of corn which have 13 ears well developed. Has two acres like them.

Loxley has 80 white and 11 colored school children.

Baldwin Times of August 13 records just 60 transfers of real estate, nearly all farms sold to northern people.

Six entries of public land in Baldwin county are published this month. Getting rare.

A bank has been organized at Garden City. W. J. S Sharer is president.

Mayor T. C. Russell's brick residence at Alexander City is progressing well.

W. R. Jordan and family have moved to Alexander City from Columbus, Ga.

Judge Wert of Decatur presided over Tallapoosa circuit court.

Wiregrass farmers are all picking cotton.

Mrs. William Coates of Robertsdale was paralyzed.

R. M. Dyer of West Virginia has bought the W. A. Hammond farm at Robertdale.

Colbert county feasts on peaches and watermelons.

Robert Cloud is named as a candidate for mayor of Tuscumbia.

J. A. Deason of Bibb county raised a watermelon that weighed 46 pounds.

Blocton wants an ice factory.

Ernest F. Jones and Mrs. Callie Ray were married at Tuscumbia.

Madison county high school will open August 27.

A. M. Brannum has sold his farm near Gurley to Mr. Eustace of Jackson county.

Some parts of Coosa had no rain for 14 weeks.

H. C. Rankin, candidate for mayor of Brewton, has no opposition.

Mrs. M. C. Stallworth was injured in a runaway accident at Brewton.

Escambia has the largest pecan crop in her history.

There are 23 postoffices in Escambia county.

Marvin Moore of Perry has lost 10 fine fox hounds from mouth disease.

John Henderson, 36, of Wilcox, is dead.

Wilcox will vote on a road bond issue next January.

Wilcox county Masonic conference met at Pineapple.

T. S. Boyd has moved from Geiger to Scoba, Miss.

John Abraham, a Turkish peddler, was shot by a negro in Sumter county, not fatally.

Revival at the Baptist church at Lineville resulted in 19 additions to the church.

Knox Pittard of Texas is visiting his old home in Clay, with his wife and children.

Revival at the Baptist church at Union in Clay resulted in eight additions to the church.

Z. D. McCord is building a new gin near Alexander City.

Rains have enlarged Tallapoosa crops.

J. F. Weeks is building a store at Cullman.

Complaint has been received at the state department of agriculture and industries that too much rain has fallen in certain sections of the state during the past week, while from other sections word has come that the boll weevil is doing considerable damage, according to the most recent weekly statement of the agricultural department. The statement declares that prices for cotton are considerably below what is asked for the staple and that the market condition is most unsatisfactory. According to the department's report the popularity of crimson clover is marked throughout the state. The report declares, however, that the European war has cut short the supply of seed.

Henry Corley of Kelleyton raised a large croy of large watermelons.

John C. Blevins died at Hartselle.

O. M. Fisher has been made county treasurer of Cullman.

Crops about Arkadelphia are as fine as can be.

Col. Frank V. Tiford raised the finest melons in Cullman.

More than 100 Masons attended the conference in Cullman.

Mrs. M. Taylor died at Cullman.

A bank has been organized at Crafford in Clay with $15,000 capital. J. F. Clanton president.

William Merriam, 14, died at the Odd Fellows home.

S. T. Pruett is building a bungalow at Union Springs.

Wm. J. Lee and Miss Willie S. Youngblood of Union Springs were married in Georgia.

J. W. Cleveland is high priest of the Clanton chapter Masons.

John Sherrod, city clerk, is a candidate for mayor of Tuscumbia.

Barbour county will have a fair this fall.

[illegible] has the mange.

And the Hearer Is Deceived.

Hewitt—Money talks.

Jewett—Sometimes it is pretty good at disguising its voice.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Another Meanest Man.

Burton—Mean man, isn't he?

Robinson—Mean? He's capable of going into a barber shop for a shave and then getting his hair cut just to kkeep other people waiting.

PIMPLES ITCHED AND BURNED

Route No. 3, Dadeville, Ala.—"I was troubled with a terrible breaking out between my shoulders and down to my hips. It came in pimples and my back looked very red and raw. It itched and burned so that sleep and rest were impossible and I could not sleep any hardly for weeks. My clothes irritated my back till it got so sore I had to have a soft cloth pinned to my shirt.

"As I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment for years I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment and to my surprise and joy my itching and burning had disappeared. My back had been so raw and inflamed I could not lie on it and the first application brought relief. I washed my back twice a day with a strong lather of Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In two weeks I was sound and well and have never been troubled since." (Signed) J. D. Abernatty, Jan. 26, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

Confident an Enemy Will Appear.

The Irish people are managing to get some old-fashioned fun out of the menacing situation in Ulster. The London Chronicle (which is for home rule) says that at the moment when both bands of volunteers were swarming through an Ulster town a volunteer of some kind, in full panoply of war, was met in the street by a friend.

"So you are going to fight?" said the friend.

"Yes."

"Who are you going to fight, the Nationalists?"

"No, we are not going to fight the Nationalists."

"Are you going to fight the police?"

"No, I do not think we are going to fight the police."

"Are you going to fight the English soldiers?"

"No, I don't think we shall fight the English soldiers."

"Then who are you going to fight?"

"The Lord will provide."

Forgetful Vacationist.

The family had gone off for their holiday in a taxi. Twenty minutes later the taxi snorted back up the road.

"Forgotten the tickets?" cried a neighbor.

"No," said the irate householder, "but my wife's just remembered that she's left a kettle boiling on the gas stove."

He dived into the house, and came back the next moment with a ghastly calm on his face.

"All right now?" said the neighbor cheerily.

"Right! I'd forgotten that I'd turned the gas off at the meter—and now we've two hours and a half to wait for the next train."

Easily Classified.

Hemmandhaw, who was writing a letter, looked up to inquire:

"Is it ever permissible to apply gender to volcanies?"

"I don't know," Mrs. Hemmandhaw returned, "but if it is they are surely masculine."

"Why?"

"Because they sputter, grumble and smoke."

Slight Difference.

"So your maid had pre-empted the sherry bottle, had she?"

"No, pre-emptied."

Summer Days

Call for a dainty, wholesome food—such as

Post Toasties

with cream.

There's little work, and much satisfaction in every package of these crisp bits of perfectly cooked and toasted Indian Corn.

Appetizing flavour, substantial nourishment and convenience of serving are all found in Post Toasties.

Sold by Grocers

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Why are the people not taken into the confidence of the plans which you democrats propose on road building?

If what you democrats want to do is so good for the people, why not give them a chance to vote on the question?

Is it not a fact that before the present democratic officers were hardly seated in their chairs, the Press began to advocate the issuance of bonds?

We believe fully in the initiative referendum and recall, and wish we had this law now. If we did our people would have more to say about county affairs.

The Union-Banner stands for good roads. We will be glad to see as many miles of permanent road built in this county each year as the county is able to build, and will lend every effort we can along this line; but we will never advocate running any thing over the people.

This paper believes that the will of the people is supreme and that every tax payer has a right to know every transaction of the county involving taxes. We will never advocate putting all the money of the county on one road for a few special people, and get the county in debt so far that the work on the rural roads will have to stop.

This paper stands for the rights of the common people; it is againtst bossism it makes no difference where it comes from.

The Press misunderstands the Union-Banner entirely in this argument against the issuance of warrants by the county to build the Birmingham - Montgomery Highway; or else they know our correct attitude, and are endeavoring to portray it falsely. The editor of the Union-Banner does not care a flip of his finger whether warrants were issued or not in 1906. What we are fighting is the issuance of warrants NOW, for the purpose which is in view. We do not believe it is right, as we have repeatedly said, and we would fight against it whether it were in 1906, now or any other time. It matters not who attemts to put such a thing over the voters of the county, so long as this editor is in the position he is in now, you will find his protest registered against such practice. Let the Press tell us in what way the warrants which are alleged to have been issued in 1906 affect the present campaign, and we will discuss it with them.

Will the Clanton Press kindly tell the people what the chairman of the Democratic executive committee told the commissioners court that influenced the Probate Judge to cast the deciding vote for the road changs just south of Clanton? Could your chairman have accused your Probate Judge of anything worse? How about this Mr. Press man? Does perfect peace and harmony exist in your party as you would have people believe? But on the other hand aren't about half of the democrats of the county discusted with how things are beng run in this county at this time, under democratic principles? Have not the people the right to vote on any bond issue? Is the warrant issue which has been suggested and pushed by the Democrats of this county anything more than whipping the devil around the stump? If the people want their county involved in debt to build one special road, why not allow them their constitutional right to vote on the question?

Listen to a bunch of all-confident "chronic" democrats assembled on a street corner on Sunday afternoon displaying their political wisdom, and immagine the terrible end they predict for the Progressive party. How exultantly they smile and talk of the fatal "split" in the republican party, and gloat over the untrammeled success that will inevitably come to the Democratic party forever hereafter! Such political gas bags are sickening in the superlative degree, and as to actual political knowledge, they could not distinguish Wilson's platform from the fourteenth Amendment. But oh, the voice of Democracy! How welcome is the refreshing sound of thy promises of peace and prosperity to a nation so much in need! And where art thou, Fulfillment of these promises? Hast thou come forth fresh with the bloom of growing industry at the empty call of these extremests, or hast thou receded to a covert of safety to await the beckoning hand of Confidence to summon thee again to thy ministry of benevolence among the neeey multitudes?

I seems from the way the Clanton Press deals with certain questions of politcs in last week's issue that they regard the editor of the Union-Banner as being simply led around by supposed bosses, and as really having no head of his own. Then directly on another matter they seem to regard this same editor as a veritable Solomon in point of knowledge and wisdhm. Now we cannot tell from such statements where you intend to place us, Mr. Press, but we wish you to distinctly understand one thing: We have sense enough to know that the people of this county do not care for things so foolish and frivolous as some things you said last week about us, and we are not going to attempt to answer them. They are not deep enough to pass as the simplest reason; they are too narrow to be recognized as even the most cynical logic. We could get our volume of Brann's Iconiclast and review up a little too, and probably say a few funny things that would "jar a speckled hen off the roost," or make a "kangaroo ashamed of himself;" but who cares for such? Who would be more enlightened by it? Who in this campaign, stakes anything on a personal controversy between the editor of the Press and the Union-Banner? We are not so important as that Mr. Press man. But you will observe that we are not trying to get around any reasonable argument on any question that really does concern the issues of the campaign. We will be with you there any time you call on us.

Bethel.

Mr. Editor:—Please allow me space in your paper for a few words.

Enoch Driver and wife, and Whit Brown visited the singing school at New Harmony Friday.

Rev. J. S. Kelley and wife visited relatives in Clanton last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Tim Smith of near Cooper died Saturday night, and was buried at Cooper Sunday.

The little 18 month old child of Sam Nations died Monday and was buried at Cooper. Its mother died about two or three months ago.

There has been a lot of sickness here, but all seem better now.

Crops are very good in this section. Fodder pulling is all the go now.

Answers of The Clanton Press

In the Clanton Press of July 30 appeared the following:

The Union-Banner in its always eager desire to criticise the official acts of the present Beard of County Commissioners, has the following to say in the last issue:

"They have failed for the last three years to even pay the current expenses of the county. How can they do more? Doesn't the county owe several thousand dollars on accounts that have not been passed on by the Commissioners Court?"

The Union-Banner is either grossly ignorant of the financial condition of the county, or is willing to resort to any kind of scheme to deceive the people and discredit the present Board of Commissioners without first ascertaining the facts.

There is not one word of truth in the statement that the county has failed to pay the current expense; nor is it true that the county owes several thousand dollars on accounts that have not been passed on by the Commissioners Court.

And in the issue of the Clanton Press of August 20, 1914 appeared the following:

The Union-Banner in its issue of August 6, propounded some questions to us, and we are going to answer them as they come, in a "plain and open" way, as follows.

"Doesn't the county owe at this time six or seven thousand dollars on road work?" No.

"Doesn't the county owe three thousand dollars on one of the road machines?" No.

"Doesn't the county owe over a thousand dollars to the managers and clerks of the elections that have been held this year, and to school enumerators?" YES, and the Union-Banner is fully aware that for the years 1908, 1910 and 1912, these officers were not paid until the November term of the court, except one year—1908—they did receive payment in part for their services. Yes, we repeat that the Union-Bannnr knows as well as does every well informed man, that it has been the custom of the court to pay these officials, at the November term.

"Doesn't the county owe its own current expense for the last four or five months?" YES.

"Will not all the above amount to about fifteen thousand dollars, and perhaps more?" No, not half of it.

"Is it not a fact that there is not a dollar in the general funds of the county?" Yes.

These two articles appeared in the same paper, the Clanton Press, of different dates. Can they be reconciled so that both of them will speak the truth? Is it not a fact that one of them says that the other one is not true? and both printed in the Clanton Press. How can this be? Would the Clanton Press have aknowledged that the county owed anything at all, if the direct questions had not been propounded to it by the Union-Banner? We will now ask them how much the county does owe on road work. We will also ask them how much the county owes on the road machine. One of the Commissioners counted over ten thousand dollars that the county owed, and he did not count the current expense of the county for the last four or five months, in that; however, the Press says that it is less than half of fifteen thousand dollars. Which is true, the commissioner who knows or the Clanton Press? We would like for the Clanton Press to tell the people just how much the county does owe at this time.

Why wasn't the Press fair, and tell you that the reason the election officers were not paid heretofore before November, was that there was no law authorizing the paying of election managers and clerks for primary elections. Does not the Clanton Press know that this is a new law and was not enacted until 1911?—See the general acts of 1911 on page 523 and read for yourself and see who is right and who wrong.

We want to ask the Clanton Press why they tried to deceive the people of the county in their issue of Aug. 20, in regard to the financial condition of the county. Why don't they be fair and tell the people the real truth in regard to the condition of the county? Will they come plain now and acknowledge that they were trying to deceive the people in last week's issue about the election officers never receiving their pay until in November, when there was no law at all to pay them for managing a primary election? We will be pleased to hear their explanation of these things, if they will give it. It would doubtless be interesting reading.

Program

of fifth Sunday meeting to be held with the Shiloh Baptist church near Kincheon, August 29-30, 1914.

SATURDAY

9:30 Devotional service, Rev John Huett.

9:45 Welcome address, Rev. T. J. Deason Response, Rev. W. B. Lowery.

10:00 The hope and work of our country churches, Rev. W. J. Ruddick, Rev. W. S. Cox, Rev. W. J. Bone, Rev. R. R. Brasher.

11:00 The demand for special training in all Bible schools, J. A. Pool, president Baptist High School.

1:30 Devotional exercises, Rev. J. E. Moore.

1:45 The supreme need of spirituality in all religious work, Rev. M. J. Parrish, Rev. W. H. Cook, Prof. A. E. Davis, Rev. F. W. C. Bice.

SUNDAY

9:30 Devotional exercises, W. B. Connell.

9:45 Our obligation to our young people, Rev. H. G. Williams, Prof. J. J. Pickens, Judge E. B. Deason, W. J. Billingsly.

10:15 The grandeur of a Christian, Rev. S. M. Adams, Rev. T. J. Deason.

11:00 Rev. W. B. Crumpton, D. D.

1:30 Sunday School work, J. J. Stanley, Prof. J. L. Johnson, Rev. M. C. Crumpton, Prof. Howard Roper.

2:30 B. Y. P. U. work, Prof. T. E. Williams, Prof. J. J. Pickens, Rev. W. W. Carleton.

Heart Disease Almost Fatal to Young Girl

"My daughter, when thirteen years old, was stricken with heart trouble. She was so bad we had to place her bed near a window so she could get her breath. One doctor said, 'Poor child, she is likely to fall dead any time.' A friend told me Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy had cured her father, so I tried it, and she began to improve. She took a great many bottles, but she is spared to me today, a fat, rosy cheeked girl. No one can imagine the confidence I have in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy." A. R. CANON, Worth, Mo.

The unbounded confidence Mr. Canon has in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is shared by thousands of others who know its value from experience. Many heart disorders yield to treatment, if the treatment is right. If you are bothered with short breath, fainting spells, swelling of feet or ankles, pains about the heart and shoulder blades, palpitation, weak and hungry spells, you should begin using Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy at once. Profit by the experience of others while you may.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 50 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Aug. 1.

Political Speakings are Success

The public speakings that are being held over the county in the interest of the Progressive party this week are meeting with the most favorable success. Large crowds are coming out to meet the speakers, and great interest is being shown in the questions discussed. Mr. L. R. Sawyer, nominee for the Legislature, met Judge Reynolds in joint debate at Cane Creek Monday night. The main subject of his speech was in trying to show some of the blessings the people are receiving at the hands of the Democratic administration. Every man in the county should keep a watch out for the dates they are to be held in his community, and come to here what is beieg said in his behalf.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhare will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

TAKE DODSON'S AND STAY ON YOUR F

Taking Calomel means stay home for the day—take Dodson Liver Tone and save a day's wo If an attact of constipation or iousness hits you, there's no ne to take a dose of calomel spend at least a day getting o the effects of it. Alred Dr Company sell Dodson's Li Tone, which they guarantee ta the place of calomel and sta a lazy liver without bad aft effects.

Dodson's Liver Tone does the good that calomel can do, it is absolutely harmless to yo people and old. It is a plea tasting vegetable liquid that relieve constipation or sour st ach or other troubles that along with a lazy liver, witho restriction of habit or diet. don't leave off any of the th you regularly do when you Liver Tone.

A large bottle of Dodson's er Tone sells for 50 cents, the genuine and if you are pleased with it the druggist whom you bought it will your money back with a sm

Corinth.

By the request of our pa Rev. J. D. Hughes there w an all-day experience and pr meeting at Corinth church fifth Sunday in August. Ev body is requested to come bring well filled baskets.

HOW TO GET STRENG

after any sickness is purely a matter nourishment, whether the attack an ordinary cold or severe illness weakened forces cannot repulse di germs, and this is why a relapse often fatal or why chronic weakness follows sickness.

Restoring strength to millions of p for forty years has proven the rea for taking Scott's Emulsion after sickness; nothing equals it—nothi compares with it. Its pure, nourishment, free from alcohol or promptly creates rich blood, strengt the nerves and lungs to avert tuberc

Lower Prices in Ford Cars. Effective August 1, 1914 to August 1, 1915; and guaranteed against any reductions during that time. All Cars fully equipped f. o. b. Detroit

Runabout	$440
Touring Car	490
Town Car	650

Buyers Are to Share in Profits

All retail buyers of new Ford Cars from Augugt 1, 1914 August 1, 1915, will share in the profits of the Company the extent of $40 to $60 per car, on each car they ha PROVIDED: WE SELL AND DELIVER 300,000 Ford cars during that period. Ask for particulars.

L. J. DUNCAN

CLANTON, - - - - ALABAMA

Millinery

On the first of September I will open a Millinery Store in the Wells Building.

Will carry a complete and up-to-date stock of Fall and Winter Millinery.

Your trade is solicited.

MRS. A. M. GREEN

JEMISON, ALA.

The Clanto Con

During this month our goods at a gre room for our Fall which will arrive a Come to see us

CLANTON ME CLANTON,

The Wearing of S

eans the Tramping of Dollars Un

For even the product of the best tories, which use the best mate will eventually wear out. It behooves you, therefore, to bu Best for the least money.

'll Always Find Them

KEMP BROTH

Clanton, Ala.

Groom of Maplesville was a visitor to Clanton y of this week.

Williams of Billingsley Tuesday on business.

er O. Baxley spent last Memphis, Birmingham nta on his vacation.

s the Jeweler will sell a milton watch 16 size next evening at 3 o'clock.

Horton Mullin in the U. S. Nav several months, r ton last week t days with his f Mullins.

Miss Bertha Sn a few days with M bin at Fairview.

Come to Cla August 29th, at 1 grand auction day came last Saturda

Shingles and Gasoli

Anyone wanting Shingles to co conferring with me right away. H d to get your order in the next one. I have a gasoline engine, tank, w are to have city waterworks I will n cash or on time. Come and look

L. H. RE

TAKE DODSON'S AND STAY ON YOUR FE

Taking Calomel means stay home for the day—take Dodson's Liver Tone and save a day's wo If an attact of constipation or iousness hits you, there's no ne to take a dose of calomel spend at least a day getting o the effects of it. Alred D Company sell Dodson's Li Tone, which they guarantee tal the place of calomel and sta a lazy liver without bad aft effects.

Dodson's Liver Tone does the good that calomel can do, it is absolutely harmless to you people and old. It is a pleas tasting vegetable liquid that relieve constipation or sour st ach or other troubles that along with a lazy liver, witn restriction of habit or diet. don't leave off any of the thi you regularly do when you Liver Tone.

A large bottle of Dodson's er Tone sells for 50 cents. the genuine and if you are pleased with it the druggist whom you bought it will your money back with a smi

Corinth.

By the request of our pas Rev. J. D. Hughes there wil an all-day experience and pra meeting at Corinth church fifth Sunday in August. Eve body is requested to come bring well filled baskets.

HOW TO GET STRENG

after any sickness is purely a matte nourishment, whether the attack an ordinary cold or severe illness weakened forces cannot repulse di germs, and this is why a relapse often fatal or why chronic weakness follows sickness.

Restoring strength to millions of pe for forty years has proven the real for taking Scott's Emulsion after sickness; nothing equals it—no compares with it. Its pure, medic nourishment, free from alcohol or opi promptly creates rich blood, strengt the nerves and lungs to avert tuberculo

s in Ford Cars. Ef- 914 to August 1, 1915; and any reductions during that y equipped f. o. b. Detroit

it	$440
Car	490
ar	650

to Share in Profits Ford Cars from Augugt 1, 1914 to re in the profits of the Company b per car, on each car they buy L AND DELIVER 300,000 new eriod. Ask for particulars,

J. DUNCAN
ON, - - - - ALABAMA

nery

f September I will open e in the Wells Building.

complete and up-to-date Winter Millinery.

solicited.

A. M. GREEN
MISON, ALA.

The Clanton Mercantile Company

During this month we are selling all of our goods at a great reduction to make room for our Fall and Winter Stock, which will arrive about September 1st. Come to see us for what you want.

CLANTON MERCANTILE CO.
CLANTON, ALABAMA.

The Wearing of Shoes

eans the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot

For even the product of the best factories, which use the best materials, will eventually wear out.
It behooves you, therefore, to buy the Best for the least money.

ll Always Find Them Here.

KEMP BROTHERS.
Clanton, Ala.

Groom of Maplesville was a visitor to Clanton of this week.

Williams of Billingsley Tuesday on business.

er O. Baxley spent last Memphis, Birmingham ta on his vacation.

the Jeweler will sell a ilton watch 16 size next evening at 3 o'clock.

Horton Mullins, who has been in the U. S. Navy in Mexico for several months, returned to Clanton last week to spend several days with his father, C. Reese Mullins.

Miss Bertha Smith is spending a few days with Miss Pearl Durbin at Fairview.

Come to Clanton Saturday August 29th, at 10 a. m. Higgins grand auction day also those who came last Saturday.

A Letter From Squire Waldrup

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me space to reply to some charges which I hear are being circulated against me on the road question by some democrats, saying I am opposed to good roads.

I have favored good roads all the time, but I don't believe in plunging the county into debt over the will of the tax payers. No; anyone hearing the false reports, pass them by as false.

I send you a clipping from the Birmingham News, which gives my position on road building; and we, with good tax, can do the same. The clipping is as follows:

"Anniston, Ala.—Calhoun county is building a fine system of good roads without a bond issue or other debt device.

"The improvement has been under way for several years and is now rapidly assuming countywide proportions.

"The work is being done with the use of regular road funds under the supervision of a good supervisor and engineer. Teams and men are kept on the highways all the time.

"The road north of Jacksonville has been completed a distance of fifteen miles. The road west through Alexandria valley toward Ohatchie and Ashville has been completed for a distance of twenty miles. This is one of the routes to Birmingham.

"Another road running east up Choccolocco valley has been completed for a distance of eighteen miles.

"Another good highway connects Anniston with Talledega.

"These four main highways connect Anniston with every section of Calhoun county. Other roads are being improved, but not yet constructed as first class highways.

"The building of these highways has worked wonders in the improvement of farm conditions. It is noticeable that the building of a good road by a farmer's house does not only inspire him to introduce improved methods but he usually paints his house, repairs his fences and cleans up generally.

"This naturally leads to better sanitation and better living."

S. E. Waldrup.

Shingles and Gasoline Engine For Sale.

Anyone wanting Shingles to cover with can get the greatest bargains conferring with me right away. Have ordered one car, and would be to get your order in the next one. Come and see samples at my store.

I have a gasoline engine, tank, wind mill and steel tour for sale; as are to have city waterworks I will not need them. Will sell at a bar cash or on time. Come and look the proposition over.

L. H. REYNOLDS.

L. Cantrell made a visit to friends in Evergreen Sunday

W. M. Wyatt and P. C. Wilson were visitors to the Capital City Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKee of Chattanooga are visiting relatives in Clanton this week.

Clarence Thomason of Decatur was a visitor to friends in Clanton Sunday and Monday.

Several people from Clanton went to the baptizing at Mims' pond near Concord Sunday morning.

Clark Harper, who is holding a position now with the Gamble Hardware Company at Wetumpka, spent Sunday in Clanton.

Commissioner Shaw of Jemison was in Clanton Monday on court business.

Keep in mind the place to get your clothes cleaned and pressed; also good clean sanitary shower baths—Palace Pressing Shop in the Headley building across the railroad from the post office.

Rev. S. M. Adams is conducting revival services at the Clanton Baptist church this week.

FOR SALE CHEAP—One brand new 22 Remington Winchester Rifle call quick Higgins the Jeweler Clanton Ala.

Higgins the Jeweler auction sale of Watches and Jewelry next Saturday August 29th, will be the best he's ever had special arrangements have been made for the sale. Saturday sale last from 10 a. m. to 12 o'clock at night. Bridal presents and fine gifts will go cheap be here.

Greatest Event in Woman's Life

All human experience looks back to motherhood as the wonder of wonders.

The patience, the fortitude, the sublime faith during the period of expectancy are second only to the mother love bestowed upon the most helpless but most marvelous creation—a baby.

Women are quick to learn from each other those helpful agencies that aid to comfort, that conserve their nervous energy and yet are perfectly safe to use and among these they recommend "Mother's Friend."

It is entirely an external application designed to lubricate the broad, flat muscles and skin that protect the abdomen. It has been in favorable use for nearly half a century and is known to mothers in almost every settled community in the United States who highly recommend it. You will find it on sale in drug stores. "Mother's Friend" is utterly harmless, contains no deadening drugs and yet its influence in the skin and muscles beneath as also upon the network of nerves beneath the skin is very beneficial, very soothing and a wonderful help. The muscles expand naturally and are not subjected to unnecessary surface strain and pain.

Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" today at any drug store and write to us for our instructive little book to mothers. Address Bradfield Regulator Co., 413 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Save that quarter dime and dollar till August the 29th, and come to Higgin's Watch and Jewelry sale.

FOR SALE—One $40.00 Violin, bow and case in a No 1 condition for $15.00. Higgins the Jeweler Clanton Ala.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hand last Monday night, a fine baby girl.

L. R. Sawyer of Shelby was a visitor to our office Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dimpsey, who have been living here for many months left Tuesday for their former home at Gadsden. Mr Dimpsey has been working at Lock 12.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Recommended and Praised by Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick man for about three months caused from Gall Stones of the Liver and was told by three of our most prominent physicians that I would have to submit to an operation to get relief, but heard of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy and secured a full treatment and took it according to directions and passed hundreds of Gall Stones. Since taking your medicine I work regularly and don't feel any ill effects. I am praising your Remedy to all my friends. I think it's worthy of the highest praise. R. L. DOOLEY, Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments are not asked to take Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy for weeks and months before they feel benefited. Just try one dose—which should make you feel better in health, convince you that you will soon be well and strong, free you from pain and suffering and give you a sound and healthy Stomach, as it has done in thousands of other cases. Wherever it is taken you will hear nothing but the highest praise. Go to your druggist—ask him about the great results it has been accomplishing in cases of people known to you. Send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chem., 155-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for a free book on Stomach Ailments and read the testimonials of people who have been

Ready for To-morrow ?

Horses digest their feed less thoroughly than other farm animals. In order to insure thorough digestion of all the food eaten, and to make your horses readier for next day's work, add to their evening feed a teaspoonful of—

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

It will lessen your feed bills.
It will increase your profits.

I am using Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE with my horses regularly and find it a saving proposition on feed. It also makes them healthy, thriving and clean.
Ira Johnston,
R. F. D. No. 1,
O'Neill, Nebr.

25c, 50c and $1. per can.
At your dealer's.
P. B. 1

Clanton High School

The Clanton High School will open its next session Monday, September 7th.

The course of study for the upper grades is the same as that of the County High Schools, therefore pupils of such grades will be transfered without examination on Jan. 1, to the county school.

Tuition $1.50 to $2.50 per month for first four months.
Board $10.00 to $15.00 per callandar month.
For further Information, Call on or address.

J. J. Pickens, Principal,
Clanton, Ala.

SEASHORE EXCURSIONS

Every Saturday until August 30th
TO
Gulf Coast Resorts

ROUND TRIP FARES FROM CLANTON

Pensacola	$6.65
Pascagoula	8.00	Ocean Springs	8.35
Biloxi	8.40	Gulfport	9.00
Pass Christian	9.15	Bay St. Louis	9.30

Ten Days Return Limit

ALSO

On sale daily until September 30th, regular round trip Summer Tourist Tickets at slightly higher fares with return limit of October 31st.

For particulars apply
L&N
J. A. HESTER, Ticket Agent, Clanton
J. K. RIDGELY, A. G. P. A., New Orleans

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt decides to leave his native town of Bethel to seek his fortune. His sweetheart, Unity Martin, encourages him in his project.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

He went again to the cupboard and took down a battered tin candlestick. He lighted its candle and started toward the inward door. Half-way, he stopped abruptly and turned, his mouth working strangely.

"If ye ever git rich," he dragged the words out slowly, even painfully, "come back here an' build a steel plant. There's a heap of fine coal an' iron in these hills, an' the river an' railroad'll give ye good transportation. This valley's meant fur it. I was jest a little too early—an' a little too ignorant, I reckon. But ye're smarter an' better schooled than me, an' the time's comin'. I'd like to see a Truitt build it."

Never before had Simon Truitt spoken of his dream and failure to his son.

"Why, yes," Mark answered, on a sudden pitying impulse, "I'll think about it."

"Yes. Keep thinkin' about it. It's—it's a big idea."

Mark started. The phrase again! Simon went to the window and peered out into the silvery night—toward the south. Then he moved heavily toward the door. He turned again; the flickering light from the candle threw the lined, patient face into sharp relief.

"Good night, Mark."

"Good night, father."

The door closed. For many minutes Mark, left alone, absently fingered the pocketbook and thought of the man who had given it to him. Then he blew out the lamp and rose from the table.

He, too, paused at the window and looked out into the night, toward the south. He tried to see the sleeping valley as his father had dreamed it, alight with the fires of many furnaces, palpitant with the rumble of many engines. He thought he saw it.

The picture faded. He saw only a vague shadowy mass in a moonlit meadow, the dismantled forge, silent witness that for those who march upon the battlefield that is called industry is no third choice. They must conquer—or be conquered!

CHAPTER III.

The Masters.

He found himself, a lonely foreign figure knowing not whither he would go, somehow in the city's heart.

Chance led him to the principal thoroughfare. The city had begun to quit its toil, and the released toilers were pouring into the street, an endless unordered horde, heedless of him as they were of one another. Never before had he seen so many people.

He had a confused sense of being sucked into a narrow, gloomy canyon through which poured a flood of humanity, a treacherous, dangerous torrent, with many cross-currents. Countless faces, wan in the unnatural twilight, streamed by him; a stranger type to him, fox-featured, restless of eye.

Full darkness fell. He paused under a fiery sign, The Seneca. Through a great plate-glass window he saw a gaudy red-and-gold interior broken by many columns that to the inexpert eye somewhat resembled marble. Uniformed pages scurried to and fro. Well-dressed men lounged in easy chairs or sauntered leisurely about. Many lights burned brilliantly. He looked within longingly.

While he debated whether or not to enter this expensive-looking hostelry, a porter swooped upon him and snatched from his hands the ancient carpetbag that held his slender wardrobe.

"This way, suh!"

He followed the porter to the desk, painfully conscious of the figure he cut, uncouth, out of place. A clerk of lofty mien placed an open register before him.

"Write your name here."

Mark wrote it.

"And your town."

Mark hesitated—and then, with a dogged lowering of his head, firmly wrote the name of that city.

In the dining room that night many smiles were cast at the raw country youth. He did not regard himself as a subject for mirth. As he attacked the strange viands the waiter set before him, a little of his self-confidence returned. The vivid sense of a cruel, overpowering entity faded. Homesickness for Bethel, the refuge, subsided.

He began to take in details of the novel scene around him.

His ears strained to catch the remarks that floated to him from the neighboring tables. It was a strange lingo he heard, lightly dismissing topics that would have busied the gossips of Bethel for a moon. There was a young man who wore diamonds and talked in a loud and impressive manner. "Why, only last night I was home for second supper." (Elizabeth, 9 years old.) "Dad" and "mother" were spoken of as casually as Bethel would speak of its farmers. Bethel! Why, Bethel was a city, a great city, a city of wealth and power and—

He ate hastily. He was home-sick now, and he longed for the quiet of his room. He would think there of his plans, of his future, of the city he would conquer.

He paid his bill at the desk and asked the way to his room. The clerk stared at him for a moment before he answered politely. As he followed the boy to the elevator, he felt that the clerk had spoken to him as he would have spoken to a country cousin.

He felt very small and very lonely in his room. He undressed slowly and crept into the great bed. He lay for a long time staring into the darkness. The city roared outside his window. He felt very small and very lonely in the great city that was his city now.

He would conquer it, he would make it pay him tribute, he would—

He slept.

He awoke early the next morning and dressed hurriedly. He would find a boarding house in some quiet side street and then he would look for work. He would—

He would conquer the city.

He breakfasted in a small restaurant and then he asked the way to the office of the Quinby Steel company.

He walked briskly in the direction indicated by the clerk. The city was awake now and about its business. He felt a part of it as he hurried along with the throng. He would be a part of it when he had conquered it.

He would be a part of it when he had conquered it. He would be a part of it when he had conquered it. He would be a part of it when he had conquered it. He would be a part of it when he had conquered it.

He was a part of it when he had conquered it.

He was a part of it when he had conquered it. He was a part of it when he had conquered it. He was a part of it when he had conquered it. He was w coke oven beds. It's a rush job. ive you three weeks for it."

"Give me?"

"Yes. I'm putting you in charge of gang."

For an instant Mark stared foolish- Then he grinned. "Would you nd saying that again?"

Blair complied. "Look here," he ied boyishly, "I'm taking a chance you, because you look and talk elligent. Are you?"

Mark admitted it.

"Then prove it. I want to make a ord on this job and so you've got Houlahan," Blair added, "didn't— d be loses his job. See?"

Mark saw.

n the morning Houlahan reported, ppily unaware of a new order of ngs.

"Houlahan," Blair announced casu- y, "Truitt will take your gang to- ."

Houlahan glared malevolently at rk.

"And where'll O! go?"

"You can take Truitt's old place—or t," said Blair curtly.

"My God!"

There was no resistance. As if ed, the Irishman shouldered his k and shovel and with the gang fol- ed Mark to the new job.

You have seen a sensitive horse be- me docile and eager when a master es the reins. So it was with Houla- n's, now Truitt's, gang. They were, ce they had survived the weeks of lying, no mean type; and they re- nded gratefully to the changed dership. Where they had been sul- and resentful, they now became ling and promptly obedient. As the advanced, the pace, instead of ckening as under Houlahan's com- nd, grew faster; the last hour's ord was the best of all.

Often Mark went home to his lodg- by way of the mills. Then he be- n to spend his evenings studying m, sometimes in company with ir, who when the day's work was e sunk his rank in a frank liking his new lieutenant.

At first Mark saw only a vast spec- ular chaos; a Brobdingnagian fer- nt of unordered and unrelated en- ery and consuming fires. No guid- hand appeared, no purpose was . Some awful mischance that must ng the whole fabric crashing to th seemed always to impend. It s unbelievable that this creation been brought forth from the mind by the hand of man.

Gradually to his accustomed eye chaos resolved itself into a system ather, a marvelous system of sys- ns that worked with a single pur se, each unit fitting precisely into ordered whole.

"God!" he exclaimed one night, over me by the splendor of it all. He and ir were standing on the bridge r the blooming mill, watching the f-naked troop that with hook and gs worked a two-ton ingot over the ls.

"What is it? What's happened?" ir looked around for an accident to plain the ejaculation.

"Nothing. I was just thinking how ow big it is." Mark laughed at the bleness of his words. "What would give to be down there?"

There is such a thing as luck. A n—himself an artist who had not become exploiter—who had just me unnoticed on the bridge, heard with a half smile, saw the eager e.

Blair shrugged his shoulders. "Yes, big. But it's hard work. Good , though."

"I suppose so," Mark answered care sly. "I wasn't thinking of that."

The man spoke. "Good evening, ir."

"Oh! Good evening, Mr. Henley." ir struck a respectful attitude. "A d night, sir."

Henley looked at Mark. "I don't t place you. Where have I seen before?"

Mark flushed at the recollection.

"I took a letter I had for you and caught me—"

"So you're Peeping Tom, eh? Did get a job?"

"Yes, sir. With a pick-and-shovel ng. I'm boss now."

Henley seemed not unduly im essed.

"He's the man that dug the new en beds," Blair interposed gener sly. "He did it in two weeks and ee days."

"Two weeks and two days," Mark rrected eagerly.

"So long?" Henley continued indif ent.

"I had a spoiled gang. It took ek for me to shape 'em up."

"Humph! That's what we pay ses for. We gave you credit for t job, Blair."

"I took him out of the gang and put n on the job. But he did the work knows how to get work out of n."

And that was high praise—the very ghest, Henley thought. He turned ain to Mark.

"Are you satisfied with your job?"

"No," cried Mark. "I don't want to just a Hunky-driver. I want to rn how to make steel."

"It's easier to learn how to make el than to be a Hunky-driver," Hen y said dryly. "However, I think we n find you another job."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Roundsman Emulates Naturalist.

There is a policeman in the Middle x Falls who carries a book, a pair of era glasses and a bundle of nots be r with him on his rounds.

"I've been here a number of years," said to a visitor, "and I got hamed when everybody asked me out birds and flowers and I could t tell them about anything. One y I saw Mr. Packard, the naturalist work, and I've been following nce then."—Boston Transcript.

NAMUR IS NEXT POINT OF ATTACK

Kaiser's Army Has Reached Namur And Will Attack This Important Stronghold

GERMANS OCCUPY BRUSSELS

Without Resistance—War Tax of Forty Million Dollars Levied on City By the Germans

Paris.—An official statement issued says:

"Namur is partially invested. Heavy artillery fire opened on the city. The westward movement of the German columns continues on both banks of the Meuse outside the range of action at Namur.

"German cavalry forces passed through Brussels going westward. They were followed later by an army corps.

"A war tax of forty million dollars has been levied on the city of Brussels by the German general.

"The retreat of the Belgians continued without incident.

"As already announced, after reconquering the frontier, our troops advanced into Lorraine along a front extending in the Donan mountain to Chateau Salins. They drove the Germans back into the valley of the Seille river and the marshy district, and our advance guards reached Delme, Dieuze and Morhange.

"Several German army corps made a vigorous counter attack, and our advance guards fell back. The fight was fierce on both sides, and in view of the greatly superior number of Germans our troops, who had been fighting continuously for six days, retreated.

"Our left covers the advance works of Nancy and our right is firmly established in the Donan hills.

"Details received show that the reoccupation of Muelhausen was a great success. The offensive, first along the line from Thann to Dannemarie (Damparkirch), and then on to Muelhausen, was carried out with rare dash. By a bold stroke Gen. Paul Pau, once he was master at Thann and Dennemarie, directed the troops west of Muelhausen, giving the enemy an opportunity to engage him betwee nour lines and the Swiss frontier, and then by a second move the Germans were thrown back on Muelhausen."

Soldiers Fought Like Demons

London.—A dispatch to the Reuter's News agency from Ghent, Belgium, says:

"The fight at Aerschot was extremely hot. The appearance of two German aviators was the first intimation that the Germans, who had been repulsed on the previous day, intended to renew the attack.

"Flying low, the German aviators surveyed the position and then returned to report.

"Soon afterwards the German infantry, supported by machine guns, and artillery, opened a fierce attack.

"The troops on both sides fought like demons and the battle soon became a veritable butchery.

"Two Belgian regiments which already had distinguished themselves in the forts of Liege, held the invaders in check for two hours.

"Both sides were losing heavily when the retreat was sounded.

"Major Gilsonal took charge of the Belgian rear guard, which fought so stubbornly that only seven out of his force of 288 men returned.

Retreat to Antwerp Explained

Washington.—An official explanation of the Belgian field army's backward movement toward Antwerp was given in the following cablegram from London, made public by the British embassy:

"The Belgian field army, based on Antwerp, has fallen back in that direction to cover its communication with that fortress. In anticipation that this might become necessary the seat of government already had been transferred to Antwerp.

"As Brussels is an undefended city and no longer the seat of government, the fact that the Germans may have occupied it is not of great importance. Moreover, the present position of the Belgian field army is a menace to the right flank of any further German advance westward."

Japan Tells of Grievances

Washington.—Interference by German cruisers with the shipping of Japan's ally, Great Britain, the seizure of Japanese goods in German bottoms and the consequent grave dislocation of Japanese trade, are the principal reasons set forth by Japan in explanation of the ultimatum delivered to Germany. Cable dispatches have contained a brief outline of the Japanese grievances, but the full text of the Japanese official's statement on this subject was not available until later.

600,000 Are Idle in Paris

Paris.—A warning issued by the French government says that while the great struggle is in progress on the frontier, another fight must be fought in the interior of the country against the misery which follows the disorder in its economical life. The prefecture of police in Paris estimates that there are 600,000 persons out of work in the French capital and its suburbs, or nearly one-sixth of the total population of the department of the Seine.

GRAND DUKE NICOLAS

Commander-in-chief of the Russian army in the field.

GERMANS PUSHING FORWARD

HAVE FORCED AN OPENING—ARE ON THEIR WAY TO FRANCE.

Fighting Between German and French Soldiers Is Severe In Villages.

London.—An official communication issued at Paris states that very large German forces are crossing the Meuse between Liege and Namur. The statement continues:

"The French army is making a rapid advance on the Seille river and at the end of the day had reached Delme on one side of the river and Morhange on the other."

A dispatch to The Times from Paris says that the first point at which the Germans crossed the French border was at Cirey-Sur-Vesouse. Since then there has been continued fighting in that region until a day or two ago, when it ended in the victorious advance of the French forces, who inflicted a decisive defeat on the enemy and drove them back across the frontier east of Luneville.

Desperate Struggle in Villages

The correspondent says that the laconic reports of the French minister of war give little idea of the desperate struggle that occurred around the handful of villages scattered along the French border.

Point after point was taken and retaken by one side or the other. He gives the following story of the fighting at the village of Badonviller, as told by the villagers:

German Gains Announced

Paris.—An official communication received here from Brussels says:

"The Germans have gained ground on both banks of the river Meuse and are in contact with the armies of the allies.

"The enemy finding the routes to the southward strongly held by French and Belgians, discovered an opening to the north. This might entirely change the strategy on both sides.

"East of Namur the Germans have attained the line between Dinant and Neufchateu.

"Large German forces continue to cross the river Meuse between Liege and Namur.

"German outposts have occupied Dyle.

"The Belgians having held the invaders in check for fifteen days, have done all that could be expected. Belgian strategy will now be merged into the general plan of the allied armies."

Mother Gave Her Four Sons

Paris. — A woman who had four sons in the French army walked slowly down the steps of one of the municipal offices where relatives are informed officially whether soldiers are dead, wounded or unreported. She was exceedingly white, but her emotion was greater than could be expressed in tears. A friend came up quickly and said: "Have you good news? I am so glad my Jean is safe." "Yes, they are all safe," was the reply. "They are safe in the arms of the Father. "I am proud to give them."

Awarded Legion of Honor

Paris. — President Poincare has signed the nomination of Joseph Benoit, mayor of Badonviller in Meuteet-Mozelle for the cross of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his exhibition of energy and magnanimity. According to the official records Benoit's wife was killed by German soldiers, who burned their home. Benoit later saved the life of one of the Germans who had been arrested and was threatened by the enraged townspeople. Despite his grief Benoit continued uninterruptedly his duties.

Canadian Women Oppose War

Ottawa, Ontario.—Canadian women do not want their husbands to go to war and are wielding the veto power bestowed upon them by the government with such effect that in some instances volunteer regiments, have been thinned to 50 per cent. of their membership. This far exceeds the government's estimate of women. A protest against their action was made by Colonel Morrisette, director of the artillery.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff.
For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent Free Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Successor to Dr. H. H. Greene Sons, Box O, Atlanta, Ga.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN ALL ITS BRANCHES
VIEWS, PHOTOS, STUDIES, PORTRAITS, DEVELOPING
Films Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best
BERT G. COVELL Co.
M. T. STRADFORD, Mgr.
3rd Ave. & 19th St. Dept. R. Birmingham, Ala., Phone 1948

A Loyal Friend.

A section foreman on a southern railway heard the following conversation between two of his dusky laborers:

"Jim, you bettah come here an he'p me. I's talkin' up fer you."

"How's dat?"

"W'y, dis here man say you ain't fit for de dawgs, an' ah tole him yes you is!"—Everybody's Magazine.

HERE IS A GOOD WAY TO GET RID OF PIMPLES

Bathe your face for several minutes with resinol soap and hot water, then apply a little resinol ointment very gently. Let this stay on ten minutes, and wash off with resinol soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Do this once or twice a day, and you will be astonished to find how quickly the healing, antiseptic resinol medication soothes and cleanses the pores, removes pimples and blackheads, and leaves the complexion clear and velvety. All druggists sell resinol soap and resinol ointment.—Adv.

Nothing pleases a homely woman so much as to have a man compliment her figure.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

The Uncaptured.

"Paw, what's fugitive verse?"

"That written by a poet still at large, my son."

How To Give Quinine To Children
FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for a ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

Occasionally you meet a man who is so chivalrous toward women that he is actually polite to his own wife.

WITH TRAGEDY IN HIS MIND

Husband Dashed Home in Response to Telephone Call to Find His Worst Fears Were Groundless.

Smithson said a thunderstorm always reminded him of this absurd incident in his early married life. He said it happened when their first baby was only two months old, so he might be pardoned if his solicitude exceeded his sober judgment. He was at his office one afternoon when a terrific thunderstorm broke which crashed enough to frighten anyone, so when the 'phone rang and his wife's voice tremoulously asked: "George, dear, can you come home right away?" he said, "yes," quickly, nor paused to question, but frantic with misgivings, grabbed his hat and almost ran through town to his home.

Arriving all breathless, he found his wife awaiting him on the porch, her face the very picture of distress.

Rushing up to her he said anxiously: "Why, darling, what's the matter?"

Much to his surprise came this reply: "Oh, George, dear, we have moths!"—Kansas City Star.

A Piece of Fiction.

"Is this the bookkeeper?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'm the head of the firm. I came in to ask you if you would accept an increase in your salary."

"No sir! I'm getting too much as it is. You could get any number of men to fill my place for half the money."

"But our profits are so great we don't know what to do with them."

"Sorry; but to encourage me in that sort of thing would only result in disaster. Besides, if I got more money my family of nine children might get enough to eat. And if the practice should spread, the whole civic fabric would be upset."

"But I really feel—".

"Go away, sir! I won't listen to you! Discharge me if you must, but raise my salary—never!"—Life.

One Too Many.

The 'bus was rolling up Fifth avenue in a heavy groundswell, on a murky night. Perhaps it was only that the chauffeur and conductor were both sleepy, or maybe it was only the mugginess that deceived them.

On the corner at Thirty-fifth street stood, waiting to cross, a belated delivery boy, holding erect by the waist a dressmaker's dress form. The chauffeur thought he detected a fare, and slowed his craft in to the curb. The conductor looked out through the fog, shook his head, and rang the bell to go ahead.

"Room for one only," he said, and the 'bus rolled on.—New York Evening Post.

Different Meaning.

One of the principal owners of a prominent gold mine was expatiating on its merits to a capitalist and prospective investor. He described the vein in which the miners were working, showed him specimens of the ore, and backed up his statements with the written opinions of experts.

"Well," admitted the capitalist, "it looks as if it might be a good investment. As my old Uncle Hiram would say, it has 'p'ints.'"

"Pints!" exclaimed the owner, carried away perhaps by his over-anxiety; "why, sir, we're in quartz right now!"

All Right With Him.

An applicant for appointment to the position of deputy marshal for one of the counties of southwest Virginia asked a citizen of that county to indorse his recommendation. The man took the paper, glanced over it, then wrote something and handed it back. The applicant read:

"Waiving the language of the indorsement above, I will say that if the appointive board sees fit to appoint Mr. Blank as deputy marshal for this county it will be perfectly agreeable with me—I'm going to locate in Kentucky."—National Food Magazine.

Generous Milkman.

When little Bennie brought the milk in off the front porch one cold morning he found a pillar of the frozen fluid sticking out of the bottle.

"Oh, mamma," he cried, "I like our new milkman!"

"Is that so? Why?" asked the mother.

Showing her the bottle, Bennie exclaimed: "Our old milkman barely filled the bottle, but this one heaps it up."

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. The first application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

The Result.

"Did the doctor limit you to any particular diet?"

"No, but his bill did.'

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

Some people burn their bridges behind them, and others fireproof theirs.

EARTH'S MOST LONELY SPOTS

Islands Where Communication With the Great World Is at Rare Intervals—Tristan da Cunha.

Though scientific progress has made it possible to do a double journey between England and America in a fortnight, there remain many islands with which it takes years to communicate.

Off the Scottish coast are the groups of islands known as the Hebrides, Orkneys and Shetlands. Of these the most isolated island is St. Kilda, some three miles long and two miles broad. The inhabitants lead lives of great loneliness, for it takes a month to get to the next island, and the sea often makes any communication with St. Kilda impossible for months.

The group of eight Phoenix islands in the Pacific has a total population of only 158, while another little bit of the British empire is Fanning island. This is a landing place for the Pacific submarine cable, and usually there are about one hundred people in the place.

The loneliest of all parts of British territory is the Island of Tristan Da Cunha in the South Atlantic, which is also the smallest inhabited island in the empire. It is 1,800 miles from land, has a population of 74 Scottish Americans, and the inhabitants get news of the outer world usually once every two years.

A Good Shot.

A San Franciscan, who had been hunting in the vicinity of Lake Tahoe without bagging any game, came upon a mountaineer who was feeding a caged wildcat he had caught the day before.

"How much will you take for that beast?" he asked.

The captor said $5, and the money was paid over.

"Now," said the Nimrod, "tie one end of a strong cord to that tree and another to the cat's neck, and then open the door of the cage."

This was finally accomplished and the fierce animal stood straining at its tether.

The sportsman, who was watching the exercises from the interior of the cabin, leveled his rifle across the window sill, took careful aim and blazed away. The wildcat gave a joyful yell and disappeared in the forest. The bullet had cut the rope.

Not to Blame.

"What shall we do, John," said the farmer's wife, who had retained much of her sentiment through 25 years of married life, "what shall we do to celebrate our silver wedding?"

"Reckon up where all the silver's gone to in bringing up our family," grumbled he.

"Oh, no, John, it must be something real good and out of the ordinary. I tell you what. Let us kill the fattest pig and give a banquet."

"Maria," said the husband solemnly, "I don't see how the unfortunate animal is to blame for what happened 25 years ago."

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

In With the Trusts.

"Did I understand you to say that Senator Flubb came up from the people?"

"Yes, and he's going back on them now."

RUB-MY-TISM
Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

Hopeless Case.

Whyte—I am afraid Jobson will never make a good golf player.

Browne—No. I am giving him advice all the time, but he won't follow it.

EAS-IT
Relieves in fifteen to thirty minutes the worst Headache, Indigestion Pains, Neuralgia, or Nervousness from Overwork, Mental Worry, or Eye Strain. Ask your druggist. Don't take SUBSTITUTES. Contains No Opiate. Adv.

No man's education is complete until he can tell when a woman's hat is on straight.

Life is a grindstone that sharpens either our wits or our noses.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Your Druggist's 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye free ask Druggists or Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Ladies take notice—Silk highly polished and temper wanted. Irwin Handsaw, 1507 Fairmount Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

KING Shoe Polish, Kimo Silver Kleen, 4c postpaid; premiums given with orders. Roberts Lighton mixture, 15c postpaid. Lemon, Hardware Store, Tacoma, Wash.

300% PROFIT Be household specialty man. Hatch Mfg. Co., Bridesburg, Philadelphia, Pa.

FROM ALASKA'S MINES—Gold nuggets and beautiful lockets filled with gold dust. Particulars 4c. Little Boulder Nugget Co., Tetty, Alaska.

To Heal the Wounds and Sores on Oxen

HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh
For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.
Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.
Price 25c, 50c and $1.00
All Dealers OR WRITE G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Constipation Vanishes Forever
Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good

Don't Read This
unless you are interested in Kodaking. We develop your films absolutely free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Prompt attention to mail orders. We carry a fresh supply of Eastman films. Send us your order for these. We mail them out quickly.
GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

$15 Day selling Oil Lots by Sour Lake, $7.50 each, $2.50 down, $2.50 month. Warranty Deed, share in well if successful. We can never grow rich at hard labor, take this opportunity to make easy money for a trifle. Agents required to purchase one lot. Remit $2.50 today, ask for special agent's commission.
THRIANGLE OIL CO.
Carter Building, HOUSTON, TEXAS

ONLY $21.90 f. o. b. factory for this nice 6 hole, nickel trimmed steel range without water tank. Add $3.50 for tank. Has Duplex Grates for coal or wood.
HIGH POINT NOVELTY WORKS
HIGH POINT, NORTH CAROLINA

CLEAN YOUR STRAW HAT
One package of our cleaner will thoroughly clean and bleach two straw hats. Makes them look like new. Easily applied and will not injure the finest hat. Price by mail postpaid 10c. Send for a pkg. today and save the price of a new hat. STACY MFG. CO., Ipswich, Mass.

Something New Just out, inkless pens; use no ink, dip pen in water and write. For a fast seller send dime for samples and terms to agents. Staples, P. O. Box 540, Memphis, Tenn.

KING'S U-HAIR QUININE POMADE—The new preparation for growing hair, killing dandruff and making harsh, stubborn hair soft and luxurious. At your druggist or mailed direct on receipt of price, 25 cents. KING SPECIALTY CO., CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

Practical, Complete Fish Bait Formula which positively lands every kind of fish without fail. Sent postpaid for 25c. Frank Weiss, West Palm Beach, Fla.

PROTECT your home, office, outbuildings and automobile with the Instantaneous Fire Extinguisher. Price $1.50, 4 for $5.00. Williams Mfg. Company, Dept. B, 5080 Parnell Ave., Chicago

AGENTS Either sex—you can clear $5 every day you work for me, let me send particulars FREE. Act quickly. Eureka Distributing House, 630 Bond Bldg., Washington, D. C.

"EMP" instantly smoothes those rough edges on collars and cuffs. By mail 7 cents. E. Pare, York St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

For Sale Splendid job printing office; good business; part cash, balance easy. E. Ledgler, 1309 W. 7th., Little Rock, Ark.

AGENTS and auto owners—The greatest "Spark Gaps" on earth. 400 per cent profit. H. F. Kingsrud, Box 18, S. 1, Boston, Mass.

LADIES Stop slaving. Write for our proposition. Somebody is going to make money. Is it you? STERLING CO., Norwood, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Hair and Scalp Specialists Make your hair beautiful. Guaranteed preparations. $1. Housekeepers Economy Bureau, Box 88, Washington, D. C.

BOYS You want it, we have it. A WHIP TOP. Sample 10 cents. Whip Top Co., 1109 Jefferson Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

Bulldog Cement mends furniture, glassware, alles. Bulldog grip. Large bottle 25c. Dealer's special price. POSTON'S SALES CO., Dept. 3, Boston, Mass.

AGENTS Electric Instantaneous Water Heater; something new; liberal commission; one dollar sample. Lest Electric Appliance Co., Troy, Ohio.

BEAUTIFUL WONDER OF NATURE PIN said to bring good luck to its owner. Send 25 cents. FLORENCE, 1128 INDIANA AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Unity-Chilton Baptist High School

A High grade co-educational institution. Prepares for college classes or for Christian citizenship. Classical, General, Scientific and Business causes. Special departments in Piano, Voice and Expression. A Specially Trained Faculty.

High Grade Work at a REASONABLE Cost

We invite Comparrison with other four year High Schools. Board in good families $12 to $15, according to accommodations. The President and his wife will give special attention to girls. For further information call on or address

Rev. JOHN A. POOL, PH.D., Pres.

Upchurch has just received the largest shipment of clover seed ever made to this county, consisting of nearly two tons of pecially recleaned seed.

One nice small Iron safe in good condition just the safe to keep your valuable papers from fire and thief for sale cheap J. V. Higgins the Jeweler Clanton.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

WONDERS

The white man is a conqueror.

He has explored the bowels of the earth, the depths of the sea and the perils of the air.

He has discovered the North Pole and the South Pole; penetrated the jungles, traversed the deserts and scaled the mountains.

Men talk over wires, hear music from rubber discs, ride a thousand miles by train in 24 hours, cross the Atlantic ocean in five days, get wireless dispatches, send under-seas cables, read their daily newspapers, transmit thoughts on typewriters, ride on the subway under a river a hundred feet deep, mount office buildings 60 stories high via the elevator in a few minutes, fly in the air, send wireless messages and cruise under the sea.

A majority of these and many other things have become commonplace.

They are wonders!

They demonstrate the determination of man to conquer. They tell the story of heroic struggle, sleepless nights, concentrated effort, self-sacrifice, years of study and generations of preparation.

In spite of it all scientists tell us we are in the infancy of accomplishment. That generations yet unborn, will make even greater advances than generations that have passed.

We are told that inter-communication between the inhabited planets is a matter of not far distant occomplishment. That children now living will ride in flying machines as we now ride in buggies and automobiles.

Such accomplishments and assertions from authoritative sources should stimulate the imagination and ambition of every man and woman.

The L. & N. writes of these things because it is trying to keep step with the feverish pace of accomplishment. It needs the kindly consideration and intelligent co-operation of the people.

The territory through which the L. & N. operates is wonderfully rich in possibilities. It deserves the best to be had in railway facilities. That is what the L. & N. is supplying.

But we are not content with existing conditions. We want to accomplish in our sphere what the scientists are seeking to accomplish in theirs.

We can do it only through mutual understanding, mutual good-will, mutual effort, consisting of the people and the L. & N.

Permit yourself to think of the future and the vast possibilities it holds. Then let us pull together for "the greatest good for the greatest number."

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

MR. H. J. TAYLOR DIED TUESDAY.

On Tuesday about one o'clock at his home in the eastern part of the county near Providence church, Mr. H. J. Taylor, better known as "Bud" Taylor, passed from this life to the great beyond. Mr. Taylor was one of the oldest citizens in that part of the county, having lived in that community for many years. He was a good citizen, and a righteous man. He was devoted to the church and ever ready to discharge his duty to God. He had been seriously sick for many weeks prior to his death, and his demise did not come as a shock to his friends. His remains were buried at Providence cemetery Wednesday.

Most Skin Trouble Readily Overcome

The Active Principle of a Famous Remedy Works Wonders.

Many people have marveled the way S. S. S. overcomes skin troubles. The explanation is the fact that S. S. S. works in the blood and the blood is really a most intricate and extraordinary mass of arteries and veins.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh beneath are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood streams just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and just insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood and skin, write to the Medical Department, The Swift Specific Co., 529 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow some zealous clerk's eloquence over something "just as good" as S. S. S. to fool you with the same old mineral drugs. Beware of all substitutes. Insist upon S. S. S.

— FOR —

MONUMENTS

AND GRAVESTONES

Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by

J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA.

Dr. F. C. Smith
Thorsby, Ala.
Office Masonic Bldg.
Hours—8 to 10 and 3 to 5.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street. CLANTON, ALA

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 8-11 a.m., 1-4 p.m.
Smith Building. Clanton, Ala.

COME TO THE BIG

Auction Lot Sale

AND

Free Barbecue at Cooper

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 3.

10:00 A. M., Rain or Shine.

FREE! One choice Lot! Big Barbecue Dinne Brass Band Entertainment, and Man Valuable Presents. COME ONE!! COME ALL!

One-fourth Cash; Balance in 6, 12 and 18 Month

The Big Barbecue Will be Entirely Free

And there will be music by fine brass band and a good time is guaranteed to all who attend the sale. Hear speeches by the most prominent men in the county. Also by Col. JUNE PIERCE, a famous orator and singer, who will conduct the sale. Col. Pierce will say some things of interest to the people of your county.

$5.00 in GOLD will be given to the person who brings the largest number of people to this sale on one vehicle. This applies to out-of-town people only.

Remember These Few Little Facts

That every lot is high and d and close to school and chur

These lots are in the best residence and business section Coopers.

These lots are on or near Great State Highway which being opened, and will gre increase the value of proper

This sale is what Coopers h been waiting on for a numb of years--now watch it grow.

But don't see the other fel get all the benefit. Come get ready to reap the harv that is coming to the invest Meet us at the Grand Auction Sale of Lots for wh people only, at Coopers, Thursday, September Ten o'clock, A. M., Rain or Shine.

National Developing Company

JEWELRS AUCSION SALE

It seems that the greatest center of attraction for Clanton these days is Higgins The Jeweler's auction sale of watches jewelry silverware diamonds cut glass chinaware and etc. Last Saturday Higgins offered many cheap prices on a lot of his fine articles and many sales were made of the many fine articles Higgins had and let go so awful dirt cheap we all now agree that it pays to attend these ssles the best proof being that some of the oldest and strongest citizens in town are buying Higgins The Jeweler's goods at such sacrifice price as Higgins is now offering. Next great auction sale starts Saturday morning at 10 a. m. and last till 12 o'clock next Saturday night August 29th. Better get your wedding presents and nice gifts at once at this place.

FOR SALE—Good gentle family Horse. Will work anywhere. To sell cheap for cash or on time. J. T. Rockett
7-30-3t. Cooper Ala.

FOR SALE—10 head cattle; 2 milch cows and calves—freshened March 1, and May 5, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

NOTICE

I desire to announce people that my horse the Comer horse, is back aeady for service, subject Will be in Clanton Aug and Honeycutt mill Aug
H. H.

G. O. FOSHEE LEE MADDO

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIR

Prompt Service Day or Nig

Two New Five Passenger Co

CLANTON, ALA.

Phone 100 Phone

THE

3 THE UNION 11

ilton County ngers Convene

Chilton County Singing ention was held at Shiloh near South Calera, Sept. 6.

body was called to order e President, Prof. J. W. Prayer was offered by owell of Shelby. The m committee was as fol- A. E. Teel, T. J. Jackson, Rogers, J. H. Davis and ecretary. The music for st day was directed by the ing leaders: J. H. Wil- M. V. Lowery, J. D. Hod- W. Hayes, J.H. Davis, A. N. A. Dobbs, Mr. Van- ot Montevallo, Miss Lela and John Lowery.

reports were received from te conventions and differities. Three good schools lso reported. The present ing officer, T. C. Jackson ed the convention to elect ther man in his stead. The officers for the ensuing were as follows: J. W. President; T. J. Jackson, resident; Z. J. Jones, Secy. Jackson presided during nd day. Prayer was Mr. Powell. Music for was directed by the fol- Misses Isabelle and Bet- kson of Birmingham; M. V. Lowery, J. W. W. F. Armstrong, W. R. f Birmingham, state con- Vice-President Drewry, ingham, T. C. Jackson, Vandiver of Montevallo, artin, J. H. Williams, J. kenship, W. R. Holdrich, Jefferson county con- Just before noon a ser- memory of the authors of sic books was held, di- and assisted by the fol- parties: A. E. Teel, A. son, Misses Bettie Jack- Lela Davis, J. A Blan- W. H. Conway, Misses Lee Sanders and Sula M. V. Lowery, J. H. Wil- Misses Era Sanders and ou Jackson.

llowing resolutions were Whereas, Prof. T. C. our retiring president, wn request has been ex- the present from the y of this body. There- re that we thank Prof. for his faithfulness in g over this body; not on- e appreciate his effort wielding the gavel over vention, but for his un- bors through the entire of this body.

ved that we tender our thanks to for their the preser the Don flowers pl also wish singers fo ally ask th

The nex at Cedar Thorsby t and the S

MR. LO VALUA

Editor allow me a few wo space to d as that is con ever matter, of nor how I shall we county w lieve we operation chants an sponsibili is saddled he cannot one who Clanton talk the that we concert fo tion. Co

RECEPTI

The La have plan to the tru and their ing friend at Bates I 11th, from is followi begun las purpose o fellowshi ent eleme

Miss He cial agent who has two years look over progress t expresses over the provemen stalled in

Thorsb Tuesday than dou boarding at the ope

When You Com o Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you to forget those little toilet and cles your wife said bring back

Also you want to keep in min proper place to get them is at

Not only fancy toilet articels anything else that is usually first-class Drug Store. Patent

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft d front, ice cream, etc. COME

Langston Drug
Jemison, Ala.

MISSING

BIG ot Sale
at Cooper
TEMBER 3.
or Shine.
Big Barbecue Dinne
rtainment, and Man
E!! COME ALL!
, 12 and 18 Month
nember These Few Little Fact
at every lot is high and c close to school and churc ese lots are in the best r ce and business sections
ers.
ese lots are on or near t
t State Highway which g opened, and will grea ase the value of proper is sale is what Coopers h waiting on for a numb
ars--now watch it grow.
t don't see the other fell ll the benefit. Come a ready to reap the harv
is coming to the investo Sale of Lots for whi sday, September 3
ne.
veloping ny gentle k any-r cash
ett Ala. attle; 2
reshen-1914. owell.
NOTICE
I desire to announce people that my horse k
the Comer horse, is back aeady for service, subject Will be in Clanton Aug and Honeycutt mill Aug
H. H. H
LEE MADDO
BILES FOR HIR
rvice Day or Nigh
Five Passenger Ca
LANTON, ALA.
Phone

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 22

lton County ngers Convene

Chilton County Singing ention was held at Shiloh near South Calera, Sept. 5.

body was called to order e President, Prot. J. W. Prayer was offered by Powell of Shelby. The m committee was as fol- A. E. Teel, T. J. Jackson, Rogers, J. H. Davis and ecretary. The music for t day was directed by the ing leaders: J. H. Wil- M. V. Lowery, J. D. Hod- W. Hayes, J.H. Davis, A. N. A. Dobbs, Mr. Van- of Montevallo, Miss Lela and John Lowery.

eports were received from te conventions and differ- ities. Three good schools also reported. The present ing officer, T. C. Jackson d the convention to elect her man in his stead. The officers for the ensuing were as follows: J. W. President; T. J. Jackson, ident; Z. J. Jones, Secy. kson presided during d day. Prayer was r. Powell. Music for was directed by the fol- Misses Isabelle and Bet- son of Birmingham; M. V. Lowery, J. W. W. F. Armstrong, W. R. of Birmingham, state con- Vice-President Drewry, ingham, T. C. Jackson, Vandiver of Montevallo, Martin, J. H. Williams, J. kenship, W. R. Holdrich, rek Jefferson county con- ion. Just before noon a ser- in memory of the authors of usic books was held, di- and assisted by the fol- g parties: A. E. Teel, A. kson, Misses Bettie Jack- d Lela Davis, J. A Blan- p, W. H. Conway, Misses Lee Sanders and Sula M. V. Lowery, J. H. Wil- Misses Era Sanders and Lou Jackson.

llowing resolutions were Whereas, Prof. T. C. our retiring president, n request has been ex- the present from the of this body. There- e that we thank Prof. for his faithfulness in over this body; not on- e appreciate his effort wielding the gavel over vention, but for his un- bors through the entire of this body.

ved that we tender our thanks to the people of Shiloh for their kindness to us during the present session. We thank the Donor for the lovely flowers placed in our midst. We also wish to thank the visiting singers for their visit, and cordially ask them to come again.

The next session will be held at Cedar Grove church near Thorsby the 1st Sunday in May and the Saturday before, 1915.

J. W. Hayes, Pres.
Z. J. Jones, Secy.

MR. LOWERY MAKES VALUABLE SUGGESTION

Editor Union-Banner: Please allow me space in your paper for a few words. I shall not take space to discuss the war question, as that is being discussed pro and con everywhere. It is not a matter, of the legality of the war, nor how long it will last, but how shall we best take care of our county while it does last? I believe we can best do it by co-operation among farmers, merchants and bankers. If the responsibility of carryiny the load is saddled on the cotton farmer, he cannot do it. So let's everyone who is interested, come to Clanton on September 15th and talk the matter over to-gether, that we may be able to act in concert for our mutual protection. Come everybodv.

Respectfully,
W. P. Lowery.

RECEPTION AT THORSBY INSTITUTE.

The Ladies Guild of Thorsby have planned to give a reception to the trustees, faculty, students and their parents and contributing friends of Thorsby Institute, at Bates Hall, Friday, September 11th, from 7:30 to 10 p. m. This is following a precedent already begun last year, and is for the purpose of promoting a spirit of fellowship among the constituent elements of the school.

Miss Helen C. Jenkins, financial agent of Thorsby Institute, who has been absent from here two years, is making a visit to look over the field and note the progress that is being made. She expresses surprise and delight over the many substantial improvements that have been installed in her absence.

Thorsby Institute opened on Tuesday morning, with more than double the number of boarding students ever enrolled at the opening of the school.

Athletic Meet At Clanton.

The progressive school authorities of Clanton, with the county superintendent of education, have decided to hold a series of athletic meets during the current school year. The first of these will be held Saturday September 19th, beginning promptly at one o'clock, p. m.

There will be two classes of entries in each event. Class B will consist of all contestants weighing between 85 and 115 pounds. The events will be as follows: High jump, standing high jump, standing broad jump, running broad jump, pole vault, short put, base ball throw, potato race, tug of war, three legged race, wheel barrow race, sack race, 50 yard dash, 100 yard dash 220 yard dash, endurance race, relay race, and pick-a-back race. There will also be games of basket ball, volley ball, ball passing and tag games.

Many of of these games, races, and contests are as suitable for girls and women as for men and boys, and it is to be hoped that they will enter into the spirit of the oecasion and help make the day a success.

This is intended to be everybodv's day, and people from all over the county will be present, and enter the contests.

C. W. Reynolds of Jemison was here the first of the week on business.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

Saturday many good problems of our people were well discussed at Shiloh church by Revs. M. J. Parrish, F.W.C. Bice, W. H. Connell, John A. Pool, T. J. Deason, and H. G. Williams. The entire day was spent in a most profitable way.

On Sunday we enjoyed another day of good sermons and profitable speeches. A number of prominent Baptists of Clanton were present, among whom were: Prof. J. J. Pickens and Judge E. B. Deason. Rev. John A. Pool preached at 11 o'clock. In the afternoon Profs. I. L. Johnson and Howard Roper presented some good speeches on Sunday School work. Other short talks were made by different speakers.

Horace G. Williams, Secy.

HARP AND HARMONY MUSICAL CONTEST

All Harp and Harmony Singers interested in the contemplated vocal music contest at the Chilton County Fair, will please let me hear from them at once, So that I may know what steps to take toward organizing the classes etc. for the occasion.

Respectfully,
J. W. Hayes.

Miss Nannie Robinson of Salem visited friends here Saturday and Sunday.

SEPTEMBER TERM PROBATE COURT.

Burl Martin, d. r. w., nol prossed.

Wilbur Bledsoe, betting, continued.

Lee Stinger, betting continued.

Jene Webb, betting, continued.

Jewel Milton d. r. w., nolle prossed.

Steve McCall, s. l., continued.

Bennie Mitchell, adultery, waived to grand jury, bond $200.

Lena Sanders, adultery, waived to grand jury, bond $200.

Jim Williams, riding trains, plead guilty, fine $10.

Leroy Miller, riding trains, plead guilty, fine $10 and costs.

Ronzie Busby, Slander, waiv- to grand jury, bond $200.

Junior Busby, p. d., nol prossed

Junior Busby, s. l., discharged.

Will Jones, a. and b., wived to grand jury, bond $200.

William Grant, a. l., continued.

Morvin Smith, a. and b., discharged.

Will Smith, a. b. nol prossed.

Tom Lucas, failure to work roads, plead guilty, fine $1.

Josephus Jones, trespassing, waived to grand jury, bond $150.

Jack Depositer, a. and b., continued.

G. L. Blalock a. and b., waived to grand jury.

S. J. Reynolds, a. and b., waived to grand jury, bond $150.

Albert Reynolds, d. r. w., waived to grand jury, bond, $150

Will Fountain, trespassing, waived to grand jury, bond $150.

Morgan Collins, trespassing, waived to grand jury, bond $150.

Knoxie Cashett failure to work roads, plead guilty, fine $1.

Robert Smith, a. and b., nolle prossed.

Pate Cleckler, failure to work roads, plead guilty, fine $2.

$1,000 Stolen At Thorsby.

On last Monday night a package containing $1,000 in currency was stolen from the express office at Thorsby. The money did not belong to the express company, but was a shipment of bills that was made by a Birmingham bank to the bank at Thorsby. A young man about 17 years old, whose name is Smith, an employee at the depot, is alleged to secured the money. He left that night for Calera in an auto. At that place he engaged another car to carry him to Birmingham. At this time nothing definite has been learned of his arrest.

MEANING OF JUDGE ADAMS IN RESOLUTION

Register Chilton 3 April 2

"Whereas, all Europe is now engaged in war and bloodshed, and whereas, our own country is threatened with business stagnation, and whereas, we are confronted with no market for cotton, and cotton being the only means through which we of the south get money to do business, and whereas, the farmers and merchants, indeed all business men, depend largely on the sale of cotton, therefore, be it

"Resolved, first, that we, the business men and merchants of Chilton County, most earnestly recommend that we do what we can to promote a system of co-operation among the bankers business men and farmers, to the end that we mav obtain through the warehouse system as suggested by Congress, the means to handle the cotton crop.

"Be it resolved, second, that in view of the grave and serious condition of our country on account of the war in the east, that it is the sense of this convention of business men assembled Sept. 4th, 1914, that all political strife and agitation cease, and that we turn our hearts and hands to the relief of all people of all parties."

The foregoing resolutions met with opposition at the merchants and business mens convention on the4th inst., and were withdrawn by the author. I did not intend by the resolutions, to interfere with any individual's political views, or that of any political party (and they speak for themselves). My only purpose was to suggest that all parties for the present cease firing until the question which is above all other questions at this time, to-wit: the co-operation of the people in making some disposition of their cotton crop, for I feared if the potitical battle which is now going on in this county is to continue, we can do but little in our efforts to co-operate on this all-important matter. Contending armies have been known to raise the flag of truce on the battlefield and the firing of the deadly weapons cease. I did hope that, while such a cloud of disappointment in a business way hung over our people, we could stop for a little while until better things were attended to.

That's all. Sincerely,
S. M. ADAMS.

[Note—The above article is published at the request of Judge Adams. He feels that its publication will cause him to be better understood. It is through courtesy to him that we give it spree.—Editor.]

Tax Notice!

Collector's and Assessor's Only Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes for Chilton County for the year 1914, and assessing the taxes for the year 1915: Hours 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jemison,	Beat	2	October	1	1914.
Thorsby	"	9	"	2	"
Cooper,	"	10	"	3	"
Maplesville,	"	7	"	5	"
Shoults,	"	7	"	6	"
Stanton,	"	8	"	7	"
Riderville,	"	8	"	8	"
Pletcher,	"	15	"	9	"
Kincheon,	"	6	"	10	"
Minooka,	"	13	"	12	"
Concord,	"	13	"	13	"
Mars Hill,	"	2	"	14	"
Macedonia,	"	14	"	15	"
Benson,	"	3	"	16	"
Culp School House	"	15	"	17	"
Robinson's Store	"	12	"	19	"
Mineral Springs,	"	12	"	20	"
Mullins Academy	"	1	"	21	"
Cane Creek	"	11	"	22	"
Providence	"	16	"	23	"
Clanton, Beat 4, Oct. 24 to 31, Nov. 7 to 14					"
Mountain Creek	Beat	5	Nov.	3	"
Verbena,	"	5	"	4	"
Evergreen	"	10	"	5	"
Enterprise	"	6	"	6	"

Take notice that under the present law we only make one round, and you are requested to meet us in the Beat in which you live. If for any reason you are unable to meet us in your own Beat, you will please meet us at Clanton on the days given there.

After the completion of the above round, and beginning on November 16, 1914, all assessments become delinquent, and after December 31, 1914, all taxes become delinquent. Therefore, if you wish to avoid payment of a 50c fee, you will please assess before Nov. 16, and pay before Dec. 31, 1914.

J. N. DENNIS, Tax Assessor. J. D. COLLINS, Tax Collector.

When You Come
o Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you don't want to forget those little toilet and fancy articles your wife said bring back with you.

Also you want to keep in mind that the proper place to get them is at our store.

Not only fancy toilet articels, but also anything else that is usually kept in a first-class Drug Store. Patent Medicines.

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft drinks at the front, ice cream, etc. COME to see us.

Langston Drug Co.,
Jemison, Ala.

Something For Your Money

We will send you the MONTGOMERY DAILY TIMES and he UNION-BANNER one year for $2.00.

We will send you The UNION-BANNER and the ALABAMA WEEKLY TIMES one year for $1.00.

These prices are strictly cash-in-advance, and are applied to old and new subscribers of The Union-Banner.

This is the best newspaper offer ever made, and should appeal to every reader of this advertisement. Think of what it means. A first class daily paper carrying all the news of the world the nation and the state, and your weekly home paper with all the county news—both of these for ONLY TWO DOLLARS.

Send your order now to

The UNION-BANNER,
CLANTON, ALA.

MISSING ISSUE

NEGLECT PARIS TO TURN ALLIES' LEFT

INVADERS REACH RHEIMS, BUT MAUBEUGE HOLDS OUT—VIOLENT FIGHTING.

GERMAN RIGHT IS STOPPED

Force of Cavalry and Artillery Advancing on Campeigne Repulsed and Forced to Abandon Guns—Teutons Win in Center.

Paris.—The war office at Bordeaux late sent the following communication to the press bureau here:

"On our left the enemy appears to neglect Paris to pursue its turning movement. It has reached La Fere-sous-Jouarre (department of Seine and Marne, 11 miles east of Meaux), passed Rheims and descended on the west bank of the river in Argonne. This maneuver has not succeeded more than on preceding days.

"On our right, in Lorraine and in Vosges, the fighting proceeds with alternative fortunes. Maubeuge, which is being violently bombarded, resists vigorously."

London.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company from Antwerp, reaching here by way of Ostend, says that it seems that the attempt of the Germans to envelop the left wing of the allies has been frustrated.

A big force of German cavalry advancing on Compiegne has been repulsed and obliged to abandon several pieces of artillery.

The correspondent says:

"It is learned on good authority that the advance movement of the German right wing has been checked for the last two days under pressure from the left wing of the allies. The enemy has been compelled to retire on St. Quentin. A big force of German cavalry that was advancing on Compeigne was vigorously repulsed and forced to abandon several pieces of artillery. It appears that the attempt to envelop the allies' left wing was frustrated."

AUSTRIAN ARMY IS ROUTED

40,000 Prisoners Taken by Russians in East Prussia—Over 200 Guns Were Captured.

Petrograd (St. Petersburg).—The following official report on the seven-day battle, in which five Austrian army corps were forced to retreat in utter rout, suffering the loss of 40,000 prisoners, besides a tremendous loss in killed and wounded, was given out by the war office here:

"Seven days of the most stubborn fighting in Eastern Galicia have resulted in complete victory for the Russian arms. Five Austrian army corps were completely routed and are retreating in disorder to the westward, abandonig their arms and baggage. Besides an enormous number of killed, the Austrians lost no fewer than 40,000 prisoners, including many generals.

"The roads of retreat of the Austrians are so incumbered with their carts, guns and impedimenta pursuing troops are unable to use the roads. Panic is spreading among the Austrian troops.

"During the seven days of fighting the Russians have taken more than 200 guns, several regimental colors and about 70,000 prisoners in all engagements.

RUSSIANS TO HELP IN FRANCE

Report Sent Out That 72,000 Men Were Landed in Scotland and Later Taken to Ostend.

New York.—A Russian army of 72,000 men, transported from Archangel, Russia, was landed at Aberdeen, on the east coast of Scotland, and conveyed on special trains to Harwich, Grimsby and Dover, where transports were waiting to take them to Ostend, in Belgium, according to officers and passengers of the Cunard liner Mauretania, which reached here from Liverpool.

Every precaution was taken by the English and Russian military authorities, persons on the Mauretania said, to keep the fact that foreign soldiers were being transported to England from becoming known, and the service on the East Coast railway lines was suspended during the 17 hours the troop trains were on their journey. Those on the Mauretania who made these statements said they believed the Russians were to be joined at Ostend by British marines waiting there to receive them and that the combined forces would co-operate with the Belgian army at Antwerp.

Lull in Fighting.

Paris.—In an official statement the war office says:

"There has been no contact with the German forces in the region of Compiegne and Senlis lately. Precautions have been taken to stop any offensive movement of the enemy."

Belfort, France.—A German aeroplane dropped several shells here. The missiles made much noise, but did no damage. The aviator, to avoid the fire of the Belfort forts, made a dash over Swiss territory.

GABRIEL SARTORI

Gabriel Sartori, a noted aviator, sailed from New York on the French liner Rochambeau to take his place in the French reservists' aviation corps.

GERMANS CAPTURE AMIENS

Mayor Surrenders to Prevent Killing of Inhabitants—City is 70 Miles North of Paris.

London.—A dispatch from Amiens, France, to the Daily Mail declares that the Germans have taken possesion of Amiens, after three days' fighting.

Amiens is the capital of the department of Somme. It is 70 miles directly north of Paris. It is a manufacturing city, has a population of 90,000 and is on the line of the railroad to Boulogne. It is about 50 miles to the west of La Fere and other points in the department of Aisne, where there has been fighting during the past few days between the allied armies and the Germans.

"A party of uhlans entered Amiens," says the Mail. "After a brief reconnoissance they retired to the German main body at Camon. A half hour later they returned, accompanied by an envoy bearing a white flag. The latter interviewed Mayor Figuet at the town hall.

"After an hour's discussion the mayor appeared in front of the town hall with trumpeters and oficially announced the surrender of the city. He urged that the citizens make no disturbance.

"Later the mayor and the municipal councillors drove out in carriages to pay a formal visit to the Grman commander, who told them that they would be held responsible with their lives for the good conduct of the citizens.

"The Germans thereupon went to the town hall, where they hauled down the French flag and hoisted the German colors. The German troops entered the city, singing as they came 'Die Wacht am Rhein' and 'Deutschland Uber Alles.'"

RUSSIANS CAPTURE LEMBERG

Austrians Cut to Pieces at Capital of Galicia—Are Practically Out of the War.

London.—A Times dispatch from Petrograd (St. Petersburg) says:

"Army headquarters reports that, thanks to their highly developed railway system, superior German forces concentrated from all parts on the front and flung themselves against about two of our army corps. These were exposed to an extremely violent fire from the big guns, which inflicted large losses.

"According to reports received here, our troops fought heroically. Gens. Samsonoff, Martos and Pestitch and several staff officers have fallen. All possible measures to amend this distressing event are being taken.

"On the Austrian front stubborn fighting continues."

VALLEY OF SOMME TAKEN

Teuton's Right Wing Pushes a Little Closer to Paris—La Fere Taken After Bloody Battle.

London.—A French dispatch to the Times says:

"The Valley of the Somme has been abandoned. La Fere has been taken, after a bloody combat. We were obliged to retire.

"The right wing of the Germans," says the correspondent, "is too far advanced, and there is a chance that it will be cut and caught between two fires if the British should be found in force. Our center is resting very well, and the right wing of our army appears to be taking the offensive."

Paris.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Ostend says that the Independence Belge of Brussels is authority for the statement that the Germans are fortifying the environs of Brussels and that cemeteries have been transformed into redoubts.

Ottawa.—The Canadian government, it was learned, is considering cancelling German patents and copyrights held in Canada. The question is being discussed with the British board of trade.

AUSTRIANS BEATEN AGAIN BY RUSSIA

AUSTRIAN RETREAT BECAME A ROUT, COSSACKS PURSUING. BATTLE LASTS OVER WEEK.

GERMANS TO THE RESCUE

Colossal Battle Extends for About 620 Miles, and Three Million Russians and Austrians Are Engaged.

London—A dispatch from Petrograd quotes an official statement as declaring that the Russians have defeated the Austrians between Lublin and Kholm.

Five thousand Austrians were taken prisoners.

A Milan dispatch to the Daily Mail says the Russians have occupied Czernowitz without resistance.

Geneva (via Paris).—Reports reaching here from Italy declare the entire Austrian army has been flung back on the Carpathians. Their retreat, the report says, is becoming a rout, with Cossacks pursuing the Austrians. According to reports from Berlin, great numbers of German troops are being withdrawn from the French and German frontiers. These soldiers, with forces from Bavaria and Wurtemberg, are going to the Vistula to meet the Russians.

London.—A Vienna dispatch, sent by indirect route to the Exchange Telegraph Company, says:

"This is the seventh day of the colossal battle, in which about 3,000,000 Russians and Austrians are engaged. The battle front extends along about 20 miles from Prussia in the north to the Dniester in the south.

"The Russians were burning for a fight in the south, and their supreme effort was directed toward annihilating the entire Austrian army in that region, and thus remove it from their flank before beginning the real attack on Germany.

ALLIES IN STUBBORN MOOD

All Northern Forts of France, With Exception of Maubeuge, Claimed by the Germans.

Paris.—An official communication was issued here announcing that three forts had fallen at Maubeuge, a fortress of the first class in Nord.

A further official statement says:

"The press bureau at Bordeaux telegraphed to the military governor of Paris:

"First—The respective situations of the German and French armies on the left wing have not undergone any interesting change. The enveloping movement of the enemy has been definitely checked.

"Second — The situation is unchanged in the center and on the right in Lorraine and the Vosges.

"At Paris, from which the enemy's armies are going farther away, the defensive works are proceeding actively.

"At Maubeuge the bombardment continues with extreme violence. The city resists despite the destruction of three forts."

The following communication was issued by the governor of Paris:

"The German army continues to move farther away from Paris toward the southeast.

"According to information, the enemy's troops have evacuated the region of Compiegne and Senlis."

Military critics of most of the French papers, whose hypotheses are without official support, agree that the Germans found the entrenched camp of the allies around Paris too strong and suddenly interrupted their offensive tactics to find a weak spot.

JADAR CALLED A SHAMBLES

Austrian Dead Estimated at Between 30,000 and 32,000—Many Guns Have Been Captured.

Nish, Servia.—According to the official organ Srpski Novine, the following spoil was captured by the Servians in the battle of Jadar:

A hundred cannon, of which 92 were field guns, eight siege guns, 2,500 horses, three hospitals of 3,000 beds, 37 mitralleuses, 37,000 mauser rifles, 114 full caisons containing 500 shells for each cannon, ammunition and 4,600 prisoners, including a large number of officers and one military bank with its conductor. Three regimental cash boxes full of money and one aeroplane also was taken.

The Austrian dead are estimated to number between 30,000 and 32,000.

Gen. Yovanovitch reports that he alone had 10,000 of the enemy's bodies buried. Other Servian generals' reports of their successes have not yet been received.

Dropped Bombs on Ghent.

London.—A dispatch to the Reuter telegram Compan from Ghent says: "A Taube aeroplane passed over the town at a great height and dropped two bombs. There was no loss of life."

War Levy Imposed.

London.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Ostend quotes reservists from Lille as saying that a war levy of $40,000,000 has been imposed in the district by the Germans.

ADMIRAL JELLICOE

Admiral Jellicoe who has been placed in supreme command of all the British home fleets.

FRENCH CAPITAL IS MOVED

Quitting of Paris Is a War Measure. Transfer Headquarters to Bordeaux Temporarily.

Paris.—A proclamation has just been issued by the government announcing that the government departments will be transferred temporarily to Bordeaux.

The proclamation was issued by the minister of the interior, who said the decision had been taken solely upon the demand of the military authorities because the fortified places of Paris, while not necessarily likely to be attacked, would become the pivot of the field operations of the two armies.

The building of supplementary defense works is proceeding vigorously. Several of the gates of Paris were closed to traffic.

London.—The allies, still battling desperately to check the steady advance of the Germans toward Paris, held their own, with the possible exception of the extreme French left wing, according to latest information from Paris.

In East Prussia and Galicia both Russians and German claimed victory. The Austrians were overwhelmingly defeated.

The Russians claimed to hold Lemburg, the capital of Austrian Galicia, and the report was unofficially corroborated from Vienna.

Stupendous losses were reported on all sides. The Russians declare that they buried 15,000 Austrian dead on the battlefield.

The battle line of the allies' left wing extended from Montdidier to the forest of Compiegne, ranging from 55 to 45 miles from the outer defense of Paris, fighting on the French left being considerably nearer Paris.

The heaviest fighting was reported from Montdidier, where the German infantry in great strength is making a desperate effort to break through the allied lines. The object of the Germans apparently is to break through the enemy's center, separating the allies into two forces.

The Germans also were reported to be striving to flank the French left and turn it back on the center. The success of such a move would give a portion of the German army a road to Paris forts, while the rest held off the main army of the allies.

Peking.—The German legation has protested to the foreign office against an alleged infringement of China's neutrality by Japan. The protest followed the landing of a Japanese division at the newly opened port of Lung-Kow, 100 miles north of Tsing-Tau.

News of the Japanese landing causcd no surprise here, as the Japanese legation several days ago requested the foreign office to remove the limit of the 50 kilometers (about 30 miles) radius prescribed by the Chinese as the fighting area around Tsing-Tau. The foreign office did not comply with the request, but it was understood that the Chinese troops would be instructed not to oppose the Japanese.

The Chinese officials are described as incensed, but afraid of doing anything that might afford the Japanese a cause for territorial or other exactions.

Whether British forces will cross Shantung Peninsula with the Japanese is not divulged, but the point is much discussed here.

Washington.—The British embassy has been informed by a cable from London that German officers had gone to Constantinople to take charge of the Turkish army and that a declaration of war from Turkey was expected.

Washington.—The Turkish ambassador, A. Rustem Bey, expressed doubt that the Turkish army was mobilizing to fight on the side of Germany. He said the Turkish army was mobilized three weeks ago.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Heflin will hold its town election on the 21st.

Corn is turning out better in Butler than was thought.

Moulton will hold its town election September 21.

A quarry of fine slate has been discovered in Chilton.

No boll weevils have appeared in the Adler section of Perry.

J. D. Leake has been appointed game warden of Baldwin.

Government geodetic surveyors are at work in Lawrence county.

Cotton about Valley Head is turning out unusually well.

A still was found under the floor of John O'Shield's house in DeKalb.

There is a movement to organize the newspaper men of the wire grass counties.

The money necessary to build the state aid road from Dadeville to Tallassee has been put in bank.

It is believed that Gadsden plans will have all they can do as a result of the war, although the outcome is still in doubt. Every industry is in full operation with the exception of the Dwight mills, which are running four and one-half days.

Judge John B. Shields, of Jasper, recently nominated by the Republican State executive committee as the Republican standard-bearer for governor, announced his official acceptance of the nomination in a letter to Chairman Pope M. Long, of the State Republican committee.

A petition is being circulated throughout Lamar county by good reads advocates asking the county commissioners to call an election for a bond issue for the purpose of building good roads all over the county. It is meeting with a great deal of enthusiasm and it seems that an election will be called in November.

At a meeting of the Anniston Chamber of Commerce, attended by several of the foremost shippers and a number of prominent business and professional men of the city, vigorous protest was entered against the proposed increase in rates on coal to Anniston, and resolutions were adopted urging the Alabama railroad commission to deny the petition of the railroads for the increase.

Forty-four members of regular and special committees of the Alabama Bar Association were appointed by Hon. Ray Rushton, president, and announced by Col. Alex Troy, secretary of the association. There were eight regular committees and two of special appointment named. In addition to the committees, C. S. McDowell, Jr., of Eufaula, J. K. Dixon of Talladega, and W. W. Callahan of Decatur were named as delegates to the American Bar Association.

"While the cotton situation as it has appeared since the beginning of the European war has not been fully met, and while cotton is still without a market, it is felt that, from the earnest and united action everywhere being given to the subject, within a short while conditions will be not only considerably improved, but be very largely fashioned to their normal basis," says the weekly cotton bulletin of the Department of Agriculture. The bulletin in this issue deals altogether with the crisis which the cotton situation has met and has a touch of optimism all through it. It gives accounts of the earnest action being taken by the different states and organizations and thinks this effort can result only in a solution of the problem.

Every citizen of Alabama, say Uncle Sam's statisticians, owes $5.95 as his or her share of the state's debt—or did on June 30, 1912, which is near enough for all practical purposes, which is just $2.38 above the average per capita of all the states of the nation. According to figures just compiled, the total debt of Alabama is $12,132,375, or 3.1 per cent of the aggregate indebtedness of all the 48 states, which runs to $422,796,525. Of the state debt, $12,644,097 is funded at interest rates running from 2 to 5 per cent, and $488,278 is of the floating variety. The debt on the Agricultural and Mechanical College, however, carries 8 per cent interest, as does that of the university, according to the government report.

A bean mill to crush beans for cattle food is to be established at Opp.

W. J. Burgess of Covington county, has developed cotton that has 16 locks to the boll.

C. Black and a man named Tankersley used a monkey wrench with telling effect and made their escape from the Cullman jail. A door was taken off the hinges and the two men left for parts unknown. Black was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary and was awaiting the result of an appeal. Tankersley was charged with assault with a weapon.

Luverne has received more than 50 bales of new cotton.

There will be a bumper crop of sweet potatoes in Barbour county, in fact, one of the best ever harvested, according to reports from farmers in that county.

The report of the grand jury at Vernon to Judge Bernard Harwood states that 250 witnesses were examined during the last week and 83 true bills returned, and that out of this number only one was for homicide and that nine-tenths of the bills were against moonshiners.

Too Dangerous to Ove

Kidney trouble is too often ig and too often neglected. But the give early signals of distress that not be mistaken. Backache, hea dizzy spells, rheumatic pains, quent, scanty or painful urination signs of kidney weakness and sh be mistaken.

When these warnings appear, use Kidney Pills, the reliable, stro strongly recommended kidney remedy the medicine by drinking water, hold to good habits and a serious of kidney disease may be avoided. testimony is the best proof of merit.

An Alabama Case.

Mrs. John H. Harms, 508 S. Jefferson St., Mobile, Ala., says: "Kidney trouble came on me suddenly and I was in pain day and night. I went from bad to worse and rheumatic pains drove me almost frantic. I got weak and helpless and my joints swelled so badly I couldn't do a thing. When almost ready to give up, I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me to good health. The cure has lasted for four years."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N.Y.

SORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak eye without pain. Ask your druggist or write SALTER'S. Only from Reform Drug Co., 68 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia.

Kodakers, Listen!

We develop your films absolutely free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Send for price list. Prompt attention to mail order for Eastman films. Fresh stock always on hand. Mail orders solicited.

GRIFFITH & SCHLECTER
BIRMINGHAM ALA.

Poverty is no disgrace, but it can't always say as much.

We are never too old to learn things that are of no use to us.

Psychological.

"I've found out one thing."

"And what is that?"

"When prices soar spirits rise."

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will in any case, and if taken then the fever will not return. 25c.

They Might.

"They say that money will do anything in New York."

"Well?"

"Do they ever lease the roads for parades on stormy days?"

Rare Minerals in Tasmania.

The number of rare minerals known to exist in Tasmania is constantly being added to, and the latest addition is molybdenite, which is used for the manufacture of "molybdenum steel," to which it gives a special hardness and toughness that makes it suitable for use in propeller shafts, gun barrels, boilers. It is also used, to a limited extent, in the making of potash and other things. The price of molybdenite is now $2,500 a ton, or four times the present price.

Popular Fallacies.

1. That mosquitoes only bite at night.
2. That mosquitoes only bite in the day.
3. That mosquito bites will not swell if you don't scratch 'em.
4. That if you hold your breath you can catch a mosquito and stop his bite.

My experience is that mosquitoes only bite once (in the same way that they only live one day at a time); that their bites will swell if you don't scratch 'em (but rub them with sandpaper and the edge of a saw instead); and that if you hold your breath you can catch a mosquito and slay it (provided you have a shotgun in each hand and be a good shot).

FOOD FACTS
What An M. D. Learned.

A prominent Georgia physician, through a food experience, learned what makes public.

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients gain very rapidly in flesh as I did in strength and weight.

"I was in such a low state of health I had to give up my work entirely and went to the mountains of Tennessee, but two months there did not benefit me; in fact, I was not quite as well as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain me and it became plain that I must quit work. Then I began to use Grape-Nuts and in two weeks I could walk without fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks the good of all sufferers, I consider it a duty to make these facts public." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts when regular food does not seem to agree with the body, works wonders. "There's a Reason."

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

KAISER'S DAUGHTER

Duke and this d toria Louis topics of c many fust
the great sibility of exhaustive doings of and her h goings, th
their plans
the younge
minor Ger come the nent.

Duche tiring refo molder. I her husba eigns of B ace life, a the Regen Mecklenbu
in a direct

Brunswick awaited a reversion to the flourished before 1884, when the last duke bloss butlers and maitres d'hotel, who rem impending revival of the famous Brunswick German tedium and solemnity. "Wait," was omes into his own." Instead, the new sov way observed by Prussia's court on all ex

BRITAIN'S WAR SEC

y have been the attempts to w Lord Kitchener. Among he best story is that of the who handed his card to the
when he returned from South with the remark, "Sir, I repreal paper."
y interesting," responded Lord turning his back on the interviewer.
her story comes from Aber-Lord Kitchener was discovered
ing at Aberdeen station, hav-ed there on his way to Balby the night express. The reporter of the evening pa-on the platform, and apd the great man, explaining represented a local journal.
meet you," said his lordship.
ell me, do you know Aberdeen
"Yes," said the youth, delight-
d his victim so complaisant.
ut," said Lord Kitchener.
ou can tell me where I can ood barber, one who really shaves well."
an, and he led his lordship to a barber
h, but the youth interposed with a requ ken to Lord Kitchener. He hoped for mo rtainly," responded the field marshal hear the most obliging and intelligent inhabita
The lad went back to his editor rather expert was enthusiastic. "Write every supplied a string of headings, in which iew With Our Representative This Morni

MRS. WILLIAM GRAVES

"I look
ure to the Sharp, wif whom Pre pointed as republic.
at Paris to diplomatic and tastes sympathy
my husba entific ten will rejoic
ings that
I can say
the prospe
The w cessor is
She is ab march of learning.
prepossess cision. S and delive ance she d she wears it in a soft, becoming style d her skin fair and rosy. She is dignified ies herself with an admirable air of comp painting and tree study.

JOAQUIN BERNARDO

retirement recently of Don Bernardo Calvo as Costa inister to the United States the culmination of one of the markable careers in the annals macy. Senor Calvo was for the representative of Costa Washington and for many on of the diplomatic corps.
presented credentials to Presirrison in 1891, and has sur-changes of administration own country.
ng his literary works is a his-Costa Rica. He is especially own, however, for his advocloser relations of the Amerime of better understanding ne republics. He was active establishment of the Bureau of Republics, since changed to -American Union; was a ent in the Central American nference in Washington in which the Central American Justice was established at Cartago, Costa the establishment of a trans-American expects to see its completion in the ne

Too Dangerous to Ov

Kidney trouble is too often and too often neglected. But give early signals of distress that not be mistaken. Backache, h dizzy spells, rheumatic pains, quent, scanty or painful urinati signs of kidney weakness and be mistaken.

When these warnings appear, Kidney Pills, the reliable, strongly recommended kidney reme the medicine by drinking water hold to good habits and a serious of kidney disease may be avoided. testimony is the best proof of merit.

An Alabama Case.

Mrs. John H. Harms, 508 S. Jefferson St., Mobile, Ala., says: "Kidney trouble came on me suddenly and I was in pain day and night. I went from bad to worse and rheumatic pains drove me almost frantic. I got weak and helpless and my joints swelled so badly I couldn't do a thing. When almost ready to give up, I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and they me to good health. The cure has for four years."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a

DOAN'S KID PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO

SORE EY

Dr. Salter's Eye Lo

relieves and cures sore and inflam 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak e without pain. Ask your druggist or SALTER'S. Only from Reform M 68 S. Broad, Atlanta, Geo

Kodakers, Lis

We develop your films absolutely Prints from 2c to 5c each. Send order for Eastman films. Fresh always on hand. Mail orders

GRIFFITH & SCHLEG

BIRMINGHAM AL

Poverty is no disgrace, but can't always say as much.

We are never too old to le things that are of no use to Psychological.

"I've found out one thing."

"And what is that?"

"When prices soar spirits st

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prep pecially for Malaria or Chi Fever. Five or six doses wi any case, and if taken then a the fever will not return. 25c

They Might.

"They say that money will thing in New York."

"Well?"

"Do they ever lease the sub parades on stormy days?"

Rare Minerals in Tasma

The number of rare minera to exist in Tasmania is cons ing added to, and the latest molybdenite, which is used fo ufacture of "molybdenum st which it gives a special hardn toughness that makes it suit use in propeller shafts, gu boilers. It is also used, to le tent, in the making of potte and other things. The price of denite is now $2,500 a ton, or four times the present price

Popular Fallacies.

1. That mosquitoes only bite
2. That mosquitoes only day.
3. That mosquito bites won you don't scratch 'em.
4. That if you hold your b can catch a mosquito and s

My experience is that m only bite once (in the sam that they only live one time); that their bites won you don't scratch 'em (bu with sandpaper and the edge saw instead); and that if your breath you can catch quito and slay it (provided a shotgun in each hand a good shot).

FOOD FACTS

What An M. D. Learn

A prominent Georgia physic through a food experience w makes public.

"It was my own experien first led me to advocate Gra food and I also know, from prescribed it to convalescen other weak patients, that the wonderful rebuilder and rest nerve and brain tissue, as well cle. It improves the digesti sick patients gain very rapid as I did in strength and weigh

"I was in such a low state had to give up my work entir went to the mountains of thi but two months there did not me; in fact, I was not quite as when I left home.

"My food did not sustain it became plain that I must Then I began to use Grape-N and in two weeks I could wal without fatigue, and in five w turned to my home and practi ing up hard work again. Sin time I have felt as well and as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks all sufferers, I consider it a make these facts public." Nam by Postum Co., Battle Creek, M

Trial 10 days of Grape-Nuts regular food does not seem to the body, works wonders. "There Reason."

Look in pkgs. for the famous book, "The Road to Wellville."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE PUBLIC EYE

KAISER'S DAUGHTER POPULAR

Duke Ernest August of Brunswick and his duchess, born Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia, were the chief topics of conversation throughout Germany just before the breaking out of the great war. In fact, the then possibility of war was lost sight of in the exhaustive discussions of the daily doings of the kaiser's only daughter and her husband, their comings and goings, their method of living and their plans for the future. Although the youngest of the sovereigns of the minor German states they have become the most interesting and prominent.

Duchess Victoria Louise is an untiring reformer, changer, meddler and molder. Immediately after she and her husband were installed as sovereigns of Brunswick the court and palace life, as conducted since 1907 by the Regent Duke Johann Albrecht of Mecklenburg—was radically changed in a direction opposite to local expec- Brunswick awaited a reversion to the ceremonial court etiquette flourished before 1884, when the last duke of Brunswick died. Venerable butlers and maitres d'hotel, who remembered the duke, rejoiced impending revival of the famous Brunswick "dinner etiquette," the limit German tedium and solemnity. "Wait," was the refrain, "till the young comes into his own." Instead, the new sovereigns set to living in the way observed by Prussia's court on all except ceremonial occasions.

BRITAIN'S WAR SECRETARY

have been the attempts to Lord Kitchener. Among best story is that of the who handed his card to the when he returned from South with the remark, "Sir, I repre- newspaper."

"Interesting," responded Lord turning his back on the interviewer.

story comes from Aber- Kitchener was discovered at Aberdeen station, hav- there on his way to Bal- the night express. The reporter of the evening pa- on the platform, and ap- the great man, explaining represented a local journal. meet you," said his lordship. me, do you know Aberdeen "Yes," said the youth, delight- his victim so complaisant. "Not," said Lord Kitchener. you can tell me where I can good barber, one who really shaves well." "Oh, yes," replied the news- man, and he led his lordship to a barber shop. His lordship thanked much, but the youth interposed with a request that he might state he spoken to Lord Kitchener. He hoped for more of an interview. "Certainly," responded the field marshal heartily, "and you can add that the most obliging and intelligent inhabitant Aberdeen I have ever The lad went back to his editor rather shamefacedly with his tale, expert was enthusiastic. "Write every word," he commanded, and supplied a string of headings, in which "Lord Kitchener in Aberdeen Interview With Our Representative This Morning" were the least.

MRS. WILLIAM GRAVES SHARP

"I look forward with intense pleasure to the trip to France," said Mrs. Sharp, wife of William Graves Sharp, whom President Wilson recently appointed as ambassador to the French republic. "I personally deem the post at Paris to be the choice of the entire diplomatic list, because the interests and tastes of the country find great sympathy with those of myself and my husband. The artistic and scientific tendencies of my own nature will rejoice in the congenial surroundings that we shall find in France, and I can say that we are delighted with the prospect of the experience."

The wife of Myron Herrick's successor is cultured and progressive. She is abreast of the leaders in the march of intellect and the advance of learning. Her manner is frank and prepossessing. She speaks with precision. She organizes her thoughts and delivers them rapidly. In appearance she is matronly. Her hair is she wears it in a soft, becoming style. Her eyes are dark and her skin fair and rosy. She is dignified and distinctive in manner herself with an admirable air of composure and poise. Her hobby painting and tree study.

JOAQUIN BERNARDO CALVO

retirement recently of Don Bernardo Calvo as Costa minister to the United States the culmination of one of the markable careers in the annals acy. Senor Calvo was for the representative of Costa Washington and for many of the diplomatic corps. presented credentials to Presi- rison in 1891, and has sur- changes of administration own country.

his literary works is a his- Costa Rica. He is especially own, however, for his advo- closer relations of the Ameri- of better understanding the republics. He was active establishment of the Bureau of Republics, since changed to American Union; was a in the Central American conference in Washington in which the Central American Justice was established at Cartago, Costa Rica, and has actively ad- establishment of a trans-American railroad to link the coast expects to see its completion in the near future.

BENEDICT XV

ARCHBISHOP OF BOLOGNA ELECTED TO SUCCEED PIUS

New Pope Assumes Title of Benedict XV.

CHOSEN ON NINTH BALLOT

Cardinal Giacomo Della Chiesa, Only Recently Given Red Hat, Is Chosen Supreme Head of Roman Church.

Rome, Italy.—Cardinal Giacomo Della Chiesa, archbishop of Bologna, Italy, on Thursday was elected supreme pontiff of the Catholic hierarchy in succession to Pope Pius X, who died August 20. He will reign under the name of Benedict XV.

The conclave of the sacred college, whose duty it is to elect the pope, went into session the evening of Monday, August 31. The announcement of the outcome of its deliberations was made Thursday morning shortly after eleven o'clock. Nine ballots were taken.

The pontiff pronounced the apostolic benediction to the kneeling crowd.

Prelates Who Name the Pope.

The full membership of the sacred college of cardinals, which elected the pope, was more international in its representation than at any time in the history of the church.

With the creation of thirteen new cardinals in May, Pope Pius X brought the college up to 66, only four fewer than the maximum number allowed under the laws of the church and three more than participated in his own election in 1903, when there was a record attendance of 63 cardinals.

Nearly All Nations Represented.

While the sacred college is not a representative body in a strict sense of the word, this year nearly all the countries were represented. South America, the United States, Canada, England, Ireland, Holland, Belgium, Portugal, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy, France and Spain—14 nations in all. The Orient has no cardinal, neither has Russia, Africa, Australasia or Switzerland.

Twenty of the present cardinals are from five of the warring nations of Europe: Austria-Hungary having six and Germany two, as against a total of twelve, which might be said to represent the "allies" in the European war.

Facts About the New Pope.

Cardinal Giacomo Della Chiesa, who succeeds Pope Pius X, who died August 20, was created a cardinal May 25, 1914. He is the archbishop of Bologna, Italy.

Cardinal Chiesa was born in Pegli, in the diocese of Genes, November 21, 1854, and was ordained a priest December 21, 1878. He served as secretary of the nunciature in Spain from 1883 to 1887, in which year he was appointed secretary to the late Cardinal Rampolla. He was appointed substitute secretary of state in 1901 and in 1907 he was elected to the post of adviser to the holy office.

Officially Condemns Tango.

In 1907 he was appointed papal nuncio of Madrid, succeeding Mgr. Rinaldini, but the appointment was canceled three days later. This incident had occurred just before he was made archbishop of Bologna. When Mgr. Della Chiesa was given this post it was declared in Rome that it was mainly with the object of combating modern religious ideas, Bologna being the headquarters of the National Democratic league, whose members advocated what is known as "modernism" in religion.

In January, 1914, while still at Bologna, the present pope issued a pastoral letter strongly condemning the tango.

Takes Title of Benedict.

It has been 174 years since the time of the last Pope Bendict, On his election to the papacy in 1740 Cardinal Prospero Lambertini assumed that title. It is an interesting fact that the new pope was archbishop of Bologna, while Pope Benedict XIV was born in Bologna.

It was at the age of twenty-four that the new pope was ordained in the priesthood. He soon attracted the attention of Cardinal Rampolla, later secretary of state for Pope Leo XIII. When Cardinal Rampolla was made nuncio to Madrid he took Mgr. Della Chiesa with him as secretary of nunciature.

On Cardinal Rampolla's return to Rome to become secretary of state for the Vatican, Mgr. Della Chiesa entered the secretariat of state as one of the "minutamti" or minor officials, until 1901, when he was appointed substitute of the secretariat and also secretary of the cypher.

Made Bologna Archbishop.

As secreary to the secretary of state, Cardinal Della Chiesa was brought into notable prominence throughout the Catholic hierarchy, but his position was not at that time of cardinalist rank. On the accession of Pope Pius X, Mgr. Della Chiesa continued in the secretariat until December 16, 1907, when Pius X gave him a noted promotion to the position of archbishop of the important see of Bologna.

For seven years he administered the see of Bologna with notable success, until on last May Pope Pius X named him as one of the 13 members of the hierarchy to receive the red hat. Archbishop Begin of Quebec was among the other cardinals named at that time, the others being prelates of Spain, France, Austria, Germany and Italy.

The full title of the new pope, in addition to Benedict XV, will be Pope Bishop of Rome and Successor of St. Peter, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Primate of Italy, Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province, Sovereign of the Temporal Dominion of the Holy Roman Church.

The pope held his first consistory on Tuesday, when he conferred the red hat on Cardinal Anthony Mendes Bello, patriarch of Lisbon, and Cardinal Guissasolay Menendez, archbishop of Toledo, Spain. Both were created cardinals by Pope Pius X at the consistory last May.

The pope delivered on Tuesday his first allocution, which gives to the world the program of his pontificate.

The first appointment made by the pope was that of Monsignor Parolin, nephew of Pius X, to be canon of St. Peter's.

It is officially announced that Cardinal Dominic Ferrata has been appointed papal secretary of state under the new pope, Benedict XV. Cardinal Ferrata was born in 1847 at Montefiascone, Italy. His work as papal nuncio at Paris and as prefect of the congregation of bishops in Rome stamped him as a finished diplomat. He presided over the eucharistic congress last year at Malta.

RANKS ARE FILLED UP AS ENEMIES ARE MOWED DOWN

By R. M. TOMLINSON.

Gournay, Near Rouen.—I talked with a noncommissioned officer belonging to a regiment named after an eastern county of England which has been in the front of the fighting almost continuously night and day. And very hard fighting, too.

"Our only rest was when we were on the march retiring," he said. "This German attack is certainly extraordinary. You can throw them down and mow them down, but still they come on, and directly the gaps are made in their ranks fresh men fill them up. There seems to be an inexhaustible supply of fresh troops. It is impossible to oppose successfully such a mass of men."

Allies in Good Spirits.

Still, from my observation and my talks with men and officers, there need be no concern in England about the enthusiasm and confidence and good spirits of both the British and French forces. They do not minimize in any way the power of the enemy, but it is strange that the rapid and irresistible rush of the Germans, which in England may appear intensely alarming, does not worry the French or the British soldier.

They believe themselves well placed and are surprisingly quiet and confident, and are patiently working away and watching and waiting for their day, which is to come. Nothing that has yet happened in the campaign has made any of them in the least despondent.

Success for General Pau.

Let us see what seems to have happened since my dispatch from Amiens last Monday. On that day the staff of the famous general commanding the extreme left wing of the allies (Sir John French) was at ——.

From the north the Germans seemed to be advancing in great force. On the other wing General Pau had had a fine success near Guise, where he handled severely the Tenth Prussian army corps and the Imperial guard in a fight lasting throughout Saturday and Sunday last. I was informed that he circled them and smashed them into the Oise.

On Monday the Germans were forced to retreat with heavy losses, but in the center and left center of the allied forces the British were not so successful. The concentration of Germans was against these points and there was great fighting last Sunday.

Regardless of Human Life.

But knowing this and more than this, I am not any more alarmed than are the French and British officers and men I spoke with in the course of my unpleasant journey close to the fighting line. They know they are only beginning, but they are still intact and the men who have been working hard and skillfully to stem the German torrent are quite confident that success will ultimately be theirs.

Huge masses of obedient men are flung by the German commanders, regardless of the loss of life, in a fierce and desperate effort to burst through to Paris quickly, and though such enormous masses must necessarily force back all opposition, the allies' opposition meets them resolutely and calmly and with intelligence and military science.

When the history of this war is written it will be seen that, wonderful as the German advance has been, the retirement of the allied forces has been equally magnificent. It is hardly possible to understand why such reckless masses of men and guns (and it is believed that nearly all the German army is in France), continually pushing along, should not overwhelm everything human, however well armed and skillfully handled, which stands before it.

Still it has not overwhelmed the allies. It is almost incredible, but it is true.

Town Is Deserted Suddenly.

When I arrived at this little railroad junction at noon, after a trip to Paris and back, I was told that, on Monday, the French cavalry were seen on the hills to the south and southwest, and that fighting had been going on to the east, 12 miles away. From what I had heard of the progress of the German advance up till last Saturday, I judged it would be useful to visit the little town of ——, down the road.

I found as peaceful a countryside as if it had never heard of war. The sight of a strangely beautiful cathedral standing apart from the town was restful enough, but there was something uncanny about the shut and silent houses. Not an inhabitant was to be seen, and then the cold truth struck us that the town had been evacuated.

Crossing a bridge by the railway station, a French dragoon laughed when he saw our startled looks at what rested below and against the bridge supports.

They were waiting for the Germans. The streets were strewn with broken glass bottles and barbed wire was coiled everywhere. The little place is in a hollow and one needed but slight imagination to see the flaming hell it could become at any moment.

It was growing dark, and I suppose I have never before felt such an urgent desire to leave a town.

The railway was still intact, but two officials differed widely as to our prospects of getting away. While they argued we heard a mine blow up and then the sound of guns. A friendly engine driver, who merely "thought he could get through," at length got us away about eighteen miles southeast of the railway junction, which is about thirty miles to the north of Paris, and we got into Paris by train after midnight. We passed Creil, which was then alive with English soldiers.

Defense of Amiens Useless.

The Paris correspondent of the London Mail says:

The capture of Amiens, which is the capital of the department of the Somme, 70 miles directly north of Paris, was made possible by the success of the Germans at Mereuil. The entry was not contested. The mayor, after receiving a German envoy, announced the surrender of the city and urged the citizens to make no disturbance.

"The Germans went to the town hall, where they hauled down the French flag and hoisted the German colors. The German troops began entering the city about midday Monday, singing as they came: 'Die Wacht am Rhine' and 'Deutschland Uber Alles.'

"No time was wasted, however, as the orders were to move swiftly out on the high road to Paris. Only a few men were left to guard the city.

"When the Germans entered Amiens the French retired to Picquigny (eight miles northwest of Amiens). They are reported to have blown up the railway tunnel and to have destroyed a large space along the highway to the south with dynamite."

Praise for British Charge.

The Daily Mail's correspondent behind the British lines describes the charge of the Ninth lancers, which occurred at an unnamed spot during the recent series of tactical retreats, as a second Balaklava. He says:

"Terrible havoc has been caused in our ranks by shells from a battery of 11 German guns posted inside a fortress near the Belgian frontier.

"It seemed impossible to silence their fire until the Ninth lancers made their attempt, riding straight at the guns after debouching into the open and charging under a hail of melinite and lyddite.

"I have not been able to get reliable figures as to the distance they rode, but they reached their goal. Nothing could stop them. They reached the guns, killed the gunners, and put the guns out of action. Then, like their prototypes of Balaklava, they rode back.

Many Slain on Return.

"On the return they fell in greater numbers still from the attack of other German batteries posted at vantage points around the valley.

"Notable bayonet charges were made at (name deleted) on Wednesday last. Several British infantry regiments occupied an exposed position around which the Germans gradually circled, drawing the noose closer and closer.

"The Britishers decided to cut their way through the cordon. So the men went at it, yelling and shouting, and got through, although the German artillery mowed them down frightfully.

"The German machine guns have been tremendously effective in all engagements thus far. Men who saw the South African war say the hottest firing there was childish compared with what the British troops have undergone since their arrival in France. So far as I can learn thus far the Germans have lost 26 of these guns."

Tells of Bapaume Fight.

The Paris correspondent of the Mail sends the following dispatch:

"I have just returned from Compiegne. The English have left the town. The bridges over the Oise were blown up this (Monday) morning. The Germans were expected hourly.

"One important section of the battle which drove back the allies left was fought at Bapaume Thursday and Friday. On Friday morning the Germans brought up many machine guns in a dense fog, and in a six hours' engagement the French suffered severly.

"A British force unexpectedly arrived and occupied the French position and allowed the weary French to retire. Then, though hard pressed, the British continued to fight a magnificent rear guard action."

MINES IN AIR TO DESTROY DIRIGIBLES

Washington.—It is entirely feasible to "mine" the air against dirigibles and aeroplanes which seek to drop bombs in fortifications or besieged cities, according to a member of the army general staff. A large number of small captive gas balloons, each provided with a sufficient amount of explosive to destroy any aeroplane or dirigible with which it came in contact, would be sent up each evening, together with a number of box kites, each provided with a tail of malleable wire or other material nicely designed to foul propellers. The suction of propellers would draw balloon "mines" from a considerable distance.

Kaiser Selling English Orders.

London.—The German emperor and several high German officers are selling their Russian and English orders and turning the proceeds over to the Red Cross fund.

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

Will the Clanton Press tell the people of this county which one of their candidates for Commissioner wrote a letter in that paper on April 17th, 1913, advocating a bond issue and time warrants? We feel that the people should know his name and mode of canvassing.

One writer in the Clanton Press in 1913, said: "It appears that all the writers who oppose bonds forget that we have no other way to work our roads." But how does this same writer stand on the bond issue since he has become a candidate on the Democratic ticket?

In the Clanton Press of February 23rd, 1911, appeared the headline, "Who Said Nigger?" Now, we want to repeat this same expression, "Who Said Nigger?" We also wish to ask who appointed the nigger Judge in Washington, D. C. this year?

In an article headed, "The Issue is Joined," in the Clanton Press of July 13th, 1911, the following is the first sentence: "The Press wishes to come out boldly for a bond issue for good roads in Chilton County." We want to ask that paper how their candidates stand on the bond issue question now? Is it not a fact that one of your candidates was for bonds in 1913, and since his candidacy is against them, so he says?

We call the attention of the voters of this county to a letter in the Clanton Press of July 20th 1911, which is in part as follws: "I am in favor of a bond issue. If you are not a tax payer, you have no right to object to a bond issue; if you are, then you should be proud of the opportunity to issue bonds and build good roads. Respectfully, L. R. Sawyer." We want to know how Mr. Sawyer stands on the bond question since he has become a candidate. We ask him to give the people his views on the matter.

As to L. H. Reynolds being the first President of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway Association, we would like to ask the Press if they recall where he, as President, or in any other connection with the above named association, ever advocated the issuance of county warrants by a county already in debt to construct its part of the road? Did he get up before that Association and say let's build this thing whether the people want it done or not, and whether it will help them or not, but at the same time force them to bear their part of the expenses?

Judge Reynolds favors good roads and progress in any way. That is why he favored the building of the Birmingham and Montgomery Highway. That is why he was always ready to aidin such work while he was Probate Judge. But what you Democrats don't like about him is the fact that he will not listen to anything that sounds like smothering the voice of the people on questions where they are directly concerned. When he reaches that point of the game, something is going to get exposed right then, and if the proposition is made to turn against the people, it is his policy to abandon it.

Last week the editor of this paper expressed his opinion regarding the alleged "dead rat" the Clanton Press has recently discovered to have died about the court house away back in 1906. We said what we meant, and meant what we said—no more and no less. We did say we didn't care a flip of our finger what happened in 1906, which is only natural, as the editor was in school at that time, and not concerned in politics, more than as an interested observer. But the Press goes further to say, "Neither does he care for the interests of the people now." We wish to call on our friend, the Press, to please give us its evidence for making the latter statement. To say such a thing without some proof to back it is going rather far, Mr. Press man, and if you don't show up the goods now, you are liable to have to go back and "lick your calf over" regarding this statements.

Ever since the fateful day that gave the Clanton Press its first view of the things of this turbulent existence, its ever recurring cry has been, "Consistency, thou art a jewel." In the memorable days when the buggy whip was being used as a factor (such an effective one) in Democratic politics, that same exclamation was being hurled forth by that paper. And even to this date it has been handed down to the present leaders who seem to cherish it as a family heirloom, and is still being echoed emptily over the hills and valleys when they think they have discovered something "out of fix."

They say they do not understand how The Union-Banner, in the face of its statement of June 4th, can take its present stand on road matters. As the vision and understanding of the Press is so limited on this question anyway, we shall be delighted to show how these matters are reconciled.

Our statement of June 4th was, as they quoted last week: "Let us be on the lookout for any movement that will help to make our highways better, and at the first chance fall in behind it with all the force we are able to give."

It seems that the Press, from the way it emphasizes the word "any" in the above quotation, would have us mean to jump on any kind of scheme that bobs up, and try to carry it out. We have clearly proven that we did not mean any such thing as this by the stand we have taken, and any one with any sense at all can readily see that. The trouble is they took the wrong road—emphasized the wrong word.

In the first place we said, any movement that would make our "highways" better. By this we meant the various roads of our county, and not one special road through our borders.

Second, we said "fall in behind it with all the force that we are ABLE to give." By this we did not mean the placing of debts on the county, contrary to the wishes of the people. We did not mean the placing of this county in debt without first giving the voters a chance to approve or disapprove of the question. We mean to give all the aid we were ABLE to give, just as we said. Therefore we have opposed the whole proposition from start to finish, because it did not agree with our road policy in any particular whatever. It did not apply to the roads of the whole county, but to one certain road from the north to the south. It involved debt and burden on the county, which in the first place we do not believe, from an economical standpoint, the county is able to undertake, and secondly was proposed without the least consultation of the tax payers who would have the direct burden to bear.

Now, we would like to know if any fair minded man would say that these statements are not congruent. If anyone believes they are not consistent, let him say so. And at the same time let him say whether or not they are right or just, regarding the rights and liberties of the common people.

We hope the Clanton Press can understand this detailed explanation, and see the point we were trying to bring out most clearly. Maybe this time their ideas will not get so mixed that they cannot see the important things, that we are trying to say, and ramble off into some simple delusion that will terminate by their falling into another "trap" they are expecting to.

You are right Mr. Press, some of the political howlers of this age are sooner or later going to be forced to make that jaunt up "Salt River." And we would not be surprised if you and the rest of your gang have to lead the squadron.

We wish to remind our readers again that this paper is not going to sidetrack from the main issue of this campaign to indulge in a personal controversey with the editor of the Clanton Press. They may get around the argument by calling us "small potatoes" and other simple things, but we are going to try to hold their feet to the fire. This is hard to do, because they display such clever tactics at dodging the issue; but we think it is what the people demand, and we shall do our part towards making them take their medicine.

It appears to us that the editor of the Clanton Press was present personally at the mass meeting of the Progressive Party at the court house not long ago, at which meeting Col. M. W. Howard spoke, and made a full explanation of the initiative, refrendum and recall. But we notice last week the Press says it is at a loss to know what we mean when we mention these terms.

Now we are not surprised to hear the Press making such a pretense at ignorance. Every man and every party that is not in favor of giving the people the power of self government is makin the same squeal. The initiative, referendum and recall, when applied to government practice and legal procedure, mean ultimately the triumph of peoples rights. It means abolition of the classes and enfranchisement of the masses. The reason the Press, as well as all other Democrats, do not know what it means is because THEY DON'T WANT TO KNOW. Do you think a criminal would seek the enforcement of a law that means his immediate execution? That is what the initiative, referendum and recall means to modern democratic practices as they have been being perpetrated against the people of late years. Then is it any wonder they are trying to smother and prevent its coming into popularity?

We wish every man who reads this would be honestly interested enough to make full investigation of the initiative, retrendum and recall, and then think what it means when a political party sets its foot down on such principles of goveanment. How long do you suppose some of Alabama's officials would last under the recall provision? Like the Mayor of the city of Seattle a few years ago, they would see their own doom staring them in the face and resign before even coming to trial. But of course so long as they have the shield of a corrupt party organization to hide behind, they will continue to thrust the insults of neglect aed disregard at the interests of the people.

Voters, the initiative, referendum and recall are the backbone of our Progressive party. They are the fundamentals of our platform. Study what they mean, and compare them with the platform of the Democratic party—if you can find where they have any; we cannot—and then say for yourselves who is championing the peoples' rights, YOUR rights. Surely then you will be honest enough to cast your vote the way you think is to your own interest, and the welfare of your fellow citzen at the same time.

In the year 1911, when the great fight was raging around the proposed speedway through Chilton county, the editor of the Clantod Press, who will be remembered as the most active opponent of the proposition, made investigations that proved that the road from north to south through Chilton county did not accommodate as great a number of people as the road from east to west; and also found that the road from east to west was much more in need of improvement then the one from north to south. These facts proved that if any one road in the county was to receive special attention, it should for several reasons, not be the road from north to south. Do not the same conditions exist to-day? Then we would [illegible] Press where in its much vaunted "consistency" which it [illegible] ten appealing to.

The question of putting the county in debt to build a certain road, and the bond issue as well as many others are important questions to the people of this county. We believe that every news paper in the county and every candidate that is asking the people to vote for them in the November election should let the people know how they stand on these questions. Why does the Clanton Press and the democratic nominees dodge these questions?

The following is an editorial which appeared in the Clanton Press of July 6th 1911. "It has been stated that the proposed Speedway will accomodate more people than any other road in the County. We have investigated this and find that it is not true. The road from Adam's Ferry (or better from Hoffman's Bridge) to Maplesville will accomodate more people by a large number than any other road—and they need the road too, for they are in a deplorable condition, while the road which is proposed to be turned into a SPEEDWAY for the accomodation of the Birmingham and Montgomery Automobilists and a few others, is in first grade condition."

The above is what the Clanton Press said in 1911. We wish to ask them how they and their Democratic Party stands on this question. Has any one heard the Clanton Press say how they stand on this, or any other question, since the Campaign began? Who is leading the fight to keep the County in debt over the wishes of the people to build this road? Is it not the Democratic Officers and a few Democrats in Clanton? Talk about consistency; how about the Clanton Press?

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhere will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

FOR SALE—69 acres good farm land, 35 acres open, good water; one good 6 room dwelling and out buildings, located 8 1-2 miles south of Clanton. If enterested apply J. H. Burkhalter
9-3-3t Verbena Ala. Route 1

Take One Pain Pill, then—Take it Easy.

To Head-Off a Headache

Nothing is Better than

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

They Give Relief Without Bad After-Effects.

"I can say that Dr. Miles' Remedies have been a godsend to me and my family. I used to have such terrible headaches I would almost be wild for days at a time. I began using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and never have those headaches any more. I can speak highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine also for it cured one of my children of a terrible nervous disorder. I can always speak a good word for your Remedies and have recommended them to a good many of my friends who have tried them and found them [illegible]" [illegible] Iowa.

For Sale by All Druggists. 50 Doses, 50 Cents.

Notice!, Farmer

We understand that it has gone that our gin is not being opera this season. We wish to say here that our gin is in first c shape. We appreciate your patronage and ask you to conti with us. We assure you that will give the best results possi

We have obtained the service Mr. W. E. Maddox, who is an perienced gin man. We will c also a line of cotton seed meal hulls, which we will exchange cotton seed. Thanking you, We

CLANTON GINNE

J. A. MADDOX, Manager.

Lambasted.

A new trainer was engaged for the circus and was told to put a lion and a lamb through an act. He seemed nervous, and the next his boss asked him how he got along with the savage lion. "Sure, the lion didn't bother me much," he said, "but that durned lamb butted the daylights out of me!"

Qualities to Cultivate.

Guard within yourself the treasure, kindness. Know how to give without hesitation, know how to lose without regret, how to acquire without meanness. Know how to replace in your heart the happiness that may be wanted in yourself.—F. W. Faber

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a [illegible] of fundamental principles [illegible] to the Constitution [illegible] rowed from the English bill of 1689. When the Constitution United States was framed [illegible] mitted to the people it did [illegible] a bill of rights and it was [illegible] criticized on this account [illegible] friends promised to [illegible] such a declaration [illegible] amendments to [illegible] made after the main [illegible] adopted, were in fulfillment promise. All the States [illegible] now have bills of rights [illegible] identical with [illegible]

You Are N Wanted

Do you know that your effi is probably not much abov average—35%? And do yo ize that no employer wants who is not efficient, ev his services are given free

Do You Want to Acq Efficiency for the Job of Life?

Do you want to be wanted by all me you want to know that you cannot placed by a better man? Do you w know just how and just where you ca a bigger profit on your time and effor

Your Job for the Day, your Job of Life, an Success for All Time demand that you make yourself efficient.

The Institute of Efficiency

Ours is the only school in existence where you can learn PERSONAL Efficiency. In twenty-four fascinating lessons, in your home, at your leisure, you learn of these wonder working truths that have saved railroads, industrial plants, and factories millions of dollars each year, and which have raised salaries, in many cases, one-hundred fold.

Harrington Emerson

the man who founded this school, wrote these twenty-four vital has spent his life in the study and tice of Efficiency. During the twenty years, this world famous expert, has been advising the leadin industrial plants of the country. This vast experience he has put into this course of study so that you can reap the benefit.

What This Means For You

This course is for everybody who wants to make the most of his life—the professional man, business man, the young man hoping to achieve—everyone who wishes to go as far as he can, do as much as he can, achieve the best that is in him—with the least effort. The coupon at the side, if mailed to us tonight, will bring to you a Free copy of "The Story of Emerson," an outline of the Course, and full information.

The Institute of Efficiency

ROBERT D. CHASE, Sec'y

30 Irving Place New York City

Please send me a Free copy of "The Story of Emerson" and full information about the Course.

Name.....

Address.....

City.....

Millinery

On the first of September I will op a Millinery Store in the Wells Building

Will carry a complete and up-to-da stock of Fall and Winter Millinery.

Your trade is solicited.

MRS. A. M. GREEN

JEMISON, ALA

OR WASHINGTON TO ACT
ELL PEOPLE TO LOOK
OMEWHERE ELSE.

face of the temporary closing n cotton markets the South is he greatest crisis since the civil his is not a call of pessimism, ally is not an invitation to ap- futile mouthing on part of the ble leaders of today.

es—Since the closing of the es to merchant marine, cong- d especially the southern con- having to do with the cotton has pyramided promise upon to the southern farmer and man. We have been told that s more than $150,000,000 cur- vailable under the Vreeland- act for the protection of dis- tion, for the prevention of any- proaching a collapse of financi- ure in the South which still de- largely upon cotton as its . Right and left, the objurga- congress to the farmer has Dont worry! Keep cool! We care of you! Don't sacrifice ton! It is only a question of a ! And plans are now being erfected!"

y has become stale. Weeks sed. Cotton is crowding into g centers. Buying is irregu- akish or non-existent. The all is Uncertainty. The south- er and business man who are y dependent upon the farmer now what to expect from cong- They have been given hypo- er hypodemic of hope and re- from those who sit in the he mighty. But so far as any- gible is concerned, the farmer usiness man are no better off n European and American ex- closed summarily and they own back on their own resour-affair. This is bad faith. It ities for those concerned in it. and business men of the long memories. They will the men who made promises rate emergency and then an- t down and twiddled their impotency or indifference. will be a substantial margin of ing crop that American mills, even an abnormal increase ds upon their products, will not be able must in some til matters rea meantime, wi is stagnant! nearly and re are making t

Christmas i of the South i with which to the most imp to subsist if y And with th the entire S and promises held first by democrats; phrases are by the minut tion! There government purposes not the nation's l tress. South sentatives, as correspondent orize silver. to vote huge gees from Eu terned Mexic icans out of E to extending crop upon wh and their bus is either inab There is no two viewpo able to and it tan growers does not inte fort. The sit terpretation. undying devo stituents on p men are bunc tion—or the s is unequal to

To which o especially the going to plead

The plan of into valorizin far as it go enough. But ery man who cotton—for e be effectual, source and m

Among oth scriptions, we York and Wa in financing operate, all r

E. HOPK

Manufacturer of Cement
all kinds of building purposes;
Well Curbing; Water-Proof Bri
Vaults and All kinds of Cemete Contractor for all kinds work and plastering.
Estimates carefully furni

Peoples' Ph
Clanton, Alaba

The Wearing of eans the Tramping of Dollars
For even the product of the tories, which use the best will eventually wear out. It behooves you, therefore, Best for the least money.

ou'll Always Find Th

KEMP BROT
Clanton, Al

e!, Farme
and that it has gone
is not being oper
We wish to say
ur gin is in first appreciate your nd ask you to cont
'e assure you that
best results poss
otained the servic
addox, who is an n man. We will c
cotton seed meal
we will exchange
Thanking you, We
ON GINNE
MADDOX, Manager.

Bill of Rights.

d for the lion and e seemed oss asked he savage
't bother
it durned
t of me!"

The bill of rights is a
of fundamental principles sic to the Constitution itse rowed from the English bil
of 1689. When the Constitu United States was frame mitted to the people it did a bill of rights and it was criticized on this account friends promised to incorpo such a declaration, and th amendments to the Co
made after the main instru adopted, were in fulfillme promise. All the State Co
now have bills of rights, identical with one another.

You Are N
Wanted

Do you know that your effici is probably not much above average—35%? And do you ize that no employer wants who is not efficient, ev
his services are given free

Do You Want to Acqu Efficiency for the Job of Life?

Do you want to be wanted by all men you want to know that you cannot placed by a better man? Do you w know just how and just where you can a bigger profit on your time and effort Job for the Day, your Job of Life, and hand that you make yourself efficient.

Harrington Emerson

the man who founded this school, a wrote these twenty-four vital le has spent his life in the study and p tice of Efficiency. During the p twenty years, this world famous ex pert, has been advising the leading industrial plants of the country.
This vast experience he has put into this course of study so that you can reap the benefit.

s Means For You

ho wants to make the most of his life ess man, the young man hoping to hes to go as far as he can, do as best that is in him—with the least le, if mailed to us tonight, will
"The Story of Emerson," an l information.

f Efficiency
ASE, Sec'y
New York City

Please send me a Free copy of "T and full information about
Name.....
Address.....
Occ

inery

of September I will op ore in the Wells Building complete and up-to-da

nd Winter Millinery.

s solicited.

A. M. GREEN
EMISON, ALA.

WASHINGTON TO ACT ELL PEOPLE TO LOOK EWHERE ELSE.

ce of the temporary closing cotton markets the South is greatest crisis since the civil is not a call of pessimism, ly is not an invitation to apathe mouthing on part of the leaders of today.

Since the closing of the to merchant marine, congespecially the southern conring to do with the cotton pyramided promise upon the southern farmer and man. We have been told that more than $150,000,000 curlable under the Vreeland-for the protection of disfor the prevention of anyching a collapse of financiin the South which still delargely upon cotton as its Right and left, the objurgacongress to the farmer has worry! Keep cool! We are of you! Don't sacrifice It is only a question of a And plans are now being fected!"

has become stale. Weeks Cotton is crowding into centers. Buying is irregush or non-existent. The is Uncertainty. The southand business man who are dependent upon the farmer what to expect from congey have been given hypohypodemic of hope and re from those who sit in the nighty. But so far as anyble is concerned, the farmer siness man are no better off European and American exclosed summarily and they back on their own resour-

This is bad faith. It for those concerned in it. nd business men of the ng memories. They will men who made promises emergency and then apdown and twiddled their potency or indifference.

be a substantial margin of crop that American mills, given an abnormal increase upon their products, will not be able to absorb. That margin must in some manner be protected until matters readjust themselves. In the meantime, with markets closed, cotton is stagnant! The innumerable factors nearly and remotely affected by cotton are making time.

Christmas is approaching! The need of the South is money, actual currency, with which to meet the obligations of the most imperative kind, with which to subsist if you want the plain truth! And with this shadow brooding over the entire South, congress promises and promises; caucus after caucus is held first by senate and then by house democrats; honeyed and stimulating phrases are handed out by the yard and by the minute—all without definite action! There seems to be plenty of government money available for other purposes not half so urgent as that of the nation's leading export crop in distress. Southern Senators and representatives, as shown by a Constitution correspondent, are quick enough to valorize silver. They are ready enough to vote huge sums to bring back refugees from Europe, to take care of interned Mexicans, to get panicky Americans out of Europe. But when it comes to extending vital life-blood aid to a crop upon which millions of Americans and their business fabric depends, there is either inability or outright deception. There is no alternative between these two viewpoints. Either congress is able to and intends to aid Southern cotton growers or it is unable to do so and does not intend to make an earnest effort. The situation offers no other interpretation. Either the professions of undying devotion to their farmer constituents on part of Southern congressmen are buncombe for home consumption—or the statesmanship of our day is unequal to an epochal emergency.

To which of these counts is congress, especially the Southern congressmen, going to plead?

The plan of evangelizing individuals into valorizing cotton is well enough as far as it goes—but it cannot go far enough. But it merits the help of every man who is able to buy a bale of cotton—for every little counts. Aid, to be effectual, must came from a central source and must be general.

Among other soothsaying-gossip prescriptions, we have been told that New York and Washington will co-operate in financing cotton. If they will co-operate, all right; but in the name of heaven, let something be done. Let us know where we stand; let us know if we are to expect a life-rope of indifference while the man in the water works out his own salvation.

If cotton is to be made collateral for loans from the banks, let us know that, and quickly, and let the curreney that has been so volubly promised be forwarded to the banks. That is the most practical solution. Cotton is not a cold storage product; age does not affect it. Cotton stored today is better for spinning when a year old than now.

The world, eventually is going to want and demand every pound of cotton the South this year produces, and at a good price. But the world is now in no position to buy or spin cotton until these abnormal obstacles are removed, it is incumbent upon either the statesmanship of the nation or the resourcefulness of the southern people to rise to an emergency that is not likely to recur in world history.

If a government, rich and powerful, is helpless at times like this, in the name of common sense, what is this government really for? If it runs along smooth enough when the channel ss smooth, then ships water and flounders when the channel is a trifle rough, what sort of statesmanship is driving it? If it can find relief from the treasury for a dozen sources—for all save the crop that is the dependence of the people; if it can find money for philanthropic or pork barrel projects, and reject what is merely an emergency loan amply recured—what are its people to think of it? Congress must in a few days find an answer to these questions. Time presses! The situation grows worse by the hour.

The South is entitled to know whether the promises of Congress are empty and demagogic pretext or whether they are genuine. The South is entitled to know whether it can depend upon the government for temporary aid or must it make other arrangements.

It comes down to this—Congress is on trial, not only before the South but before the nation. Its opportunity for service is unique. If it does not grasp that opportunity, the confession of weakness will be unique in all American history.

There has been enough talk from Washington—it is now time to act!—Atlanta Constitution.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

he Wearing of Shoes
ans the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot.

For even the product of the best factories, which use the best materials, will eventually wear out.
It behooves you, therefore, to buy the Best for the least money.

u'll Always Find Them Here.

KEMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

A MISTAKEN IDEA

There are some people who still resort to drugged pills or alcoholic syrups to overcome colds, nervousness or general debility, and who know that the pure, unadulterated nourishment in Scott's Emulsion is eminently better, but refrain from taking it because they fear it may lead to excessive fat or obesity.

This is a mistaken idea, because Scott's Emulsion first strengthens the body before making flesh. Its blood-forming properties aid nature to throw off sickness by building health from its very source, and flesh is formed only by its continued use. Avoid alcoholic substitutes for SCOTT'S.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Of first meeting. In the District Court of the United States, for Northern Division of the Middle District of Alabama, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of A. C. Wells, No. 3477, bankrupt, post office, Jemison, county, Chilton, Alabama.

The aforesaid party having been adjudged a Bankrupt, under the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to Establish a Uniform System of Bankruptcy Throughout the United States," approved July 1st, 1898, meeting of the Creditors of said Bankrupt is called at the office of the undersigned Referee, in the United States Court House, Montgomery, Alabama, on September 17 1914 next at 10 o'clock, A. M., to make proof of debts, and for the election of a Trustee, and such other matters as are necessary and required by the Act of Congress aforesaid.

Montgomery, Ala., Sep. 4th, 1914
Asa E. Stratton, Referee

Place your orders with us at once for Crimson and Burr Clover Seed. On account of the European War clover seed will get to be very scarce and high in the near future. Alred Drug Company.

FOR SALE—One good horse perfectly gentle, which I will sell very reasonable.
Howare L. Boshee
9-3-4t Thorsby Ala.

NOTICE

I desire to announce to the people that my horse known as the Comer horse, is back at home ready for service, subject to calls. Will be in Clanton September 7th, 15th, 23rd. Honeycutt mill September 1st, 8th, 17th and 24th.
R. E. Hayes.

MARRIAGES

Marriage licenses have been issued this week to the following persons.

Isaac Dennis to Miss Mamie Boyd, P. O. Barrett to Miss J. Mae Curlee, Wilford Watson to Miss Mary Martin, Geo. D. Cooper to Miss Lula Parker.

School days are here, and to each student purchasing either a tablet, pencil, bottle of ink, lunch basket, book satchel or strap, we are going to give one dandy twelve inch rule. Come early before they are all gone. Alred Drug Company.

Mrs. J. C. Jones was carried to Birmingham last Friday, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Jones, who accompanied her, returned to Clanton Sunday with the pleasing news that she had withstood the operation successfully.

Dr. T. H. Neighbors left Clanton Friday for Goodwater, where he was married Tuesday to Miss Nell Moon. They will return to Clanton shortly to make their future home.

D. V. Wagoner of Mineola, Texas, is visiting relatives here.

Miss Izora Callen left Wednesday for Montevallo, where she will enter school.

Miss Mary Cook of Evergreen on her way to Montevallo, stopped over for a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Watts.

Mr. and Mrs. E.R. McKee have returned to their home in Florida after a visit to relatives here.

Mr. P. O. Barrett and Miss Mae Curlee were quietly married at the home of the bride last Sunday. They will make their future home in Clanton, Mr. Barret to continue his connection with the Clanton Bank.

J. C. Jones made a business trip to Montgomery Tuesday.

Miss Lurline Harper of Wetumpka is visiting in Clanton this week.

Mrs. Powe of Maylene was here last week visiting her parents.

Mrs. S. E. Johnson visited her mother, Mrs. Harper, at Wetumka last week.

Stanley McNeill of Jemison was a visitor to friends in Clanton Saturday night.

Dr. Gragg visited Maplesville Sunday.

Beef and Milk A-plenty

Cattle are kept for two purposes; for beef production and for milk production. To do either right they must be healthy. There is nothing better to keep them in continued good health, or to make them well quickly when sick, than a few doses of—

Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE

Stirs up the liver—Drives disease poisons away.

Any time any of my cattle get anything wrong with them I give them a few doses of Bee Dee STOCK MEDICINE. They soon get well.
John S. Carroll,
Moorhead, Miss.

25c, 50c and $1. per can. At your dealer's.
P. B. 2

Miss Margaret Wood ha returned to Clanton and resumed her former position as teacher in the Clanton High School.

Miss Annie Waller of Montgomery is a new teacher in the primary depatment of the city school here.

Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, and Mr. and Mrs. Wade and the children made an enjoyable motor trip into the hills of north Chilton Sunday.

W. O. Ri h spent Sunday with relatives at Riderville.

His many friends were glad to see Rev. H. W. Fancher able to be on the streets again one day last week. We hope he may soon be able to take up his pastoral work again.

Miss Corita Wilson returned to Clanton Monday morning to take her former place again in the Clanton High School.

Mrs. L. J. Duncan spent a few days last week with friends in Birmingham.

Planning for the Stork's Arrival

Among those things which all women should know of, and many of them do, is a splendid external application sold in most drug stores under the name of "Mother's Friend." It is a penetrating liquid and many and many a mother tells how it so wonderfully aided them through the period of expectancy. Its chief purpose is to render the tendons, ligaments and muscles so pliant that nature's expansion may be accomplished without the intense strain so often characteristic of the period of expectancy.

"Mother's Friend" may therefore be considered as indirectly having a splendid influence upon the early disposition of the future generation.

Whatever induces to the ease and comfort of the mother should leave its impress upon the nervous system of the baby.

At any rate it is reasonable to believe that since "Mother's Friend" has been a companion to motherhood for more than half a century it must be a remedy that women have learned the great value of.

Ask at any drug store for "Mother's Friend," a penetrating, external liquid of great help and value. And write to Bradfield Regulator Co., 402 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their book of useful and timely information.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

Mayr's* Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Recommended and Praised by Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick man for about three months caused from Gall Stones of the Liver and was told by three of our most prominent physicians that I would have to submit to an operation to get relief, but heard of your Wonderful Stomach Remedy and secured a full treatment and took it according to directions and passed hundreds of Gall Stones. Since taking your medicine I work regularly and don't feel any ill effects. I am praising your Remedy to all my friends. I think it's worthy of the highest praise. B. L. DOOLEY, Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments are not asked to take Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy for weeks and months before they feel benefited. Just try one dose— which should make you feel better in health, convince you that you will soon be well and strong, free you from pain and suffering and give you a sound and healthy Stomach, as it has done in thousands of other cases. Wherever it is taken you will hear nothing but the highest praise. Go to your druggist—ask him about the great results it has been accomplishing in cases of people he knows or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for a free book on Stomach Ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored.

L. J. Duncan and P. C. Wilson drove to Birmingham Sunday in an auto. They returned Sunday night, accompanied by Mrs Duncan and her children, who had been visiting in Birmingham for several days.

Mr. J. D. Martin of Wetumpka has come to Clanton and taken up his work with the Clanton Hardware Co. He is Secretary and Treasurer of that firm.

J. D. Smith is building a handsome bungalow in the Gowan addition. The work is under direction of Mr. Atchison of Birmingham.

Roland W. Taylor of Anniston was in Clanton Sunday on a short visit to relatives.

Mrs. J. O. Wade entertained at a linen shower Tuesday afternoon for Miss Estella Morgan, whose marriage to Mr. Grady Reynolds is to be brilliant affair this evening at the Methodist church.

Insist on MASTIC PAINT

The Kind That Lasts

It is true economy to select the best paint your money will buy.
It costs you just as much to paint your property whether you use inferior paint or Mastic Paint, the kind that lasts. Results will prove this to you in a short time. Be on the safe side and use Mastic Paint.

Specify It In Your Contract

For almost half a century Mastic Paint has stood the test of time.
It is the unadulterated combination of the finest Pure White Lead, Zinc Oxide, and Genuine Linseed Oil in correct proportions.
The formula is plainly printed on every can.

You don't run any risk using Mastic Paint. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction.
It covers more surface, lasts longer, and, therefore, is more economical than any other paint.
Keeps your house bright and attractive and enhances its value.

There's a Pee Gee Finish For Every Purpose

Adamant Floor Paint, Creostain, for Roofs; Pee Gee Barn Paint, Pee Gee Porch Paint, Pee Gee Carriage, Implement, and Wagon Paint, Re-Na-Lac, for refinishing woodwork; and other popular Pee Gee Finishes.

FREE

Beautifully illustrated book, "Houses, and How to Paint Them," also color card of 45 color combinations. Ask us for other booklets and color cards of Pee Gee Finishes, or write direct to Peaslee-Gaulbert Co., Louisville, Ky.

For Sale by
UPCHURCH DRUG CO.
Clanton, Ala.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

"Yes, you would, Kazia. But I guess it's more than just the money. You see, in Bethel there's no chance, nothing to do; except grow old and nose into your neighbor's business and—and want the things you can't have."

"Yes," she said slowly, "I know."

"You know? Do you want things, too?"

"Want things!" She drew a long wondering breath, as she measured desire. She did not wait for his question. "To be different."

They sat a little above the carriage road, along which rolled the Sunday afternoon procession of pleasure-takers. He pointed to an open landau in which two women sat, primly upright, hands folded in laps and faces set straight ahead, the very picture of well-dressed, self-conscious respectability—as "different" from Kazia as anything he could conceive.

They Sat a Little Above the Carriage Road.

"Like that?"

"Yes, like that. Sometimes." She looked wistfully after the departing respectabilities. "But mostly, just to belong to somebody."

"But Roman and the Matka and Piotr—"

"They're ashamed of me and afraid other people'll find out about me. When I went to school the other boys and girls said things—and did things. I didn't care." Her head went up and her voice told how passionately she had cared. "But Piotr told them at home and they wouldn't let me go any more. They'd be glad if I were gone. And some day—I will go."

"But where, Kazia?"

"I don't know," she said wearily. "If I knew, I'd go now. Some place where they won't know about me. Here nobody, when they find out, treats me like other people. Except," she added, "Jim Whiting."

"And me," he said gently.

"And you." She turned to look searchingly into his eyes. "Don't it really make any difference to you?"

"I settled that question once for all last Sunday."

Her look of gratitude disturbed him strangely. He stirred uncomfortably.

She saw, but did not understand. She pointed to the sinking sun.

"See! It's getting late. I must go home and get your supper."

He took her hand and helped her to rise. But he did not release the hand.

"Have you liked it today? And will you come again?" He smiled down upon her.

In her eyes was still the look of gratitude, of trust. "If you want to," she answered simply.

And in the weeks that followed they did repeat that holiday more than once.

Mark did not try to analyze his pleasure in those weeks. His heart said: "I am young and life should be bright. But this existence—toil, eat, sleep and toil again—is eating my youth away. I have a right to this little pleasure." The only real shadow was that cast by Jim Whiting.

The weekly bulletins to Unity contained important omissions.

One night he was in his room, sleepless. There had been no little chat with Kazia after supper. She had had her time to make her simple toilet before Jim Whiting came to carry her away. Mark lay there, tossing restlessly, fancying the two in some secluded spot where Whiting could make love to her undisturbed. The thought was as a goad. He visited they would come home; he did not like to think of her out in the languorous night with Whiting.

In time they did return. The murmur of their voices on the little front porch came to him through his open window. Whiting seemed in no haste to leave. Mark wondered impatiently what they found to talk so long about.

At length, sleep as far away as ever, he arose, dressed and went quietly down stairs—with what intent he hardly knew. On the bottom stair he stopped, facing the door. Whiting was on the point of leaving. Mark saw him coolly put an arm around Kazia; she suffered it. Hot anger—and something far sharper—boiled within the eavesdropper. Nor was it perceptibly cooled when he saw her deftly avoid the kiss Whiting would have taken; she laughed as she broke away. Whiting went down the steps, whistling gaily.

Mark was still standing on the stair when she went in. She started.

"Oh! Is that you?"

"I think it is."

"That's a funny thing to say," she laughed. "Your voice sounds funny, too."

He had just been condemning Whiting for the indecent length of his stay. Now he said: "Let's go out on the porch a while."

They went out into the moonlight. He sat upon the railing and stared grimly in the direction of Whiting's departure. It was past midnight; the street slept. From the valley below them came the rumble of the mills that were teaching him fear and self-control. He was silent for a few minutes, while he tried to master the ugly thing within him.

"What is it?" she asked wonderingly.

"Kazia," he blurted out, "you shouldn't let him do that."

"Oh! You saw?"

"I didn't mean to."

"Why do you say I shouldn't?"

"He—he's not fit to touch you."

"He's very jolly and nice to me," she said quietly. "And—and he wants to take me away."

"But you're not going, are you?" he cried.

She sighed. "I don't know—yet."

"Kazia!" He did not know how his voice was shaking. "Promise me you won't go away with him."

"Why not?" She turned to him. "Why not?"

"Because," he began unsteadily, "because I want the best for you. Because—because this!" With a sudden rough reckless movement he caught her close to him. She suffered him as she had Jim Whiting. "Don't you know I want only the best for you?"

"I think I do." She put a hand to his cheek and turned his face out of the shadow, looking long and searchingly into his eyes.

Then she gave a little sigh. "I promise—now." Her lips waited for his kiss.

Gradually his senses cleared. He began to see the ugly treachery of what he had done. His strong clasp slackened.

She seemed to feel, with the sixth sense that was hers, the change in him.

"What is it?" She looked up in quick alarm.

"Nothing." To avoid her eyes he caught her close again, burying his face in her hair, and yielded to the intoxication of her. "Oh! Kazia, Kazia!" . . .

CHAPTER VIII.

Afire.

July came, such a month as the city could not remember, humid and sickeningly hot. Children played languidly, always in the shade, and flocked around ice wagons, quarreling over the division of the fast melting, cool fragments.

In the mills the men toiled on, "speeding up" as always to feed a world hunger for steel. They drank vast quantities of water; they salted it that they might drink the more, believing that in much sweating alone lay safety. There were giants in those days. But sometimes they fell. A sudden drying up of sweat, a violent nausea, a sharp blinding pressure upon the brain—in a few minutes or fewer hours they were dead; their names did not always appear in the daily lists. Some that did not die found their strength forever broken.

The fierce heat blistered Mark's naked sweating skin. The water he drank carried out through his pores the food that should have nourished him. The heavy labor put upon him a weariness sleep could not dispel. The incessant roar, tearing at quivering nerves, impeding thought, became in his overwrought state exquisite torture. Hate, for the mills, for those above who drove so pitilessly, even for the men beside him, filled him; and fear. Once, when Henley, passing, gave his carelessness nod, he was answered only with a venomous glare that summoned the master's sardonic grin. Mark could have killed him then.

He envied Roman, often almost bitterly. The big Pole felt and showed the effects of the intense heat, but he was the same unflurried philosophic [illegible]

[illegible] cheerful word; no fear of collapse disturbed him.

Through watching him Mark was beset by a new temptation. When their turns were ended Roman and the men invariably flocked to the nearest saloon and there drank repeatedly—whisky and brandy mostly—until vigor returned to their wornout bodies. It was a false vigor, Mark knew, and short-lived. But there were times when the thought of the hour of surcease from fatigue, of spirited outlook, lured him almost irresistibly.

And one evening he followed Roman and his companions to the bar.

"Whisky," he ordered.

Roman put out a restraining hand. "You better not drink," he counseled gravely. "Or only beer."

Mark laughed recklessly and repeated his order. Thrice he drank. The weight dragging at his limbs lifted, the misery rankling in his heart dissolved. He was cheerful, talkative, soon maudlin. Before he reached home the whisky had possessed his unaccustomed brain; he was staggering, drunk. Roman undressed him and put him to bed without supper. But he had had his period of forgetfulness.

The next day he paid—and the craving gnawed more sharply. That evening Roman, understanding, avoided the saloon and led Mark by a straight course homeward. Thereafter it was his custom, until Mark saw the care and forbade.

"You needn't be afraid. It costs too much. Everything," he added with a bitterness for which Roman had not the key, "costs too much."

"Zo? But you are tiredt. Unt you are not strong. Vy do you not leaf the vork?"

"Give up now, after holding on this far! I guess you don't mean that. But some day I'll get where I want—I'll have life by the throat." It did not seem melodramatic to him. "Then I'll make it pay for this—on its knees."

Roman shook his head gravely, as at a blasphemy.

"You shouldt not say zo. Alvays life iss the master. But you are tiredt."

And in the midst of the ordeal by fire he fought his first battle. At times he was almost grateful for the physical weariness that distracted him from the inner struggle.

He learned then how insensibly Unity had receded into the background. She had become vague, of little substance; she was a story he had read a long time ago. But she was real, too, in that she was a habit.

There was a memory that accused—a girl, for once warm and yielding, in the last glory of the sunset, clinging to him with the tremulous cry: "You won't forget me out there?" He had made a vow. . . . Within a twelvemonth he had clasped another.

That other was both real, intensely real—and near. He tried to avoid her; it was not easy.

Kazia went about, quieter than ever, what she felt too deep for words, too solemn for laughter. She did not again break into song. But no one seeing her eyes could have doubted what had come into her heart. And she gave to her lover with both hands, knowing no thrift in love.

Her happiness awed, sometimes almost frightened her, but she would not question it. When her sixth sense stirred, she shamed it into silence. She saw in her lover's eyes a trouble that deepened as the days went by, heard it in his voice, felt it when he clasped her.

One evening—the last before the hot wave broke; but he did not know that—he dragged himself homeward, believing he had come to the end of his endurance.

"But I suppose I haven't," he sighed. "Probably I'll just go on and on—but some day I'll drop. I wonder why I do it! I wish the end would come soon—now." He thought he meant that.

Even the bath brought no relief. He sat down to a supper against the very thought of which his stomach revolted. After a few mouthfuls he left the table and went to his room. He threw himself, still dressed, on the bed, tossing restlessly in the vain search for an easy position. His body was one dull ache. The overheated blood pounded through his veins, each throb a knife that hacked his brain. His skin was hot and dry, his mouth parched, his throat raw.

He Saw the Figure Crouching on the Floor at the Bedside.

The late darkness fell, dispelled a little by the faint glow from a nearby street lamp. It found him lying [illegible] to leave. He wondered if he were growing delirious, but he could not summon energy to call out or arise.

It must have been 10 o'clock when he thought he heard a light tap on the door. He made an effort to speak.

"Come."

The door opened. Some one tiptoed softly to the bedside and leaned over him.

"Are you sick?" came the broken anxious whisper. "You looked so tired—and you came up without—speaking to me. They said, let you sleep. But I've been—so afraid."

He caught her hand and clung to it.

"Would you mind staying a while?" he whispered back. "My head does funny tricks in the dark."

She put her free hand to his hot forehead. Then she gave a low pitying cry. "You are sick!—Wait!"

She left the room quietly. Soon she returned with towels and a basin of water in which ice tinkled. She lighted the gas jet and turned it very low.

"Close your eyes now," she said softly, "and try to sleep. I didn't tell any one, because I wanted to help you myself."

He lay passive, while she placed cold wet towels over his eyes, bathed his hands and wrists in the icy water and stroked his throbbing temples. He wondered dully that hands which worked so hard could be so gentle. For many minutes they did not speak. . . . The stealthy shapes were laid. The sharp pounding in his brain began to subside. Drowsiness was stealing over him.

His hands groped until they found hers. "Kazia, Kazia!" he breathed.

"Hush!" she said.

"It's such a pretty name," he murmured sleepily.

He felt her lips on his forehead. After that he slept.

When he awoke the room was dark. A cool moist wind swept strongly in upon him. He heard the rumble of far away retreating thunder. And with the heat the headache and overpowering fatigue had gone. He drew a long sighing breath. Something stirred in his hand.

Then in the faint reflection of the street lamp he saw the figure crouching on the floor at the bedside, her cheek pillowed in his outstretched hand. It took him a moment to realize what had brought her there.

"Are you awake?" she whispered.

"Yes."

"And better?"

"All right now, thanks to you.—Why, you're all wet!"

"Yes." She rose stiffly to her knees. "It's been storming and it rained in on me a little. But it's cooler now."

"And you—What time is it?"

"A clock just struck four."

"And you've been here all the time?"

"I was afraid you'd wake up and need some one. And—I wanted to."

"Kazia, why do you do these things for me?"

"It is my place."

Her place! What place, then, had he given her? "Kazia—" he began.

But more than cowardice sealed his lips. She might have been consciously fighting for her love. She bent over and kissed him.

"Hush! You need to sleep."

CHAPTER IX.

Liquid Iron.

The hot spell was over.

For fifty-seven years Roman had toiled as few men can toil—on the tiny farm that had been his father's, to satisfy the greedy tax gatherer; in Essen, learning another craft under the master Krupp; in the new land whose promise had lured him. Not once had his superb strength and endurance failed him; therefore he had never known fear, had not believed that the fate that overtook others must some day be his. He had been very prodigal of that strength.

But one day—such a one as in that season the steel-workers called cool—he staggered and fell. It was three days before he could go back to his job. During that time Mark Truitt was in charge of the furnace.

He who returned was not the careful, precise, unflurried workman. He knew fear. He tired easily and was uncertain of temper. The heat fretted him and he worried over his work. He lost in efficiency; several times he tapped the furnace either too soon or too late and was sharply reprimanded. To keep up and to forget the new weakness he drank more whisky than ever. Within two weeks he collapsed again.

It was during Roman's third lay-off that Gracey, the foreman, said to Mark: "It looks like Roman's done for."

"It looks that way," Mark assented.

"It's come pretty sudden with him. It does that sometimes."

"Yes." Mark stared sadly through the furnace mouth at the boiling flame-swept slag. The drama had become a tragedy. There was an element in steel of which chemists took no account—the lives and souls of men.

"He can't expect to keep his job," he heard the foreman continue, "away half the time like this. And last week he spoiled two heats. I'm afraid we'll have to let him go."

"Yes!" Mark's mouth twisted in an ugly sneer. "He's given you the best he had. And now he's breaking down. So—scrap him, of course!"

"That's funny talk," grunted the foreman. "Especially since the superintendent and I've been talking it over and we think of you for the job. That makes it look different, don't it?" he [illegible]

"Oh, it doesn't. Do you suppose I haven't been thinking of that—[illegible] on it—ever since he broke down? [illegible] on the furnace. [illegible] and when we [illegible] like an old shoe. [illegible] make beasts of us, every man dogging the fellow ahead, glad when he drops and lets go his job. Damn you all, anyhow!"

"Then I'm to tell the superintendent you don't want the job?"

Mark looked again into the boiling furnace, felt its consuming breath, listened to the mills' strident voice. Through every sense he caught their menace; his spirit cowered before it. But he who had come so near to falling could know the bitterness of him through whose fall advancement would come.

"No!" he snarled in savage contempt for himself and his hollow high indignation. "You can tell him I'm a beast like all the rest."

He was on the night turn then. In the morning he went reluctantly to Roman's house. At breakfast he was alone with Kazia. But there was no love-making that morning. Nor did he explain that he was to supersede her uncle at the furnace.

"How's Roman?" he asked with an added inward twinge.

"He's not much better," she sighed. "We're worried about him. He frets because he thinks he might lose his job."

He said nothing.

"Do you think he will?"

"Yes." He made shift to raise his eyes to hers. "I think he will."

"Just because he's sick. Oh, surely not!"

"Because he's used up. And when you're used up, you've got to get out to make room for better—for those that can still be useful."

"Oh, that would break his heart. How I hate those mills!" she cried. "But don't tell him you think that."

"No." His eyes fell. "I won't tell him. He'll find out soon enough."

Roman did not go back to work until his shift was on day turn again. Some presentiment of the impending calamity must have come to him, for as he and Mark set out for the mills that morning the irritability that had marked him since his first collapse gave way to a deep dejection.

It was not until they were entering the mill shed that Mark said: "Roman, I think Gracey wants to see you." He tried to make it very gentle.

"Zo?" Roman halted, looked intently at Mark. He drew a long whistling breath. "Zo!" He understood. But his presentiment had not told him how deep the hurt would be.

He tried to look the man he had been. But his tired lack-luster eyes belied the stiffly martial shoulders and firm step. He went straight to the foreman.

"Mine chop?" he asked steadily. "You vill take it avay?"

"I'm afraid we'll have to let you go, Roman."

"Unt vy?" There was no complaint.

"You're laying off too much," the foreman answered bluntly. "And you're getting careless in your work. You've lost your grip."

"I haf been sick. Meppy," Roman made an effort to speak the confidence he did not feel, "meppy I'll get better."

"I hope so. You've been a good man in your time. But I don't think so. You're getting too old for the work." Gracey was still young; he could speak carelessly of growing old.

"In my time! Oldt," Roman repeated slowly. "I haf not beliefedt zo."

He did not wince. But the shoulders he had been holding so bravely erect sagged.

"Oldt! It iss zo."

He started to move away, but the foreman called him back.

"See here, Roman," he said with rough kindness. "You've always drawn good pay. And you've quite a bit laid by, I hear. Why don't you go back to your own country and take it easy the rest of your life?"

Roman eyed him listlessly. "Here iss mine country. But I do not vant to take it easy. Alvays haf I vorkedt—the vork of strong men."

He left the foreman and walked slowly, heavily before the furnaces until he came to his old station. There he stopped, watching the crew at work; in particular watching the figure—so slight for that labor—of the young man who had endured where stronger men fell. How neatly he fitted into his new niche!

"Unt he iss not oldt. Oldt!" Roman shivered.

Mark Truitt ate—or pretended to eat—his supper in the saloon that night. He could not bring himself to face the ordeal of sitting at table with Roman's family.

There was no sense of triumph in his promotion, honestly earned though it was as his world measured such things.

He walked to Roman's house, with a firm tread that was the outward expression of his mood. He knew just what was coming. He dreaded it, the moment when he must again face the man by whose fall he profited, must again break the sweet ties this life formed only to sever. Yet he did not flinch. He might rail against the issues presented to him, but at least he had always the courage of his choice.

There was none of the trappings of tragedy in the moment he had dreaded. The family was gathered as usual in the dining room. Roman had himself in hand once more.

Mark stopped in the doorway. For the life of him he could not speak the commonplace salutation on his lips. He saw Kazia steal quietly from the room. But he knew that she stayed within hearing.

It was Roman who broke the silence.

"You haf eaten?"

"At the saloon."

"Zo? You shouldt haf come. Ve valted."

Piotr snarled: "You've got a nerve to come back here at all."

"Piotr," Roman reproved him gently, "it iss not for you."

"you want me to go. I suppose [illegible] blame me. I blame myself somehow. I don't know why. It—it isn't fair. It isn't my fault you've been fired. You ought to see that. And I'd be a [illegible] not to take your job, now that you can't have it any more."

"Huh!" sneered Piotr. "You're [illegible] enough of the chance, too."

"Piotr!" The boy subsided. Roman went on: "It iss not your fault I [illegible] oldt, no. But—it iss better you go. You haf mine chop. It iss not good for me to see unt hear of the work of strong men ven I am not strong."

"I will go tonight."

"I haf not zaidt tonight. Ven you haf another goot place to go."

"I will go tonight."

"Well—good-by, then," said Piotr promptly.

Mark waited a moment longer. But there was really nothing more to be said. He went upstairs.

His carpetbag packed—a brief task—he waited. And this was hard—

"Huh!" Sneered Piotr, "You're Getting Enough of the Chance."

hard! Now there was at least the semblance of a struggle.

It almost shook him because [illegible] that went—Kazia. Instinct, brushing aside the mist of false teachings [illegible] terpreted anew and aright the passions he had thought ignoble, warned him to take this whole love while yet time was time.

"Almost thou persuadest me. . . ."

But not altogether. His desire to survive, to win his place among the masters—still held the whip, kept him facing doggedly his straight road ahead. And, as if jealous of any rival for supremacy over him, it clinched the pale lesser love. He could not see the unlettered Hunky girl sharing his conquest.

When she came, she stood for a moment at the door, a question and a great fear in her eyes.

"I—I was waiting for you," he said.

"I knew. But I couldn't come sooner."

Her glance fell to the bag. Again. She walked slowly toward him. He rose. Scarcely an arm's length away, she halted. Suddenly tears came in her eyes. She put out both hands in a quick pleading gesture.

"Don't go!"

"They don't want me to stay, Kazia."

"That's because you've taken your job. Don't take it!"

He shook his head. "You don't understand. There's no reason why I shouldn't take it."

"He's your friend."

"You don't understand," he repeated wearily. "If I could give him back his job by not taking it, I'd not take it." He believed that then! He began again the old reasoning. I couldn't. Some one else would. It—that's all. Isn't it better for me to have it than a stranger? Roman, he concluded bitterly, "ought to look at that way."

"I know there isn't any good reason. But—I couldn't go with you, if I took it."

She couldn't go with him! His [illegible] fell miserably.

"Oh, no!" With one swift step she bridged the space between them, throwing her arms around his neck. "Oh, no! I didn't mean that. I'd go with you, whatever you did. I'd [illegible] to. I couldn't stay here, when you [illegible] gone—go back to the way it was before you came. I couldn't stand that." A little shudder passed over her.

"You can't understand," he [illegible] again. "I've tried—"

"I know. I've seen it troubling [illegible] though I didn't know what it was. [illegible] —can't you see? I'm the reason. You'll never find any one that can love you like I can. It's all I know—[illegible] love—to love you. I don't ask [illegible] But I can give—everything."

With a force that must have [illegible] her he freed himself from her clasp and sank shaking into the chair, covering his face with his hands. For [illegible] breath the scales quivered. Then:

"Kazia," he whispered, "I have been square with you. There's—there's another girl—"

"There is—And you—"

After what seemed like a [illegible] silence he dared to glance up to see how she had taken it. By them she had crept to the threshold and was looking back at him. About her face a dazed, foolish little smile was playing. And her eyes were the eyes of one who had just seen a great light.

When he looked up again, she was gone.

An hour later—how he could have told—he found himself walking in the streets, carrying his [illegible] carpetbag.

GO ON CONTINUING

ST BE PREPARED

ited States Cannot Afford to Ignore Possibilities.

Determination to Uphold the Monroe Doctrine Means That Country Has to Keep in Position to Make Itself Respected.

While Colonel Roosevelt has been [illegible]ching the necessity of living up [illegible] the Monroe Doctrine, not agreeing [illegible] sweeping peace treaties which might [illegible]ver be carried out, and building a [illegible]y sufficient to make this nation re[illegible]ected, people have listened to him, [illegible] with a feeling that his discussions [illegible]re more or less academic. Such [illegible]achments, men have thought, [illegible]uld have carried more weight a cen[illegible]y ago, when there was really dan[illegible] of world-wide war. The present [illegible] is too civilized. Why be so ex[illegible]sed over the possibility of nations [illegible]ting when the age of peace has [illegible]e?

[illegible]t recent events in Europe have [illegible] an impression of right stern [illegible]ity to his words on these subjects. [illegible]nsider, for instance, the effect of [illegible] Monroe Doctrine at this time. As [illegible]el Roosevelt points out, if the [illegible]erican continent had become the [illegible] of European colonization it would [illegible]ifficult if not impossible to keep [illegible]ve from the great struggle now [illegible] on in Europe. Certainly such a [illegible]dition would involve the United [illegible]es in the necessity for the huge [illegible]ments that have been impoverish[illegible] the continent.

[illegible] the United States is to maintain [illegible] Monroe Doctrine, then the matter [illegible] the arbitration treaties becomes of [illegible] greatest importance. The Monroe [illegible]rine is not recognized in the courts [illegible] nations. It is maintained only [illegible] the United States. Suppose, as [illegible]t Roosevelt says, Denmark or [illegible]nd, both of which own islands in [illegible] West Indies, should be drawn into [illegible] war and be compelled to cede [illegible] West Indian possessions to a [illegible]t European military power. Then, [illegible] the year of investigation pro[illegible] by the pending treaties, the [illegible] could convert the island into a [illegible]ar and the United States would [illegible] the alternatives of submission [illegible] beginning war at a disadvantage. [illegible] take the case of the Panama [illegible] which a few years ago many [illegible]ns felt should be neutralized and [illegible] without fortification. That prop[illegible]on would be fine in a world from [illegible]ch war had been banished. But [illegible] adoption would have left America [illegible]less today if any great power had [illegible]red to violate the neutrality.

[illegible] am not taking sides one way or [illegible] other as concerns the violation or [illegible]egard of treaties," Colonel Roosevelt says. "When giants are engaged [illegible] death wrestle as they reel to and [illegible] they are certain to trample on who[illegible] gets in the way of either of the [illegible]e, straining combatants, unless it [illegible]angerous to do so."

[illegible]t the present stage of civilization [illegible] United States cannot afford to com[illegible] itself to any policy which will not [illegible]e it dangerous for any of the strug[illegible]g military nations of Europe to [illegible]mple on it.

Day of Individualism Gone.

[illegible]othing is more certain than that [illegible] day of individualism has passed. [illegible]ital, having become itself collect[illegible] must adjust itself to deal with [illegible] collectivism of labor. That labor [illegible]ld be made responsible in its col[illegible]ve form may be argued justly. [illegible] employer who protests against [illegible]responsibility of the union with [illegible] he is asked to enter into con[illegible]al relations has much to say for [illegible]asonableness of his contention. [illegible]owever, involves possibilities [illegible]emand serious consideration. It [illegible] mean, probably, the passing of [illegible]craft union and the curse of the [illegible]dictional strike. But the employ[illegible] would have to face the strength of [illegible] industrial union and the prospect [illegible] general strike in case of disagree[illegible]t. In the Socialist belief the com[illegible] of the industrial union is a step [illegible]rd the economic revolution they [illegible]et.

Methods Must Be Reformed.

[illegible] regards the tariff, remember that [illegible] Payne-Aldrich bill was a vicious [illegible] on the one side, just as the pres[illegible] bill is a vicious bill on the other [illegible] said Colonel Roosevelt in a re[illegible] speech. The two bills were made [illegible] exactly the same methods and [illegible] so long as these methods are con[illegible]ed, just so long violent reaction [illegible] way will be followed by violent [illegible]ion the other way. If you put in [illegible] the Republican organization, un[illegible] the lead of Messrs. Penrose, [illegible]. Gallinger and the others [illegible] hold upon it is as yet unshaken, [illegible] will insure another violent revul[illegible] the swing of the pendulum alter[illegible]g from one unhealthy extreme to [illegible]other unhealthy extreme.

Good Business Proposition.

[illegible] one chance of accomplishing re[illegible] worth having is to adopt the Pro[illegible]ve platform as regards the tariff, [illegible], and as regards both busi[illegible] and labor. A tariff commission [illegible] partisan experts, if as efficient[illegible]ed as the German tariff com[illegible] will do for this country what [illegible]man tariff commission through [illegible] has done for Germany. We [illegible] asking you to try experiments, [illegible] asking you to go into a plain [illegible] proposition which has proved [illegible]ess.—Theodore Roosevelt.

RIGHT

Members
sion

No sim ecutive
the men
state tra rogatives mission to the b kind of

There
the fede er memb and fina more dif
of men mission lutely c will not theories point bu

Even men wil feel wh traordin to the poration have the corporat books a testimon commiss might in for mon

Every problem
sion. T all abou
tery, jun
They w freight Delving
have to
to do it

It is h ices of and give holders his bust mands a missione derstand receive to a sup only one

In
"There
of the b
open a done wi bencefor gressive
Shively
ken in since A been a crats, n sometim come o
for the work fo
I should their sta eridge.
indepen
each ho gram of idge or
Then a
the Den
to see in this dianapo

Pr
"We party, a economi dock an of repre congress
Progress
standing and bala troduced tariff co
for the ment bu abolition dom of gressive
Washing
forms,
the nee form of nating
in his s

Is a
The p are pure in it, le has had the cons
they kn politics.
abroad against lated me sentimen through as a mo
of popul regard t stitution life of t

E
It is should r
to "run edict of tion of g
to social tion, an springs pressive
there are the work cident to met with that they

"You want me to go. I suppose blame me. I blame myself some I don't know why. It—it isn't fair isn't my fault you've been fired.
ought to see that. And I'd be a not to take your job, now that can't have it any more."

"Huh!" sneered Piotr. "You're enough of the chance, too."

"Piotr!" The boy subsided. Ro went on: "It iss not your fault I oldt, no. But—it iss better you You haf mine chop. It iss not for me to see unt hear of the of strong men ven I am not strong

"I will go tonight."

"I haf not zaidt tonight. Ven haf another goot place to go."

"I will go tonight."

"Well—good-by, then," said P promptly.

Mark waited a moment longer.
there was really nothing more to said. He went upstairs.

His carpetbag packed—a brief
—he waited. And this was har

"Huh!" Sneered Piotr, "You're Enough of the Chance."

hard! Now there was at least the blance of a struggle.

It almost shook him because that went—Kazia. Instinct, brush aside the mist of false teachings, terpreted anew and aright the pas
he had thought ignoble, warned hi take this whole love while yet th was time.

"Almost thou persuadest me. .

But not altogether. His destre survive, to win his place among masters—still held the whip, kept facing doggedly his straight ahead. And, as if jealous of any for supremacy over him, it clai the pale lesser love. He could not the unlettered Hunky girl sharing conquest.

When she came, she stood for a ment at the door, a question an great fear in her eyes.

"I—I was waiting for you," he s

"I knew. But I couldn't come sooner."

Her glance fell to the bag.
again. She walked slowly toward h
He rose. Scarcely an arm's le away, she halted. Suddenly tears st in her eyes. She put out both ha in a quick pleading gesture.

"Don't go!"

"They don't want me to stay, Kaz

"That's because you've taken job. Don't take it!"

He shook his head. "You don't derstand. There's no reason wh shouldn't take it."

"He's your friend."

"You don't understand," he repe wearily. "If I could give him his job by not taking it, I'd not it." He believed that then! He gan again the old reasoning.
I couldn't. Some one else would it—that's all. Isn't it better for to have it than a stranger? Rom he concluded bitterly, "ought to that way."

"I know there isn't any good rea
But—I couldn't go with you, if took it."

She couldn't go with him! His fell miserably.

"Oh, no!" With one swift step bridged the space between th throwing her arms around his n
"Oh, no! I didn't mean that. I'd with you, whatever you did. I'd to. I couldn't stay here, when yo gone—go back to the way it was fore you came. I couldn't stand th
A little shudder passed over her.

"You can't understand," he again. "I've tried—"

"I know. I've seen it troubling though I didn't know what it was.
—can't you see? I'm the rea You'll never find any one that can you like I can. It's all I know love—to love you. I don't ask m
But I can give—everything."

With a force that must have her he freed himself from her and sank shaking into the chair,
ering his face with his hands.
breath the scales quivered. Then

"Kazia," he whispered, "I ha been square with you. There's—th another girl—"

"There is—And you—"

After what seemed like a silence he dared to glance up to how she had taken it. By the had crept to the threshold and looking back at him. About her a dazed, foolish little smile was
ing. And her eyes were the eye one who had just seen a great
When he looked up again, she gone.

An hour later—how he have told—he found himself ing in the streets, carrying his carpetbag.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

ST BE PREPARED

ted States Cannot Afford to Ignore Possibilities.

Determination to Uphold the Monroe Doctrine Means That Country Has to Keep In Position to Make Itself Respected.

While Colonel Roosevelt has been ching the necessity of living up the Monroe Doctrine, not agreeing keeping peace treaties which might to be carried out, and building a sufficient to make this nation re-ted, people have listened to him, with a feeling that his discussions more or less academic. Such timents, men have thought,
ld have carried more weight a cen-ago, when there was really dan-of world-wide war. The present is too civilized. Why be so exsed over the possibility of nations ting when the age of peace has
?

recent events in Europe have an impression of right stern
y to his words on these subjects.
nsider, for instance, the effect of Monroe Doctrine at this time. As el Roosevelt points out, if the erican continent had become the of European colonization it would ficult if not impossible to keep from the great struggle now on in Europe. Certainly such a tion would involve the United in the necessity for the huge ments that have been impoverishthe continent.

the United States is to maintain Monroe Doctrine, then the matter arbitration treaties becomes of atest importance. The Monroe rine is not recognized in the courts nations. It is maintained only the United States. Suppose, as Roosevelt says, Denmark or
, both of which own islands in West Indies, should be drawn into r and be compelled to cede West Indian possessions to a ropean military power. Then, le year of investigation pro-by the pending treaties, the uld convert the island into a r and the United States would the alternatives of submission beginning war at a disadvantage.
ke the case of the Panama which a few years ago many felt should be neutralized and without fortification. That prop-n would be fine in a world from war had been banished. But doption would have left America less today if any great power had ed to violate the neutrality.

am not taking sides one way or other as concerns the violation or gard of treaties," Colonel Roose-says. "When giants are engaged a death wrestle as they reel to and they are certain to trample on who-er gets in the way of either of the straining combatants, unless it dangerous to do so."

the present stage of civilization
United States cannot afford to com-itself to any policy which will not it dangerous for any of the strugmilitary nations of Europe to mple on it.

Day of Individualism Gone.

thing is more certain than that day of individualism has passed.
, having become itself collect-must adjust itself to deal with ollectivism of labor. That labor be made responsible in its col-form may be argued justly.
mployer who protests against sponsibility of the union with he is asked to enter into con-relations has much to say for onableness of his contention.
wever, involves possibilities and serious consideration. It mean, probably, the passing of t union and the curse of the tional strike. But the employuld have to face the strength of industrial union and the prospect neral strike in case of disagree-
In the Socialist belief the com-of the industrial union is a step the economic revolution they
t.

Methods Must Be Reformed.

regards the tariff, remember that Payne-Aldrich bill was a vicious on the one side, just as the pres-bill is a vicious bill on the other said Colonel Roosevelt in a re-speech. The two bills were made exactly the same methods and long as these methods are con-
, just so long violent reaction ay will be followed by violent on the other way. If you put in the Republican organization, un-the lead of Messrs. Penrose,
, Gallinger and the others
hold upon it is as yet unshaken, will insure another violent revul-the swing of the pendulum alter-from one unhealthy extreme to her unhealthy extreme.

Good Business Proposition.

one chance of accomplishing re-worth having is to adopt the Proive platform as regards the tariff, ests, and as regards both busi-and labor. A tariff commission partisan experts, if as efficientified as the German tariff com-
, will do for this country what rman tariff commission through has done for Germany. We asking you to try experiments, asking you to go into a plain proposition which has proved cellence.—Theodore Roosevelt.

NIGHT MEN MUST BE CHOSEN

Members of Interstate Trade Commission Will Have Most Serious Duties to Perform.

No simple task will confront the executive who is called upon to appoint the members of the proposed interstate trade commission. So many prerogatives have been given to this commission that great harm may be done to the business world unless the right kind of men are appointed.

There are but two real bankers on the federal reserve board, but the other members are familiar with banking and financial methods. It will be far more difficult to obtain the right kind of men for the interstate trade commission. The only way to be absolutely certain that the business world will not be made the victim of false theories and radical notions is to appoint business men on the commission.

Even the appointment of business men will not make the business world feel wholly safe in view of the extraordinary scope that has been given to the commissioners to harass corporations. The proposed board will have the right to set up shop in any corporation's office, asking for all books and papers and requesting the testimony of each employe. If the commissioners desired to do so, they might interrupt the business of a firm for months.

Every conceivable sort of business problem will come before the commission. The members will have to know all about the steel, woolen, silk, pottery, lumber, and every other business. They will have to know all about freight rates and financial matters. Delving into every business, they will have to understand it in detail in order to do it justice.

It is hard enough to obtain the services of a man to head one corporation and give satisfaction to all the stockholders. Such a man must understand his business thoroughly, and he commands a high salary. The trade commissioners, however, will have to understand every business, and yet will receive the salary that is usually paid to a superintendent who understands only one branch of one business.

Indiana Progressive Party.

"There is nothing more significant of the breaking of party lines than the open avowal of Democrats, by the scores and hundreds, that they are done with the old organization and henceforth will be found in the Progressive column," said Bernard B. Shively the other day. "I have spoken in dozens of places in this state since April, and at each place I have been approached by former Democrats, never fewer than three, and sometimes as many as a dozen, who come out squarely and say they are for the Progressives and will vote and work for the party's ticket this year. I should say that the first reason for their stand is their admiration of Beveridge. He has always had a strong independent following, and it grows each hour. More than that, the program of tariff legislation which Beveridge originated gains new converts. Then add to this fact their thorough disgust with machine domination of the Democratic party, and it is easy to see why they will be Progressives in this campaign and hereafter."—Indianapolis Star.

Progressive Party's Aims.

"We members of the Progressive party, are committed to the development of a homogeneous and balanced economic social program. Mr. Murdock and other members of the house of representatives and senate who in congress have so ably represented the Progressive party and the people, have shown an enlightened understanding of the need for this rounded and balanced program. They have introduced the Murdock trust bills, the tariff commission bill, and the bill for the creation of a federal employment bureau, as well as a bill for the abolition of child labor. The unwisdom of the opponents of the Progressives who dominate affairs in Washington has blocked these reforms, and thereby has emphasized the need of our demand for a reform of political machinery, notably the reform of the presidential nominating system."—Theodore Roosevelt in his speech at Hartford, Conn.

Is a Political Administration.

The purposes of the administration are purely political. There is no man in it, least of all the president, who has had any serious experience on the constructive side of business. But they know something of the game of politics. They realize that there is abroad in the country a sentiment against the trusts. They have formulated measures intended to cajole this sentiment and are pushing them through a reluctant congress simply as a movement in the general scheme of popular politics, with little or no regard to effects as they relate to constitutional rights or to the business life of the country.

Evils to Be Eliminated.

It is natural that the employer should resent what he calls an attempt to "run his business," whether by the edict of a labor union or the regulation of government. He too, is forced to socialize his interests by organization, and out of the social unrest springs social friction. There are oppressive and unfust employers, and there are venal and criminal agents of the working class. These are evils incident to the situation that must be met with impartial severity in order that they may be eliminated.

W. L. DOUGLAS

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY by wearing the W. L. Douglas shoes because for 31 years I have guaranteed their value by having my name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory, which protects the wearer against high prices for inferior shoes of other makes. The W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them.

The next time you need shoes, look in the shoe dealer's window for W. L. Douglas shoes. Try a pair and you will be convinced that for style, fit and wear, they are unequalled for the price.

If the W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your vicinity, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 180 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Films Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
Department K Birmingham, Ala.

REDUCE living expenses. Most profitable cut of beef, lamb, pork. How to make dainty dishes of stale bread. Foundation salad for unexpected guests; keeps indefinitely. Thousands economical recipes of all nations. 25c each. Housekeepers Economy Bureau, Box 95, Washington, D. C.

SEND 10c TODAY and get 8 games; chess, checkers, fox and geese, nine men, Morris, Authors, introduction game, Spanish prison, dominoes; a whole year's amusement for only 10c. Jos. Richter, 307 Wis., Chicago.

EARN BIG weekly salary addressing envelopes spare time. Full particulars 10c, coin. Norernie Spec. Co., 2518R Beekman St., Cincinnati, O.

PRESTO—Wonderful secret process razor strop. Perfect edge in a few strokes. Sent postpaid and guaranteed for $1. JANAY PRODUCTS CO., 324Diamond, Pittsburgh,Pa.

POST CARDS—Don't overlook this offer, 15 different beautiful mountain views for 25c. D. J. REAGAN, 3346 Lanier, Denver, Colo.

EITHER SEX—Clear $3 daily; experience unnecessary. Send 50c silver for samples. Wholesale Dept., 536 Main St., Cincinnati, O.

$60 MONTHLY made in spare time; no selling or canvassing. JUDGE CO., 25A BIVOUAC AVENUE, DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

POSITION WANTED by experienced gas tractor engineer; also experienced on auto trucks; good refs. G. Chaffee, Newfield, N. Y.

FOR LIST of lands in best and most healthful section of Arkansas, write HAM, CRAIG & WEBBER, Box 94, Batesville, Arkansas.

SEND your combings or cut hair to Sammt's Hair Shop, Mankato, Minn., to make a switch, $1.50; hair fob, $2.50.

RENT OR SALE—Splendid located rice mill, box factory, cornmeal, grits, feed. Full supply raw materials. Rice Mill, Jeanerette, La.

BURGLAR ALARMS—New invention; safe and sure. 2 complete sets, $1 postpaid. A. BOGSTAD, 4324 Cottage Grove, Chicago, Ill.

BUY NOW—Wear all winter, prevents sore throat, tonsilitus. Price $1. W. WALLACE, BOX 233, ALBERT LEA, MINNESOTA.

MY COURSE of instructions and receipts will make you independent for life. Send $1 today. Addr. 301 EmpireBldg., Oklahoma,Ok.

BARGAIN—Limited number of $3 Automatic Razor Sharpeners going for $1.50, while they last. Order now. Nov. Co., B. 307, Tifton, Ga.

LET ME write your name fancy on cards. Everybody admires beautiful names. Send for samples. H. Coleman, Minnewaska, N. Y.

$10 REWARD for any case of constipation we cannot cure without drugs. GUARANTEE SALES CO., Box 183, San Antonio, Texas.

$18 WEEKLY easily made selling our goods. Send 25c for sample. R. NORRIS CO., 1009 S. PURDUN ST., KOKOMO, INDIANA.

Abbreviated.

"Here we are, Maria," he exclaimed gleefully; "you wanted to see those stunning bathing costumes you've been reading so much about, and here we are at the beach with the bathers all around us."

"I see the bathers," she replied, severely, "but where are the costumes?"

EAS-IT
Is absolutely GUARANTEED by your DRUGGIST to relieve any Headache from Mental Worry or Overwork, Indigestion Pains, Heartburn, Colic, Cramps, or Toothache. Your money back if you want it. Contains NO Opiate. Ask Your Druggist. Adv.

A Painful Proceeding.

"I tell you, I was ostraeized by that snobbish crowd at the hotel."

"Dear me! Did it hurt?"

NEVER HAD A CHILL
After Taking ELIXIR BABEK
"My little daughter, 10 years old, suffered nearly a year with chills and fever, most of the time under the doctor's care. I was discouraged and a friend advised me to try Elixir Babek. I gave it to her and she has never had a chill since. It completely cured her." Mrs. Cyrus Helms, 303 E St., N. E., Washington, D. C.
Elixir Babek 50 cents, all druggists or by Parcels Post prepaid from Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

Overwork drives almost as many people to nervous prostration as overrest does.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

There is no reason why even an absent-minded man shouldn't have a good presence.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

It is better not to assume that a woman's pretty face is a map of her character.

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE KISS

Learned English Authority Has Divided Osculation into Two Distinct Types.

In a learned disquisition on kisses Sir Ray Lankester divides them into two classes. "One class takes the form of nose-rubbing—each kiss giver rubbing his nose against that of the other. The second kind, which is that familiar to us, consists in pressing the lips against the lips, skin or hair of another individual and making a short, quick inspiration, resulting in a more or less audible sound. Both kinds are really of the nature of 'sniffing,' the active effort to smell or explore by the olfactory sense. The kissing of one another by grown-up men was abandoned in this country in the eighteenth century; but we have most of us witnessed it abroad, and perhaps been unexpectedly subjected to the process, as I once was by an affectionate scientific colleague. The Russians are the most profuse and indiscriminate of European peoples in their kissing. I have seen a Russian about to go on a journey devoured by the kisses of his relations and household retainers, male and female."

RASH ON CHILD'S HEAD

2127 Division St., Baltimore, Md.—"The trouble on my child's face and head appeared as a rash and then it got so that the skin looked drawn and water and blood would run out. That would cause a scab and her head and face were a mass of sores. They would crack and bleed and then her head began to get scaly and I thought it was dandruff. I started to take the scab off and found her head was a mass of them. When she would cry it seemed worse because the water would stream down her face and itch and she would dig and scratch. Her little head was bald as it was so sore that all the hair came out. My baby used to cry at night and I could not sleep.

"Then I decided to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would make a lather of the Cuticura Soap but her face and head were so sore I hated to touch them so I would take a soft cloth and wash her head. After I dried it with a soft towel I would gently apply the Cuticura Ointment. With the first treatment I could see a change in my baby and before I used the whole treatment she was completely healed and her skin is beautiful." (Signed) Mrs. Lillie Owens, Jan. 31, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

An Optimist.

Ex-Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, who established a policemen's public library that has been a great success, praised, at a luncheon in New York, New York's police system.

"It has especially been good since Mayor Gaynor's day," Mr. Waldo said, and then, in response to an objection:

"Oh, that's nothing. Be an optimist. Don't mind trifles. Look, like the henpecked husband, on the bright side of things.

"'By gosh,' a henpecked husband said, 'I hear some chaps kicking because their wives always have the last word. Now, for my part, to give my wife the last word never bothers me a bit.'

"'It don't!'

"'No, on the contrary, I always feel thankful when she gets to it.'"

A Short Stay.

"A tramp told me a curious hard luck story yesterday."

"What was it about?"

"He said he went to Mexico to work on a rubber plantation and he hadn't been there a week before he was bounced."

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher
In Use For Over 30 Years.
Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

She Had a Kind Heart.

Tramp—Please, mum, I ain't had a full stummick for three weeks.

Housekeeper (benevolently)—Too bad! Well, you go somewhere and beg a meal of dried apples, and I will furnish the water.

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. The first application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

Intermittent.

Knicker—Any luck?

Bocker—No, the fish seemed to be in part time schools.

How To Give Quinine To Children
FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for genuine original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 50 cents.

Don't try to put up a bluff until you have thoroughly tested the foundations.

TO TAKE ELABORATE CENSUS

Statistics of the Prevalence and Possible Spread of Tuberculosis Will Be Ascertained.

A tuberculosis census of thousands of churches in various parts of the country will be taken in September, under the direction of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The census will be part of the preparation for the fifth annual Tuberculosis day, to be observed during the week of November 29. The ministers of several thousand churches will be asked to report on the number of deaths from tuberculosis in the last year, the number of living cases in their parishes on September 1, the number of deaths from all causes, and the number of members or communicants. These figures will be made the basis of an educational campaign, which will culminate in the Tuberculosis day movement, for which occasion sermons and lecture outlines and other forms of tuberculosis literature will be distributed free to ministers.

Last year nearly 75,000 churches, schools and other bodies took part in the Tuberculosis day observance. The movement had the indorsement of leading church officials of every denomination. More than 1,200 anti-tuberculosis societies, scattered all over the country, will work this year to make Tuberculosis day a success.

NO EXCUSE FOR EARLY RISING

Man Who Gets Up at Dawn Is Stupid, Is Assertion Made by Father Dwight.

The arrogance of the man who arises to the minor heroism of a cold bath has been complained of by less heroic folk who arise to a tepid or warm one. To be set apart by the ability to stand the shock of cold water has seemed to less vigorous folk an unsubstantial claim to immortality. It lacks moral sufficiency and is too much made of by the cold bathers.

Another arrogance is given consideration by the Rev. Walter Dwight, S. J., in America. It is the arrogance of early risers. Father Dwight denies them heroism and enters into doubt as to their intelligence. As a rule he finds them a "notably arrogant set," appearing to believe that they move on a "higher ethical plane."

Every normal human being, not given ordinarily to early rising, but being on occasion tempted or forced into it, has felt the strange spiritual afflatus, the moral patting on the back in consequence thereof. The feeling that a good deed has been done for a naughty world is inexplicable, but supreme.

Father Dwight is remorseless. The early riser is the least intelligent of mankind.

GOODYEAR TIRES AT ANTE-BELLUM PRICES

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. announce "No war prices on Goodyear Tires." Mr. F. A. Sieberling, president of the Company, thus explains their unique position.

"We advanced Goodyear prices, as others did theirs, when the rubber panic came. Almost in a day crude rubber rose in New York from 55 cents per pound to much over a dollar.

"The New York supply was too small to consider. We cabled our London people to buy up the pick of the rubber there. By acting quickly and paying cash they obtained 1,500,000 pounds of the finest rubber.

"That big supply of rubber is now nearly all on the way to the Goodyear factory in Akron. It constitutes the best of the London supply.

"We are using the same grade of rubber and the same amount of it as we always have used in these tires.

"We are running our factory with three shifts of men, twenty-four hours a day. So long as we remain in this fortunate position on rubber, we shall supply the users at before-war prices to the limit of our capacity."

Prudent.

"Sire, if you will show yourself along the line of battle your soldiers will be inspired to perform prodigies of valor."

"Perhaps so, my dear general, but the enemy's gunners might also be inspired to shoot as they have never shot before."

A "Cafe de Luxe."

Willie—Pa, what is a "cafe de luxe?"

Pa—About 10 per cent cafe and 90 per cent looks.—Life.

Many a man who starts at the foot of the ladder manages by great grit and determination to be there at the finish.

Some people who think twice before they speak only succeed in saying something worse.

Sore Eyes Granulated Eyelids, Eyes inflamed by exposure to Sun, Dust and Wind quickly relieved by Murine Eye Remedy. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. At Your Druggist's 50c per Bottle. Murine Eye Salve in Tubes 25c. For Book of the Eye free ask Druggists or Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

IN ALL OUR NEIGHBORHOOD

There Is Hardly A Woman Who Does Not Rely Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Princeton, Ill.—"I had inflammation, hard headaches in the back of my neck and a weakness all caused by female trouble, and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with such excellent results that I am now feeling fine. I recommend the Compound and praise it to all. I shall be glad to have you publish my letter. There is scarcely a neighbor around me who does not use your medicine."—Mrs. J. F. JOHNSON, R. No. 4, Box 30, Princeton, Illinois.

Experience of a Nurse.

Poland, N.Y.—"In my experience as a nurse I certainly think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a great medicine. I wish all women with female troubles would take it. I took it when passing through the Change of Life with great results and I always recommend the Compound to all my patients if I know of their condition in time. I will gladly do all I can to help others to know of this great medicine."—Mrs. HORACE NEWMAN, Poland, Herkimer Co., N. Y.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

The Wretchedness of Constipation
Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.
Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.
Genuine must bear Signature
Brent Good
Pettit's Eye Salve FOR WEAK SORE EYES

Out of a Job.

"I used to be well off before the war started."

"Poor man, is that so? And what was your business?"

"I was a lecturer for international peace."—Detroit Free Press.

RUB-MY-TISM
Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

Unquestionably.

"Which would you rather be—a chauffeur or an aviator?"

"Well, the latter is the higher position."

To Heal Galls and Keep on Working

HANFORD'S
Balsam of Myrrh
For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.
Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.
Price 25c, 50c and $1.00
All Dealers OR WRITE G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 18 to 30 days. Trial treatment sent free. Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Specialist, Dr. H. H. Green Sons, Box G, Atlanta, Ga.

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 32, 1916.

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

PUBLIC FAVOR

Public approval is absolutely essential to the successful operation of a public utility corporation.

The business can not be conducted without the public consent, called a "franchise." Franchises must from time to time be granted, extended, and renewed.

A franchise having been granted, the public must regard the enterprise with sufficient favor to invest its money, because there is no individual, or small group of individuals, sufficiently wealthy to finance the construction and equipment of a great railroad.

Once the franchise is granted and the construction and equipment is financed, a group of people—in many instances a very great many people—must regard the enterprise with sufficient favor to undertake its operation. These individuals constitute officials and employees.

Put into operation, the enterprise must be regarded with sufficient public favor to gain public patronage, for without patronage the enterprise is destined to failure.

Having gained public patronage, the enterprise must render a specific service for which the public is favorably disposed to pay a fair price.

The enterprise itself must be favorably disposed, not only towards the individuals who constitute its patrons, but towards the virgin, or undeveloped, territory through which its lines operate.

The L. & N. writes of these things because public favor, or approval, is the keynote of success. The L. & N. calls attention to the fact, to advise the people that the L. & N. places a proper, a profound, value on public approval. We are striving in every possible way to merit public favor.

Our service is second to no railroad in the country. Our equipment is all that could be demanded by a critical people. Our rates are fair and just. Our disposition is one of mutual interest with the people for co-operative development of the territory through which our lines operate.

We solicit your freight and passenger patronage, and through the service rendered hope to merit and maintain your favorable opinion.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

Mt. Pleasant

Farmers of this community are quite busy trying to gather their cotton crop, not knowing whether they will be able to sell it or not.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Crawford of Shelby spent Sunday night with G. H. Massey and wife.

Mr. J. L. Hurst of montgomery has been visiting Messrs G. W. and G. D. Melton.

Mr. R. F. Sims and wife visited at J. P. Smith's last Sunday.

Misses Lou and Pearl Thomas recently visited near Billingsley.

Mr. Bud Littlejohn and family recenly visited at W. H. Foshees

Mr. Stephens of Beat 14 spent one night last week with L. O. Vickers.

Mrs. Amanda Green who is in the millinely busines at Jemison spent Saturday night with her brother, Mr. G. H. Massey.

Mr. Bob Cooty spent Saturday night with Mr. J. P. Thomas.

A crowd from here visited Lock 12 Sunday.

Mrs. Burnett is back home after a stay of several weeks at Sylacauga.

J. D. Wesson of Memphis is at home for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Scroggins visited the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. Billy Dunlap near Highland.

There will be a singing at this place the third Sunday evening in the old books. Sunday school will be at one o'clock.

The word DEMOCRACY should be in big letters these days

Little Viewer.

Chronic Spring Fever.

Surprising as it may seem, a lot of people in the temperate zone, with four seasons a year, have chronic spring fever.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Prepare For

SYRUP MAKING

Send Us Your Mail Orders

We can supply you with Syrup Kegs, Barrels and Cans, and copper for Syrup Pans.

You will need Brick, Lime and Cement for foundations and other purposes, all of which you can get at our place.

Clanton Hardware Co.

Succcessors to

Gamble Hardware Co.

DON'T HURT YOUR LIVER WITH CALOMEL

When your liver becomes torpid and sluggish, you can take calomel and whip it into action, but the calomel will leave your body weaker and sicker than ever. Calomel is a very powerful drug, a torm of mercury, and need never be used because there is a perfect remedy to take the place of calomel, that has all of calomel's good medicinal effects with none of its dangerous and uncertain follow-ups. Its name is Dodson's Liver Tone.

Alred Drug Company sell Dodson's Liver Tone with the guarantee that if you don't find that it treats you much better than calomel, they will give you your money back with a smile. Dodson's Liver Tone is a true tonic for the liver, purely vegetable, and with such a pleasant taste that it is no trouble to get children to take it. It is absolutely impossible for it to do anyone any harm.

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug Co.,
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.

Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —

MONUMENTS

AND GRAVESTONES

Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by

J. K. T. Daniel

CLANTON, ALA.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS

PHYSICIAN & SURGEON

Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.

Office 7th Street. CLANTON, ALA

SUPPOSE YOU!

When you want a tender steak, a superb roast or some delicious chops or chicken QUICK come here and your dinner wont be late. Our quality is of the highest standard—All our meats are of pure prime excellence.

Prices as low as the market permits.

J. McRae Mercantile Co.

COME TO THE BIG

Auction Lot Sal

AND

Free Barbecue A

Maplesville, Thursday, September 17th.

10:00 A.M., Rain or Shine.

FREE! $7.00 in Gold; Big Barbecue Din Brass Band Entertainment; and m Valuable Presents. COME ONE!! COME AL

One-Fourth Cash; Balance in 6, 12 and 18 Mon

The Big Barbecue Will be Entirely Free

And there will be music by fine brass band, and a good time is guaranteed to all who attend. Hear speeches by the most prominent men in the county; also by Col. June Pierce, the famous Orator and Singer, who will conduct the Sale. Ladies are invited to come and draw on the many valuable prizes, that will be given away absolutely FREE.
$5.00 will be paid to the person bringing the largest number of people on one vehicle.

Remember These Few Little Fa

These lots are in the best dence and Business secti Maplesville, and are being veloped in a high class ma

They are being offered on that have never been before. These Sales are Maplesville has been on for a number of years.

Now watch it grow. Buy and get advantage of incre values.

Meet us at the grand Auction Sale at Maples Thursday, September 17; 10:00 A.M. Rain or S

National Developin Company.

Prayer Meeting.

An all day prayer meeting, was held at Corinth Sunday, August 21. Being the first service of this kind we have had, it was attended by a large number of people. Rev. Hughes spoke on "The power of prayar." A number of experiences and prayers by those who partook in the service made it a day of great spiritual value. We hope to hear of others of its kind.

FOR SALE—3 milk cows 2 giving milk one due to freshen December 8 next 4 Bred Jersy heifers, 2 Jersey bulls, one 17 months old, one 6 months old sire and grand sire Registered.
This September 5th, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

Place your orders with us at once for Crimson and Burr Clover Seed. On account of the European War clover seed will get to be very scarce and hign in the near future. Alred Drug Company.

FOR SALE—One good horse perfectly gentle, which I will sell very reasonable.
Hewitt L. Foshee
Route 1 Thorsby Ala.

Purifies Blood With Telling Effect

Gives Conscious Evidence of Its Direct Action.

S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, almost talks as it sweeps its way through the circulation. Its action is so direct that very often in some forms of skin affliction the appearance of the eruptions changes over night, the itch and redness are gone and recovery begins immediately.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 534 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a competent Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder or a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores, but beware of all substitutes. Do not accept them.

Notice

I have this day bou interest of Dr. A. M. the firm of Woolley Jemison Ala., and ass standing claims agai and will collect all cl firm. I respectifully patronage in the futu
L. P.
9-3-3t Jem

REV. J. L. N

This venerable geo at his home near Be August 31st. He was in his part of the cou a Confederate vet Baptist minister. De casioned by a stroke sis.

Ain't It So

On an auto drive, a auto drive carefully.—W Companion.

NOTICE

I desire to anno people that my hors the Comer horse, is b ready for service, su Will be in Clanton 7th, 15th, 23rd. Ho September 1st, 9th, 1
H.

THE

3 THE UNION 1

HOWISON ON FARMERS SITUATION

ndolph, Ala., Sept. 15, 1914
Editor:—Suggestions seem in order as to what the ern farmers shall do in the 1915 to save themselves starvation.

suggestions are as follows: use of commercial fertilizer cause of the over produc- of cotton. This being true, armers should not use a on their 1915 crop. By ing any commercial ferti- they will not only reduce roduction, (which seems to ecessary) but they will themselves millions of dol- hat they spend for fertilizer. them put their cotton seed on their cotton and corn if they can not get a fair for them, or can not ex- e them at one ton of seed e ton of 8 and 1-2 per cent each one sow at least one f their best land in wheat ule, five acres of oats or per mule, and plant cow every acre of corn that nt.

should buy as little as from the stores and have ardens and eat vegetables s meat; buy no CocaCola ss whiskey. If they will s, take my word, at the 1915 they will be in better ion than they have been years.

s is not written to hurt the er people, but they can this better than farmers and the over production of , and they will be saved uble of hustling for a sub- for potash.

Allen P. Howison.

rsby boy held Theft Charge

noxville, Tenn., Sept. 15. C. Smith, of Thorsby, boy of 17 years, was ar- by Knoxville detectives for the theft of $1,000 he Southern Express Com- office at Thorsby, Sept. 7, been left temporarily in the office.

le his way to Atlanta, he paid $550 of the money heap automobile, in which e his way by easy stages gville. He arrived here y morning and was just ng to leave the city, hav- ven half way across the ssee River bridge leading the city when detectives, d just located him, over- him in another car.

officers say he confessed, med the car, a watch, dia- pin and $300 dollars over officers, who will take Birmingham tomorrow er him to Thorsby offi-

olic Speakings

e will be public speaking nterest of the Progressive Chilton connty at the ng times and places:
Roads School House, Tuesday, September 22, o'clock, p.m.
Grove, Beat 2, Thursday, ber, 24th, seven o'clock, ters of whatever political n, are cordially invited sent, and hear the pres- paign; they will be pre- by able and competent

A BUS ORGAN

A Busi been org which in ly every man and The inter from the probably war. Th much fa

The m Chilton c mitte of Reynolds diately lo J.Samfor Attorney federal p ton oil m tering int press the seed.

Judge lect the leave her this matt

Coun Off

To the H and Co county Gentleme I beg t the mont ed by law jail and both to b

All the births an lowing: ison, Al Ridervill Bose, Sta

All mi The lows: Births, w tal 59. Deaths, tal 19.

The fo tious dise have bee Tubercul scarlet fe pellagra,

The g phoid Fe be at Ma place on very unsa I think th will corre

I also b tention o to the p the north county, t severe th section ar The cou have bot and foun satisfactor

Resp

Co

Singing the Waldr day. Mil ed. Bring the day.

C

Porf. Ja at this pl Jemison, S 20, beginn will be a and others

HE BIG Lot Sal
ecue A September 17th.
n or Shine.
Big Barbecue Di
ertainment; and m
ONE!! COME A 6, 12 and 18 Mo
emember These Few Little F
se lots are in the best nce and Business secti plesville, and are being oped in a high class ma
ey are being offered on t have never been k
fore. These Sales are plesville has been w
for a number of years.
w watch it grow. Buy
d get advantage of incre ues.
n Sale at Maples
00 A.M. Rain or S evelopin any.
Effect
dence of on.
rifier, almost ough the cir-
ct that very affliction the changes over re gone and one ingredie active purlar part of licious selecment. That supply; why nce in over-and all skin
ues S. S. S. idotal effect uences that weak eyes,
s, and that that is genever. Get a store, and in l bright and picture of only in the fic Co., 534 maintain a nt, where all a stubborn dvice and a
S. S. is sold artment and substitutes.

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 23

Register Chancery 2 April 2

HOWISON ON FARMERS SITUATION

dolph, Ala., Sept. 15, 1914
Editor:—Suggestions seem in order as to what the rn farmers shall do in the 1915 to save themselves arvation.

uggestions are as follows: se of commercial fertilizer cause of the over produc- cotton. This being true, rmers should not use a on their 1915 crop. By g any commercial ferti- hey will not only reduce duction, (which seems to cessary) but they will emselves millions of dol- t they spend for fertilizer. hem put their cotton seed n their cotton and corn they can not get a fair r them, or can not ex- them at one ton of seed ton of 8 and 1-2 per cent ch one sow at least one their best land in wheat five acres of oats or mule, and plant cow ery acre of corn that t.

hould buy as little as from the stores and have dens and eat vegetables me at; buy no CocaCola whiskey. If they will take my word, at the 1915 they will be in better ion than they have been years.

is not written to hurt the er people, but they can this better than farmers tand the over production of on, and they will be saved trouble of hustling for a sub- e for potash.

Allen P. Howison.

orsby boy held Theft Charge

oxville, Tenn., Sept. 15.
C. Smith, of Thorsby, boy of 17 years, was ar- by Knoxville detectives or the theft of $1,000 e Southern Express Com- ffice at Thorsby, Sept. 7, een left temporarily in the office.

e his way to Atlanta, paid $550 of the money p automobile, in which his way by easy stages ile. He arrived here morning and was just to leave the city, hav- n half way across the ee River bridge leading e city when detectives, just located him, over- him in another car.

officers say he confessed, ed the car, a watch, dia- and $300 dollars over officers, who will take Birmingham tomorrow him to Thorsby offi-

lic Speakings

will be public speaking erest of the Progressive Chilton connty at the times snd places:
Roads School House, Tuesday, September 22, o'clock, p.m.
rove, Beat 2, Thursday, er, 24th, seven o'clock, rs of whatever political , are cordially invited ent, and hear the pres- ign; they will be pre- able and competent

A BUSINESS LEAGUE IS ORGANIZED IN CHILTON

A Business Men's League has been organized in this county which includes as members nearly every banker, professional man and merchant in the county The intention is to afford relief from the stringency that will probably occur owing to the war. The movement meets with much favor.

The meeting of the citizens of Chilton county appointed a committe of three,—Judge L. H. Reynolds, Chairman, that immediately lodged a complaint to T. J.Samford, United States District Attorney, with the view to bring federal prosecution against cotton oil mills of Alabama for entering into a conspiracy to depress the market value of cotton seed.

Judge L. H. Reynolds is to select the two other men and will leave here immediately to press this matter.

County Health Officer's Report

To the Honerable Probate Judge and Commissioners of Chilton county.
Gentlemen:—

I beg to submit my report for the month of August. As required by law, I inspected the county jail and poor-house and found both to be in good condition.

All the doctors have reported births and deaths except the following: Dr. A. M. Wooley, Jemison, Ala., Dr. W. A. Mason, Riderville, Ala. and Dr. J. J. DuBose, Stanton, Ala.

All midwives have reported.

The vital statistics are as follows:
Births, white 55; colored 4; Total 59.
Deaths, white 14; colored 5; Total 19.

The following cases of infectious diseases were reported and have been carefully looked after: Tuberculosis, 1; diphtheria, 4; scarlet fever, 12; typhoid fever, 10; pellagra, 18.

The greatest number of Typhoid Fever cases seems to now be at Maplesville. I visited that place on the 6th, Inst., and found very unsanitary conditions which I think the people of Maplesville will correct in the near future.

I also beg leave to call the attention of your honorable body to the prevalence of malaria in the northeastern portion of our county, the conditions being so severe that some people in that section are deserting their homes. The county nurse and myself have both visited this section and found conditions very unsatisfactory.

Respectfully submited
V. J. Gragg, M. D.,
County Health Officer.

Notice

Singing next Sunday 20th, at the Waldrup school House. All day. Miles V. Lawley is expected. Bring your dinner and spend the day. Will use the old Books.

Singer.

Oak Hill

Porf. James Franklin will sing at this place, one mile east of Jemison, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 20, beginning at two o'clock. He will be assisted by Prof. Glass and others. Everybody invited.

J. B. N.

BUSINESS LEAGUE OF CHILTON COUNTY MEET

The members of the Chilton County Business League, composed of farmers, merchants and business men of the county, met at the court house Friday for the purpose of discussing ways and means for aiding the farmers in the disposition of the cotton crop. A large and representative number of citizens from all over the county were present and showed a universal interest in the meeting.

Numbers of men present made speeches along various lines relating to the emergency. County demonstrator W. H. Conway, made a thorough explanation of the value of clover growing to the farmer, showing the great saving that would thereby be made in the cost of fertilizer.

Reports of committees who had made various investigations were made. Direct information was given the farmers regarding the hope of aid from the banks, which indicated that not only the cotton grower, but all other business men, are under the same handicap at the present time.

Possibly the most urging point to be considered by the meeting was the methods of extending aid to the farmer who is under obligations to merchants, and is depending on his cotton to carry him over. To meet this necessity a resolution was passed, stating that the merchant would allow the farmer 8 cents per pound for his cotton on debts, with the provision that the merchant hold the cotton four months in the hope of better price; but with the farmer's privilige to order the cotton sold within that time if he should so desire. If the cotton were to be sold for more than the stated eight cents, the farmer would get the benefit of the difference; if for less than eight cents, the farmer to be required to make up the difference.

It was expressed by some members of the meeting that their belief was that the oil mills of the state were combined against the farmer to hold the price of cotton seed down and keep the price of cotton seed products up. A committee was appointed to carry these charges before the U. S. district court for investigation.

Something For Your Money

We will send you The Union-Banner and The Montgomery Daily Times one year for $2.00; or we will send you The Union-Banner together with The Alabama Weekly Times a year for $1.00

These liberal offers are strictly for cash in advance. The Montgomery Daily Times is a clean, well edited paper and is dedicated to the service of the citizens of Alabama.

THE UNION-BANNER
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. Higgins Suddenly Disappears

The sudden disappearance of Doctor J. V. Higgins, the well known jeweler and doctor of optics, from Clanton last Friday is wrapped in a mantle of the deepest mystery. For several years Dr. Higgins has been a prominent and progressive business man here, and the way he has so suddenly closed his doors and disappeared, leaving his family and business, is very unique. The various opinions that one may hear expressed regarding the matter compose many different theories of the affair; but they all come together in agreement upon one thing—that he has gone from Clanton.

Along with the disappearance of Dr. Higgins is also the fact that a young lady living near here who has been for some time enployed in his store, has also taken her leave of these parts, and has not been seen in several days. Whether the two incidents are in any way connected, no one here is able to affirm.

Nothing definite is known about the condition in which Dr. Higgins' business is left, but it is the general talk that he leaves his affairs in good shape.

Cotton at Ten Cents a Pound

Thorsby Institute to help set the price.

The trustees of Thorsby Institute believe that cotton is worth at least ten cents per pound. They believe that every one who can should "buy a bale" at ten cents. The school is not in a position to invest any money in cotton at present, but it will do what may be even bettet for the farmer.

Thorsby Institute will accept properly certified cotton warehouse receipts for cotton upon a basis of not less than ten cents per pound, middling cotton, in advance payment of board and tuition for the present school year, which began Sept. 8, 1914.

This cotton will be held until January 15, 1915, and if at that time it can be sold for more than ten cents per pound, the original owner will receive the increase, less the cost of holding. If the cotton cannot be sold for as much as ten cents per pound at that time the school will bear the loss.

We hope that this plan will make it possible for a number of young men and women who want to enter school, but have not seen how they counld under present conditions, to enter at once. Any one interested in the proposition is invited to correspond with the Principal, S. H. Herbert, Thorsby, Ala.

Everybody Come

To Union Grove next Saturday night. The Ladies of this community will have a box supper to secure money to help pay for the painting of the church.

Come one and all but please do not bring any whiskey.

One of the girls.

FOR SALE—69 acres good farm land, 35 acres open, good water, one good 6 room dwelling and out buildings, located 3 1-2 miles south of Clanton. If interested apply J. H. Bassinger 9-3-3t Verbena Ala. Route 1.

Politics As Seen By J. M. Mims.

Editor Union-Banner: Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words on the political issue. As I see things today it seems to me that every man in this county and state should get to work and use every effort in his power to elect the Progressive tioket this year. I do not see how the democrats can defend their administration in this county, in the state or in the nation. I wish to say that I was at Collins Chapel Monday night at the speaking and there was one of the largest and most enthusiastic crowds that I have ever seen at a political meeting in my life. It seems that the people are wide awake to their interest and I believe that they will show this very plain on election day.

It is right amusing to see how the Clanton Press dodges the real issue and tries to convert the people's minds to personal things instead of the issue. I cannot understand why they do not discuss the issues that are before the people, which the people are so interested in, instead of making such statements as appeared in that paper about the county not owing anything and again about the speaking at Cane Creek. I would like to ask the people, who is responsible for such statements, and who is backing up that paper and enabling it to mis represent the facts and work against the interest of the farmers of this county. Who is the President of the Clanton Press Company, and what business is he engaged in in Clanton? Who is the Chairman of the Democratic committee of this county, and what business is be engaged in? I believe that the people should think of these things and trade with the men that are using their efforts to aid the farmers, and not trade with and help those people in Clanton who are doing everything in their power against the farmers.

How many of the merchants in Clanton are there who are backing up the Clanton Press and enabling them to do as they are doing? How many of them are stockholders in the Press Company? I will ask the Clanton Press to kindly print a list of their officers and stockholders in order that the people of this county may know just who they are who are fighting them and their interest.

In conclusion I wish to say that I believe the people of the county are awake and will do their full duty on November 3rd and will elect the Progressive ticket by the largest majority that any ticket has been elected in this county for the last twenty years.

I wish to urge upon the voters in the county the importance of doing their duty, work for the ticket, and on election day go to the poll and vote. By doing this we will again return the government of the county back into the hands of the people; and then a few men in Clanton cannot dictate the policies of the county.

J. M. Mims.

NOTICE

I have this day bought out the interest of Dr. A. M. Woolley, of the firm of Woolley & Martin, Jemison Ala., and assume all out standing claims against the firm and will collect all claims for the firm. I respectfully solicit your patronage in the future.

L. P. Martin
9-3-3t Jemison Ala.

ALABAMA COTTON CONFERENCE TO BE HELD

Realizing that immediate action must be taken to prevent a serious loss to the cotton growers, and other interests of the Southern states, the Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham has issued a call for a mass meeting to be held on Friday, Sept. 18th, 1914, at 12 o'clock, in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium.

It is important that each cotton growing county in Alabama be represented at the conference. By consultation and concerned action, the situation may be allevated, and aid given to the effort to establish a price on cotton commensurate with the cost of production. It is also hoped that clubs for the purpose of buying cotton will be organized in every city, town and hamlet in the state.

It is requested that those who will attend by various organizations shall send their names to William Blanks Everett, assistant Secretary, Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham. We shall also be pleased to receive copies of newspapers containing articles on this issue.

Chilton County Farmers Union

The Chilton County division of the Farmer's Union will be held with the Evergreen Local No. 417, three miles east of Verbena, Oct 1-2, 1914, (Thursday and Friday.)

Those coming by rail to Verbena will write S. S. Scott, R. 1. for conveyances.

Business of much importance will come before the convention and all Locals are requested to send a large delegation also as many visitors as is possible.

Forenoon of first day will be public.

We want the co-operation of every one in trying to better agricultural conditions in our county.

J. M. Smith, County Secretary

Neighbors - Moon

A beautiful wedding was solemnized at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Moon on Tuesday evening, Sept. 8, at six o'clock when their daughter, Nell plighted her troth to Mr. Thomas Herbert Neighbors in the presence of a large crowd of friends and relatives.

In the entrance hall Mrs. Samuel Henry Pope served punch from a bowl buried in a mass of pink roses and pond lilies.

Ivy, ferns and pink and white carnations made a lovely setting for the ceremony. Rev. J. Henry Bush pronounced the words that made them man and wife.

The bride wore her going-away gown and carried Killarney roses.

The scheme in the dining room where the wedding gifts were displayed was charmingly worked out in southern smilax and brown eyed susans.

The bride and groom, unattended, entered the room to the strains of Mendelssolins wedding march played by Miss Mattie Neighbors, sister of the groom. Humoreske was softly played during the ceremony.

Many beautiful gifts attested the popularity of the young couple.

After the wedding trip which will be to points on the Atlantic coast unknown to their friends, Mr. and Mrs Neighbors will be at home at Clanton, Ala. (Good water Reservoir.)

NEW RULES FOR TRUSTIES

Convicts Must Serve Certain Proportion of Sentence Before Being Given Any Privileges.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

New rules for trusties at the State prison and convict camps have been adopted by the State Convict Board, and have been published in cardboard form. These cardboards will be posted at the various camps and prisons. The rules were adopted at a meeting of the board which was attended by Hartwell Douglass, President, Dr. J. M. Mastin and Len F. Greer, associate members, and Governor O'Neal.

Hereafter no convicts will be made "trusties" until they have served a certain length of time in proportion to the length of the sentence. Convicts sentenced to terms longer than ten years must serve two years before being allowed the privileges accorded trusties. Convicts under sentence from five to ten years must serve one year, and convicts under sentence from one to five years must serve six months before they are permitted to me made trusties.

Wardens who desire to have any convicts made trusties must forward to the State convict board certain information concerning the convict's offense, his conduct, character and a short biographical sketch. Uniforms must be worn by trusties, the description of which appear in the new rules.

Convicts who are leased out and who become trusties will not be permitted to go at large during their sentence.

May Build Flour Mill.

Farmers of Central Alabama are evincing much interest in the proposition made by Richard Hobbie, of Montgomery, to build a flour mill in this city with a capacity of 50,000 bushels of wheat, according to Captain Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture. In Mr. Hobbie's proposition he agrees to install the flour mill provided the farmers in this section of the State will agree to raise 50,000 bushels of wheat to supply the mill. The proposition was published during the week by Captain Kolb, and he has already received several replies from prominent farmers in which they stated that the 50,000 bushels can be raised in Central Alabama.

Captain Kolb seeks to interest five hundred farmers located within a radius of 50 miles of Montgomery in the proposition, these farmers to agree to plant ten acres of land in wheat. This plan would enable the farmers to plant 5,000 acres in wheat which would yield the 50,000 bushels necessary to supply the mill.

"Alabama's land is adaptable to growing wheat," said Captain Kolb. "A farmer near Tallassee in Elmore county last fall planted three acres in wheat and threshed out 155 bushels. At the present price of wheat this would net an income from the three acres of $162.

Other instances of successful wheat growing in Alabama were cited by Captain Kolb. He has received letters from many farmers in which they state that Alabama's soil will grow fine wheat. In Montgomery county W. H. Lawson, M. B. Houghton, T. L. Head and C. E. Crenshaw have agreed to plant from ten to fifty acres in wheat.

The wheat that must be planted in this section must be of the rust proof variety of soft winter and must be planted late in October or early in November according to Captain Kolb. Any persons interested in the matter can obtain information concerning the growing of wheat from the department of agriculture.

Mr. Hobbie has assured Captain Kolb that the proposed mill can easily grind 100,000 bushels of wheat. This would approximate 25,000 barrels of flour, and would mean that $125,000, the value of this flour would be kept at home instead of being sent to the Middle West never to return, according to Captain Kolb.

Protest Against Raise.

Protests against the raise in coal rates from Birmingham to the Anniston-Gadsden-Talladega districts, as requested by the Louisville and Nashville, Southern and other railroads, were made before the State railroad commission by delegations from several cities of North Alabama at the regular monthly meeting of the commission. Delegations came from Birmingham, Gadsden, Anniston, Talladega and Sylacauga. A large number of cases were on the docket for consideration.

Covington Cases Up.

The State tax commission began the hearing of about 125 tax assessment cases in Covington county on November 18. Covington is the third county in which the tax commission will hear cases by reason of the refusal of the county board of revenue to docket them. Marengo county was the first to refuse to docket a large number of cases and Montgomery county followed the same plan. In Montgomery county the board of revenue was asked to docket something like 1000 cases.

State Cotton Mill Resumes Work.

The State cotton mill at Speigners, which is operated by convict labor, has resumed operations, after a shut down of three weeks. The mill was closed in order that the usual annual repairs might be made.

It was announced at the office of Hartwell Douglass, president of the State convict department, that an ample supply of cotton is on hand at the mill.

Replies Are Discouraging.

Apparently the conference of Southern governors, as suggested for Montgomery on Septmeber 24-25, by Governor O'Neal, will not be held. Messages from five of the twelve executives show it unlikely that they will be able to attend at that time for various reasons.

Governor Slaton of Georgia, wires that he has written a letter to the Southern governors suggesting a conference to be held in Atlanta and is awaiting the answers to these communications before he can answer Governor O'Neal.

Governor Brewer, of Mississippi, suggests that the conference be held in New Orleans during the month and Governor Colquitt asks that it take place in Texas, where the Legislature is now in session.

Previous engagements prevent Governor Trammell of Florida and Governor Major of Missouri, from attending at the time suggested.

Percentage of Potash Reduced.

Commercial fertilizer men from all parts of Alabama held a conference at the capitol discussing the shortage of potash as a result of the war in Europe, and decided on the manufacture of a complete fertilizer by increasing the per centage of phosphoric acid and nitrogen. The conference was called by Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture, and was attended by many fertilizer manufacturers and dealers.

Under the fertilizer laws of the State it has been necessary in the past for the manufacturers to put 2 per cent of potash in commercial fertilizer, but in view of the shortage caused by the war, it is claimed that it will be practically impossible for the manufacturers to continue with this per centage of potash; hence a substitute was sought by which a complete fertilizer could be made with a smaller quantity of the imported ingredient.

It was decided that during the progress of the war the manufacturers should use one-half of 1 per cent of potash instead of 2 per cent and a sufficient quantity of phosphoric acid and nitrogen to make a fertilizer containing 14 per cent plant food. Two per cent ammonia is also necessary to make a complete fertilizer.

Delegates Named By Capt. Kolb.

Twenty-two delegates to represent Alabama at the Southeastern Food Corps Conference to be held in Atlanta October 5 and 6, were named by Capt. R. F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture. There will be four delegates from the state-at-large and two from each congressional district.

The following were selected:

From the State-at-Large: R. F. Kolb, Montgomery; J. A. Wade, Alexander City; J. T. Watt, Auburn; R. R. Poole, Uniontown.

First—Sam R. Bethea, Faunsdale; E. P. Chapman, Grove Hill.

Second—C. P. Deming, Evergreen; C. G. Abercrombie, Montgomery.

Third—S. H. Dent, Eufaula; John Canty, Fort Mitchell.

Fourth—C. W. Hooper, Selma; Judge E. B. Deason, Clanton.

Fifth—J. C. Wright, Roanoke; A. Hohenberg, Wetumpka.

Sixth—John A. Rodgers, Gainesville; Judge W. W. Brandon, Tuscaloosa.

Seventh—Frank V. Tilford, Cullman; Judge L. L. Herzberg, Gadsden.

Eighth—Hector D. Lane, Courtland; W. H. Johnson, Huntsville, R. No. 5.

Ninth—W. W. Lavender, Centerville; M. C. Allgood, Chapultapec.

Plans for Good Roads Meet.

Plans looking to the entertainment of at least 3000 delegates to the annual session of the Alabama Good Roads Association, which meets in Montgomery on October 21-23, are being made by the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce, which has joined the association in an effort to make the coming meeting the greatest convention of its kind ever held in Alabama.

Tax Settlements Made.

Final tax settlements with the state auditor have been made by every county in Alabama, according to an announcement made by State Auditor Brooks Smith. The latest settlement with the auditor was made by Tax Collector J. F. Moseley of Madison county, whose final report was delayed pending the settlement of several legal complications. The law requires that final reports shall be made by July 1, but several tax colectors were given additional time because of unavoidable delays.

Cowart to Mobile September 20.

Lee Cowart, commissioner of immigration, and head of the Alabama Panama-Pacific Exposition commission will go to Mobile on September 20 to appeal to the citizens of that city to aid in the movement to erect an Alabama building at the San Francisco exposition Mr. Cowart is now in San Francisco, but will return to Alabama in time to go to Mobile for the conference. Mobile has pledged her support to the movement, but no organized effort has been started.

GOVERNMENT LOAN ON COTTON ASKED

COMMITTEE BEING ORGANIZED TO FORWARD MOVEMENT. GROWERS INDORSE PLANS.

WOULD DISPOSE OF SURPLUS

Government Should Take Over Surplus Cotton Crop, Says Henry, and Hold It Until War Is Over and Markets Open.

Washington—A committee of Southern congressmen and representatives of farmers' unions in the South is being organized by Representative Henry of Texas to work for an issue of treasury notes on cotton that must be held over until next season on account of the demoralization of foreign markets. Mr. Henry announced that the personnel of the committee, to be made up of twenty-one members, probably would be completed next week. He said he was acting at the request of many of his colleagues from the South and that the movement had been indorsed by several organizations of cotton growers.

"The committee," said Mr. Henry, will present the situation to the secretary of the treasury, the Federal Reserve Board and President Wilson, and will have frequent meetings. It will ask the government to take over the surplus cotton, to be held by it through these loans until war conditions in Europe pass and the market reopens. Nothing less will protect many of the people of the South from absolute ruin."

Mr. Henry estimated that the surplus crop would amount to six or seven million bales and said an issue of three or four hundred millions in notes would be requested.

DIVERTED TO NEW ORLEANS

Mississippi River May Be Largely Used by Chicago Concern—Result of European War.

Chicago.—Mississippi Valley commerce with Latin-American nations, which heretofore has gone through the port of New York, is to be diverted to the more direct route through the port of New Orleans, if the plans of some of Chicago's biggest capitalists and financiers are carried out.

A huge trading corporation, with not less than $5,000,000 capitalization, doing an export and import business and owning its own line of ocean freight steamships, is in process of organization in Chicago, and it is expected that within another week final plans and details will be completed.

The corporation is the direct commercial outgrowth of conditions which have developed out of the European war, together with the opening of the Panama canal.

SOUTHERN OFFICIAL DEAD

L. S. Brown Passes Away—Had Been General Agent of Southern Railroad Since 1886.

Washington.—L. S. Brown, general agent of the Southern railway in Washington and well known throughout the south, died here. He was born at Covington, Ga., in 1849 and began railroad work as an express messenger. He became general agent of the Southern here in 1886. A widow survives.

Mr. Brown's first work as express messenger was at Montgomery, Ala., in 1869. In 1871 he became general agent of the Western of Alabama at Opelika, Ala. He afterward was connected with the Baltimore & Ohio, Virginia Midland and Georgia Pacific, being general freight agent and passenger agent of the Southern here in 1886.

PLAN ELEVEN-CENT COTTON

One-Fourth of the Crop to Be Bought by the States—Would Levy a Purchase Tax.

Washington.—If a program partly outlined and tentatively agreed to by a number of southern senators and representatives obtains, cotton will sell for 11 cents a pound. Senator Simmons of North Carolina has taken the initiative in the movement, to which a number of southern senators have subscribed. His proposition provides for the purchase of one-fourth of the cotton raised this year by the state. A purchase tax is to be levied on all cotton sold in the open market. A production tax on the cotton produced in 1915 is a part of the scheme.

Three Are Murdered.

Grand Bend, Kas.—Lee Morgan, a farmer, 40 years old; Mrs. Mayme McQuillan, his housekeeper, aged 40, and Clarence McGuin, a farm hand, were found murdered on Morgan's farm near Heisor, Barton county.

James P. Comisiine Dead.

New York.—James P. Comisiine, 52, one of three brothers who figured prominently in the sporting life of New York, was found dead of heart trouble in his room at the Hotel Navarre.

CONFER WITH THE BOARD

Federal Reserve Board in Session—Improved Conditions in Country Reported—No Cause for Concern.

Washington.—Although the problem of readjusting the foreign exchange market has not been solved, reports to the federal reserve board from prominent New York banks indicate there is little cause for concern.

J. P. Morgan, Jacob H. Schiff and Benjamin Strong, Jr., New York bankers, conferred with the board for two hours. Their visits had to do with the part New York City banks are expected to play in relieving the foreign exchange market. It was said they also stated conditions throughout the country showed marked improvement.

The bankers told the board that New York banks stand prepared to underwrite the $80,000,000 obligations of New York in the hands of European creditors which come due within the next few months. In return members of the board thought New York banks should not be requested to contribute to the proposed general fund of $153,000,000 to take care of the total of American obligations to Europe. New York's $80,000,000 was included in the $150,000,000 suggested by the recent bankers' conference here as the sum necessary to care for all such obligations.

The board has not acted formally upon the plan for creating the $150,000,000 pool, but has passed from consideration of the principle involved to details. One point which has caused discussion is the suggestion that the board indicate the amounts of gold to be contributed by each bank. The board so far has felt reluctant to make a suggestion of this sort, which might look like an order, coming from such a source.

No report has reached the board so far from all the clearing-house associations of the country showing the gold possessed by all banks. Such reports will precede any action to carry out the plan.

Comptroller of the Currency Williams reported that $256,170,000 of the Aldrich-Vreeland currency has been taken out by banks up to the close of business Sept. 8, 1914. Of this the eastern states, including New York, took $154,253,000; $18,649,000 went to New England; $25,163,000 to the southern states; $50,465,000 to the middle states, including Chicago; $1,652,000 to the western states and $5,688,000 to the Pacific states.

ROGER SULLIVAN IS VICTOR

Wins Over L. B. Stringer in Primary in Illinois—Uncle Joe Cannon Ahead.

Chicago.—Roger C. Sullivan, former national democratic committeeman; Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, republican, and Raymond Robins, progressive, will oppose each other for election as United States senator from Illinois at the November election. Returns from the primary indicate the nomination of Sullivan and Sherman by large majorities. Robins was unopposed.

Votes on the congressional nominations came in slowly, but it is certain three democratic congressmen had been renominated, and that former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon had received the republican nomination in the Eighteenth district.

For the republican senatorial nomination, Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman apparently has a safe lead over William E. Mason, former United States senator.

Raymond Robins was unopposed for the progressive nomination for senator.

Interest in Sullivan's candidacy was increased a few days ago through the receipt by Cook county democrats of a letter from Secretary Bryan urging his defeat.

MRS. CARMAN IS INDICTED

Murder in First Degree Is Charged Against Her in Freeport Murder Case.

Mineola, N. Y.—A superseding indictment charging murder in the first degree was found against Mrs. Florence Carman by the grand jury investigating the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, shot down by an unseen assailant in the office of Dr. Edward Carman at Freeport on June 30 last.

Mrs. Carman had previously been indicted for manslaughter.

Mrs. Carman, who had been at liberty under bail, was brought to Mineola from Freeport by her counsel in anticipation that such an indictment would be returned. She was arraigned immediately and committed to the Nassau county jail without bail for trial, which probably will be in December.

Ameliorate War Horrors.

New York.—A plea for amelioration of the horrors of war was issued from this city. It was made by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

Pope Sees Diplomats.

Paris.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Rome says that the pope received the members of the diplomatic corps here.

Ready to Ballot.

New York.—The international committee of the New York cotton exchange, which is meeting here daily to facilitate the liquidation of the New York-Liverpool straddle interests, announced that they are ready to ballot for orders.

Washington.—President Wilson has joined the "buy a bale of cotton" club by ordering from the head of the organization 10 bales to be worth as cotton.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Safe blowers robbed a safe at Townley of $265.

LaFayette will hold its city election on the 21st.

New road is being located from Roanoke to Wedowee.

Most of the city and high schools are already open.

Nearly all the Franklin county farms have good crops.

Cleburne county has made a fine corn crop and a large one.

Cattle quarantine against Lauderdale county has been lifted.

In parts of Marengo boll weevils have almost destroyed the cotton.

Colbert county is making about 85 per cent of a normal cotton crop.

An offer of $100 an acre for 100 acres of land, near Florence, was refused.

C. E. Aylin has been elected president of the Baldwin County Agricultural association.

The Hattie Ensley furnace at Sheffield made 8297 tons of iron in August, or 268 tons a day.

A man named Skipper, skipping from the town marshall, fell in a well and was not injured, at Slocomb.

Dr. E. H. Cross of Gadsden, progressive candidate for governor, says he will make an aggressive campaign for the office.

The Citrus Browers' association of Baldwin has sold the whole Satsuma orange crop to a company in Mobile at $3.50 a box of 300. To be delivered as gathered.

Farmers in Barbour county are now busy cutting a bumper crop of hay. This is chiefly of the pea-vine variety, but a number of farmers have had good success with alfalfa.

Chief of Police A. D. Kirby of Huntsville was exonerated of the charge of graft that was brought against him in connection with the feed bills of the city prison.

The use of cotton by domestic mills continues to maintain the demand for the staple to some extent in Eufaula. Just now, the Cowikee Cotton Mills are reunning day and night, too, to keep up with the demand.

Over 300 delegates from all over the South are attending the Southern Labor Congress, which convened in Birmingham September 16. The convention is being held under the auspices of the Birmingham Typographical Union.

Gen. Bibb Graves, of Montgomery, chairman of the State democratic executive committee, while in Birmingham, announced that the State campaign democratic headquarters will be established in Birmingham and that within the next few days he will announce appointments of the State campaign committee as authorized by the executive committee.

In a report on the corn crop in Alabama, the bureau of crop estimates gave the condition on September 1 as 76 as against 69 on August 1, and a 10-year average of 86. The forecast, based on conditions in September, was 12,600,000 bushels as against a 5-year average of 49.107. The price per bushel, September 1, is given as $1.01, or 5 cents more than in September, 1913, and an average price of 93 cents for five years.

Necessity of planting an abundant oat and winter clover crop is pointed out in the latest weekly bulletin of the State department of agriculture and industries. Owing to the shortage of last year's corn crop, together with the depressing condition of the cotton market, the planting of a large acreage in grasses and grains is considered by the department to be of prime importance. Alabama is particularly adapted to the growing of oats and crimson clover, according to the department's bulletin, and the coming year will show great advance in these farm products in all parts of the State. The hope and promise of our farming future in Alabama depends upon this diversification of crops that our experience with cotton this year has made an inevitable necessity," concludes the report.

Announcement was made by E. B. Wallace of Cullman that he has purchased property in Jackson county on which there is a cave containing nearly 2,000,000 tons of saltpetre.

All Alabama is interested in Mobile's efforts to keep bubonic plague infection from the State's only seaport. Work is well under way toward ratproofing the harbor front and ultimately all buildings in the city that might foster rodents. Mayor P. J. Lyons announced that health work during 1914 would amount to $90,000. The plan of campaign against the rat is starvation.

Three candidates for mayor of Attalla: Dr. J. P. Stewart, L. E. Harrison and I. L. Sparkman.

Cotton mill at Florence is running full time.

The forty-third session of the Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, began with the largest first day registration in its history, the enrollment being in excess of last year, when all records were broken.

Albertville's first bale was bought at 11 cents.

Franklin county farmers are pulling fodder and making hay.

Turpentine makers in Baldwin have quit till there is a demand for their stuff.

Sixty real estate transfers in Baldwin county in August.

Keep Hanford's Balsam in your stable. Adv.

It takes a strong-minded woman to hold her tongue.

For harness galls and sore shoulders use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh.

Some fools would rather lose a friend than an argument.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Inflamed Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

"Men don't understand women," says a pessimist; "if they did the women would have to do all the thinking."

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

Gone But Not Forgotten.

"Gay Paree."
"Night life in Berlin."
"Merrie England."

PIMPLES ON SCALP ITCH

Lewisburg, Tenn.—"Four years ago I had a very bad scalp trouble. It commenced with itching. Later my hair got thin and my scalp sore. I could not sleep for scratching at times. I did not get the sleep that was restful and refreshing. I was losing my hair fast. I had pimples on my scalp which itched and burned so that I scratched and irritated them. I had dandruff which scaled off and showed on my clothes.

"I tried almost every noted remedy and hair tonic without success. Then I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and relieved of the itching and sore scalp after three shampoos and applications of the Ointment. After using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment three months I was completely cured." (Signed) F. B. Lewis, Jan. 1, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Titles and Taxes in Spain.

In Spain titles of nobility are taxed in the same way as houses are taxed. Moreover, each separate title is taxed and for this reason certain families of ancient families in which a number of titles have accumulated drop some in order to save money. Owing to a system long prevalent in Spain, by which women of noble birth transmit their title not only to their children but to their husbands—so that a Spanish beian marrying a duchess becomes a duke, Spanish titles rarely become extinct unless the holders deliberately discard them.

Delay.

"Do you prefer an automobile to a horse?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Chagrin. "Because it goes faster?"

"Not exactly that. But we can enjoy hanging around a repair shop more than loafing and looking at a livery stable."

Encouraging.

"Did you catch any fish?" asked the woman who is always encouraging.

"Not one," replied her husband. "We got a couple of nibbles, but there was nothing doing all day."

"Well, even if you didn't catch any I'll bet you gave them a good scare."

The man who marries a girl for her money is apt to get the short end of the deal if he takes her at her face value.

LEARNING THINGS

We Are All in the Apprenticeship.

When a simple change of diet brings back health and happiness the story is briefly told. A lady of Springfield, Ill., says:

"After being afflicted for years with nervousness and heart trouble I received a shock four years ago that left me in such a condition that my life was despaired of.

"I got no relief from doctors nor from the numberless heart and nerve remedies I tried, because I did not know that coffee was daily putting me more than the doctors could put me ahead.

"Finally at the suggestion of a friend I left off coffee and began the use of Postum, and against my expectation I gradually improved in health. For the past 6 or 8 months I have been entirely free from nervousness, those terrible sinking, weak spells of heart trouble.

"My troubles all came from the use of coffee which I had drunk from childhood and yet they disappeared when I quit coffee and took up the use of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many people marvel at the results from leaving off coffee and drinking Postum but there is nothing marvelous about it—only common sense.

Coffee is a destroyer—Postum is a rebuilder. That's the reason why.

Look in pkgs. for the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.—Adv.

...ACK IN CENTER ...Y MASSED CORPS

...ISH CAPTURE GUNS, PRISONERS—LORRAINE-VOSGES SITUATION UNCHANGED.

...VY STORM INTERFERES

...n Right and Center Retiring. ...rmans Handicapped in Their ...treat by Heavy Storm—Allies Claim Success.

...deaux.—An official communica... from the war office says:

...ter five days' fighting the battle ...e Marne has turned in favor of ...rench, and the German right and ...r are now retreating.

...the left wing our success be... more marked. Our progress ...ses north of the Marne and in ...direction of Saissons and Com...

...e Germans have abandoned a ...derable quantity of munitions ...wounded and prisoners. We have ...another flag.

...British army has captured 11 ...with other important war mate... ...nd has made from 1,200 to 1,500 ...ers.

...the center the enemy has given ...along the whole front between ...ne and Revigny. He has not yet ...d in the Argonne.

...pite of the heroic efforts of our ...throughout these five days of ...they still have energy to fol... ...e enemy.

...the right wing (in Lorraine and ...oges) there is nothing new."

...ions onslaughts, sometimes by ...nch and again by the Germans, ...ed about the center of an ex... ...e line in the vicinity of Vitry-le...

...great German armies command... ...Gen. von Kluck, the Crown ...Frederick William and the duke ...mberg effected a junction and ...hurled themselves against ...ch positions with the great... ...r, but they were unable to ...their seeming object of break... ...allies' center and thus dividing ...glo-French armies.

...n storm caused great difficul... ...the marshy districts, but did ...p the operations. The fusillades ...troops and the artillery duel ...ed all day. It is believed the ...Germans suffered more than ...lies from the storm, as their ...wing columns were incumbered ...aggage and ammunition wagons.

...RIANS LEAVE CRACOW

...est Austrian Post in Galicia Is ...rted to Have Given Way Before Russian Attack.

...ograd.—Cracow, the strongest ...n post in Galicia and one which ...cted the advance of the huge ...n center army upon Breslau, its ...objective, is reported as being ...ted by the Austrians before a ...attack of Russian cavalry and ...y under cover of the destruct... ...e of the heavy siege guns. The ...o the east and north of the city ...belled incessantly until finally ...strian guns were silenced.

...ow is the capital of Austrian Po... ...d lies on a broad plain on the ...k of the Vistula. It is only 30 ...from the German border, and ...it and Breslau little fortified ...is offered.

...remyl and Jaroslav invested ...ussians and the way for the ...ward Breslau practically ...he investment of the latter ...ch is only 190 miles from Ber...

...ANS ADMIT REVERSES

...ficial Admission of Success of ...Allies Is Made by Berlin War Office.

...—"The first official admis... ...the German side of success by ...," says a Central News dis... from Amsterdam, "appears in ...communications issued in Ber... ...von Stein announces that ...man army, which had advanced ...the Marne to the east of Paris, ...avily attacked by the enemy ...Paris, Meaux and Montmi...

...ighting lasted two days. The ...army had checked the enemy, ...ger hostile columns came to ...ance of the allies and the ...won the battle, compelling the ...troops to retire. Fifty guns ...ptured by the allies and some ...of men made prisoners.

...the west of Verdun fighting ...The situation in Lorraine ...Vosges is unchanged. The ...Eastern Prussia has been ...

Krupp Experts Taken.

...dam.—A large German aero... ...been shot at and brought ...Belgians at Stypen, East ...Three officers who were in ...proved to be well known ...from Krupps.

...Fighting in Africa.

...—British troops have met ...a German force of 400, ...Nyassaland, British ...Africa, according to an an... ...by the official press bu...

GENE...

Major G... mander of ern Russ... vancing s...

ABROGA...

Action R... by Pow... fe...

Washing... tified the ... tions that ... of convent... originating ... century, ... Ottoman ... from loca... criminal c... longer wil... extra-terri... they have ... judges, di... consuls.

This pr... several ye... ies, Turke... of the pe... clared, is... and free i... of the gre...

Upon th... the legal ... aries in ... maintain ... schools in...

RUSSIAN...

Austrians Battle—Ma...

Petrogra... was admin... by the R... miles nort... result that... Russian a... that Przys... pletely inv... What is ... the demon... army, whi... situation. ... defeats an... of the yari... is compose... its destruc... tions are n... ing throug... deaths fro...

In the ... Halicz and ... have lost ... and wound... prisoners, ... of a major... and equipm...

Russia is ... 000 men f... Poland and ... has given ... taken at al...

ALLIES...

Germans ... Loss is ... A...

London.— ... statements ... great battle ... which 3,000 ... seems appa... are still f... nouncement ... about 37 ... advance.

Both Br... have cross... British cap... action of ... fought bet... Francois.

Additiona... been made ... up to Sept... for the cam... wounded an...

Man...

Washingt... received th... its foreign ... forces have ... cluding a ... trailleuse ... sons."

Bordeaux...

... of the war ... war is not ... loss of life. ... hundred m... only two a...

Keep Hanford's Balsam in y
ble. Adv.

It takes a strong-minded wo hold her tongue.

For harness galls and sore sh use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh

Some fools would rather friend than an argument.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TE
Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak
Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. No S just Eye Comfort. Write for Book of by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co.

"Men don't understand wo says a pessimist; "if they d women would have to do all th ing."

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepa
pecially for Malaria or Chill Fever. Five or six doses will any case, and if taken then as the fever will not return. 25c.

Gone But Not Forgotten.

"Gay Paree."
"Night life in Berlin."
"Merrie England."

PIMPLES ON SCALP IT

Lewisburg, Tenn.—"Four yea
I had a very bad scalp troub commenced with itching. La hair got thin and my scalp so I could not sleep for scratch times. I did not get the slee was restful and refreshing. I w ing my hair fast. I had pimp my scalp which itched and bur that I scratched and irritated t had dandruff which scaled o showed on my clothes.

"I tried almost every note remedy and hair tonic witho cess. Then I commenced usin cura Soap and Ointment and lieved of the itching and sor
after three shampoos and appli of the Ointment. After usin
the Cuticura Soap and Ointm three months I was completely (Signed) F. B. Lewis, Jan. 1,

Cuticura Soap and Ointme throughout the world. Sample free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Addre card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."

Titles and Taxes in Spai

In Spain titles of nobility a in the same way as houses Moreover, each separate title i and for this reason certain m of ancient families in which a of titles have accumulated dro in order to save money. Owin system long prevalent in Sp which women of noble birth t their title not only to their c but to their husbands—so that beian marrying a duchess bec duke, Spanish titles rarely extinct unless the holders deli discard them.

Delays.

"Do you prefer an automob horse?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Chugging.

"Because it goes faster?"

"Not exactly that. But som enjoy hanging around a repa more than loafing and looking livery stable."

Encouraging.

"Did you catch any fish?" a woman who is always encour

"Not one," replied her h
"We got a couple of nibbles a
there was nothing doing all da

"Well, even if you didn't ca
I'll bet you gave them an scare."

The man who marries a pr is apt to get the short end of takes her at her face value.

LEARNING THINGS
We Are All in the Apprentic

When a simple change of die back health and happiness the briefly told. A lady of Spring says:

"After being afflicted for ye nervousness and heart troub ceived a shock four years ago me in such a condition that was despaired of.

"I got no relief from doct from the numberless heart an remedies I tried, because I didn that coffee was daily putting more than the doctors could ahead.

"Finally at the suggestion of
I left off coffee and began th
Postum, and against my expec gradually improved in health the past 6 or 8 months I ha entirely free from nervous those terrible sinking, w spells of heart trouble.

"My troubles all came from
of coffee which I had dru childhood and yet they dis
when I quit coffee and took up of Postum." Name given by Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Many people marvel at the leaving off coffee and drinking but there is nothing marvelo
it—only common sense.

Coffee is a destroyer—Po rebuilder. That's the reason book, "The Road to Wellvil

Postum comes in two form

Regular Postum—must be
ed. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a sol
der. A teaspoonful dissolves in a cup of hot water and, w and sugar, makes a delicious instantly. 30c and 50c tin

The cost per cup of bo about the same.

"There's a Reason"—sold

...CK IN CENTER ...MASSED CORPS

...H CAPTURE GUNS, PRISON-
...LORRAINE-VOSGES SITU-...ATION UNCHANGED.

...Y STORM INTERFERES

...Right and Center Retiring.
...ans Handicapped in Their
...reat by Heavy Storm—Al-
...lies Claim Success.

...ux.—An official communica-
...m the war office says:

...five days' fighting the battle
...Marne has turned in favor of
...nch, and the German right and
...are now retreating.

...the left wing our success be-
...more marked. Our progress
...s north of the Marne and in
...ction of Saissons and Com-

...Germans have abandoned a
...able quantity of munitions
...nded and prisoners. We have
...other flag.

...British army has captured 11
...h other important war mate-
...has made from 1,200 to 1,500
...s.

...e center the enemy has given
...ng the whole front between
...and Revigny. He has not yet
...in the Argonne.

...te of the heroic efforts of our ...throughout these five days of
...ey still have energy to fol-
...enemy.

...e right wing (in Lorraine and
...ges) there is nothing new."

...onslaughts, sometimes by
...h and again by the Germans,
...about the center of an ex-
...in the vicinity of Vitry-le-

...German armies command-
...von Kluck, the Crown
...rick William and the duke
...berg effected a junction and
...hurled themselves against
...positions with the great-
...but they were unable to
...ir seeming object of break-
...lies' center and thus dividing
...French armies.

...storm caused great difficul-
...e marshy districts, but did
...the operations. The fusillades
...troops and the artillery duel
...all day. It is believed the ...Germans suffered more than
...s from the storm, as their
...ving columns were incumbered
...ggage and ammunition wagons.

...RIANS LEAVE CRACOW

...ngest Austrian Post in Galicia is
...ported to Have Given Way Be...fore Russian Attack.

...rograd.—Cracow, the strongest
...an post in Galicia and one which
...cted the advance of the huge
...n center army upon Breslau, its ...objective, is reported as being
...ed by the Austrians before a
...attack of Russian cavalry and
...y under cover of the destruct-
...of the heavy siege guns. The
...the east and north of the city
...lled incessantly until finally
...rian guns were silenced.

...is the capital of Austrian Po-
...lies on a broad plain on the
...of the Vistula. It is only 30
...the German border, and
...and Breslau little fortified
...is offered.

...emyl and Jaroslav invested
...sians and the way for the
...ward Breslau practically
...investment of the latter
...is only 190 miles from Ber-
...ment.

...S ADMIT REVERSES

...ial Admission of Success of
...es is Made by Berlin
War Office.

...—The first official admis-
...the German side of success by
...," says a Central News dis-
...m Amsterdam, "appears in
...mmunications issued in Ber-
...von Stein announces that
...n army, which had advanced
...e Marne to the east of Paris,
...ly attacked by the enemy
...Paris, Meaux and Montmi-

...ighting lasted two days. The
...rmy had checked the enemy,
...er hostile columns came to
...ance of the allies and the ...n the battle, compelling the
...troops to retire. Fifty guns
...tured by the allies and some
...of men made prisoners.

...west of Verdun fighting
...The situation in Lorraine
...Vosges is unchanged. The ...Eastern Prussia has been
...

...pp Experts Taken.

...dam.—A large German aero-
...been shot at and brought
...Belgians at Stypen, East
...Three officers who were in
...proved to be well known
...m Krupps.

...Fighting in Africa.

...—British troops have met
...d a German force of 400,
...red Nyassaland, British
...frica, according to an ex-
...by the official press bu

GENERAL RENNENKAMPF
Major General Rennenkampf, commander of the Russian army in eastern Prussia which seems to be advancing steadily toward Berlin.

ABROGATE ANCIENT TREATY

Action Removes Privileges Enjoyed by Powers—United States Notified—Powers Peeved.

Washington.—Turkey formally notified the United States and other nations that she had abrogated the series of conventions, treaties and privileges originating as early as the eleventh century, whereby foreigners in the Ottoman empire have been exempt from local jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases. Foreign subjects no longer will enjoy what is known as extra-territorial rights, through which they have been tried by their own judges, diplomatic representatives or consuls.

This practice, abolished by Japan several years ago, through new treaties, Turkey has removed by a stroke of the pen. Her purpose, it is declared, is to assert her independence and free herself from the domination of the great powers.

Upon the rights revoked has rested the legal status of American missionaries in Turkey, permitting them to maintain churches, hospitals and schools in religious freedom.

RUSSIANS AT RAWA-RUSKA

Austrians Defeated After Four Days' Battle—Clears Road to Berlin. Many Thousands Killed.

Petrograd.—A final appalling defeat was administered the Austrian army by the Russians at Rawa-Ruska, 32 miles northwest of Lemberg, with the result that the last obstacles to the Russian advance toward Berlin, now that Przysmsl and Jaroslow are completely invested, has been removed.

What is probably most important is the demoralization of the Austrian army, which is now in a desperate situation. Disheartened by constant defeats and suffering from defection of the various nationalities of which it is composed, mutiny now has added its destructive influence and the desertions are many. Pestilence is spreading through the ranks and numerous deaths from diseases are reported.

In the big battles at Lemberg, Halicz and Rawa-Ruska the Austrians have lost countless thousands in dead and wounded and more than 30,000 prisoners, besides suffering the loss of a major portion of their artillery and equipment.

Russia is now concentrating 3,500,000 men for the invasion of German Poland and East Prussia, and the czar has given orders that Berlin must be taken at all costs.

ALLIES ADVANCE 37 MILES

Germans Are Falling Back—British Loss is Officially Placed at 19,000. Armies Reinforced.

London.—While the latest official statements give few details of the great battle being waged in France, in which 3,000,000 men are engaged, it seems apparent that the German forces are still falling back, from the announcement that the allies have gained about 37 miles of territory in their advance.

Both British and French troops have crossed the River Marne, the British capturing men and guns. The action of greatest severity is being fought between Mailly and Vitry-le-Francois.

Additional British casualties have been made public, covering the period up to Sept. 7, and bringing the total for the campaign close to 19,000 killed, wounded and missing.

Many German Prisoners.

Washington.—The British embassy received the following dispatch from its foreign office: "The Anglo-French forces have taken many prisoners, including a battalion of infantry, a mitrailleuse company and many caissons."

Bordeaux.—The health department of the war office has reported that this war is not resulting in a very heavy loss of life. It asserts that of every hundred men stated hors de combat only two are killed.

GERMAN RETREAT IS CALLED A ROUT

FRENCH STATEMENT DESCRIBING RETIREMENT OF GERMANS. LUNEVILLE RETAKEN.

ALLIES CROSS THE AISNE

German Prisoners Give Impression of Utter Destitution, Overdriving and Discouragement — Germans Have Abandoned Nancy.

Paris.—An official communication tonight says:

"First—On our left wing the general retreat of the Germans continues before the French and British forces, who have reached the lower course of the Aisne.

"Second—Likewise in the center the German armies are retreating. We have crossed the Marne between Epernay and Vitry-le-Francois. On our right wing the enemy in like manner has begun a retiring movement, abandoning the region around Nancy. We have reoccupied Luneville.

"The German retreat is so rapid that it may be described as a flight. Everywhere they have left not only guns and ammunition, but even their personal belongings, showing their precipitious haste.

"The prisoners give a marked impression of utter destitution, overdriving and discouragement. The horses particularly are exhausted.

"The commander-in-chief of the French armies addressed the following order to his troops:

"'At the moment when a battle is being engaged, on the result of which the welfare of the country depends, it is important to remind all that it is no longer time to look behind. All efforts must be employed to attack and drive back the enemy.

"'A force which cannot advance any farther shall, no matter at what cost, retain the conquered ground and be killed on the spot rather than fall back. Under the present circumstances no weakness can be tolerated.'"

BELGIANS TAKE OFFENSIVE

Legation at London Says Malines and Aerschot Retaken—Force Germans to Retire.

London.—An Ostend dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"The Belgian troops have just gained an important success at Oortenberg between Louvain and Brussels, cutting up a German corps and taking a number of prisoners. The line toward Liege has been occupied by the Belgians."

The Belgian legation announced that the Belgian army again had taken the offensive, which was being pushed satisfactorily. An extended sortie was made and the Germans everywhere were forced to retire. Malines and Aerschot were retaken.

A dispatch to the Central News from Amsterdam says:

"According to a Ghent dispatch the Belgian government, having opposed the delivery of army necessaries requisitioned by the Germans, a Belgian force has again occupied Ghent. The necessaries which had already been prepared were not delivered."

"Fierce fighting continued southeast of Antwerp. To the left our division was obliged to give way before the enemy's progress.

TRAP AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMY

Daring Stroke by Russians Reported from Petrograd—Enemy Has Been Cut Off.

London.—Mme. O. P. Sturk telegraphs from Petrograd to the Daily News:

"By a daring stroke the Russians have cut off the Austro-German army, which has been advancing eastward to aid the battered Austrian forces between Rawa Ruska and Godorek. This Austro-German army evacuated a strongly fortified position near Krasnik and were retreating along the Vistula when cut off. They are now in a trap between the Vistula and San. Between it and the Austro-German eastern force near Godorek is a strong Russian army of infantry, well supported by artillery and cavalry."

A Central News dispatch from Rome says:

"A telegram received here by the Messagero from Petrograd states that the second battle in Galicia resulted even more satisfactorily to the Russians than the first. The losses of the Austrians are estimated at 120,000 of whom 80,000 are prisoners."

Sienkiewicz A Prisoner.

London.—A dispatch to the Evening News from Petrograd says that Henryk Sienkiewicz, the Polish writer and author of "Quo Vadis," who recently appealed to the Poles to support Russia in the war, has been taken prisoner by the Austrians and sent to Cracow.

London.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company from Paris says the French have occupied Solesmes, Department of Aisne.

GENERAL KUROKI
General Kuroki is one of the leading men in the Japanese army and is a hero of the war with Russia.

MAUBEUGE FORTS TAKEN

Germans Claim to Have Taken 40,000 Prisoners and 400 Guns at French Fortress.

London.—Latest official reports from the French government indicate that the offensive tactics undertaken in the last day or two by the allied armies have forced the Germans back at various points in the battle line, which extends from a few miles east of Paris to Verdun, a distance of about 200 miles.

Bordeaux reports officially that the British army has crossed the River Marne, and that the Germans have fallen back 25 miles. Efforts of the Germans to break the French lines on the Ourcq river are officially reported to have failed.

Seemingly the Germans are short of ammunition at the front and are having difficulties in provisioning, and the French war department officially announces that "on the whole the Germans appear to be beginning a movement of retreat."

The battlefield in France is that over which Napoleon fought in 1814, with entrenched camps on both wings and center. Paris covers the left wing, Chalons the center and Verdun the right, while mobile columns of troops are ready to join in the fighting wherever the line is threatened.

Vitry-le-Francois and Montmirail seem to be the points of the chief engagements, and there the carnage has been the heaviest. The allies aim at preventing the German turning movement, with a mass of troops composed of many army corps.

King George has addressed a message to the British dominions and colonies, in which he protests that war was not of Great Britain's seeking, and expresses his warmest thanks for the assistance rendered by them.

Maubeuge, a French fortress, has fallen into the hands of the Germans, and according to the report the Germans took 40,000 prisoners and 400 guns.

FIERCE ATTACK IN CENTER

London Official Statement Says One German Army Has Been Driven Back.

London.—The British official press bureau issued the following announcement:

"The general position continues satisfactory. The allies are gaining ground on their left all along the line of the Ourcq and Petit Morin rivers. The British have driven the enemy back ten miles.

"Fighting has been in progress farther to the right along the line, which includes Montmirail and Sompuis, neither side gaining advantage.

"Farther to the right again, from Vitry-le-Francois to Sermaize-Les-Bains, the enemy has been pressed back in the direction of Rheims.

"At Luneville an attempt by the Germans to advance has been repulsed.

"Pressure against the enemy continues all along the allied fronts.

"The fifth French army has advanced with equal success, and reports many captured.

Protest to Porte.

Constantinople.—The ambassadors of some of the great powers have presented an identical note to the Turkish grand vizier protesting against the decree issued by the porte recently, under the terms of which the treaty rights accorded foreigners in the past are abolished.

London.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Athens declares the Turks, in order to be prepared to oppose a possible landing of Russians, have concentrated about 80,000 men at Tchataldja, 35 miles west of Constantinople.

New York.—The German steamship Magdeburg, a witness of the naval engagement between the British cruiser Pathfinder and the German converted cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse off the African coast [illegible] Sept. 26, [illegible] the British [illegible]

THIRST AND LEAD FAIL TO STOP DASH OF RUSSIANS ON LEMBERG

Petrograd.—The Rech prints the following details of the fall of Lemberg:

"The commencement of the fighting which resulted in the capture of Lemberg began August 29, when the Russians drove the enemy from Zisczow (45 miles east of Lemberg) and moved on to Golaya Gorka—a name which means 'the naked hill.'

"We spent the night on Naked hill, and the actual storming of the town was begun at 2:30 o'clock in the morning. Then followed a four-days' battle. A virtually continuous cannonade continued from dawn to darkness without cessation.

"Even in the darkness the weary fighters got little sleep. Whenever a single shot was heard the men dashed for their places and the battle boiled again with renewed fury.

Russian Advance Impeded.

"The enemy's counter attacks were delivered with great energy and a dense hail of lead and iron was poured over our ranks. The Russian advance was greatly impeded by the hilly nature of the ground and the great number of extinct craters, which formed splendid natural fortifications for the enemy, which held them doggedly. Out of these, however, the enemy was driven in succession.

"We suffered much from thirst, for the stony country was devoid of springs. The days were oppressively hot and the nights bitterly cold.

"Both sides fought with great obstinacy, but the nearer we approached Lemberg the harder the struggle became. However, it soon was evident that we were superior in artillery.

"At length the enemy was driven from all sides beneath the protection of the Lemberg forts. Our troops were very weary, but in high spirits.

"For two days the fight raged around the forts, but we were always confident of the prowess of our artillery. The big guns of both sides rained a terrific hail down on the armies, which suffered terrific losses.

"At last we noticed that the resistance of the forts was growing weaker. A charge at double quick was ordered, and we carried the first line of works.

"It was evident from that point that many of the enemy's guns had been destroyed. Not enough of them had been left to continue an effective defense, but the enemy was undiscouraged and tried to make up with rifle fire what it lacked in artillery.

Losses Become Heavier.

"Between the first and second lines our losses were heavier than before, but under bayonet charges the enemy broke and fled in panic.

"Our troops entered the town at the enemy's heels. We ran into the town, despite our fatigue, with thunderous cheering.

"An episode which had much to do with ending the enemy's dogged resistance occurred during the fighting between the first and second lines. The Austrians, in the hope of checking the Russian effort to encircle the town, had thrown out a heavy screen of Slav troops with a backing of Magyars, who had been ordered to shoot down the Slavs from behind if they showed any hesitation.

"This circumstance became known to the Russian commander, who ordered a terrific artillery fire over the heads of the Slavs and into the ranks of the Magyars. This well-directed fire set the whole line in panic."

Fall of Lemberg.

"Lemberg, anciently, and now to be called Lvov, was captured by the Russians Thursday morning, together with another important center of administration sixty miles southeast of Lvov, on Dniester, Halicz, Galich.

"The fighting which terminated in such a great victory lasted over a fortnight, of which the last eight days has been uninterrupted action extending over a front of nearly 300 miles.

"I shall attempt to describe the progress of this titanic struggle, according to the data at hand, but in the meantime it is well to consider the meaning of this victory. Lemberg or Lvov is the capital of Galicia and commands all roads and railways leading into Hungary.

Lemberg Strongly Fortified.

"It was defended by ancient fortifications, modern intrenchments and gun emplacements, being already in a naturally strong position. As the administrative end and military center of a vast region it has provided rich booty of military stores to the victors, thus correspondingly crippling the enemy.

"When the Russian commanders entered Lvov they found it possible to communicate by telephone the news of their arrival to Vienna and Cracow. The city has over 200,000 inhabitants. The houses were filled to overflowing with Austrian sick and wounded, who had been abandoned to the Russians.

"The Russian attack was so swiftly pushed home that everything in the capital of Galicia was found intact.

"While the Russians were carrying on their victorious campaign on Lvov it would appear that the Austrian main armies, which had been encouraged to concentrate in the Polish provinces with their front towards Lublin and Kholm, were unable to accomplish anything beyond a single forward march on the extreme left flank, while the right flank still rested on Belz, in their own territory southwest of Sokal.

"The left flank moved to Opoland. The line runs thence to Zamostje and Belz. How much of this Austrian right flank suffered defeat during the combined operations has not seemed clear, but the forces of Austria, which inundated the province of Poland, are still referred to in official reports as the Austrian main force.

"Russia has certainly got enough men in position across the front of this main Austrian army to restrain it, and victories in other parts of the battlefield, which extends over 150 miles, have brought large Russian armies hardened by three weeks' fighting and marching, into the rear of the Austrian main forces.

"Russia has been conducting in perfect secrecy its combined operations against Austria in two regions over 400 miles apart, keeping well in touch with the enemy throughout this enormous distance and further executing a swift dash into East Prussia, another 200 miles away. The actual space covered by Russia's lines is considerably over a thousand miles.

Russians' Strategy Seen.

"Over this vast extent the attack and defense, cavalry raids and reconnoissances on the part of all arms, with temporary successes and occasional mishaps, have been alternating with one another for weeks past. Only now it is possible to penetrate to some extent the strategic plans of the commander-in-chief, and that only as regards the operations which have ended in the victory of Lvov.

"Russia, confident in its strength, took the risk of operating with two separate armies—one entering Galicia from the extreme east and pushing vigorously westward, while the other kept the Austrians employed along 500 or 600 miles of the frontier.

"Precisely by what tactical movements the situation was brought about I have not sufficient data to judge, but it may be safely assumed that the Austrians were increasingly favored in their attacks and incursions into Poland until their commanders were satisfied they had discovered an opening to the main positions, when they concentrated hostility on the Russian right flank.

Russians Foil Germans.

"The Austrians would be more readily disposed toward this direction, as it brought their main forces nearer to the armies of Germany, which ought at the same time to have been pushing vigorously toward Warsaw. The Germans, however, were prevented from performing this part of their plans by the Russians' invasion of East Prussia, which laid the German left flank open in any attempts to penetrate far into Poland from the west.

"The Austrians in the meantime continued victorious in their progress into undefended portions of Poland from the south. Early in the war the Austrians had a line about one march into Poland and extending over the whole western portion. As this territory was undefended, it was or should have been sufficiently obvious that Russia attached little military importance to it.

"The Austrians having secured their flank, proceeded to drive in strongly toward Kielce, but not encouraged in that direction, finally found a line of least resistance in the direction toward Lublin and Kholm, and proceeded to make repeated attacks in force with sufficient success to warrant their generals in making this the main objective of their forces.

Keep From Alarming Austrians.

"While these tactical operations were in progress Russia was pushing quietly, and not in too great force to alarm the Austrian general staff, into Galicia from Podolia and Bessarabia. In this region the Austrians trusted to their defense, also strong bodies of troops resting on fortified camps at every river crossing of this well-watered district.

"The Russians carried these in turn, capturing the valleys of the Rivers Sereth or Gmelden and the Luga without apparently exciting any particular alarm at Austrian headquarters. When they reached the third river, moving westward of Foulipa, the Austrians had evidently taken alarm and desperate efforts were made to arrest the westward progress of this army and even turn the flank at Halicz by Galicia, at the confluence of the Foulipa with the Dniester.

"By this time it was too late and the Russians, after weeks of marching and fighting, occupied a semi-circle of positions around the east side of Lvov and about one march from that place."

WAR FUGITIVES ARE PICTURED BY BRIEUX

Paris.—M. Brieux, the dramatist, who witnessed the arrival of a train full of fugitives at Chartres the other day, describes his experience for the Figaro.

"Children weep or gaze wide eyed, wondering what is the matter. Old folks sit in gloomy silence. Women with haggard cheeks and disordered hair [illegible] ... "They tell of invaders who scattered powder around or threw petroleum into their houses and then set them afire."

One of the fugitives explained to M. Brieux why after the first hour of their flight she had to carry her eldest child as well as her baby. She showed him a pair of boots.

"I felt the inside with my fingers," says Brieux. "Nails had gone through the soles. I looked at the women's feet. They were dirty with [illegible] ... it was clear."

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

An article appeared in the Montgomery Journal of Sept. 14, under the following heading: "U. S. officials silent as to cotton seed investigation." This is another indication that the farmer of the south need not look to the government lor any relief at all. They must have forgotten the pledge they made to the farmers two years ago, and adopted the policy of watchful waiting instead of the relief-and-do-something policy they advocated.

In determining what a thing is, it is always a great help to, at the same time, observe what it IS NOT. Therefore, as an aid to the Clanton Press in finding out what is meant by the initiative, referendum and recall, we beg to state that it DOES NOT mean the issuing of county warrants and the placing of th e county in debt over and in defiance of the voice of the people who compose the county. Therefore it is readily to be seen that the initiative, referendum and recall are really and truly enough something unknown in the recent management of the affairs of this county.

In his speech at New Orleans last week Col. Roosevelt said: "It is out of the question that the old Republican Paty can ever secure the confidence of the South. It is out of the question that the old Democratic party, wedded to outworn principles of government, and dead and buried economic theories, can ever do real good in North or South. A new party is needed to meet the new needs of the new day. The national Progressive platform is in very deed, a national platform as emphatically in the interest of the south as of the north; in the interest of the west as of the east; a platform upon which all far-sighted and upright citizens in every state and every section can stand without mental reservation." These are truths beyond dispute, and if this nation would but accept them, mean the glorious triumph of an era of universal confidence from one side of our county to the other.

In the Age-Herald of last Sunday under the headlines, "Cotton seed men violating the law says D.H. Riddle; says officials should prosecute the flagrant outrages against statutes of the state," the following was the first paragraph: "Charging that the most flagrant violation of the anti-trust statutes of the state and nation is daily occuring in Alabama, D. H. Riddle a wellknown lawyer of Talladega, while in Birmingham last night, called upon the state government to prosecute the buyers and crushers of cotton seed."

Why is it that the Democratic officers of the south are sitting idly by and seeing the farmers robbed in such a way? Why don't they do their duty and prosecute such trusts as are referred to above, and enable the farmers to get what is coming to them? Two years ago they went all over this county telling the people what great friends they were to the farmers; but where are they to day when the farmer needs them? Why don't they do something? They promised to.

We call attention to an article which appeared the Toledo Blade which is in part as follows:

"It has not occurred to the house committee on ways and means, it would appear, to put in force the democratic promise of economy. Possibly these good intentions have been thrown overboard altogether. There is reason to believe this, because the present congress has created a great number of new jobs, voted itself an extravagant mileage allowance and attempted to pass the greediest "Pork Barrel" bill ever framed. The treasury report shows that congress has spent $38.000 more on itself in August up to the 20th of the month, then it spent in all of August last year. The executive offices had spent more than three times as much, the state department not far from twice as much, the. department of justice seven times as much, and the interior department twice as much as was spent on these officers and departments a year ago."

The above article shows the people how the democrats live up to thei promises. Why have they gone back on almost every promise they made the people two years ago? Do you wonder why the democratic speakers of this county will not meet the Progressive speakers in joint debate? Can they or anyone else defend such administration as this? Possibly this is the reason that the Clanton Press and the democratic candidates of this county have not seem fit to go out and try to make a canvass as they thought they would have to try, and defend the present administration. We would like to see the man that can, or would ever try, to defend the democratic administration, in this state or in the nation, or almost any where else that they are in power.

Is the Democratic administration at Washington the friend of the southern farmer? We have only to look for an answer to this question in the action they have taken on questions that concern the farmer of the south. The first thing that confronts us then is the message that was sent out from Washington last week, after the Democratic Congress had spent days of investigation in the present cotton crisis. They said to the South that we need not expect any aid from the government in moving the cotton crop.

It looks rather provoking to us that Congress should send such a message to the stricken southland, when it had at its disposal under the provision of the Vreeland-Aldrich bill, $150,000,000 with which to relieve an emergency in the cotton trade. What are our southern Senators and Representatives doing anyhow? When such a pressing emergency faces their contingents, are they really so helpless to extend us aid through the power of their offices? Can we but infer from the treatment of this situation that the Democratic party is not the party for giving the people relief that it proposed to be. Have they not failed in this vital point? One of the strongest Democatic journals in the south made the statement that Congress was at its supreme criterion in dealing with this emergency in cotton. Now they have refused to extend any aid at all, can this democratic organ but come out and say boldly that the demacratic rule has failed in its boasted service to the people? Will they continue to preach to the people the great good and beneficial service that comes from a democratic administration?

PAVED HIGHWAYS REUNION TRAVELS

Jacksonville Has Many High Class Roads to Points of Interest

Trips to Be Taken Over Them in Automobiles During the Reunion of Confederates May 6, 7, 8.

Jacksonville, Fla., April.—It is safe to say that hundreds, and possibly thousands, of visitors to Jacksonville during the week of the great Reunion of Confederate Veterans and Sons of Veterans, will make the trip from their homes in automobiles. Numerous inquiries have been received from all parts of the country concerning road conditions, and especially in regard to the practicability of reaching other points in Florida by automobile trips from Jacksonville.

For the information of auto owners, desirous of bringing their cars to Jacksonville at the time of the Reunion, attention is called to the fact that the city license books show that there are over 2,000 licensed automobiles in the city of Jacksonville alone, and during the past winter season more than 2,500 motor-driven vehicles have passed through Jacksonville en route to various places on the Florida peninsula. Unless there were fairly good roads, leading from Jacksonville to other sections of the State, there would not have been one-tenth as many cars in Florida this season, and the home people of Jacksonville would not have invested so heavily in motor vehicles.

Duval county, of which Jacksonville is the county seat, was among the first of the Florida counties to issue road improvement bonds and to begin the paving of its highways with vitrified paving brick and concrete. With a population of only 75,000 in 1909, this county issued road improvement bonds that year to the amount of $1,000,000, and it was provided that not more than $250,000 was to be expended in road construction each year for four years. The bonds were sold at a handsome premium and the money has all been expended on the roads of the county, with a result that this county now has some of the very best in the South, and these roads are a joy to the joyrider and to all persons who use them.

But this is not all; for the Board of County Commissioners is at the present time working up interest in a proposition to issue from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 additional road improvement bonds and construct a system of paved roads and highways throughout the county of Duval that will be a model for all sections of the country.

Jacksonville is only seventeen miles in a direct line from the Atlantic Ocean, where there is one of the finest beaches in the world, affording a speedway four hundred feet in width and twenty miles in length. Here is the ideal automobile course and it is visited by thousands of cars every year.

From the city to the seashore the county has constructed a magnificent boulevard, paved with vitrified brick and with concrete for the entire distance. Hundreds of cars traverse this Atlantic Boulevard, as it is known, daily, and during the Reunion many thousands of visitors will make the trip by auto to the beach. Once on the seashore they will find much to interest them. Surf bathing will be at its best during the Reunion week and many visitors from interior points, who have never before had the opportunity to plunge into the big breakers of Old Ocean, will find the experience a novel and delightful one.

From Jacksonville to St. Augustine the distance by auto is 38 miles and the trip is easily made in two hours. In fact, the record for the trip is one hour and nine minutes, but that is almost too fast for a trip to the oldest city in the United States.

The road from South Jacksonville, on the opposite side of the majestic St. Johns river from the Reunion city, is paved with shell for nine miles and the going is good. Then comes six miles of brick paving over which the cars fairly skim along. The next four miles, to the Duval county line, have not yet been paved, but a temporary surface of shavings has been provided. From the county line to St. Augustine, a distance of 18 miles, the road is not yet paved but shell has been placed in the wheel ruts and good time can be made by the average car.

Still another attractive trip, on the south side of the St. Johns river, is that to Mandarin, a pretty little village on the banks of the river, about fifteen miles from the city. This road is well paved with shell for the entire distance and passes through some very pretty orange groves, which in themselves are an attraction to all. At Mandarin there are a number of attractive homes, surrounded by pretty gardens, groves and farms. This village is the site of the former home of the late Mrs. Harriett Beecher Stowe, the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The city of Jacksonville has sixty miles of paved streets and contracts are now outstanding for several additional miles, work on which will start immediately after the reunion, as it is the desire of the city authorities not to have the streets torn up while the visitors are here.

Sight-seeing automobiles are numerous in Jacksonville every winter and this year several of the large cars will remain over until after the reunion.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whateyer. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhare will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

Will Pay 10 Cents For Your Cotton

In view of the present financial condition of the country, and realizing that from the sale of cotton is the only way the people of this section have to get money, we hereby agree to accept cotton at 10c per pound from all who are indebted to us on former transactions, and as payment in any transaction we may make while these present conditions exist.

GOWAN BROTHERS

J. E. GOWAN, A. M. GOWA

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This conpon and 80 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan., 1-

We Will Hav A County

At a meeting of the s ers Tuesday, it was sho the Chilton County Fair means a dead issue. i nation was expressed to fair as usual this fall, a ties have already beg purpose in view.

Modesty.

Some folks who can't p organ in this world expe harp-playing instructions —Atlanta Constitution.

Puzzles the Young

The town visitor appeared in a bathing s but abbreviated. "Hav into long dresses yet, asked a wondering youngs sLore.

Notice!, Farmer

We understand that it has gone that our gin is not being oper this season. We wish to say here that our gin is in first c shape. We appreciate your patronage and ask you to conti with us. We assure you that will give the best results poss

We have obtained the servic Mr. W. E. Maddox, who is an perienced gin man. We will also a line of cotton seed meal hulls, which we will exchange cotton seed. Thanking you, We

CLANTON GINNE

J. A. MADDOX, Manager.

Farmers,

We understand that a number of ers are under the impression tha er credit them for Ginning and Ties, but demand the cash when ginned. THIS IS NOT TRUE

We have our same old rules for only observe them closer. We cotton as cheap as anyone in tow you till the cotton is sold or you haul it away from the warehouse, ginning.

Having had our machinery put in condition, and being operated by men, we can assure you perfect s

We also pay the highest cash pri

Chilton Fertilizer C

ith Brought to Jail Here.

Smith boy who has been ted for stealing $1,000 from press company at Thorsby rought to Clanton Wednesday ght and placed in jail to further developments.

Lambasted.

trainer was engaged for the and was told to put a lion and through an act. He seemed and the next his boss asked got along with the savage "Sure, the lion didn't bother he said, "but that durned the daylights out of me!"

Knowledge.

rather know that I know than feed myself on illusory reconcilable assertions.—Mau eterlinck, in the Country Maga

Burg Har

Burglar the Clanto time Tue about $10 sisting of

Bro

There ca who have least we c tence; it n semblance we have to make sure —Arthur L.

Qua

Guard wi kindness. out hesitati out regret, meanness your heart be wanted

E. HOPK

Manufacturer of Cemen all kinds of building purposes; Well Curbing; Water-Proof Bri Vaults and All kinds of Cemete

Contractor for all kind work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furn

Peoples' Ph Clanton, Alaba

The Wearing of

ans the Tramping of Dollars

For even the product of the tories, which use the best will eventually wear out.

It behooves you, therefore, t Best for the least mon y.

u'll Always Find Th

KEMP BROT

Clanton, Ala

Millinery

On the first of September I will o a Millinery Store in the Wells Buildin

Will carry a complete and up-to-d stock of Fall and Winter Millinery.

Your trade is solicited.

MRS. A. M. GREEN

JEMISON, ALA.

y 10 Cents
r Your Cotto

the present financia
the country, and real m the sale of cotton i
the people of this sec
get money, we hereaccept cotton at 10
from all who are ins on former transac-
payment in any trans-
ay make while thes ditions exist.

N BROTHERS
A. M. GOW

essive?
ditions tective ocratic osperi-
e NE,
he Pro-

ings the eks. Of-

We Will Ha
A County

At a meeting of the s ers Tuesday, it was sh
the Chilton County Fai means a dead issue.
nation was expressed t
fair as usual this fall,
ties have already beg
purpose in view.

Modesty.

Some folks who can't p organ in this world expe harp-playing instructions i —Atlanta Constitution.

Puzzled the Young

The town visitor to the c appeared in a bathing-su but abbreviated. "Haven't into long dresses yet, M asked a wondering youngs share.

!, Farme

nd that it has gone
s not being oper
We wish to say
r gin is in first c
appreciate your
d ask you to conti
e assure you that
best results poss

tained the servic
addox, who is an
man. We will c
cotton seed meal
we will exchange
Thanking you, W

ON GINNE
MADDOX, Manager.

inery

of September I will o
ore in the Wells Buildi complete and up-to-d

nd Winter Millinery.

s solicited.

A. M. GREEN
EMISON, ALA.

Farmers,

We understand that a number of our customers are under the impression that we no longer credit them for Ginning and Bagging and Ties, but demand the cash when the cotton is ginned. THIS IS NOT TRUE.

We have our same old rules for ginning; but only observe them closer. We will gin your cotton as cheap as anyone in town, and allow you till the cotton is sold or you are ready to haul it away from the warehouse, to pay for the ginning.

Having had our machinery put into first class condition, and being operated by experienced men, we can assure you perfect satisfaction.

We also pay the highest cash price for seed.

Chilton Fertilizer Company

h Brought to Jail Here.

Smith boy who has been for stealing $1,000 from ess company at Thorsby ought to Clanton Wednes- t and placed in jail to further developments.

Lambasted.

trainer was engaged for the was told to put a lion and through an act. He seemed the next his boss asked got along with the savage the lion didn't bother he said, "but that durned the daylights out of me!"

Knowledge.

ther know that I know en feed myself on illusory reciable assertions.—Mau erlinck, in the Country Maga

Burglars Enter Hardware Store

Burglars entered the store of the Clanton Hardware Co. some time Tuesday night and stole about $100 worth of goods, consisting of pistols and razors.

Brought Out by Trial.

There can be no true virtue in those who have never been tried—or at least we cannot be sure of its existence; it may be there, or only its semblance may be there. In real life we have to do with realities; let us make sure that our defenses are real. —Arthur L. Salmon.

Qualities to Be Prized.

Guard within yourself the treasure, kindness. Know how to give without hesitation, know how to lose without regret, how to acquire without meanness. Know how to replace in your heart the happiness that may be wanted in yourself.—F. W. Faber

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

he Wearing of Shoes
ans the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot

For even the product of the best factories, which use the best materials, will eventually wear out.
It behooves you, therefore, to buy the Best for the least mon y.

u'll Always Find Them Here.

EMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

REYNOLDS-MORGAN

A brilliant social event of the season was the marriage of Miss Estella Morgan and Mr. Grady Reynolds, which was solemnized at the Methodist church last Thursday night. The church was beautifully decorated for the occosion with palms and chrysanthemums.

Before the bridal party entered, a delightf il musical program was rendered by Mr. Percy Pitts and Mrs. A. M. Gowan, Miss Emmette Matthews and Mrs. J. H. Middleton.

The bridal party, led by the ushers, Messrs. J. P. VanDerveer and J. Hance Alred entered to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. The brides maids, Misses Lurline Harper, Bessie VanDerveer, Willie and Winnie Reynolds, wore white crepe de chine trimmed with duchess lace and pearls. The maid of honor, Miss L. E. Morgan, sister of the bride, and the matron of honor, Mrs. Whitfield of Montgomery, wore yellow crepe meteor. The bride attired in a tailored suit of dark green, with hat to match and bronze slippers, entered on the arm of her brother, John T Morgan by whom she was given in marriage.

The groom entered with the best man, Mr. Brown Gaston, of Montgomery. The groomsmen were Messrs. Claude Reynolds, John F. Dillard, Sam A. Latham and Dr. Sam Hopkins.

Miss Elizabeth Powe acted as ring bearer, and the flower girls were Misses Ann Whitfield and Frances Hopkins.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Chappelle, assisted by Rev. Fancher.

Mr. R. I. Perkins, postmaster of Dollar, and a prominent citizen of Coosa county, was in the city Wednesday on business.

The yards about the depot are being much improved by the covering of crushed limestone being placed on them.

The Maccabee lodge of Clanton had an entertainment last Friday night. Besides other special features, refreshments were served the guests by the members of the lodge at Upchurch's.

FOR SALE—Burr and Crimson Clover seed. See or write me for prices. W. E. Thomas, Jemison, Ala. 9-17-2t

Prof. Cecil E. Harris left Wednesday for Jacksonville, where he will attend the State Normal School for the coming session.

Mr. W. L. Parrish went to Auburn last week to take up the study of pharmacy. A card from him states that he is well pleased with the work.

Madison Popwell of Kincheon was in Clanton Monday on business.

A. C. Wade was a visitor to the Capital City Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Denson of Bessemer were visitor to the parents of Mrs. Denson here Sunday.

WHEN YOU ARE NERVOUS

you have the first symptom of a run-down system, and nervous people too often conceal their aches and pains and suffer in silence, while, if neglected, this condition often foreruns more serious trouble.

If those so afflicted would stop taking medicine containing alcohol or drugs which menace the foundations of health, and just take the pure, strengthening nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, it would create new blood to pulsate through the organs, refresh their bodies and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shun substitutes.

NOTICE

I desire to announce to the people that my horse known as the Comer horse, is back at home ready for service, subject to call. Will be in Clanton September 7th, 15th, 23rd. Home part time September 1st, 9th, 17th and 25th.
H.

Mrs. R. H. Croswell of Deatsville was in Clanton last Friday. She will begin teaching her music class again shortly.

Miss Louise Croswell of Deatsville visited friends here last week

W. A. Gulledge of Verbena attended the merchants and farmers meeting at the court house last Friday.

H. B. Oliver of Verbena was a visitor to Clanton last Friday.

J. J. Stanley of Thorsby was here on business last Friday.

W. H. Conway of Jemison was in Clanton last Friday attending the merchants and farmer's meeting at the court house.

Percy Pitts of Columbiana was here last Thursdry attending the wedding of Mr. Grady Reynolds and Miss Morgan.

Our New Location

In the Headley Building across the railroad from the Post Office is by far the most convenient place in town to get a Haircut or Shave.

And then too, you are always certain of keen razors, clean towels, and careful attention.

You have heard of the excellenc of our service—now come have them proven to you by an individual test.

Every job we do is done with a distinct personal interest and effort to make it the best.

Sanford, Wagoner and Glass

Miss Pearl Durbin of Fairview visited relatives and friends here this week.

Dr. G. C. Roper is at home for a few days with his parents. He will leave about the first of October to take his finishing touches at the Birmingham Medical College.

Misses Mabel and Harriette Swan of Thorsby were visitors to Clanton last Saturday.

Mr. P. K. Villadsen of Thorsby was here last Saturday on business.

Sam W. Collins of Thorsby was in Clanton last Saturday.

Rev. A. L. Foshee of Thorsby was in Clanton Saturday shaking hands with his numerous friends.

Mr. Brown Gaston and Mr. John Fuller Dillard have returned from Clanton, where they were attendants at the marriage of Mr. Grady Reynolds and Miss Estella Morgan. Mr. Gaston was best man, and Mr. Dillard was usher.—Montgomery Times

The New Baby is World's Wonder

Every tiny infant makes life's perspective wider and brighter. And whatever there is to enhance its arrival and to ease and comfort the expectant mother should be given attention. Among the real helpful things is an external abdominal application known as "Mother's Friend." There is scarcely a community but what has its enthusiastic admirer of this splendid embrocation. It is so well thought of by women who know that most drug stores throughout the United States carry "Mother's Friend" as one of their staple and reliable remedies. It is applied to the abdominal muscles to relieve the strain on ligaments and tendons.

Those who have used it refer to the ease and comfort experienced during the period of expectancy, they particularly refer to the absence of nausea, often so prevalent as a result of the natural expansion. In a little book are described many fully the many reasons why expectancy through has been a grand blessing to women with timely hints, suggestions and rules for ready reference. If interested in a copy of "Mother's Friend" write Bradfield Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga., and it will be sent free. Sold by all druggists.

3 — Equals — 25

A startling statement but a true one in this case. One teaspoonful of medicine and two pounds of your own ground feed (cost about 3 cents' equal, —in what they do for your animals and fowls,—two pounds of any ready-made stock or poultry tonic (price 25 cents). There you are! If you don't believe it, try it out! Buy, today, a can of—

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

Changes feed into tonic—Makes it result-producing.

Write for a trial package of Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE, also our 32 page, illustrated book, fully explaining its uses. Address: Bee Dee Stock Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

25c, 50c and $1. per can. At your dealer's.

P. B. 3

Does Your Stomach Trouble You?

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Successfully Taken in Cases of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments

And One Dose Has Often Dispelled Years of Suffering

MAYR'S Wonderful Stomach Remedy will change that Long Face!

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy can really be termed a wonderful remedy and the benefits that it gives in many of the most chronic cases of Stomach Trouble has spread its fame from one end of the country to the other. No matter where you live—you will find people who have suffered with Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments' etc., and have been restored to health and are loud in their praise of this remedy. There is not a day but what one hears of the wonderful results obtained from this remedy and the benefits are entirely natural, as it acts on the source and foundation of these ailments, removing the poisonous catarrh and bile accretions, taking out the inflamation from the intestinal tract and assist in rendering the same antiseptic. Sufferers are urged to try one dose—which alone should relieve your suffering and convince you that Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy should restore you to good health. Put it to a test today—the results will be a revelation to you and you will rejoice over your quick recovery and once again know the joys of living. Send for booklet on Stomach Ailments to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 156 Whiting St., Chicago, or better still, obtain a bottle from your druggist.

Dr. T. H. Neighbors with his bride, arrived in Clanton Tuesday night, and will make their future home here. We join with their numerous friends in extending them our best wishes.

Dr. E. A. Matthews spent Tuesday in Birmingham on business

Rev. H. G. Williams, a young minister of our town, in whom we all have the utmost confidence and pride, left Tuesday morning to enter Howard College at Birmingham. It is the least hope of everyone who know him that his success in this work will be unbounded.

Sanford, Wagoner & Glass have moved their barber shop to a much more desirable location in the Headley building across the railroad from the post office.

FOR SALE—Very desirable lot and house in Deatsville, Ala, short distance from depot. The house has waterwosks connection; garden if desired. Excellent place for nice home. If interested write the Union-Banner, Clanton, Ala., for further information. tf.

Prof. S. H. Herbert Principal of Thorsby Institute, was in Clanton Tuesday morning looking after some business connected with his chool.

M. F. Lett of Rout 3 was a visitor to Clanton last Tuesday.

Miss Cora Mae Wilson has resigned her position as teacher of music in the Clanton High School and gone to Birmingham, where she has accepted a pla e in some one of the city high schools.

John Patton Jr. of Jemison was here Tuesday on business.

Commissioners court was in session the first of this week attending to business connected with the road work of the county.

Miss Ada Faircloth was a visitor to Montgomery Wednesday.

J. Bice, mayor of Thorsby, was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday of this week.

TREES TO SET

I am arranging to supply the trade a big lot of trees this winter; stock on hand after Nov. 15, and at prices much less than you generally pay for such trees. Isdson Strock, Vaiden.

Interestin Items From Thorsby.

Thorsby Institute opened on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, with chapel service at ten a.m. Addresses were made by Miss Helen C. Jenkins, A. K. Horn, and Principal, S. H. Herbert. Spe ial music was furnished by a quartette of young ladies.

The enrollment the first day was 41. Others have come in since, so that the enrollment now is as large as the entire enrollment of last year. The dormitories are busy places with the largest number of boarding students the school has ever had at the opening of the term. These students come from ten different counties.

The reception given by the Ladies Guild to the students, teachers, and trustees of Thorsby Institute last Friday night was a delightful affair. Over a hundred people were present, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Speeches were made by Mrs. Hattie Gerald, John Patton, Miss Jenkins, Rev. E. W. Butler, and Principal S. H. Herbert. Miss Lassfolk and some other young ladies furnished some very pleasing music. Refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served to the guests of the evening by the Ladies' Guild.

W. H. Hopkins, of Atlanta Ga. preached at the Congregational church Sunday morning and evening. He spoke to the students of Thorsby Institute at the chapel service Monday morning and gave a Bible study in the book of Acts Monday afternoon. His addresses were much enjoyed, and were very helpful.

The lots formerly occupied by the Foss residence, which was destroyed in the fire last January are being thoroughly cleaned up. This is part of the work of beautifying the Institute Campus which will be carried on during the coming year under the directions of the Department of Landscape Gardning of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The Girls Domitory yard is already much improved in appearance as the result of work done last spring and this summer.

The waterworks pipes have been extended to the end of Chilton Avenue, and from thence to the Boys' Dormitories. Several new customers are taking water now that the supply can be depended on.

The opening meeting of the Helen Keller Literary Society will be held in Bates Hall Friday night, September 18th, at 7:30 p. m. Election of officers for the coming year will be the main business of the evening but something of the nature of a program will be presented. All former members of the society are invited to be present.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andzrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place.

CHAPTER X.

Wounded on the Field.

The accident was one that happened often. Occasionally, after a tap, water would be turned into the cinder pit that the cooling slag might harden and be broken without delay. Not seldom the water would be conveyed under the crust, come into contact with the still molten slag and be converted suddenly into steam. Then there would be an explosion. Men might be seriously injured, or even killed, which was very sad—but one of the hazards of the employment. It happened when Mark had been following his straight road ahead for more than five years.

Five years during which he had won success, substantial if not brilliant! The lack of brilliancy might have been disputed by those few who knew that sundry labor-saving devices installed in the Quinby mills during this period were of his invention.

When Henley heard of the accident he frowned; Henley detested accidents, which spoke of inefficiency somewhere. But when the information was added that the foreman of the open-hearth battery was among the injured, he said: "Damn!" and in person at once called the hospital and his own physician by telephone and through these agencies commandeered the best surgical skill and care for that valuable workman.

The doctors gathered in solemn conclave and did various things to Mark's shattered body. They dogged his steps into the very shadow of death and would not let him die. They did that, knowing they condemned him to a life of pain, and having the security of Thomas Henley's word that their bills should each and every one of them be paid.

While Mark still lingered in the vale of mystery that leads to full knowledge, two men began their daily—and nightly—watches. One was a thin faded man who wore the rusty black of the country preacher. The other was an awkward, gray little man who would sit motionless by the hour, never taking his eyes from the still form under the white sheet.

Mark did not die. His broken body began slowly to mend. He passed out of immediate danger; he was even allowed to talk and to be talked to a little. But in the manner of the nurses, of his visitors from Bethel, even of the calloused doctors, were a grave gentleness, an absence of the exultation to be expected after triumph over death. He felt it.

He put his question to his father. "What are they keeping back from me?"

Simon's glance did not waver, nor did he try to evade with a soothing lie. "Ye'll never walk easy again. Ye'll have to use a crutch, leastways a cane, always."

"It's my hip?"

"Yes."

"Is that all?"

"Ye were hurt innardly. Ye'll have to be careful always. No more work in the mills."

Mark closed his eyes, uttering no complaint. But within was a turmoil of protest and rebellion. A cripple, a partial invalid for life! Half a man! So had ended the dreamed campaign of conquest. Tears of futile rage seeped out through his closed eyelids.

His recovery was slow and very painful; six years of driving ahead at top speed had left him but little reserve vitality for the emergency. The mood of rebellion died down from sheer exhaustion. He accepted his misfortune; but sullenly, with no swelling heroic resolve to defy untoward circumstance.

There was no conscious desire to return to the mills from which he had been banished. They were too much the object of his smoldering resentment just then. He felt toward them as the betrayed toward the traitor.

"I think," he said once to Simon and Richard Courtney, who had not yet left the city, "I'll go back to Bethel."

"It will be a good place to recuperate," said the preacher.

"But I mean to stay."

"We shall be glad to have you back."

Thoughts of Bethel naturally revived the memory of Unity Martin. Mark found a certain grim humor in the recollection.

He had had his period of tragic remorse for Kazia. He had not, however, let conscience push to the extreme of disturbing the fixed destiny just mentioned. Not was he long in attaining a comparatively easy state of mind in which he could congratulate himself on having avoided a serious blunder. Not many months later he by chance met Piotr, who conveyed the news that Kazia had married Whiting. Piotr's manner of narration implied that, though Whiting was a poor refuge, Kazia had been fortunate to escape Mark. He seemed disappointed that his auditor showed no deep emotion.

Mark's letters to Unity had continued, at erratic intervals. Soon her replies, too, began to dwindle in number and in length; they had never had much to lose in the way of intensity. And then he sent a letter that she failed to answer at all, leaving their love affair suspended, so to speak, in the air. One of Simon's rare and misspelled missives informed Mark that she was, in the phrase Bethel used, keeping company with one Slocum, a prosperous young farmer of the vicinity. This may hardly be regarded as poetic retribution. It caused Mark a few days' surface indignation and a secret relief; one can not feel deeply the loss of a shadow, even though one has paid a price for her.

Kazia married; Unity, having jilted him, keeping company with plodding Bill Slocum! His tragedy had ended in sheer farce. We do well, he concluded, not to take our dramas too seriously.

* * * * * * *

An amazing thing happened one day. There was the sound of a quick unfamiliar tread in the corridor, the door was pushed briskly open and into the room stepped Thomas Henley.

"How are you, Truitt?" he inquired, shaking hands. "I was going by, had a few minutes and ran up to find out for myself."

"Well enough, I guess," Mark replied out of his amazement.

"Good!" said Henley. "Your father, I presume?" He nodded toward Simon.

Mark made the necessary introductions. Simon said: "Pleased to meet ye," and flushed for his son, who had had to own up to the relationship.

Toward the other visitor Henley glanced uncertainly a moment, then held out a hand.

"Ah! Doctor Courtney! Do you happen to remember me?" The question, obviously, was in playful irony.

"I happen to," answered Courtney, who did not share Simon's shyness.

"I remember now, it was you who sent this young man to me. I," said Henley graciously, "am in your debt."

The preacher's shadowy smile appeared. "Is he?"

Henley laughed pleasantly. "I fancy he is. And I have a notion the debt

"I'm Going Back—Home."

will grow. I am finishing your job, Doctor Courtney."

He turned to Mark. Simon and Courtney pushed their chairs back from the bedside, that the great man might hold the stage.

"When," Henley asked, "do you expect to come back to us?"

Mark winced and returned to the sullenness that was becoming his habit. "I'm going back—home."

The pause and the slight emphasis on the last word were not lost on Henley; a suspicion as to their import stirred. But:

"Exactly right!" he exclaimed heartily. "Stay as long as necessary to get your strength together. You're too valuable a man to take chances. Your job will wait for you. By the way, about that new charging machine you spoke of before the accident; I suppose the plans aren't where we can lay our hands on them?"

"No," answered Mark, "you can't lay your hands on them. They're in my head."

"An excellent place to keep 'em," Henley agreed. "Suppose then, when you're feeling up to it, I send one of our engineers after you to go over the plans with you? If there's anything in the idea, we ought to install the machines before winter."

"You can send him, if you want to. But I won't go over the plans with him." Mark discouraged the suggestion.

Henley stiffened. "I'm not in the business of pooling investments."

"I'll see that you don't steal them," Mark responded ungraciously. "Because, when you pay for it, you've got to pay for this, too." He put a hand on the injured hip. "That is, if I ever put the idea in shape."

Henley waved a hand to intimate that allowance must be made for an invalid's humors. "Of course, we expect you to be business-like. Just what do you mean by that 'if'?"

"I mean I'm through with the mills."

"Who," Henley's glance swept Simon and Richard Courtney sharply, "who has been putting fool ideas into your head?"

"You, for one, when you come here because I'm a valuable man, not because I'm a man. Would you come to see me if I hadn't a new invention in mind?"

"Nonsense! You're sick, that's all." Henley smiled kindly but confidently. "I've seen men in your case before. You think you won't come back. But you will. Why? Because you're a valuable man—I stick to that. You've a genius for mechanics, you know how to handle men and you've got a sense of organization. Most men would think themselves lucky if they had any one of those. What does it mean? That you fit in here, of course. And when a man fits into any kind of life, he can no more keep away than molten steel can avoid the shape of the mold. And—you'll find it so—there's something about our business that gets into the bone and blood of a man." He looked at his watch and rose abruptly. "Glad you're getting along. Don't forget, your job is waiting for you."

"But you don't seem to understand," Mark cried. "I'm done for. I'll have to go on a cane, maybe a crutch, all my life. And the doctors say, no hard work at all."

Henley could be very human, when he chose. "Ah!" he said gently. "I had not heard that. I'm sorry. It makes a difference, of course."

It is possible that Henley was not thinking of Mark's commercial value, as he stood looking searchingly down at the querulous patient.

Unexpectedly he leaned forward a little. From his eyes a commanding flash leaped. He put out a hand and caught one of Mark's strongly.

"Your brains don't need a crutch, do they? It isn't brute strength that makes you valuable—we can buy that cheap. You said something about being a man. Now's your chance to be one. What's a little thing like a crutch or a doctor's prohibition? The measure of a man is what he overcomes. Go home and rest, get your nerve together. And when you're ready, let me know. I'll find a place for you."

He was gone. And there was Mark, who had just been weakly if resentfully accepting defeat, athrill like a war-horse that has heard the bugle call.

CHAPTER XI.

The Measure of a Man.

When he met Unity again, he had been in Bethel for more than two weeks.

He had started out for the morning turn on his crutches, to test his returning strength, and before he quite realized it the village lay behind him. He swung along for some two hundred yards farther; then let himself carefully down on the roadside.

He sat there for a long time, baring his head to the summer sunshine.

"This is very good indeed!" It would have been almost flawless but for one thing—he was rather lonely; he felt the need for some one to share the day with him.

He had his wish. Down the valley road appeared a buggy drawn by a lazy heavy-footed horse of the sort distinguished as "safe for women." From within the buggy Mark caught the gleam of a white shirtwaist and a sailor hat. Even before the vehicle drew near enough for recognition, he knew the passenger for Unity.

A slight tremor passed over him. To meet the embodiment of a shadow by whom one has been jilted—or whom one has jilted?—is at least mildly exciting.

A slight tightening of the reins was sufficient to stop that horse.

"Hello, Unity!" Mark felt that this greeting fell short of the dramatic proprieties.

"Oh! How do you do?" she answered colorlessly.

There was a moment of silence during which, without seeming to do so, they inspected each other.

Mark had a twinge of disappointment. This was not the Unity he had loved so boyishly—and so briefly. She was as pretty as ever, in a way even prettier; but one could hardly have thought of her as spirituelle. Her face was fuller, its color deeper, and there was a healthy roundness in the line of shoulder and breast, of the ankle that protruded from under the dust-robe. Not that she was fat! But her daintiness was gone. In the item of dress she would have suffered from comparison with the young ladies of his boarding house. Her hair was done carelessly. And vivacity had gone the way of daintiness. She had the air of having settled into the habit of Bethel, of having accepted its narrow outlook. A faint vertical line between her eyes hinted that she might not have accepted it with complacency.

Therefore he said: "You look the same as ever, Unity."

She brightened a little. "You think so?" There was something almost pitiful to him in the way she caught at the remark. She became spiritless again. "But, of course, that isn't true."

"But, of course, it is."

She laughed unpleasantly. "You wouldn't think so, if you saw the way they tease me here now."

"The mean! Surely not!"

She stirred into attention. "Oh, the women. They're so foolish, you know, they don't giggle behind my back. And when they haven't anything else to gossip about, they talk about how I'm settling into an old maid."

"Isn't that what the rhetorics used to call hyperbole? It should be sparingly used. Besides I hear you have a beau."

"Oh! him!" With another shrug. "He's afraid I'm not a good cook."

"That's a nice way to talk about a lover! Especially," he laughed self-consciously, "since you threw me over for him."

He almost missed the acid look she flashed at him. "It broke your heart, of course!"

"I've had pleasanter experiences," he said dryly. "Why didn't you answer my last letter, Unity?"

Her indifference might have been a little too well done. "For one thing, even I have a little pride. It was easy to see you'd got tired of me. Not that I cared! Those boy-and-girl affairs always die a natural death. There was another girl, wasn't there?"

He Was Still Resting on His Grassy Bank When the Slow-Going Vehicle Reappeard.

"Why, I believe so. In fact, there was. I gave her up for you."

"And I gave you up. You must have thought," again her unpleasant laugh rang, "you'd made a poor bargain all round. Or had a lucky escape!"

"I did," he answered grimly, leaving her to construe the answer as she chose.

"That's an easy conundrum." She gathered up the reins. "Well, I must be going. We're harvesting now and I have to get back in time to help get dinner. Good-by."

She drove on, as casually as if they had been neighbors in the habit of meeting daily. . . . And this was their first meeting after six years.

He leaned back on his grassy bank, having found, if not a companion, at least food for reflection.

He was still resting on his grassy bank when, an hour later, the slow-going vehicle reappeared. With difficulty—for he had not yet become expert wtih his crutches—he rose and stood in the middle of the road. The horse, without urging, stopped with its nose against him. A more skilled observer than Mark might have noticed that some villager's mirror and comb had been utilized to the advantage of Unity's hair and that her hat had been readjusted to its most becoming angle; and would have drawn certain inferences.

Mark did not. He merely smiled at her over the horse's head.

She seemed rather impatient with his obstructiveness. "You've bought the pike, then? I hadn't heard."

He laughed and waved his hand airily. "This morning the world is mine. Do you know, we haven't shaken hands?"

"Oh, haven't we?" Her tone attached no importance to the omission.

Nevertheless, when he stood aside, she drove the horse forward a length and laid a limp hand in Mark's.

"Also," he continued, "you haven't said you're sorry that I was hurt."

"Oh!" she repeated, with perfunctoriness unrelieved, "I'm sorry."

He laughed again. "You needn't mind now. You'll have plenty of chances before long."

"Meaning?"

"The road to your house is still open to the public, isn't it? I'm thinking of buying a new horse. Unity," he returned to gravity, "there isn't any reason why we shouldn't be good friends, is there?"

"People will talk."

He paraphrased a classic formula. "Unity," he said earnestly, "drat the people!"

"You can say that. You don't have to stay here."

"But I'm going to stay here."

"Not for good?"

"For good."

"Why?"

Mark laughed shortly. "When you're put out of the race, you don't want to stay where you have to watch the others still running."

She inspected him again, more closely. He thought he was sincere. But he did not know that despite the crutches and his drawn white face he had not the resigned dispirited air of the man who has accepted a permanent seat on the shelf.

"Look as long as you want to," he suggested at last. "In the meantime—will you set the dogs on me when I drove down your way?"

"Oh, well!" She tried unsuccessfully to return to indifference. "If you really want to come—" It's been a dull season. I suppose it would be a mercy to the neighbors to give their tongues a chance to clack once more." She drew the reins taut.

"A real philanthropy," he assented, grinning, as the horse lumberingly resumed its journey.

Mark swung slowly along homeward. He smiled pityingly. He had read aright the new interest in Unity's face—that of the condemned prisoner who has heard rumor of reprieve. He was sorry for her. And pity—we have it from the poets—is love's poor relation.

Mark regained a measure of strength. He discarded one crutch and began each day to take a few steps experimentally with no support but a cane. He spent many beautiful idle hours, alone or with Richard Courtney, driving his new horse among the hills.

Sometimes—often—Unity was with him on these drives. Tongues clacked according to prophecy. But Mark did not care. And Unity did not care.

Mark fell placidly and easily in love with Unity again. At least, the while protesting, he decided that it must be love.

But the protest was half-hearted. He wanted to love.

"Are ye goin' to stay here in Bethel?" Simon broke a long silence to inquire, one rainy evening.

"I don't know," Mark answered out of a brown study, off his guard. But he added quickly: "Yes, I do know. I'm going to stay."

"Then, what are ye goin' to do?"

"I don't need to do anything. I've got twenty thousand dollars. That'll last me—in Bethel."

Simon shook his head gravely. "Ye can't stand that. Ye've got to do somethin'. An' there's nothin' to do here—yet."

"And never will be."

"Mebby not. All the more reason why that Mister Henley's right."

"Would you have me go back to the city?"

"Yes."

"You don't know what you're saying," Mark began irritably. "I could never take a pen pusher's job. The mills are all I know. And that life—you don't know it. It costs too much. It takes it out of you, drives you like a slave. It—I'm not fit for it now. It—oh, let's not talk about it."

But Simon had more than one of Mark's problems on his mind.

"Are ye," he went on, "goin' to marry Unity Martin?"

"I don't know. I suppose so."

"If ye don't find out purty soon," remarked Simon most surprisingly, "she'll do your knowin' fur ye. I wouldn't."

Mark stopped at a window, looking frowningly out at the sheets of rain that dashed across the square of light.

Simon must have felt deeply on the subject, for he repeated, "I wouldn't."

"No," said Mark testily, "I suppose you wouldn't. I don't know. But if I do it, it will be with my eyes open." Which seems a most unlover-like saying.

There was an evening when he was alone with Unity on Squire Martin's front porch. It was one of the soft languorous nights that sometimes come to Bethel in early September. They talked little and that in low tones.

Once he leaned toward her. He had to peer closely to make out her look of content.

"Do you know," he remarked, "you ought to be glad I came back?"

"Indeed! And why?"

"Have you looked in the mirror lately? When I first came you looked—well, cranky and as though you didn't care whether school kept or not."

"Well, of all the conceit! I suppose you take all the credit." Thus she admitted certain improvements.

"And why not?" he laughed lazily. "When you come right down to it, Unity, you never really, definitely threw me over."

"It isn't too late."

"Yes, it is too late."

She said nothing. But when he reached up to take her hand he found it a tightly clenched little ball.

"Unity, do you remember the drive we took that Sunday before I went to the city?"

"I think I do."

"She thinks she does!" he apostrophized the night. "I have a scheme. Tomorrow, right after dinner, I'm going to drive down here for you. Unity, let's have the Sunday over again—in every particular."

Again she was silent.

"You don't agree?"

"I—I'm not sure."

"That you love me?"

She shook her head. "That I want to marry you."

But when he drew her down and kissed her, she did not resist. "Wait," he whispered fatuously, "until tomorrow. Then you will be convinced." Although what virtue the morrow would hold he did not say. He probably did not guess.

Unity did not scruple to change the current of another's life; she saw no occasion for scruples. She thought she loved Mark. But she did not believe his expressed resolve to stay in Bethel was, could be, genuine; or, if genuine, that its execution would be good for him. And, principally—she knew exactly what she wanted.

Next day they drove over much the same road they had taken seven years before. They chatted in lighter vein, with intervals of eloquent silence. On a hilltop whence they could see only other hills and the sinking sun they ate the lunch put up by the thoughtful Susan. Then they waited to watch the sunset.

"Unity, what must I do to convince you?"

"Nothing," she murmured.

He considered his happiness.

And after a while she said: "Tell me about your life in the city. You've never said much about it."

Innocent demand! Not in vain is the true set in the sight of a young man in love. He began to describe the mills to her. And as he went on, his words crept the unconscious eloquence of a real enthusiasm. His face became eager. Before he had ended he was on his feet declaiming to her, who was a very attentive audience. He saw what he described.

"Ah!" she breathed, as he reached a period. "What a life! And you could leave it?"

"You forget," he reminded her, "I was put out of it."

She leaned forward suddenly, resting her hand on the one that held the cane. "Mark, why don't you go back to it?"

He jerked his hand free, as if he had felt a twinge of pain. "Don't suggest that, Unity!" he cried. "There's that other side. It's hard and cruel and narrowing. It eats up all the best of you. Sometimes it kills you. It makes you a machine, not your own man. I used to feel it when I was there, sometimes terribly. Here I see it from a distance and I understand better. It's just one hellish scramble, that life—" He stopped abruptly, with an impatient gesture.

"If I go back, Unity you won't—"

But how could he phrase his fear to interpret the hot surging that drowned it?

She sighed happily.

He was soon to learn.

A man and a woman entered into the most trying of human relations. Both were young, but both had hardened in the pursuit of selfish ends. Neither had the love that finds its chief joy in yielding.

CHAPTER XII.

A Man and His Wife.

In the down-town offices of the Quinby company and in the particular room which may be called the headquarters of the Quinby army, two men were sitting late one winter afternoon. The one was Henley himself, now chairman of the company, a bit stouter than when we first met him two years ago, his arrogance a little more evident in manner albeit time had not altered the fact. The other was a youngish man whose thin bony face and hands and streaks of premature gray hair spoke of physical frailty.

It was common knowledge in the Quinby company that no one was more welcome in Henley's office than the young superintendent whose master's influence had put in command of the big new open-hearth plant. It was even suspected that Henley had taken Truitt in with him in his speculations.

At the end of a long discussion of company affairs Henley pressed a button. His secretary appeared from an adjoining office.

"Bring in the light and bring the count."

The secretary returned with the count of the latest successful operation. Henley gave it a rapid glance and handed it to Mark. The latter studied it carefully, questioned certain items, questioned the explanation and finally accepted them. Henley was again. He knew men who would have hesitated to question his accounts. Everything he knew of Truitt he had learned by Henry J. Allen in Kansas. Kans. The spectacle of a party candidate for governor defending the national administration of an opposing party, as Mr. Allen generously and conscientiously defends President Wilson's plea for a non-partisan administration of public affairs, abolishing political offices and placing the business upon a basis of business efficiency is new and inspiring. However much Mr. Allen's speech may have shocked the political nerves of the Bourbons of both the old parties, it was pleasing to the big audience that greeted him last night, and there is reason to doubt that it will be approved by the people of progressive states who have paid dearly in money and in the sacrifice of the public welfare for the system of politics which Mr. Allen has the courage to denounce.—Kansas City Star.

At the Door a Crippled Beggar Accosted Them.

People Tired of Misrule.

Throughout the business world there is deep resentment against the Democratic administration and its supporters in congress. The halt in prosperity is directly charged against the administration policy. In the South this resentment is even more marked than in the North. Seaport cities which looked upon big commercial development following the opening of the Panama canal are now listless, feeling that the taking of American shipping was the chief hope of competing with the railroads.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TIME FOR SANENESS

American People Must Realize World Condition.

This Country's Surplus Food Products Are to Be Sold to the Belligerents Through Open Channels of Trade.

The American press, public and statesmakers, not a little bewildered by the spectacle of a world war, are overestimating the value of legislative guidance and restriction, and underestimating the power of the ordinary agencies of commerce and of finance to rectify the economic evils of the troublous times.

President Wilson did right in discouraging the flotation of foreign loans here. This accords with the more advanced ideas of neutrality. At the same time, we should not exaggerate the importance of this prohibition. It merely obstructs that extension of credit to foreign powers which they desired in order to buy goods here. All they wanted was a credit balance with which they could draw.

On the other hand our failure to yield to them is only partly effective. Between refusing to take a mortgage on your neighbor's cottage and buying with cash his automobile there is little difference in effect. The belligerents, having to finance their own wars, will all the more return our securities to us. And we cannot help buying them. They will be at reasonable figures before the war is over—our own prices keeping step with them.

Much the same situation applies to food products. Although still one of the great food exporting nations of the world, we have no monopoly in that service. The Argentine, Australia, western Canada, South Africa are great food exporters. Our influence in depriving the belligerents of food, were we to do so, would not go far with the Argentine. Most of the other new countries, which export wheat and beef, are British possessions and under obligations, alike of business and of patriotism, to feed the Allies. From all appearances the use of ocean travel will be kept open by Britain's navy. Insurance rates to South Africa dropped materially on the blowing up of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

It is of less importance to the rest of the world what we do with our food supplies than it is to ourselves. We fed our neutrals, of whom there are some left, the Argentine and other South American countries would gradually leave that market to us, and refer to the belligerents. The fluidity of the world's food products is not behind that of its reservoir of cloth.

Only Safe Way.

The trusts can be handled only along the lines we championed. It is utterly hopeless to try to do away with combinations in the business world, just as it is hopeless and mischievous to try to do away with combinations in the labor world, just as we ought to encourage combination and co-operation among the farmers. There must be business combinations. Their efforts to stop them all cannot be successful and can only result in mischief. What is needed is control of the corporations, thorough-going and searching control, a control that can come through the action of the national government. This control could not be attempted under the form of lawsuits undertaken to punish people for what has already been done. It should be obtained through a living supervisory control exercised by an administrative body. This administrative body should, in fact, tell honest business men what they cannot and what they can do. It should exercise such control from the inception of business as to put a stop at the beginning to the mischievous activities of business that is not honest.—Theodore Roosevelt.

The New Spirit in Politics.

The new spirit in American politics is splendidly illustrated in the speech made by Henry J. Allen in Kansas, Kans. The spectacle of a party candidate for governor defending the national administration of an opposing party, as Mr. Allen generously and conscientiously defends President Wilson's plea for a non-partisan administration of public affairs, abolishing political offices and placing the business upon a basis of business efficiency is new and inspiring. However much Mr. Allen's speech may have shocked the political nerves of the Bourbons of both the old parties, it was pleasing to the big audience that greeted him last night, and there is reason to doubt that it will be approved by the people of progressive states who have paid dearly in money and in the sacrifice of the public welfare for the system of politics which Mr. Allen has the courage to denounce.—Kansas City Star.

People Tired of Misrule.

Throughout the business world there is deep resentment against the Democratic administration and its supporters in congress. The halt in prosperity is directly charged against the administration policy. In the South this resentment is even more marked than in the North. Seaport cities which looked upon big commercial development following the opening of the Panama canal are now listless, feeling that the taking of American shipping was the chief hope of competing with the railroads.

DUTY

Necessity

to

Washington

the hou

drag-ne

so tha

transac

Ther

force o

atives

unless illness

ber is withou

Ther

Washin

make n

house.

and ot

the pe

of spe

patrol

The

a long paid to do it.

some n

day th

would quorum

The

salary

mate e

A score

their p tested.

an atte

to giv

no earn

once m

Some

of rep

almost not a f are oth seats a ness.

Ever

secreta

from h

some co

shirk d

pear f

tory

While

the cou advice.

credit t urgent.

in Euro

nity to the pre earliest home

heeded

being a and do ticipati

to have great n

would

and me require them, h

that en

the sit spite o

availin has be and go

the ben strande

frequen

Their c likely t strict n

country

they are and a ready h

care of does no

can ser

remaini

tively s loafers

be sent

Colon

a tour o

and M

through

in the iasm.

In Bos

2,000 Pr

of enthu

farewell to Sout

lifelong who had the new

There

the con

and phy

Oyster

reported

The

trip is th

his stre stood th

five days pearance

class sty

We qu

ter pers

velt lend able tha

about hi

But

The

joshed a

the Swi

Panama

blunder

ment it

W

tive prot

wall, pla

the sprin

or unsett

or in any re." man in love. He began to describe ted, mills to her. And as he went on, his words crept the unconscious re- quence of a real enthusiasm. His became eager. Before he had ended ard. he was on his feet declaiming to read who was a very attentive audience.

face saw what he described.

"Ah!" she breathed, as he reach who a period. "What a life! And y was could leave it?"

"You forget," he reminded her, e it was put out of it."

ion. She leaned forward suddenly, re
gth. ing her hand on the one that held gan cane. "Mark, why don't you go ba peri- to it?"

ane. He jerked his hand free, as if he h urs, felt a twinge of pain. "Don't sugge riv- that, Unity!" he cried. "There's th other side. It's hard and cruel a with narrowing. It eats up all the b ked of you. Sometimes it kills you.
did makes you a machine, not your o man. I used to feel it when I w love there, sometimes terribly. Here I a hile it from a distance and I understa be better. It's just one hellish scramb ted. that life—" He stopped abruptly, wi in an impatient gesture.

nce "If I go back, Unity, you won't—"

But how could he phrase his fear out interpret the hot surging that drown
But it?

ow. She sighed happily.

He was soon to learn.

A man and a woman entered i the most trying of human relatio
I've Both were young, but both had h at'll dened in the pursuit of selfish dea
Neither had the love that finds
Ye chief joy in yielding.

CHAPTER XII.

A Man and His Wife.

In the down-town offices of Quinby company and in the particu room which may be called the he quarters of the Quinby army, two m were sitting late one winter afternoo
The one was Henley himself, n chairman of the company, a bit sto than when we first met him tw years ago, his arrogance a little evident in manner albeit time had altered the fact. The other wa youngish man whose thin bony f and hands and streaks of premat gray hair spoke of physical frailty.

It was common knowledge in Quinby company that no one more welcome in Henley's office t the young superintendent whom master's influence had put in c mand of the big new open-hea plant. It was even suspected t Henley had taken Truitt in with in his speculations.

At the end of a long discussion company affairs Henley pressed a b ton. His secretary appeared from adjoining office.

"Bring in the light and heat count."

The secretary returned with the count of the latest successful spec tion. Henley gave it a rapid gla and handed it to Mark. The la studied it carefully, questioned cert items, questioned the explanation finally accepted them. Henley s

At the Door a Crippled Begga costed Them.

again. He knew men who would hesitated to question his acco Everything he knew of Truitt he "Make out Mr. Truitt's check directed the secretary, who with and promptly returned.

Henley signed the check and ered it to Mark. The latter rece the accompanying voucher.

"I've another thing in mind," ley suggested. "Care to go in—

Mark hesitated, his brow sud wrinkling. "I think not," he sa last. The note of irritation di escape Henley. "I've my eye on a house."

"I thought you were pretty fortably fixed."

Mark shrugged his shoulders seems the neighborhood leaves thing to be desired."

"Yes? I see." Henley ind
Mark's heavy furred overcoat, driving out. You can take me —unless you're in a hurry to that delinquent neighborhood."

A quarter of an hour later th men emerged from the corridor Quinby building. At the door pled beggar accosted them.
ignored him. Mark slyly gave coin.

A beautifully matched team of harnessed to a light sleigh w
him. Evidently Mark had me ten his early knowledge of hors
Only a man whom fortune had could have afforded such horse Mark—with his leg and a half were hardly an extravagance
a necessity.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

E FOR SANENESS

rican People Must Realize World Condition.

Country's Surplus Food Products re to Be Sold to the Belligerents Through Open Channels of Trade.

The American press, public and makers, not a little bewildered by spectacle of a world war, are estimating the value of legisla- guidance and restriction, and un- estimating the power of the ordi- agencies of commerce and of ce to rectify the economic evils the troublous times.

President Wilson did right in dis- aging the flotation of foreign loans This accords with the more ad- ed ideas of neutrality. At the time, we should not exaggerate importance of this prohibition. It ly obstructs that extension of it to foreign powers which they ed in order to buy goods here. they wanted was a credit balance which they could draw.

the other hand our failure to to them is only partly effective. een refusing to take a mortgage our neighbor's cottage and buy- with cash his automobile there tle difference in effect. The gents, having to finance their wars, will all the more return securities to us. And we cannot buying them. They will be at able figures before the war is —our own prices keeping step them.

ch the same situation applies to d products. Although still one of great food exporting nations of world, we have no monopoly in service. The Argentine, Aus- western Canada, South Africa great food exporters. Our influ- in depriving the belligerents of were we to do so, would not go with the Argentine. Most of the new countries, which export and beef, are British posses- under obligations, alike of and of patriotism, to feed the From all appearances the ocean travel will be kept open ain's navy. Insurance rates uth Africa dropped materially blowing up of the Kaiser Wil- der Grosse.

of less importance to the rest world what we do with our supplies than it is to ourselves. fed our neutrals, of whom there some left, the Argentine and other American countries would gra- y leave that market to us, and to the belligerents. The fluidity the world's food products is not behind that of its reservoir of lth.

Only Safe Way.

The trusts can be handled only ong the lines we championed. It is erly hopeless to try to do away h combinations in the business rld, just as it is hopeless and mis- vous to try to do away with com- ations in the labor world, just as ought to encourage combination co-operation among the farmers. re must be business combinations. efforts to stop them all cannot be ssful and can only result in mis- What is needed is control of corporations, thorough-going and ching control, a control that can come through the action of the al government. This control not be attempted under the lawsuits undertaken to pun- ple for what has already been It should be obtained through ing supervisory control exer- by an administrative body. ministrative body should, in tell honest business men ey cannot and what they can should exercise such control the inception of business as to stop at the beginning to the rous activities of business that honest.—Theodore Roosevelt.

The New Spirit in Politics.

new spirit in American politics endidly illustrated in the speech by Henry J. Allen in Kansas Kans. The spectacle of a party ate for governor defending the administration of an opposi- party, as Mr. Allen generously and entiously defends President Wil- the plea for a non-partisan ad- ration of public affairs, abolish- political offices and placing the business upon a basis of busi- ficiency is new and inspiring. ever much Mr. Allen's speech have shocked the political nerves Bourbons of both the old parties, pleasing to the big audience greeted him last night, and there reason to doubt that it will be ed by the people of progressive who have paid dearly in money the sacrifice of the public wel- for the system of politics which Allen has the courage to de- —Kansas City Star.

People Tired of Misrule.

ughout the business world there resentment against the Demo- administration and its support- congress. The halt in prosper- directly charged against the ad- ration policy. In the South this ment is even more marked than North. Seaport cities which upon big commercial develop- following the opening of the canal are now listless, feeling taxing of American shipping the chief hope of competing railroads.

DUTY MUST BE FIRST ORDER

Necessary That Congressmen Be Made to Attend to the Business of the Country.

Washington dispatches tell us that the house authorities have been using drag-net methods to secure a quorum so that legislative business can be transacted.

There is a regulation having the force of law which forbids representatives to absent themselves from duty unless they are ill or there is serious illness in their families. No member is entitled to pay if he is absent without leave.

There are enough representatives in Washington at the present time to make much more than a quorum of the house, but they prefer the ball game and other things to the business of the people. The drag net is a figure of speech, and is useless. Try the patrol wagon.

The members of congress have been a long while at their work, but they are paid to do it, and they are expected to do it. If Speaker Clark would find some means to print publicly day after day the names of the absentees, he would have no trouble in keeping a quorum to consider and to pass bills.

The law which cuts off a member's salary if he is absent without legitimate excuse was enforced only once. A score or two of representatives lost their pay some days ago. They protested, but it did them no good. Later an attempt was made to pass a bill to give them the money that they did no earn, but it failed. What was done once might be done twice.

Some of the members of the house of representatives have been absent almost continuously for weeks, and not a few of them for months. There are others who are always in their seats attending to the country's business.

Every absentee, however, keeps a secretary at work answering letters from home. If the constituents of some congressmen knew the way they shirk duty, their names would disappear from the Congressional Directory.

Where Bryan Is Right.

While Secretary Bryan has given the country a great deal of unsound advice, he should freely be accorded credit for counsel that is practical and urgent. His insistence that Americans in Europe improve the first opportunity to leave the countries engaged in the present mighty struggle at the earliest possible moment and come home is a message that should be heeded. It is something that is also being urged by the British government and doubtless every other country participating in the war would be glad to have them out of it. Of course, the great mass of our countrymen there would be glad to be possessed of ways and means to get away and would not require any persuasion to make use of them, but there is a large contingent that enjoys the morbid excitement of the situation, and will hang on in spite of chances to leave, perhaps availing themselves of the relief that has been dispatched by the people and government of this country for the benefit of those who have been stranded against their own will and frequently to their serious distress. Their continued presence abroad is likely to make the maintenance of a strict neutrality on the part of this country more difficult, and, in brief, they are in the way, where they are and a burden to countries that already have all they can do to take care of their own people. This call does not include such Americans as can serve the cause of humanity by remaining, but they are a comparatively small number, and the mere loafers and idlers should get out or be sent out.

Pay Heed to Roosevelt.

Colonel Roosevelt has been making a tour of Connecticut, Vermont, Maine and Massachusetts. His progress through Maine was most noteworthy in the matter of Progressive enthusiasm.

In Boston Colonel Roosevelt excited 2,000 Progressives to the highest pitch of enthusiasm when he read again the farewell promise with which he went to South America. He then vowed lifelong loyalty to the men and women who had gone in with him to fight for the new party and its principles.

There was the greatest interest in the condition of the colonel's voice and physique. After his return to Oyster Bay the World correspondent reported:

"The big result of his New England trip is the verdict it records both as to his strength and his larynx. Both stood the stress and strain of the past five days wonderfully well. To all appearances T. R. has 'come back' in first-class style."

We quote the World because its bitter personal hostility to Mr. Roosevelt lends weight to anything favorable that it can bring itself to say about him.

But There Are Many Others.

The state department is being joshed about sending an invitation to the Swiss navy to take part in the Panama display. If that was the only blunder chargeable to the state department it might be overlooked.

What Should Be Done.

A tariff bill, drawn on a conservative protection, and not on a Chinese wall, plan, put through the house in the spring of 1913 would not frighten or unsettle business of any character or in any degree.

Work Weakens the Kidneys

Many occupations weaken the kidneys, causing aching backs, urinary disorders and a dull, drowsy, discouraged feeling. Work exposing one to chills, dampness or sudden changes; work in cramped positions; work amid the fumes of turpentine; constant riding on jolting vehicles, is especially hard on the kidneys.

Taken in time kidney trouble isn't hard to stop; neglected it is dangerous. As a kidney tonic, there is no other medicine so well recommended, so widely used and so universally successful as Doan's Kidney Pills.

A Mississippi Case.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

W. H. Funderburk, R. F. D. No. 1, Eastman, Miss., says: "Kidney disease undermined my health. My feet and ankles swelled to twice their normal size and my skin was hot and dry. I often wished that death might come and relieve me of the misery. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended, I used them and six boxes restored me to the best of health."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

PREVENTION better than cure. Tutt's Pills if taken in time are not only a remedy for, but will prevent SICK HEADACHE, biliousness, constipation and kindred diseases.

Tutt's Pills

Try Marvello Herb Tablets

For Stomach, Kidney, Liver and Bowel Troubles, such as Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sick Headache, Loss of Appetite, Constipation, Rheumatism, Backache, Malaria, Kidney and Liver Troubles. 60 days treatment postpaid $1.00. Sample Free.
MARVELLO CO., Monticello, Iowa

GREAT DISCOVERY for kinky hair—Henform Nokink hair Pomade. Send 25c and get a 'ar of Henform's Nokink hair pomade; great remedy for kinky hair. Full directions on every jar. HENFORN SPECIALTY MFG. CO., 17 E. Saratoga St., Baltimore, Md.

Guaranteed Rheumatism Cure follow my advice, send $1 by post office money order. After following instructions if not cured in 9 days I will positively refund your money at once. Send today for sure cure. Address Joseph E. Perrell, 311 West Trade Street, Charlotte, N. C.

Don't Suffer with HAY FEVER or ASTHMA Send for FREE SAMPLE to THE VAN REED CO., NORTH ADAMS, MASS.

FREE

Kodak Films Developed Absolutely Free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Mail orders given prompt attention.
GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

STOP DRINKING Coffee—Our coffee substitute formula sent on receipt of 10 cents. JOHN DRESING, 5464 Brotherton Road, Cincinnati, O.

BIG MONEY raising ginseng. Write for particulars. Chas. Weller, 609 S. 5th Street, Lyons, Iowa

WAR Maps, reversible; illustrated, 23 x 36. Agents' sample 35 cents; big demand. B. Gaddis, 5326 Weltner, Cincinnati, Ohio

COPY LETTERS at home; make $10.00 to $25.00 weekly; send stamped envelope. Western Multi-Copy Co., 1435 Madison, Kansas City, Mo.

Absolutely safe investment in special crop Florida soil; possibilities 1,000% yearly. Also "snaps" Florida acreage. A. H. BUSH, Jacksonville, Florida

LADIES Home work; $30 per 100, plain sewing. Stamped addressed envelope for full particulars. Smith, Box 73, Doniphan, Mo.

"European War" New illustrated book. Brimful of information; Historical, Statistical, timely. Only 50cts. Hascall Co., 578 Public St., Providence, R. I.

For Sale 80 acre good dairy farm; near Calgary; good running spring; $60 acre; easy terms. Apply B. McAwitt, Midnapore, Alta., Canada Sacrifice 10 or 20 acres commerical apple orchard; Western Montana; bearing next year; $450 acre. Thomas Palmer, Princeton, Ill.

TWO neat, strong, cute Rabbit and Goose cake cutters, postpaid for 10c. W. D. WINGER, 432 CHARLOTTE ST., LANCASTER, PA.

Best Seller Yet No talking necessary; $10—$25 daily. Dandy side line. Be quick. Banner Supply Co., Maple Falls, Wash.

AGENTS Make big money supplying toilet goods to families. Credit given. Address National Perfume Co., 4 Carpenter St., Evansville, Ind.

FREE—SCARF PIN By sending 20c for 10 designed Friendship Postals. FRED MILLER, Dept. V, 255 Conti St., Mobile, Ala.

AGENTS ATTENTION! Dime brings sample $100 redeemable premium bond. Address, 402-60 State St., Boston, Mass.

Wanted Lady partner for good business proposition. MARTIN, 36 South 13th St., Minneapolis, Minnesota

Pettit's Eye Salve QUICK RELIEF EYE TROUBLES

Ruptured? Wear Boss Truss—forget your rupture. No under straps; no springs. Only $2. FOX & CO., Cambridge Building, Chicago

No real hustler is satisfied with the things that come to those who wait.

For galls use Hanford's Balsam. Adv.

Don't consider a man absolutely worthless so long as he carries life insurance.

Only One "BROMO QUININE"

To get the genuine, call for full name, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. Stops cough and headache, and works off cold. 25c.

More women might be able to save money if the drygoods stores would cease having bargain sales.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the well known tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver, Drives out Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents.

Some people could write all they know on a post-card.

HAS NO INJURIOUS EFFECT

Strong Denial That Presence of Tuberculosis Sanatoriums Is Detriment to Adjoining Property.

Convincing proof that tuberculosis sanatoriums or hospitals are not a menace to the health nor a detriment to the property of those living near such institutions is given in a pamphlet issued recently by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. In an extended study of the subject the association has not been able to find a single instance where a tuberculosis sanatorium has had an injurious effect on the health of anyone living near it, nor where it has had any lasting effect upon property values.

The pamphlet, entitled, "The Effect of Tuberculosis Institutions on the Value and Desirability of Surrounding Property," reviews all the studies made on the subject, takes up court decisions bearing on the question and contributes besides some original investigations of typical hospitals and the opinions of prominent men, life insurace companies and others. Nearly one hundred and fifty different istitutions are studied. In all these institutions not one case could be found where the assertions of opponents to their location, that a tuberculosis sanatorium would spread disease and injure property, could be substantiated. In fact, a number of instances were found where the presence of the sanatorium or hospital promoted outdoor living, tending to lower the death rate, and increase the market for produce and labor, thereby benefiting the community.

Memories of Old Luxemburg.

Luxemburg, whatever its claims to the protection of Great Britain, possesses one strange association with England that dates back 12 centuries. It is connected with the cult of St. Willibrod, the variously-spelled Saxon saint who helped to convert the Germans to Christianity—very imperfectly, as an Oxford don once dryly remarked. Every Whit Tuesday the memory of our English saint is honored at Luxemburg by a procession and religious dance which rank among the most curious survivals of medieval pageantry. Luxemburg is also a place which appeals to British naturalists, for one of the commonest birds in the public park there is the charming little black redstart, which is a rare winter visitor to England.—Daily Chronicle.

That Dark Brown Taste.

Yeast—They say that dark brown is to be one of the fashionable shades next fall.

Crimsonbeak—Well, I can't say I like that taste.

J. J. Williams of Boulder, Col., after successfully using Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh for sores, mud fever and thrush, writes: "Your Balsam is worth many dollars to horsemen and stock owners." Adv.

Her Fear.

"Why did Maud choose a single life?"

"She was afraid of getting a husband who would lead a double one."

EAS-IT

A NEW and ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED PRESCRIPTION for all forms of Headache, Colic, Cramps, or Indigestion Pains. Relief Guaranteed in fifteen to thirty minutes. Money back if you want it. Absolutely no risk. Contains NO OPIATE. Adv.

Correct.

"Practice makes perfect," quoted the sage.

"Well," replied the fool, "that's more than you can say for preaching."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

If marriages are made in heaven we refuse to hazard a guess as to the place where divorces are manufactured.

Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh is a good leg wash for horses and cattle. Adv.

The value of the total production of coal in 1911 was $625,910,113, of which $179,952,415 is credited to the Pennsylvania anthracite production.

Cures Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.

The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Some actors get divorces for the advertising and others just because.

How To Give Quinine To Children

FEBRILINE is the trade-mark name given to an improved Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Also especially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it the next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 2-ounce original package. The name FEBRILINE is blown in bottle. 25 cents.

Even when marriage is a lottery it may develop into a habit.

5 Women Avoid Operations

For years we have been stating in the newspapers of the country that a great many women have escaped serious operations by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is true.

We are permitted to publish in this announcement extracts from the letters of five women. All have been recently received unsolicited. Could any evidence be more convincing?

1. HODGDON, ME.—"I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached and I was so nervous I could not sleep, and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman."—MRS. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Me.

2. CHARLOTTE, N. C.—"I was in bad health for two years, with pains in both sides and was very nervous. I had a growth which the doctor said was a tumor, and I never would get well unless I had an operation. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I gladly say that I am now enjoying fine health."—MRS. ROSA SIMS, 16 Winona St., Charlotte, N. C.

3. HANOVER, PA.—"The doctor advised a severe operation, but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it."—MRS. ADA WILT, 196 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

4. DECATUR, ILL.—"I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women what it has done for me."—MRS. LAURA A. GRISWOLD, 2300 Blk. East William Street, Decatur, Ill.

5. CLEVELAND, OHIO.—"I was very irregular and for several years my side pained me so that I expected to have to undergo an operation. Doctors said they knew of nothing that would help me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I became regular and free from pain. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—MRS. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Av., Cleveland, O.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Time-Tested Tonic for MALARIA Chills & Fever Is Wintersmith's TONIC BARS INTOXICANTS

Unkind Suggestion.

"My youngest boy is always thinking of bright and clever things," said Mr. Bliggins.

"I've often heard you say so," replied Miss Cayenne as she moved wearily on. "You ought to get him to tell you a few of them some time."

ELIXIR BABEK WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD IN THE PHILIPPINES.

I contracted malaria in 1896, and after a years' fruitless treatment by a prominent Washington physician, your Elixir Babek entirely cured me. On arriving here I came down with tropical malaria—the worst form—and sent home for Babek. Again it proved its value—It is worth its weight in Gold here. Brasle O'Hagan, Troop E, 8th U. S. Cavalry, Balayan, Philippines.

Elixir Babek, 50 cents, all druggists or by Parcels Post prepaid, from Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

An engagement may not be as good as marriage from some points of view, but it is a great deal better from some others.

RUB-MY-TISM

Will cure your Rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains—Neuralgia, Cramps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Old Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Anodyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

The girl who is as pretty as a picture should never allow herself to get in an ugly frame of mind.

Sprains relieved by thorough applications of Hanford's Balsam, well rubbed in. Adv.

Ammonia bombs are being used successfully as fire extinguishers.

Films Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
Department K Birmingham, Ala.

ARE YOU SATISFIED with 6% interest on your money, or would you prefer 10%? I am making large profits on N. Y. City Real Estate. All investments Guaranteed by me, any amount. $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000. Write for information. Bradstreet or Dun references. Paul Mc Golrick, 261 Broadway, New York.

$4.25 Each paid for U. S. Eagle Cents dated 1856; keep all money dated before 1856, and send 10c at once for new illustrated coin value book; it may mean your fortune. W. CORMAN, WEST END P. O., ATLANTA

EGGS ARE CHEAP now, but high Christmas. Save them; make money; my receipt keeps them 4 months fresh as new laid. $1. J. O. HARRIS, HAMILTON CITY, CALIF.

TWO GREAT BOOKS European war at a glance. Mail Order and Receipt Book Successful Brains. Special price 25c postpaid. C. H. LOVEJOY, 828 N. Avers Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Make Money Collecting Names 6 samples of our latest crime novels sent you prepaid if you'll send 4 friends' names and 10c. U. M. Waring, Box 66-HT No. 41, Wyalusing, Pa.

BOYS! GIRLS! MAKE BIG MONEY introducing a new article. No talking required; send name and 2 references for trial lot. R. H. Mathews, 828 N. Wendell Ave., Saginaw, Mich.

"European War at a Glance" complete history of each power, cause of conflict, full statistics, everybody should know these facts. Sent prepaid for 25 cents. R. H. COX, Box 488, Wellston Station, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

MY COURSE of instructions and receipts will make you independent for life. Send $1 today. Andrews, 501 Eggers Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

MAIL ORDER No mixing or measuring, for all supplies carried in pocket; sell on sight for $1. White, 5511, Maryland, Chicago

WINCHESTER

12, 16 AND 20 GAUGE

Hammerless Repeating Shotguns

The Model 1912 Winchester is the lightest, strongest and handsomest repeating shotgun on the market. Although light in weight, it has great strength, because its metal parts throughout are made of nickel steel. It is a two-part Take-down, without loose parts, is simple to operate and the action works with an ease and smoothness unknown in guns of other makes. See one at your dealer's or Send to Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Conn., for circular.

THE LIGHT WEIGHT, NICKEL STEEL REPEATER.

You Look Prematurely Old

Tax Notice!

Collector's and Assessor's Only Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes for Chilton County for the year 1914, and assessing the taxes for the year 1915: Hours 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jemison,	Beat 2	October	1	1914.
Thorsby	" 9	"	2	"
Cooper,	" 10	"	3	"
Maplesville,	" 7	"	5	"
Shoults,	" 7	"	6	"
Stanton,	" 8	"	7	"
Riderville,	" 8	"	8	"
Pletcher,	" 15	"	9	"
Kincheon,	" 6	"	10	"
Minooka,	" 13	"	12	"
Concord,	" 13	"	13	"
Mars Hill,	" 2	"	14	"
Macedonia,	" 14	"	15	"
Benson,	" 3	"	16	"
Culp School House	" 15	"	17	"
Robinson's Store	" 12	"	19	"
Mineral Springs,	" 12	"	20	"
Mullins Academy	" 1	"	21	"
Cane Creek	" 11	"	22	"
Providence	" 16	"	23	"
Clanton, Beat 4, Oct. 24 to 31,		Nov. 7 to 14		"
Mountain Creek	Beat 5	Nov.	3	"
Verbena,	" 5	"	4	"
Evergreen	" 10	"	5	"
Enterprise	" 6	"	6	"

Take notice that under the present law we only make one round, and you are requested to meet us in the Beat in which you live. If for any reason you are unable to meet us in your own Beat, you will please meet us at Clanton on the days given there.

After the completion of the above round, and beginning on November 16, 1914, all assessments become delinquent, and after December 31, 1914, all taxes become delinquent. Therefore, if you wish to avoid payment of a 50c fee, you will please assess before Nov. 16, and pay before Dec. 31, 1914.

J. N. DENNIS, Tax Assessor.
J. D. COLLINS, Tax Collector.

When You Come To Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you don't want to forget those little toilet and fancy articles your wife said bring back with you.

Also you want to keep in mind that the proper place to get them is at our store.

Not only fancy toilet articels, but also anything else that is usually kept in a first-class Drug Store. Patent Medicines.

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft drinks at the front, ice-cream, etc. COME to see us.

Langston Drug Co.,
Jemison, Ala.

Prepare For SYRUP MAKING

We can supply you with Syrup Kegs, Barrels and Cans, and copper for Syrup Pans.

Send Us Your Mail Orders

You will need Brick, Lime and Cement for foundations and other purposes, all of which you can get at our place.

Clanton Hardware Co.
Successors to
Gamble Hardware Co.

Constipation, if Neglected, Causes Serious Illness

Constipation, if neglected, leads to almost innumerable complications affecting the general health.

Many cases of typhoid fever, appendicitis and other severe diseases are traceable to prolonged clogging of the bowels. Regard- the effects of constipation, C. E. Ayers, 6 Sabin St., Montpelier, Vt., says: "I was afflicted with constipation and biliousness for years, and at times became so bad I would become unconscious. I have been found in that condition many times. Physicians did not seem to be able to do me any good. I would become weak and for days at a time could do no work. Not long ago I got a box of Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets, and after using them found I had never tried anything that acted in such a mild and effective manner. I believe I have at last found the remedy that suits my case."

Thousands of people are sufferers from habitual constipation and while possibly realizing something of the danger of this condition, yet neglect too long to employ proper curative measures until serious illness often results. The advice of all physicians is, "keep your bowels clean," and it's good advice.

Dr. Miles' Laxative Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 25 cents a box containing 25 doses. If not found satisfactory, your money is returned.

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug Co.,
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children Given Special Attention.
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala

— FOR —
MONUMENTS
AND GRAVESTONES
Remember you cannot do better than buy the genuine and reliable kind which are sold by
J. K. T. Daniel
CLANTON, ALA.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA

SUPPOSE YOU!

When you want a tender steak, a superb roast or some delicious chops or chicken QUICK come here and your dinner won't be late. Our quality is of the highest standard. All our meats are of pure prime excellence.

Prices as low as the markets permit.

B. McKEE, Meat Market.

THE MADAM JARLEY'S WONDERFUL WAX WORKS

This is the title of a peculiarly interesting attraction that is to be played at the auditorium of the city school tonight (Thursday) under auspices of the Methodist Ladies Aid Society.

Mrs. Beulah Martin, of Columbus, Ga., a reader of wide experience and reputation, is coaching the play. She opens the performance with some humorous sketches. It is then taken up by the various humorous characters whose performances are very productive of the heartiest laughter from start to finish.

The cast is composed of local persons whose personalities were selected to places they are to play. This together with the careful instruction of Mrs. Martin and the diligence of the players, insures a most enjoyable entertainment.

FOR SALE—One good horse perfectly gentle, which I will sell very reasonable.
Howare L. Foshee
9-3-4t Thorsby Ala.

Helping Kidneys By Clearing Blood

A Function Greatly Assisted By a Well-Known Remedy.

Most readers will be interested to more clearly understand why analysis of urine is so important. In the use of S. S. S. to purify the blood, its action is a stimulant to the myriad of fine blood vessels that make up the constructive tissues of the kidneys. All the blood from all over the body must pass through the kidneys. They act as testers and assayers. And according to what they allow to pass out in the urine, both as to quantity and materials, the health of the kidneys and the quality of the blood is determined. The catalytic energy forced by S. S. S. is shown in the urine. It is also demonstrated in the skin. And as the blood continues to sweep through the kidneys the dominating nature of S. S. S., acting as it does through all the avenues of elimination, shows a marked decrease of disease manifestations as demonstrated by urine analysis. This assistance is a great relief to the kidneys. The body wastes are more evenly distributed to the emunctories; their elimination is stimulated by the tonic action afforded the liver, lungs, skin and kidneys. Thus, in cases of rheumatism, cystitis, chronic sore throat, huskiness of voice, bronchitis, asthma and the myriad of other reflex indications of weak kidney action, first purify your blood with S. S. S., so it will enable the tissues to rebuild the cellular strength and regain the normal health.

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 527 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Dept. for free advice.

CORRECTIONS, NOTES, ETC., OF CO. SINGING CONVENTION

Editor Union-Banner:—In my report of the county Singing Convention near South Calera some mistakes, omissions etc, due probably to some Misunderstanding or over sight on the part of the printer, which I hope you will kindly correct. I wish to say to all concerned that the fault is not mine. We find in the report that "The convention was called to order by the President Prof. J. W. Hayes. My manuscript reads "The convention was called to order by the President." at that hour Prof. Hayes had not been elected. Prof. T. C. Jackson was the presiding officer. We find the name of M. V. Lowery seveal times in the report, that should not read M. V. Lawley.

The report says Prof. Jackson presided the second day. The Manuscript reads "Second day, President Jackson presiding". The resolutions relative to President Jackson, should read 'We tender him our thanks, realizing that his labors have been largely conducive to the success of the convention'. The resolutions also contained thanks to Prof. Davis of Birmingham for his talk, and to the great author of Sacred Music. This was the best session in the convention's history. The directing by Misses Isabel and Bettie Jackson of Birmingham was among the fipest we ever saw. While Miss Isabel sang "Alabama", we never witnessed a convention so moved. it was Just wonderful. Miss Lela Davis of South Chilton did some fine directing. The skillful Blankenship was there, The polished Davis of Birmingham. The well known Lawley. The Jackson Brothers, Prof. Hodgens, Prof. Vandiver of Montevallo, Profs. Martin, Hayes and Lowery, Prof. Teel. The Retiring President, Prof. Jackson, Prof. Davis of South Chilton, The efficient Williams, Prof. Armstrong, and last but Not least the Venerable Prof. N. A. Dobbs. All doing good work.

Secretary.

Crimson Clover

Crimson clover is a demonstrated success on practically every soil type in the South where drainage is good. Its ability to succeed on nearly every kind of land in the cotton belt, from waxy clays to light sandy loams, makes it one of the best winter cover arops and soil builders for cultivated fields in this region.

INOCULATION. Crimson clover gathers nitrogen from the air by means of a particular kind of bacteria that exists on its roots. If these bacteria are not present in the soil the clover will be a sure failure. The same bacteria that are found on the roots of crimson clover also live on the roots of red clover, common white clover, and carolina clover, hence, in seeding crimson clover on land where it or one of the above clovers has not been successfully grown, it is necessary to inoculate the land. This is done by broadcosting from 200 to 500 pounds per acre of dirt from a field where crimson clover, red clover or one of the small white clovers have been grown. When soil for inoculating purposes is scarce, fairly satisfactory inoculation can be had in the following manner: Boil one pound of glue in two gallons of water. Spread out thin on a cloth or wagon sheet one bushel of clover seed and sprinkle with the glue until the seed are thoroughly moist; then spread over the seed 200 pounds of dirt taken from a field where crimson clover has been grown. In this way, small particles of the inoculating soil will cling to each seed and 200 pounds of dirt can be made to inoculate seed for three acres.

The inoculation should be made at the time of seeding and the soil should be harrowed immediately as there is danger of the hot sun destroying the bacteria when left on the surface.

It must be clearly borne in mind that crimson clover is certain to be a failure unless the soil is inoculated.

SEEDING. Crimson clover does best on well prepared, well drained, well settled and a fairly fertile seed bed. The middles of a clean cultivated cotton field make an almost ideal seed bed for sowing crimson clover. The time of seeding is determined by the latitude. When sown too early the young plants are liable to be killed by the hot, dry weather. In the northern third of the cotton belt probably the best rerults are obtained by sowing between September 1st and October 10th; in the central third of the cotton belt from September 10th to October 20th; and in the southern third of the cotton belt from September 20th to November 1st. Successful growers of crimson clover, appreciating that the hot sun and the dry condition of the soil affect germination, usually endeavor to sow just after a rain or when there is prospect of rain.

Seed may be sown by hand or an inexpensive clover seeder. Never less han 15 and preferably 20 pounds of seed per acre should be sown if good stands are to be obtained. Just after the first picking, is an excellent time to seed crimson clover in cotton fields. The seed should be sown broadcast and lightly harrowed in with a spike to spring-tooth harrow. Poor stands frequently result from covering too deep.

CRIMSON CLOVER as a fertilizer. Nitrogen in the form of nitrate of soda and cottonseed meal costs from 15 to 20 cents per pound, and is by far the most expensive fertilizing element that the soutnern farmer has to buy. 35,000 tons of atmospheric nitrogen lie above every acre of land in the South. Crimson clover has the power to collect and store this nitrogen in the plant at the rate of from 75 to 125 ponnds per acre. In other words, an acre of good crimson clover, where the entire turned under, has the fertilizing of 750 pounds of nitrate of so pounds of cottonseed meal.

[NOTE—Mr. W. H. Conway farm demonstrator, has furn with a large amount of inform will be valuable to our farmers interested in the growing of and burr clover on their farm will not permit our using all ticles at one time; hut we sha them in weekly installments entire series has been inserted.

REMEMBER YOUR LAST DOSE OF CA

You probably recall after-effects of the calo than the sickness you to You need never again go with being "all knocked day or two by calomel.

Next time your liver gish and inactive, we you go to Alred Drug for a bottle of Dodson Tone, a splendid vegeta medicine that will start as surely as calomel ev with none of the after calomel. It is absolut less both to children a and demands no rest habits or diet.

A large bottle of Liver Tone costs fifty the druggists who sell tee it to take the place and will refund your fails in your case or not satisfied.

FARMERS COTTON

Whereas, there is no pri at present, we, the farm Roads district No. 41, Chi Ala., in mass meeting ass 12, 1914, do hereby set a less than ten cents per po cotton in the payment of ask the co-operation of all the state in this movement.

We also ask the farmers county to meet in their school districts Saturday, 2 p.m., and take action with the above resolution delegates to a county mass the above named place of Thorsby, on Saturday,

A. F. CHIL
J. R. COLLIN

SALEM

The Sunday school has great work. Mr. Superintendent.

Cotton picking is

Everybody enjoyed at this place Sunday were C. N. and P. B. Lizzie Oden and Maud O ganists. There will be next Sunday afternoon be "Perennial Praise."

We want to see another "Grandma," and other

Chronic Spring

Surprising as it may people in the temperate four seasons a year, spring fever.—Louisville nal.

FOR SALE—3 giving milk one due December 8 next heiffers, 2 Jersey months old, one sire and grand sire This September

Alfred

The Pain Knows Good He says:-

"A gallon of Mastic covers more surface longer, and works under the brush than Lead and Oil, or ready mixed Paints."

MAST PAIN

"The Kind That

is made of Pure Lead, reinforced Oxide and Genuine L in correct proportions. ted to Give Perfect S

FREE Ask for illustrated "Homes, and How Them," and for Mastic Paint or write direct for same to Peaslee-Gaulbert Co. Incorporated Louisville, Ky.

UpchurchDrug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

THE

THE UNION 11th

t Pleasant.

singing at this place Sunening was well attended njoyed by those present. will be another singing ext third Sunday evening. nd Mrs. B. C. Thomas unday with the former's Mr. J. P. Thomas.

W. J. Morris and family unday with Mr. and Mrs. Duke.

nd Mrs. Edd Martin of spent Sunday with Mr. B. G. Burnett.

nd Mrs. B. J. Sessions of visited Mr. and Mrs. J. an Sunday.

Freda Baxley of Coosa ding a while with her sis- H. G. G. Massey.

nd Mrs. L. H. Dupriest Saturday night with Mr. S. riest.

nd Mrs. J. A. Lewis spent y and Sunday with the 's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis near Jemison.

J. M. Littlejohn and Mrs. Riggins spent Sunday t and Mrs. J. A. Logan.

Smith and family and Mrs. J. A. Blankenship visited at Mr. E. J.

Little Viewer.

mers Cotton eague to Meet uant to a call of the farm- Cross Roads District No. armers of Chilton county others interested are hereed to meet in a county eeting at the above place, e south of Thorsby, on ay, Sept. 20, 1914, at 10:00

A. F. Mims, Chm.,
R. A. Smith, Sec.

Creek News

W. W. Cobern and Judge Sims say that the cotton re is kept busy.

cle" Henry Roberts is a er of Camp 1711, U. C. V. tends ty go with the "old of the Home to Mobile.

Lilla Thornton is here her parents and the fam- brother, E. L. Thorn-mas J. Henderson delivers ral mail with the use of an hile Mr. Culver drives a Chilton county thorough-nmaster Speer has had d in the postoffice a lot of oxes which are all better ore ordered.

w New Location

he Headley Building across railroad from the Post Office y far the most convenient e in town to get a Haircut or ve.

d then too, you are always tain of keen razors, clean towand careful attention.

have heard of the excellenc r service—now come have e proven to you by an indiual test.

ry job we do is done with a personal interest and to make it the best.

nford, Wagoner and Glass

ROOSEV PROGRES

Col. The day plunge of speech r tour. His day was where at n Progressiv

In his a Roosevelt on the app gressive R think out themselves

"The f have to m people is themselves

"The Re day says t the party I say to yo principles

The C whiskey crooked po ed the Pro son Count courage to the other

Speakin bor condit

"We w ample rev tal, and w we can't h ever, we share of the man whom no ed. The R too much the Dem enough t

The the was held were man

Alaba Expo

Montgo hundred in Kentu Tennesse ma have races wh state exp October horses marks, a the race as shown ters recei tary Barn est horse been ent will last were re race barn sas.

Cond

Editor give me say a few ing hard no sale f 20 to 25 meat, mi dollars. in debt f dollars. than the am thr made pl head of do me fo Success Dubbe

FOR wheat in per bush 9-24-4t.

THE UNION-BANNER

Register Chanc'y 2 Apr12

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 24

...ver

...monstrated ... soil type in ... good. Its ... every kind ... from waxy ...s, makes it ...r arops and ...fields in this

...son clover ...ir by means ...eria that ex... bacteria are ... clover will ...me bacteria ... of crimson ... of red clo... and caroli... ...ng crimson ... one of the ... successful... ...o inoculate ...broadcasting ...acre of dirt ... clover, red ...hite clovers ...soil for inoc... fairly satis... had in the ...e pound of ...er. Spread ...n sheet one ...prinkle with ... thoroughly ...e seed 200 ... field where ...grown. In ... the inocu... ...h seed and ...ade to inoc...

...be made at ... soil should ...as there is ...troying the ...rface. ...n mind that ...be a failure

...er does best ...ained, well ...seed bed. ...tivated cot... ...al seed bed ... The time ...by the lati... ...y the young ...d by the hot, ...rn third of ...best results ...tween Sep... ...; in the cen... ... from Sep... ...; and in the ...belt from ...er 1st. Suc... ... clover, ap... ...and the dry ...germination, ...just after a ...ect of rain. ...nd or an in... ... Never less ...) pounds of ...wn if good ... Just after ...llent time to ...otton fields. ...roadcast and ... a spike to ...stands fre... ...g too deep. ...a fertilizer. ...rate of soda ...from 15 to 20 ...far the most ...ent that the ...buy. 35,000 ...en lie above ...outh. Crim... ...o collect and ...plant at the ...ds per acre. ... good crim...

son clover, where the ent... turned under, has the fertil... of 750 pounds of nitrate of ... pounds of cottonseed meal.

[NOTE—Mr. W. H. Conw... farm demonstrator, has fu... with a large amount of infor... will be valuable to our farm... interested in the growing ... and burr clover on their far... will not permit our using al... ticles at one time; hut we sh... them in weekly installments ... entire series has been inser...

REMEMBER YOUR LA... DOSE OF C...

You probably recal... after-effects of the calo... than the sickness you ... You need never again g... with being "all knocke... day or two by calomel.

Next time your liver ... gish and inactive, we ... you go to Alred Drug ... for a bottle of Dodso... Tone, a splendid veget... medicine that will start ... as surely as calomel ev... with none of the after... calomel. It is absolu... less both to children a... and demands no rest... habits or diet.

A large bottle of ... Liver Tone costs fifty ... the druggists who sell ... tee it to take the place ... and will refund your ... fails in your case or ... not satisfied.

FARMERS COTTON ...

Whereas, there is no pr... at present, we, the farme... Roads district No. 41, Chi... Ala., in mass meeting asse... 12, 1914, do hereby set a ... less than ten cents per po... cotton in the payment of o... ask the co-operation of all ... the state in this movement.

We also ask the farmer... county to meet in their ... school districts Saturday, ... 2 p.m., and take action in ... with the above resolution ... delegates to a county mas... the above named place on... of Thorsby, on Saturday, ...

A. F. CHILDR...
J. R. COLLINS

SALEM

The Sunday school here ... great work. Mr. Tom... Superintendent.

Cotton picking is in full ...

Everybody enjoyed the ... at this place Sunday. ... were C. N. and P. B. Oden, ... Lizzie Oden and Maud Ch... ganists. There will be ... next Sunday afternoon; to... be "Perennial Praise."

We want to see another ... "Grandma," and other w...

Chronic Spring

Surprising as it may ... people in the temperat... four seasons a year, ... spring fever.—Louisville ...nal.

FOR SALE—3 m... giving milk one due ... December 8 next ... heifers, 2 Jersey ... months old, one 6 ... sire and grand sire ...

This September 5t...

Alfred ...

The Pain... Knows Good ...

He says:-

"A gallon of Mastic... covers more surface... longer, and works ... under the brush tha... Lead and Oil, or ... ready mixed Paints."

MAST... PAIN...

"The Kind That ...

is made of Pu... Lead, reinforced ... Oxide and Genuine ... in correct proportions ... ted to Give Perfect Se...

FREE Ask for my Boo... "Houses, and How to ... Them," and for Mastic Paint ... or write direct ... for same to ...-Gaulbert Co. ... Louisville, Ky.

...chDrug Co. ...nton, Ala.

...t Pleasant.

...nging at this place Sun... ...ing was well attended ...oyed by those present. ...will be another singing ...t third Sunday evening. ...d Mrs. B. C. Thomas ...nday with the former's ...Mr. J. P. Thomas.

...J. Morris and family ...nday with Mr. and Mrs. ...ke.

...d Mrs. Edd Martin of ... spent Sunday with Mr. ...B. G. Burnett.

...d Mrs. B. J. Sessions of ...visited Mr. and Mrs. J. ...n Sunday.

...Freda Baxley of Coosa ...ing a while with her sis... ...H. G. G. Massey.

...d Mrs. L. H. Dupriest ...turday night with Mr. S. ...rist.

...d Mrs. J. A. Lewis spent ...r and Sunday with the ...parents, Mr. and Mrs. ...Louis near Jemison.

...M. Littlejohn and Mrs. ...Riggins spent Sunday ...nd Mrs. J. A. Logan.

...Smith and family and ...s. J. A. Blankenship ...visited at Mr. E. J. ...

Little Viewer.

...ners Cotton ...ague to Meet

...nt to a call of the farm... ...Cross Roads District No. ...armers of Chilton county ...others interested are here... ...ed to meet in a county ...meeting at the above place, ...mile south of Thorsby, on ...rday, Sept. 20, 1914, at 10:00

A. F. Mims, Chm.,
R. A. Smith, Sec.

...Creek News

...W. W. Cobern and Judge ...Sims say that the cotton ...re is kept busy.

...ncle" Henry Roberts is a ...er of Camp 1711, U. C. V. ...ends ty go with the "old ...of the Home to Mobile.

...Lilla Thornton is here ...her parents and the fam... ...brother, E. L. Thorn...

...s J. Henderson delivers ...mail with the use of an ...hile Mr. Culver drives a ...Chilton county thorough...

...aster Speer has had ...in the postoffice a lot of ...ures which are all better ...ore ordered.

...r New Location

...e Headley Building across ...railroad from the Post Office ...y far the most convenient ...e in town to get a Haircut or ...e.

...then too, you are always ...h of keen razors, clean tow... ...and careful attention.

...have heard of the excellenc... ...r service—now come have ...proven to you by an indi... ...l test.

...y job we do is done with a ...personal interest and ...t to make it the best.

...nford, Wagoner and Glass

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS TO PROGRESSIVES IN WEST

Col. Theodore Roosevelt Monday plunged into the second day of speech making of his Western tour. His first address of the day was in Kansas City, Mo., where at noon he addressed the Progressives of Jackson County.

In his address here Colonel Roosevelt laid particular stress on the appeal made by the Progressive Party to the people to think out political problems for themselves.

"The fundamental appeal I have to make to the American people is that they be true to themselves," he said.

"The Republican Party of today says to you 'Don't abandon the party of Abraham Lincoln.' I say to you 'Don't abandon the principles of Abraham Lincoln.'"

The Colonel asserted that whiskey was usually an ally of crooked politics and complimented the Progressive Party of Jackson County, Mo., for "having the courage to face the issue, while the other parties sidestepped."

Speaking of industrial and labor conditions, he said:

"We want prosperity and an ample reward for invested capital, and without giving the latter we can't have the former. However, we want to see that a just share of that prosperity goes to the man who works and without whom nothing could be produced. The Republicans would give too much to a few men while the Democrats would not give enough to any man."

The theatre where the meeting was held was crowded and there were many women present.

Alabama State Exposition

Montgomery, Ala.—Over one hundred race horses from barns in Kentucky, Illinois, Arkansas, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama have been entered for the races which will be held at the state exposition at Montgomery, October 12-17. Many of the horses have established good marks, and the interest among the race horse men is very keen as shown by the interesting letters received by General Secretary Barnes. Some of the fastest horses in the South have been entered for the meet which will last for six days. Entries were received this week from race barns in Illinois and Arkansas.

Conditions In Louisiana

Editor Union-Banner:—Please give me space in your paper to say a few words. We are having hard times in Louisiana now; no sale for cotton, paying from 20 to 25 cents per pound for meat, milk cows sell for 40 to 70 dollars. Nearly every farmer is in debt from fifty to a thousand dollars. All have more religion than they need, but cant eat it. I am through gathering corn; made plenty to do me; have fifty head of good hogs. Plenty to do me for next year; all is O.K. Success to the Union-Banner.

Dubberly, La., Sept. 20, 1914.
J. W. Foshee.

FOR SALE—Blue stem seed wheat in any quantity at $1.50 per bushel. W. E. Thomas, Jemison, Ala.
9-24-4t.

Negro Woman Kills Husband

As the result of a family quarrel last Saturday, near Maplesville, Buvil Johnson, a negro man was shot and instantly killed by his wife, Alice Johnson. From the information obtained it appears that they were both drunk, or nearly so. The woman was arrested Sunday by Deputy Smitherman, and brought to jail here. She makes no statements as to the cause of the shooting.

In another shooting which occurred near Maplesville on the same day, James Williams, a colored man, was shot in the back by Orange Johnson. The injuries, though very severe, are not thought to be fatal. Johnson was tried by the city authorities of Maplesville, who released him upon the verdict that he was justified in defending himself against Williams's offenses.

Oak Hill

The singing at this place last Sunday evening was quite a success. The music was conducted by Prof. James Franklin, assisted by Prof. Smith and others. The duets sung by Miss Carrie Dorminy and Mr. Franklin were excellent, also the one sung by Mr. Glass and Miss Dorminy. Misses Esther Shaw and Carrie Dorminy presided at the organ. We are planning to hold the next county convention at this place.

NOTICE TO TEACHERS

The Teachers, Reading Circle for Chilton County will meet at the following places on September 26, at ten o'clock a. m:—Thorsby in the Institute building; at Maplesville in the school building; and at Clanton in the court house.

We urge that all teachers who want to obtain a reading circle certificate to be present at one of the places, as there will be a summary of the books used during last year and an introduction given to the books to be used this year.

S. H. Herbert, President
W. M. Bean, Secretary.

FOR SALE—Burr and Crimson Clover seed. See or write me for prices. W. E. Thomas, Jemison, Ala. 9-17-2t

BIBB COUNTY MEN WILL HOLD COTTON

Eighty-four farmers and business men of Bibb County have agreed to hold 317 bales of cotton from market until price shall have reached 10 cents or higher. Action to this effect was taken Saturday at a mass meeting held in the court house.

With this as a nucleus, it is believed that every farmer of the county can be prevailed upon to hold at least one bale of his crop from the market in the effort to get the price of 10 cents.

The mass meeting adopted resolutions calling upon Congress to come to the rescue of the Southern cotton grower through amendments to the reserve act so as to allow reserve banks to lend money on bonded warehouse receipts at the rate of at least 8 cents per pound. The resolution also called upon local banks to get the best arrangements possible from their correspondents for the handling of the crop.

The meeting also took up the cotton seed question, asking that farmers of the county designate the quantity of seed which they had for sale, and arrange holding untill a price of $20 should be secured.

Jumbo

Editor Union-Banner:—Will you please allow me space in your dear old paper to say a few words to the readers?

At this time the health of this community is fairly good.

The prayer meeting and Sunday school at Macedonia Sunday was good.

Weddings over this way recently have been incidents of very great interest; and it is probable that they will continue to be foa some time yet.

What have become of the letter writers who used to write to the Banner? I sure did enjoy them, and hope they will resume their activities along that line. If this misses the waste basket I will come again.

[Note—The writer of the above letter is one who wrote for the paper years ago. For some time she has been silent, but we are glad to see her letter coming again. There are others whom we would be glad to see take up their pens and send us news of their communities.—Editor.]

A Vision

In the year 1912 I was in a trance, and went through a vision. There was let down from heaven a mantle with three divisions, and in every division there was what each class of people was worshiping. So God has frowned on every nation, and I am warning this nation as well as all others, to lay aside every idle thing and worship God and Him alone, for there shall be no other gods before Him. If we fail to lay aside these idols and worship God, we shall be utterly destroyed, as the eastern nations are now. So let's take heed of the things we see and hear.

J. E. Haywood.
Jemison, Ala., Sept. 20th, 1914.

Public Speakings

There will be speaking in the interest of the Progressive ticket at the following times and places:

Cross Roads School House, Beat 9, Tuesday, Sept. 29 at 7, p.m.

McCary School House, Beat 15, Thursday, Oct 1, at 7, p.m.

All voters of whatever political affiliation, are cordially invited to be present, and hear the present campaign; they will be presented by able and competent speakers.

Bids Wanted

Notice is hereby given that at a regular meeting of the Commisssoners court of Chilton county, Alabama, on the 14th day of Sept., 1914, a resolution was adopted providing for building or constructing a public highway from Clanton to the line of Chilton and Shelby counties near South Calera by way of Thorsby and Jemison in Chilton county along or near the line of the present highway between said points.

Said road to be built by grading, chirting or graveling, the work to be done by contract, and said contract to be let to the lowest bidder under seal bids to be deposited with the Judge of Probate on or before the 29th day of October, 1914.

Said bid shall set forth the number of miles in length and the kind of road, whether graded chirted or graveled and the charge for each kind. Said bids shall be made under plans or specifications to be provided by J. B. Converse, Civil Engineer of Selma, Ala.

The payment for the building of said highway to be made by the county, by issuing county warrants payable in annual installments from one to three years; all persons offering to bid on said contract for the building of said road or any section or any number of miles of same may deposit their bids in sealed envelopes marked bids for county road work, and addressed to Commissioners Court, on or before 12 o'clock the 26th day of October, 1914, at which time said bids will be passed upon by the Court; the court reserving the right to reject any or all bids. Contractors bidding will be requested, as evidence of good faith in making bids, to deposit with said bid a certified check for $750.00, or to deposit same with the Judge of Probate on or before said bids are opened and passed upon by the Court.

R. B. Deason, Judge of Probate.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TOWN OF CLANTON

Much interest was centered in the election of officials for the town of Clanton Monday. There were three tickets out, and each one was making zealous efforts to capture the winning scores.

The successful one was the ticket headed by E. M. Pinckard for Mayor, with the following Councilmen: W. W. Fox, J. B. Downs, W. L. Popwell, W. A. Kemp, F. R. Woodyard.

The new officers will succeed the present administration, which is composed of E. A. Matthews, Mayor, and V. J. Gragg, E. M. Pinckard, W. H. Sartor, M. L. White, F. R. Woodyard, Councilmen. None of the former officers were re-elected except E. M. Pinckard, who will take charge of the duties of Mayor and F. R. Woodyard, who retains his former place on the Council.

All Day Singing

There will be an all day singing at Walnut Creek church on the 4th sunday in September. Everybody come and bring your baskets and books, Perennial Praise.

Cotton Ginned In Chilton

There were 67 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton county from the crop of 1914, prior to September 1st, 1914, as compared with 212 bales ginned prior to September 1st, 1913. The above figures are from the official report as compiled for the bureau of government statistics by R. J. Jones, special agent for this county.

Notice.

As my work calls me away, I will close this season with my horse at Thorsby. He will be at Mars Hill Friday, Sept. 25, and every nine days thereafter, and will be also back here for spring season.

H. H. Hayes.

William Walker of Mulberry was among the visitors to Clanton last Friday.

Something For Your Money

We will send you The Union-Banner and The Montgomery Daily Times one year for $2.00; or we will send you The Union-Banner together with The Alabama Weekly Times a year for $1.00

These liberal offers are strictly for cash in advance. The Montgomery Daily Times is a clean, well edited paper and is dedicated to the service of the citizens of Alabama.

THE UNION-BANNER
Clanton, Ala.

STATEMENT

Of the Condition of the Union State Bank, located at Maplesville, Jemison, and Thorsby, Alabama, at the close of Business, September 12, 1914.

RESOURCES		LIABILITIES
Currency	$ 3,355.00	Individual deposits	$ 54,521.67
Gold	645.00	Savings deposits	25,185/23
Silver nickels and pennies	647.44	Time certificates	14,191.05
Checks and cash items	204.43	Cashier's checks	286.75
Exchanges for clearing house	None	Total deposits	$ 94,184.70
Cash items in transit	560.93	Capital stock paid in	30,000.00
Due from Banks in this state	7,859.51	Surplus fund	2,500.00
Due from Banks in other states	1,810.48	Undivided profits, less current expenses and taxes paid	9,491.12
Total	$ 15,072.79	Notes and bills payable	65,000.00
Bonds and stocks owned by Bank	200.00	Mortgages sold	2,351.00
Loans and discounts	174,724.18
Demand loans	None
Overdrafts	1,628.34
3 Banking houses	6,000.00
Fixtures and furniture	5,700.00
Other real estate	203.51
Grand total	$203,526.82	Grand total	$203,526.82

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, CHILTON COUNTY, } Before me came Guy H. Gerald, President of the Union State Bank, who being duly sworn says that the above and foregoing statement is true and gives the actual condition of said Bank, as shown by the books on file in said Bank.

GUY H. GERALD, President.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 18th day of September, 1914.
Jas. H. Williams, Notary Public.

ATTEST:
J. W. FOSHEE,
W. E. THOMAS,
JOHN PATTON, Jr. } Directors.

STORIES OF GERMAN ATROCITIES NOT PROVED, SAYS AMERICAN WRITER

The Chicago Tribune prints a long copyrighted dispatch from James O'Donnell Bennett, staff correspondent, dated at Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany, which in specific detail disputes and denies the charges of cruelties and atrocities lodged against the Germans in Belgium. Mr. Bennett, in company with John T. McCutcheon of the Chicago Tribune, Irvin S. Cobb of the Saturday Evening Post, Roger Lewis of the Associated Press and Harry Hansen of the Chicago Daily News, traveled 100 miles through 20 towns and their observations lead him to the firm conviction that the reports of barbarities alleged to have been perpetrated by German troops are falsehoods.

The following dispatch to the Associated Press, evidently forwarded by Roger Lewis, is in substantial agreement with Mr. Bennett's story in the Chicago Tribune:

By the Associated Press.

New York.—An Associated Press staff correspondent of American birth and antecedents, who was sent from the New York office and was caught in Brussels at the time of the German invasion, held as a prisoner for several days, and who finally escaped to Holland, has sent by mail the following story of his experiences:

"The night before the Germans entered Brussels, when the Belgian civil guards and refugees began pouring into the city from the direction of Louvain, they brought stories of unspeakable German atrocities, maltreatment of old men and children, and the violation of women.

"The Belgian capital reeled with apprehension. Within an hour the gayety, the vivacity, and brilliancy of the city went out like a broken arc light. The radiance of the cafes was exchanged for darkness; whispering groups of residents broke up hurriedly and locked themselves into this homes, where they put up the shutters and drew in their tri-colored Belgian flags.

Fears of Brussels Quieted.

"The historic Belgian city went through a state of morbid consternation, remarkably like that from which it suffered on June 18, 1815, when it trembled with the fear of a French victory at Waterloo.

"In less than 24 hours the Belgian citizens were chatting comfortably with the German invaders and the allegations of German brutality and demoniacal torture dissolved into one of the myths which have accompanied all wars.

"Neither in Brussels nor in its environs was a single offensive act, so far as I know, committed by a German soldier. In a city of over half a million people, invaded by a hostile army of perhaps a quarter of a million soldiers, no act sufficiently flagrant to demand punishment or to awaken protest came to my attention.

None Knows of Outrages.

"The frightful reports that had preceded the German army into Brussels included the disemboweling of old men and the impaling of children on lances just outside Louvain. Investigation not only failed to substantiate these rumors, but could not even discover any one in the immediate vicinity who credited them.

"An eye witness of unimpeachable veracity told me that the worst behavior he had observed during the first German entry into Louvain (August 19) was that of a German soldier who leaned from his horse and kissed a pretty Flemish girl who brought him a glass of beer.

"I marched for days with the German columns, often only one day behind the fighting, with the houses that had been burned still smoldering, the ground freshly broken by shell and trampled by horses and men, and the memory of the German advance vivid in the minds of the inhabitants.

No Proofs of Murder.

"I interviewed an average of twenty persons in each of a dozen towns and found only one instance of a noncombatant who had been killed without a justifiable provocation. In this case the evidence did not clearly prove that the man had been wantonly murdered.

"He lived in one of the typical small Belgian countryside houses which combine the comforts of home with the lure of a small public bar. This house was at the north of Merbes-le-Chateau, a town through which a large part of the German army passed on the road to Maubeuge.

"A son of the murdered man, whose name was Arthur Nicodem, showed me blood clots on the floor marking the place where Nicodem fell, his throat cut by a saw-edged German saber.

English Fired From House.

"It was said by some inhabitants that the murdered man showed a pair of binoculars; but a more probable explanation is that English outposts had concealed themselves in the house, from which they poured a rain of fire upon the first German invaders. The inference that the shooting was done by Belgian civilians may have inflamed the Germans to reprisals.

"In that neighborhood four houses had been burned and one was still ablaze as I passed on Wednesday, Aug. 26.

"This town of Merbes-le-Chateau, which had been the scene of an unimportant skirmish between the Germans and English on the previous Sunday, was riddled with rifle shots. The small number of windows intact showed that the Germans had made a deliberate assault upon the residents of the town. But the inhabitants themselves admitted that all of the shooting had been done by a comparatively small number of Germans, and that the firing had not been begun until English soldiers who had concealed themselves in the houses had fired first upon the Germans.

News of Incident Goes Far.

"I have emphasized the one fatality of the noncombatant because the news of it traveled up and down the Sambre and across to Hantes-Wiberie and Soire-sur-Sambre, multiplying as it went and developing ghastly and inhuman details until it seemed an unanswerable reproach to the whole German empire.

"With this one possible exception, I did not encounter in Nivelles, in Binche, Buissiere, or Soire-sur-Sambre, or any of the other towns I visited, a single incident of mistreatment or any sort by German officers or soldiers.

"Bruissiere—particularly the lower part of the city—had been virtually destroyed by a cross fire from French and German artillery. Tops of breweries had been hurled bodily to the ground, and walls had either disappeared or become grotesquely dislodged.

Burgomaster Denies Reports.

"Into this town 130 French killed and more than a hundred wounded were brought in a single day. August Blairiaux, burgomaster, said that he knew of no cases of German cruelties, except distant rumors which he had learned to discredit. It ought to be said to the credit of the Belgians that they have not allowed their bitterness toward the Germans to carry them into unfair recrimination.

"Robert J. Thompson, American consul at Aachen, visited Liege during and after the capture of the forts. It is the opinion of Mr. Thompson that no outrage was committed by Germans during the several days' fighting there.

"There are, of course, reported outrages beyond investigation, either on account of their vagueness or because it is impossible to weigh the provocation. It is known, for instance, that 112 natives were killed in Renouchamp, not far from Ardennes; German soldiers say that they were killed because they fired upon them from the roofs and windows of the houses.

Differ on Louvain Incident.

"The history of the absolute destruction of the historic city of Louvain with its cathedral and its university is by this time well known. The German version of this is that the inhabitants, under the direction of the burgomaster, established themselves in the church, where they also installed a machine gun. They proceeded to greet the Germans with a deadly fire.

"The Belgians say, on the other hand, that part of the German army, mistaking one of their own retiring divisions for the enemy, opened fire upon them, whereupon, deluded into thinking this an assault by Belgian civilians, the Germans razed the city.

"I have not been able to acquire any direct evidence in regard to these last two instances, but the explanation generally credited by disinterested persons is that the Belgians, who had laid down their arms, according to the burgomaster's proclamation on the entrance of the enemy, took them up again when it looked as if the Germans were retreating from the town, and opened fire from their windows upon a retiring German train.

Jarotzsky Tells Outrages.

"The most authoritative German denial of German offense comes from Maj. Gen. Thaddeus von Jarotzsky, military governor of Brussels, who informed me that in numerous cases he had been received with a pretense of friendliness by Belgian civilians, who later fired upon the German soldiers from windows and from between the roof tiles. This was done, he said, after a declaration of surrender by the burgomaster and a proclamation warning the citizens against any show of resistance.

"In such violations of the rules of war, the general said, he punished the offender by burning the houses from which the shots were fired.

"I can only say that in every case of reported outrage or reprisal which was susceptible of investigation I have found either that the outrage was a figment of the Belgian mind or that it was more than half excused by circumstances.

"The prevalence of the Belgian practice of sniping from the houses was perhaps indicated by the warning of the German officer who acted as guard for five American correspondents, including myself, who were being taken as prisoners from Beaumont to Aachen in an army train. We were advised to lie down on the floor of the car as the Belgian snipers would shoot at us from the houses. But there was no firing.

"This, of course, is not a brief for the German army; it is an account of German conduct as it appeared to an impartial observer who had the rather extraordinary opportunity of traveling for days with the German columns, over a distance of more than a hundred miles through a dozen important cities and towns.

"Sometimes I was near enough to the front to see the white artillery smoke spurt into clouds along the horizon and hear the double detonations which came from artillery at short range. At other times I trailed behind through the desolate waste which a victorious army leaves behind it.

Pay All and Tip Well.

"On the contrary, I witnessed numerous cases of the most careful courtesy on the part of German soldiers. In Brussels they not only paid their cafe bills, but tipped generously. Along the road, when a German officer or soldier entered a Belgian house for food or shelter, it was not with a demand but a request. In spite of the confusion and errors which arose from a strange tongue there was almost no friction of any sort.

"The German soldiers were punctiliously considerate and polite to women and children, apologizing for the discomfort they were causing. Upon leaving a house where they have been given shelter, I have seen them shake hands with the concierge, peasant woman, or in some cases with the gentlewoman of a Belgian villa, as pleasantly as if they were bidding adieu to their hostess at a week-end house party.

"So many instances of this sort are at hand that a recital of them would be tedious.

"Naturally inclined to be gruff with their soldiers, the German officers always gave the French prisoners a pleasant word, and treated them with every consideration. Not a single exception to this civility toward prisoners has come to my attention.

"A French lieutenant and two English officers traveled with us in the prison train from Beaumont to Aachen, a halting journey which took over thirty-six hours. The train was crowded with German wounded and French and English prisoners, and there was nothing to eat or drink, except a few fragments of rye bread, hard as a stone, and a little liquid compound of chicory, which in Belgium masquerades under the name of coffee. Since there was not enough even of this disheartening fare to go around, German officers went without food so that the prisoners might be fed.

Aid Owners of Cafe.

"In a little cafe in Beaumont, concierge and madame had fled before the approach of the soldiers and abandoned their business. Two officers found them in hiding, brought them back, and in a day they had taken in more money than in any previous week in their career.

"These incidents could be indefinitely prolonged, but they would only offer additional support to a point that I think I have already established—the universal kindliness of German soldiers as I have observed them.

"I have seen perhaps half a dozen cases of drunkenness in observing nearly 1,000,000 soldiers, and these few were only good-naturedly maudlin. In Beaumont while I was detained for 24 hours in the small cafe previously mentioned, with an armed guard at the door, although specifically told that I was not an ordinary prisoner, a swaggering petty officer of some sort, lunged toward me and showed me the sharp convincing edge of his sword, insisting that I run my hand across it.

Warned to Avoid Drinking.

"German discipline and German training seem to have put into the German soldier an exemplary behavior which is nothing less than remarkable. Before I fell asleep on the floor of the Beaumont cafe, with two German soldiers' guns slanting almost over me, I heard the petty officer who was in charge of us, giving instructions to the guards, which included the statement that any one of us who stirred outside the door should be shot. Then he counseled them, almost in a fatherly way to drink only moderately, stating that if they became drunk he would recommend a sentence of 15 years in the penitentiary.

"If the conduct of the German soldier errs at all it is on the side of a too complete subordination. It is impossible for any one who has seen much of the German system to believe in the tales of deliberate depredations and unsoldierly conduct."

KAISER ADDRESSES TROOPS AT VIRTON

Rotterdam.—The Cologne Gazette reports that the German emperor delivered a speech to his troops after the battle of Virton, near Longwy, when he visited his son, Prince Oscar, who is commandant of the grenadiers.

The kaiser appeared in the evening with his suite in five automobiles. He stood his son and then walked along the lines greeting the men, who were quartered in the village. Standing in the middle of the square, the kaiser said:

"I greet you as your chief. I thank you. I have often seen your regiment on parade and now it gives me particular pleasure to greet you on conquered land.

"Your regiment fought as I expected and as your fathers fought in 1871. The battle of Virton will be eternally inscribed in letters of gold in the history of the war.

"Our comrades in the eastern army also fought gallantly, also the army of the crown prince. The fourth army, under the duke of Wurtemberg, advanced victoriously. Our enemies are withdrawing in flight.

"The eastern army has driven three Russian corps over the frontier. Two Russian corps capitulated on the open field. Sixty thousand men and two generals were taken prisoners.

"For all these victories we have to thank but one—that is our God, who is ever over us."

FRENCH INFANTRY GUARDING ROAD TO PARIS

Squad of French infantrymen behind a barricade of tree trunks defending one of the roads to Paris.

KOENIGSBERG, BESIEGED BY THE RUSSIANS

Koenigsberg, East Prussia, one of the strongest fortified cities in Germany, which the Russians are said to have invested.

AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS FOR FRENCH ARMY

American residents of Paris, who have organized a volunteer regiment to fight in the French army, are seen in the Place de l'Opera en route to their drilling place and carrying the Stars and Stripes.

CHANGING THE FRONTIER

After waiting 40 years the French finally had a chance at the German frontier marks along the Alsace-Lorraine border, and it did not take them long to tear down the signs that bore the black eagle and the words "Deutches Reich."

CHEERFULLY DESTROY THEIR OWN HOMES

Cottagers of Waelhem, a suburb of Antwerp, burning their own homes in order that the guns in the fortifications might have a clear sweep of the enemy's lines.

HER'S WIFE ILL TO WORK

Nervous Sufferer to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minn.—"I am glad to say E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a person. I believe there is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine. I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do."—Mrs. FRANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maplefarm, Kasota, Minn.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Take the Liver at its Duty

Nine in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are a mildly compelling liver to duty.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Take After Eating.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

EYES Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion

Heals and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 24 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures eye pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for DR. SALTER'S. Only from Reform Dispensary, 46 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

FOR SUFFERING 15 YEARS

Bleeding Piles, I found remedy that cured me. Will send a sufferer address JAS. I. HATFIELD, Prof. Poultry Farm, Route 3, Douglas, Georgia

WANTED to represent in New Orleans, some good house; 21 years service with largest firm in city, unquestioned references, $1000 bond. J. F. Leake, 320 Camp, New Orleans

Merchants and agents; make big money selling our latest "Housewife Necessaries," special premiums free; particulars, catalog; quick sells. A. Sons, Dept. 568, 188 Bagg St., Detroit, Mich.

LADIES Earn comfortable income copying formulas at large profit. Particulars and outfit 25 cents. Belle Breen, 206 W. Newton, Boston, Mass.

Eye Glass Cleaner makes glasses weather proof and steam proof. 10c. Express to agents. Atlanta Chemical Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Agents wanted weekly handling best Fall—Winter seller ever put on market. Full particulars free. Box 14, New Stanton, Penn.

Birmingham, No. 39–1914.

His Contribution.

"Have you contributed anything to the strange cause?"

"Yes; two sisters and one wife."

OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery and Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—Just Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago

Its Tendency.

"Jayme has a very open counte hasn't she?"

"Yes, and one that is very hard to keep up."

RUB-MY-TISM

Cure your Rheumatism and all aches and pains—Neuralgia, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Price 25c.—Adv.

The British Hussars.

The Seventh Queen's Own Hussars from dragoons in 1807 was regiment in which the duke of served to learn cavalry after being in the rifles and His son, Prince Arthur, and Prince Alexander of Teck be their military career in the same will refund money if PAZO fails to cure any case of Itching Blind or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. Application gives Ease and Rest. 50c.

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days

Give some one and we always find appreciative audience.

You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

Standard Grove's Tasteless Tonic is equally valuable as a tonic because it contains the tonic properties of QUININE. It acts on the Liver, Drives Malaria from the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents

RUSSIA TOWN

RUSSIANS ATTACK MAKE

PROVISIO

Austrians' Extend to Sea

Paris. A Russian be trograd co Agency say "The Ru the fortifie Sambor (i fear guard yond the S Radymno a destroyed the region "The Ru oners and Memirov a ammunitio Rome.— the Austr 300,000 Au the Italian left with men. London by Germa tablished which the manded by sky, is exp assault on A Rome Telegraph "Dispatc the Austr new detes command ter resting will be co fenberg, w the left w Gen. Dank The new presents reaches as to be a fi save the It is rep Sea fleet the Bospi the Turki Ottoman allies. That R days, wil field in th will be re the fightin Austrian other dis

ALLIES

Battle Ag France bar London gales, th forces an France co abated fu Seeming ments ha on the pl Noyon. The Fr nounces t Craonne, serious en and Fifte mans in t a numbe however, repulsed. The tow bombardm mans usi distance veritable which is interestin It was Arc expe famous C ing from ported to shells. British ment as but have in action contains t fell, the p sey, eldes and Col. eral stat wounds. Berlin.— of the de was in c ment at London their att which is ish force were rep Paris.— in Rheim issued a hang the curred. war con the kaise London News fro side of t bus Unit fight in her purs efending one of the roads to Paris.

ROAD TO PARIS

HE RUSSIANS

Germany, which the Russians are

ENCH ARMY

t to fight in the French army, are the Stars and Stripes.

ROY THEIR OWN HOMES

of Antwerp, burning their own ho tions might have a

ER'S WIFE ILL TO WORK

y Nervous Sufferer d to Health by Ly- E. Pinkham's Veg- ble Compound.

Minn. — "I am glad to say E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegepound, and now I feel like a person. I believe there is e Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegepound for weak women and , and I would be glad if I ance anyone to try the medi- I know it will do all and much it is claimed to do." — Mrs. ANKS, R. F. D. No. 1, Maple- n, Kasota, Minn.

who suffer from those dis- ls peculiar to their sex should ed of the ability of Lydia E. Vegetable Compound to re- health by the many genuine tful testimonials we are con- blishing in the newspapers.

have the slightest doubt a E. Pinkham's Vegeta- ound will help you, write E. Pinkham Medicine Co. ential) Lynn, Mass., for ad- Your letter will be opened, answered by a woman, d in strict confidence.

the Liver Duty

in ten when the liver is ach and bowels are right. LITTLE LS ly com- er to

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

After Eating. LL SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE. ature must bear Signature

Brent Good

ORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion es and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 48 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures rain. Ask your druggist or dealer for S. Only from Reform Dispensary, 48 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

TER SUFFERING 15 YEARS Bleeding Piles, I found remedy that cured me. as a sufferer address JAS. I. HATFIELD, Poultry Farm, Route 3, Douglas, Georgia

OLD represent in New Orleans, some good house; 21 years service with largest Staple city, unquestioned references. Inclose 2c stamp. J. F. Leake, 320 Camp, New Orleans

Merchants and agents; make big money selling our latest "Housewife Necessaries," specimens free; particulars, catalog; quick. Mfg. Co., Dept. 568, 158 Sagg St., Detroit, Mich.

ADIES Earn comfortable income copying formulas at large profit. Particulars and outfit 25 cents Belle Breen, 266 W. Newton, Boston, Mass.

Glass Cleaner makes glasses weather and steam proof. 10c to agents. Atlanta Chemical Co., Atlanta, Ga.

weekly handling best Fall—Winter ever put on market. Full partic- Box 14, New Stanton, Penn.

Birmingham, No. 39—1914.

His Contribution.

you contributed anything to ge cause?"

two sisters and one wife."

DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Granulated Eyelids; No Smarting—Comfort. Write for Book of the Eye. Marine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago has a very open counte hasn't she?"

Its Tendency.

and one that is very hard to

RUB-MY-TISM

your Rheumatism and all aches and pains—Neuralgia, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Burns, etc. Antiseptic Price 25c.—Adv.

The British Hussars.

Seventh Queen's Own Hussars from dragoons in 1807 war ment in which the duke of ght served to learn cavalry after being in the rifles and His son, Prince Arthur, and Prince Alexander of Teck be r military career in the same

Cured in 6 to 14 Days will refund money if PAZO fails to cure any case of Itching or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. Application gives Ease and Rest. 50c some one and we always find lative audience.

You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's

Standard Grove's Tasteless ic is equally valuable as a Tonic because it contains the ic properties of QUININE It acts on the Liver, Drives a, Enriches the Blood, the Whole System. 50 cents

RUSSIANS CAPTURE TOWNS OF GALICIA

RUSSIANS ARE PREPARING FOR ATTACK ON PRZEMYSL—TO MAKE FINAL EFFORT.

PROVISIONED FOR 2 YEARS

Austrians' New Defensive Front Will Extend to Cracow—Russian Black Sea Fleet Is Ready to Attack Turks.

Paris.—An official announcement by Russian headquarters sent by the Petrograd correspondent of the Havas Agency says:

"The Russian troops have captured the fortified positions of Siniva and Sambor (in Galicia). The Austrian rear guard has been thrown back beyond the San river in the region of Radymno and Mcdyka. The Austrians destroyed the bridges on the San in the region of Sandomir and Radomysl.

"The Russians captured 3,000 prisoners and 22 cannon in the region of Memirov and have taken 3,000 cases of ammunition."

Rome.—A report received here from the Austro-Italian frontier says that 300,000 Austrian troops are watching the Italian border. Trieste has been left with a garrison of only 20,000 men.

London.—The Austrians, supported by German re-enforcements, have established a new line of defense against which the Russian left wing, commanded by Gens. Broussiloff and Ruszsky, is expected to be hurled in their assault on Pryemysl.

A Rome dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"Dispatches from Vienna state that the Austrians fortified an extended new defense front. Gen. Bovcerigz will command the right wing, with his center resting at Przemysl. The center will be commanded by Gen. von Auffenberg, with Tarnow as his base and the left wing will be commanded by Gen. Dankl."

The new Austrian fortified position presents a defensive front which reaches as far as Cracow. It is thought to be a final effort of the Austrians to save the remnants of their army.

It is reported that the Russian Black Sea fleet is waiting at the entrance of the Bosphorus ready to pounce upon the Turkish warships the moment the Ottoman empire declares war upon the allies.

That Russia, probably within 60 days, will have 5,000,000 men in the field in the east, while a million more will be ready to fill the gaps caused by the fighting on the East Prussian and Austrian frontiers, is the burden of another dispatch from Petrograd.

ALLIES FIGHT IN STORMS

Battle Against Germans in Northern France Continues—Rheims Bombarded with Heavy Guns.

London.—In the midst of heavy gales, the battle between the allied forces and the Germans in Northern France continues, apparently with unabated fury, after six days of fighting.

Seemingly the most serious engagements have occurred around Rheims, on the plateau of Caronne and near Noyon.

The French official statement announces the capture of prisoners near Craonne, in what is termed "a rather serious engagement" with the Twelfth and Fifteenth German corps. The Germans in this vicinity have carried out a number of violent attacks, which, however, are reported to have been repulsed.

The town of Rheims has been under bombardment for three days, the Germans using their heavy guns from a distance of three miles, and pouring a veritable rain of shells on the place, which is one of the most historically interesting cities in France.

It was from this town that Joan of Arc expelled the English in 1429. The famous Cathedral of Notre Dame, dating from the thirteenth century, is reported to have been struck by German shells.

British authorities give out no statement as to the progress of the battle, but have issued a list of officers killed in action during recent days. The list contains the names of Capt. R. N. Grenfell, the polo player; Capt. Lord Guernsey, eldest son of the earl of Ailesford, and Col. F. R. F. Bolleau of the general staff, who died later of his wounds.

Berlin.—Denial is given the report of the death of Col. von Reuter, who was in command of the German regiment at the time of the Zabern affair.

London.—The Germans resumed their attacks on the allies' left wing, which is made up of French and British forces, but after a fierce fight were repulsed with heavy losses.

Citizens Threatened.

Paris.—During the Germans' stay in Rheims they took 100 hostages and issued a proclamation threatening to hang the inhabitants if disorders occurred. They also exacted a $200,000 war contribution and Prince Albert, the kaiser's son, left with the money.

London.—A dispatch to the Evening News from Venice says that the outside of the Austrian dreadnaught Virbus Unitis was badly damaged in a fight in the Adriatic but she escaped her harbor.

QUEEN OF BELGIUM

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, who, with her children, took refuge in England when the Germans captured Brussels.

GERMANS RETREAT 100 MILES

Were Knocking at Gates of Paris Only Fortnight Ago—Prepare for Big Battle.

London.—The German army, which less than a fortnight ago was at the "gates of Paris," and the right wing of which then extended southeast of the French capital, is drawn up on almost a straight line, extending from the neighborhood of Noyon, in the west, to Bois Forges on the Meuse, north of Verdun, with its left resting on the German fortress of Metz.

Thus the right wing, at least, has gone back more than 70 miles in two weeks, while the rest of the army also has had to retire before the whole could find ground on which to make another stand against the advance of the allies.

There seems little doubt that the Germans intend to give battle on this line, with the River Aisne in front of their center and the mountains and forest of Argonne on their left. They went back steadily before the French and English armies, fighting only rear guard actions until their right, in command of Gen. von Kluck, got across the Aisne. Then they turned and delivered several counter attacks which, however, according to British official reorts, were repulsed, the Germans leaving 200 prisoners in the hands of the British.

SAY AUSTRIANS HEMMED IN

Great Fortresses of Przemysl Heavily Discounted by Russians' Position. Enemy Is Surrounded.

London.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Petrograd says that after the capture of Opole and Tourobine, Russian forces have hemmed the enemy into an angle formed by the junction of the River Vistula and the River San.

The Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent says:

"With the Russians already south of the San River, the significance of Przemysl and the other strongholds of the district have been heavily discounted. These fortresses were intended to cover the great triangle between the Vistula and San rivers and the Carpathian mountains. They have proved useless for that purpose and the question now is whether the beaten and demoralized armies can even reach safety at Cracow. Other refuge there is none. The situation looks almost as bad for the eastern as for the western armies of the Germanic allies."

SERBS INVADING HUNGARY

150,000 Troops Make Inroads Into Dual Monarchy—Will Join Russian Force in West.

London.—According to a statement issued here by the Servian legation, there are now in Hungary at least 150,000 Servian troops successfully pushing an offensive movement against the forces of the dual monarchy.

The Austrians are entrenching at all strategic points on all the roads leading to Budapest. A large Servian army is marching toward Frashkagora, a position of great importance, the purpose being to render secure the Servian left flank.

Continuing, the legation declares that in Bosnia the Servians are besieging Vishnegrad and that their advance line is nearing Sarayevo, which is strongly fortified, and where desperate fighting is expected.

The prediction is made that a junction soon will be effected with a Russian army sweeping to the westward.

GERMAN OFFICERS KILLED.

Men Who Figured in Alsace Scandal Die in Battle.

London.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from the Hague says it is reported there that the German officers, Col. von Reuter and Lieut. Baron von Forstner, both central figures in the Zasern (Alsace) army scandal last year, were killed the same day in different engagements—Col. von Reuter near Louvain and Baron von Forstner [illegible]

SCHOOLS TO MAKE MONTHLY REPORTS

Normal, Agricultural and County Schools Must Hereafter Make Reports to State Department.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

Monthly reports will hereafter be filed in the office of the State Department of Education by the County high schools, the State Normal schools and the district agricultural schools, according to an announcement made by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education.

These reports have not been required heretofore. In the reports the executive officers will tell of the work being done and of its monthly progress. He will also be required to set forth the needs of the school and other details of school work.

There are fifty-three county high schools, ten agricultural schools and six State Normal schools in Alabama.

Hobdy to Succeed Baker.

Prof. N. R. Baker, State Supervisor of Rural Schools, has resigned, and J. B. Hobdy of Auburn has been appointed in his place, the changes being effective October 1, it was announced by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. Professor Baker resigned to accept the position of Assistant County Superintendent of Education of Jefferson county, which comes in the nature of a promotion.

Professor Baker was appointed as State Supervisor of Rural Schools in 1911 by H. J. Willingham, at that time State Superintendent of Education. He has done much excellent work for the rural schools of the State and has compiled some of the most interesting data concerning the rural schools of the State that has ever been published. In his new position he will have an opportunity for doing much good educational work. He formerly lived in Jefferson county and is well known to all the educational workers there.

Professor Hobdy, who succeeds Professor Baker, is one of the best known educational workers in the State. He began his career as a member of the faculty of the Seventh District Agricultural School in Albertville, of which W. F. Feagin was at that time president. He served in this position from 1897 to 1901, when he succeeded Mr. Feagin as president when Mr. Feagin resigned to become connected with the Department of Education.

For ten years Professor Hobdy served as president of the Albertville school, when he resigned to accept a position in the Auburn faculty in 1911. Since 1911 he has been associated with Prof. L. N. Duncan in the Boys' Corn Club work in Alabama. He has also served as high school inspector. Professor Hobdy will make his residence in this city.

Mr. Feagin announced that the position to be filled by Professor Hobdy will hereafter be known as that of "Rural School Agent" instead of "Supervisor of Rural Schools." Prof. J. L. Sibley will continue as agent for the negro rural schools of the state. These officials are paid out of the general educational fund, but work under the supervision of the State Superintendent of Education.

Books Given History Department.

Announcement has been made by the Alabama State Department of archives and history of the gift to the department of a number of new and attractive books, the gift of various collections. Tehse books cover all classes of literature, including conduct of life, nature study, literature for children, animals, birds, biography, myths, etc.

Examine A. N. G. Officers.

Newly elected officers of the Alabama National Guard will be examined Sept. 25, by the State board of military examiners, according to announcement made at the office of Adjutant General Joseph B. Scully. Nine officers will be present to take the examinations.

Morgan County Books O. K.

Books and accounts of officials of Morgan county are correctly kept, according to a report of Chas. L. Townes, Examiner of Public Accounts. One discrepancy amounting to $23 was discovered, but this was immediately rectified. Officials whose books were found to be correct were W. E. Skeggs, Probate Judge; Charles C. Robertson, Tax Collector; R. N. McCullough, Sheriff; Arthur Stephenson, Treasurer of County School Funds, and Frank J. Troup, Tax Assessor.

Convict Returns to Prison.

After being at large two years, Charity Burton, a white man of Talladega county, who escaped from the state penitentiary at Wetumpka soon after being imprisoned for grand larceny, returned to Wetumpka and surrendered himself to the penitentiary officials. Burton had spent nearly two years in the west, where he worked in the wheat fields. Announcement was made at the convict department of the escape of Joe Bowman and Dee Wyatt, hackmen, from the [illegible]

Taxes in Jefferson Heavy.

Jefferson county paid in taxes to the state and county during 1913 $1,950,049.84. Of that amount $1,039,328.52 went to the county and $910,721.32 to the state. W. R. Foster, examiner of public accounts, has just completed an examination of the books of F. B. Bowers, tax collector of Jefferson county, and made a report to Governor O'Neal.

Mr. Foster also reports favorably upon the minutes and accounts of the Jefferson county board of revenue. He found that $138,468.23 was paid out between September 1, 1913, and August 31, 1914, for charity, and remarked that, although the institutions and cause were worthy, it seemed a burden upon the taxpayers.

Decision Upholds Kolb.

Attorney General Robert C. Brickell has rendered an opinion in which he holds that commercial food stuffs must be packed in packages of 50 pounds, net weight, 100 pounds, net weight, and so on. This opinion applies to those dealers who have claimed that they could put up short weight packages provided they are labeled "short weight." The opinion was rendered at the request of Capt. Reuben F. Kolb and is as follows:

"Referring to Section 2 of an act of the legislature of 1911," writes Captain Kolb to Mr. Brickell, "you will find that the law provides that commercial feed stuffs must be packed in bags or packages of 50 pounds net weight, 100 pounds net weight, etc. We attach a letter from the Southwestern Millers' League in which they say they are branding their bags 'guaranteed 99 pounds net.'

"They claim that they have the right to do this under our law and that we would not have the right to stop the sale of feed thus branded. Our ruling is that feed can only be sold in bags containing 50 pounds net, 100 pounds net, etc.

In replying to Captain Kolb, the Attorney General writes as follows: "I beg to advise you that a package so marked (referring to 99 pounds net) could not be sold in this state under the plain provisions of Section 2 of the act approved March 9, 1911, and known as the Commercial Feed Stuffs Act, and that in my opinion this act is the proper exercise of the legislative authority."

Battery B Mustered Out.

Supposedly because of the reported mutiny of Battery B, field artillery, Alabama National Guard, of Montgomery, at Mobile recently, it was mustered out of the service of the Alabama National Guard by Adjt. Gen. Joseph B. Scully. The formal order declares that the action was taken personally on recommendation of Maj. D. S. Dorrance of Birmingham, commanding the Alabama artillery battalion.

Capt. Samuel Roswald, commanding the battery, insists that the battery has been dismissed without the investigation which he has requested and and which he again demanded in a statement made public.

To Make Malarial Survey.

Dr. R. H. Von Ezdorf, the health and sanitary expert of Mobile, while in Montgomery, conferred with Dr. W. H. Sanders, State Health Officer, in connection with a proposed malarial survey of Alabama. It is proposed to make a study of malarial conditions throughout the state to enable health officers to know malarial conditions at all points.

Call Issued State Banks.

Superintendent of Banks Alex E. Walker issued a call to the state banks for a statement of their condition at the close of business on September 12. The present call is the third which the bank superintendent has issued this year the last one having been sent out several months ago.

Perry County Negro Paroled.

Governor O'Neal granted a parole to George Smith, a Perry county convict, who was serving a twelve year sentence in the state penitentiary on a charge of murder. The parole was granted upon the recommendation of Dr. J. M. Austin, physician inspector.

Wanted for Jefferson Crime.

The governor has made requisition on the goernor of Missouri for the return to this state of Tippo Holmes, charged with the murder of Tafton Tannehill in Jefferson county. No details of the crime could be learned at the governor's office.

Montgomery Tax Assessor Dead.

Morgan S. Gilmer, tax assessor of Montgomery county, died at Brevard, North Carolina. He was a most distinguished Confederate veteran and organizer of the "Yaller Hammers," an organization composed of juvenile descendants of Alabama veterans which was made official recently by the Alabama division of Veterans.

Three Institutes in Progress.

Teachers institutes are being held this week in Montgomery, Mobile and Russell counties.

Investigation Asked.

T. D. Samford, United States District Attorney, and Robert C. Brickell, attorney general of Alabama, were requested by a delegation representing merchants and business men of Clanton to make an investigation of charges that cotton oil mills of the state have combined to force down the price of cotton seed. The delegation was composed of L. H. Reynolds, F. M. Pinckard and Dr. E. A. Mathews, all of Clanton. It was the [illegible]

For Caked Udder and Sores on Your Cows

HANFORD'S Balsam of Myrrh

For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.

Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00

All Dealers OR WRITE G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN ALL ITS BRANCHES

VIEWS PHOTOS STUDIES PORTRAITS DEVELOPING

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll

Prints 3c and 4c Each

Prompt attention and work the best

BERT G. COVELL & M. T. STRADFORD, Mgr.

3rd Ave. & 19th St. Dept. K Birmingham, Ala., Phone 1942

AGENTS We trust you to $5.00 worth of Starr's Powdered Enamel. Repairs chipped and rusty spots in graniteware; all metalware. Sample and particulars 10c. Starr, 1109 Reserve St., Toledo, O.

INDUSTRIOUS MONEY-MAKERS should read series of articles running in American Family Herald. 24c in stamps pays year's subscription; adj. 3c word. McELROY, 101 HENRY STREET, BROOKLYN, N. Y.

AGENTS World's best proposition; easy $5 a day; every user pen and pencil buyer on sight. Send 15c for sample and particulars; HOFF'S SALES CO., Denver, Colo.

$1500 Yearly average wage can be earned and received by all workers, says Jack Pansy, if they will read his little book and act accordingly. Price 10c. Address Charles Crane, Drawer 300B, Racine, Wis.

WILL BE EXPENDED WISELY

Statement Showing How the Proceeds of Sale of Red Cross Seals Are to Be Spent.

For the benefit of the numerous organizations who helped to sell nearly forty-five million Red Cross seals last year and for the general public, the American Red Cross and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis have framed a definition of anti-tuberculosis work showing how the proceeds from these holiday stickers are to be used. The definition limits the expenditure of money only for the year ending April 30, 1915.

The definition was framed at a recent meeting of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and states that the term "anti-tuberculosis work" as it relates to the expenditure of Red Cross seal money shall include the following activities:

1. The construction of hospitals or sanatoriums for the care of the tuberculous.

2. The maintenance of the tuberculous.

3. The provisions of day or night camps for the tuberculous; the provision and maintenance of dispensaries, visiting nurses, open air schools, fresh air classes, or preventoria for the care or treatment of tuberculous cases or for the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis.

4. The maintenance of educational or legislative activities which have for their object the prevention of infection with tuberculosis.

One man's automobile may be another man's juggernaut.

SICK DOCTOR

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way, is valuable:

"An attack of grip, so severe it came near making an end of me, left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew of course that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food. It tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts is of great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that were Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians it would save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts and cream 10 days proves, "There's a Reason."

Look in pkgs. for the little book "The Road to Wellville."

[illegible]

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

It seems that war tax, bond issue and time warrants are all a democrat in office can think about. Why don't they sometime consider the interest of the common people?

Will the Clanton Press tell the voters which democratic officer it is who is now advocating a county debt of $100,- to be put on the public roads? Please do not dodge this, as it is important that they know who he is.

Mr. M. D. Foshee, Chairman of the Progressive Campaign committee has taken up with Mr. L. R. Sawyer the matter of arranging for a joint debate at the court house by speakers representing the democratic and the progressive parties. We hope this can be arranged, as in that way both sides can be heard at one time. We have been very anxious all through the campaign for a joint debate, and hope we shall soon have the pleasure of hearing this one.

MORE TAXES DEMANDED.

In The Jeffersonian of September 10, appeared an article which is in part as follows:

"More taxes on the common people, demands the President; the Baltimore platform on which Prof. Woodrow Wilson was elected promised cheap money on long loans to the farmer.

"And while the farmer, and the merchants and state banks whose prosperity depends on the farmer, are extending every energy to devise a method of self-help, the President proposes additional tax burdens of $100,000,000.

"He calls it a war tax, just as though the European war were ours.

"In the name of God, where is this oppression of the common people to stop?

"Does it ever occur to Woodrow Wilson that he is heaping up wrath against the day of wrath, when he again faces the people?"

The above is another indication of how the democrats live up to their promises when they get into office. Why is this additional tax necessary so soon after the war began, even if the war has anything at all to do with it? Can the democrats explain how the war affects us so as to make such taxes necessary? In fact isn't it the waste and misuse of the democrats, and the unreasonable laws passed by the democratic congress that has made it necessary instead of the war? We would like to hear the opinion of the Clanton Press, the Democratic organ of this county, on these questions. But we suppose it will get a sarcastic expression on its countenance and say The editor of The Union-Banner has discovered that the democratic party in Chilton county is the cause of the big European war. That is about such simple answers as they have been making to some other important questions.

CHARGES DEMOCRATS WITH EXTRAVAGANCE.

The following communication, relative to Democratic extravagance, appeared in the Birmingham Age-Herrld of September 18th:

Indianapolis, Sept. 17.—Senator Borah, opening the Indiana Republican campaign here to-night, charged the Democratic administration with "undue extravagance."

"Congress up to this date has appropriated $1,117,000,000," said the Senator, "which does not include the River and Harbors bill nor any expense made necessary, as it is claimed, by the war.

"Appropriations to date are in excess of the Republican appropriations of the last Congress by $100,-000,000, and the appropriations of the present congress when completed, will, in my judgment, be $250,000,000 in excess of that which was denounced as extravagance."

Does the above look as if the democrats are living up to their promises made two years ago? They bitterly denounced the preceding republican congress for spending so much money, and made grave promises of economy and reduction of the high cost of living. And now before the sound of their campaign whirlwind has fairly receded the have made worse the very things they previously termed as grievances, and which they promised to alleviate. Now the people will consider well the issues of the present campaign. They should do so before they cast their ballot.

"BROTHER, WHERE WILL YOU STAND?"

In the Clanton Press of April 17th, 1913, C. B. Cox, one of the democratic nominees for commissioner, came out in a letter advocating a bond issue. The letter was in part as follows: "It occurs to me that the thing to do is to issue bonds and then get all the other money we can by taxation and at the same time work all our men who are subject to road duty and thereby secure good roads in the shortest time possible and at the least expense."

The above explains the way Mr. Cox stood on the bond issue in 1913. He is now a candidate for county commissioner and we suppose, as he advocated a bond issue in 1913, that he is still for the same thing. It surely isn't possible that he has changed his mind since he became a candidate, and now sees things different. We feel that the people should know how Mr. Cox stands on this quesion now, and we ask him to tell the voters his ideas of a bond issue now, and whether or not he bas changed his mind since he has become a candidate.

The Union-Banner wishes to say here and now that we are going to wage this campaign upon the issues that confront the people of this county, state and Nation. We are not going to resort to personalities, and try to convert the peoples mind from the things that are of the greatest inteaest to them, to criticism of some individual. However we wish to say that we feel it our privilege and our duty to criticise the official acts of public officers when we think they deserve to be criticised. And we also feel it our privilege and our duty to criticise the policies of the democratic party in the management of government affairs when they are in power and manage the affairs in such a way as to benefit the classes instead masses of the people. As the Clanton Press is the official organ of the democratic party in this county, we would be glad to go into a discussion of the issues as they confront the people of this county with the Clanton Press. We are willing, waiting and anxious to inter into a discussion with the press of the political issue as advocated by the Progressive party and the democratic party. We further believe that each party through its official organ should tell the people what their party stands for and what it is against in order that the people may know these things before they cast their ballots for either party.

OUR COUNTY CAMPAIGN.

We would like to say a word to the voters of the county in regard to the campaign that is being waged by the two parties at present. The Progressive party, through its campaign committee, is making a direct and vigorous effort to place its policies before the people so that it may be known what the organization stands for. Speakers are being sent to the various parts of the county to explain these policies of the party and its candidates. The process is an open one, and is held up to every man in every community alike. The current issues that concern our people are being discussed openly.

The Democratic party for some cause or other, has not seen fit to place any of their policies before the people. Only one man has appeared in public to defend the Democrats; and when the debate was finished he openly acknowledged that he had enough. He was a candidate too; but said that he was done with public speaking and debating. There has been no acceptance of the challenge of the Progressives to joint debate with the Democrats. We have no alternative by which to judge this inactivity on their part, unless it be that they have no platform to defend. We have asked them a number of times to publish their platform in their paper, but they have never made any statements about it.

Now, the question is up to the voter. It is for him to decide whether he will support the ticket that is placing its policies and the things it stands for as an open book before his eyes that he may read and understand; or support the ticket that has no platform, and is making no effort to show him what they stand for, and what they expect to do if entrusted with the affairs of our county government. It seems that under such circumstances any fair minded man who cares for his own good, and the welfare of his country, would surely vote for the policies and principles which are explained to him, and which he knows and understands, in preference to those which are a closely guarded secret, not to be unfolded unto him until they are placed in power, and even then in absolute defiance of the voice and protest of the multitudes.

If the Democratic party has anything of which they can boast and which they wish to hold up before the people as an indication of their good faith and sympathy for the man who is not in the ring, we think it is high time they were telling the people about it. If there be any virtue and sincerity in the party, it is a pity to have it completely snowed under and not held up that the people may see it and be benefitted thereby.

A DISCUSSION OF OUR COTTON SITUATION

Lomax, Ala., Sept. 21.

Editor Union-Banner:

Will you allow me space to express my ideas regarding the cotton situation of the south?

The farmer is getting in hot water; and I hope it will get so hot that he will have to abandon his old system of things entirely. Some farmers blame the merchant, some the banker and some the democratic party; but they are all somewhat to blame, and the farmer himself is more to blame than all the others. The farmer depends on the merchant when really the merchant is dependent on the farmer. So we shall find no relief so long as we depend on someone who is wholly dependent upon us. If our leaders and business men can't help us in time of need, we don't need them in time of plenty. We must organize as a band of brothers and stick together at any cost.

Taxes are to be paid, debts are falling due, and no way to secure money. Cotton, the money crop of the south, is not marketable, and at present worthless. We must change our system of business. We have no system of pricing cotton. Why can't we come to-gether regardless of our political views, and fix this thing? Here is my plan:

First, for the people of the cotton states to demand that their legislatures stay all debts for six and twelve months; also state and county tax with 8 per cent interest. By so doing this will give us time to form our plans.

The next step is to call a meeting of each county in each cotton state and elect a man to represent the people of each county. Let these agents be governed by a committee of 12 or a vote of the people in setting the price of cotton. Selling to the broker then would be in the power of our agents.

We might call this agent the cashier of our bank. Suppose he retains $5 for each bale of cotton sold. Say Chilton county sells 20,000 bales; we would have $100,000 in our bank, the strongest one in the county. Suppose the cotton states produce 15 million bales; we would have $75,-000,000 in our treasury. This plan in ten years time would give us right here at Clanton one million dollars at our command.

I think it would be profitable then to build cotton factories, to help consume this cotton, as we would have plenty of money to invest. That would give our people additional employment. We can do this aud use the same warehouse system we now have.

If we don't resort to some way of protection, we must be mighty foolish creatures, for we can see plainly that we have none now.

This is written with the best respect to all classes regardless of political or business views.

J. H. JACKSON.

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

Saves Fisherman Trouble.

Harness to hold a fishing pole, so as to leave a fisherman's hands free to manage his bait or catch, is an English invention.

Will Pay 10 Cents For Your Cotton

In view of the present financial condition of the country, and realizing that from the sale of cotton is the only way the people of this section have to get money, we hereby agree to accept cotton at 10c per pound from all who are indebted to us on former transactions, and as payment in any transaction we may make while these present conditions exist.

GOWAN BROTHERS

J. E. GOWAN, A. M. GOWAN

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?

Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?

Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This conpon and 80 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan., 1-

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and china there is nothing better than rice-flour cement. It is made, it being only necessary to make rice flour or ground rice into a paste with cold water, simmering it over a slow fire until it thickens, by forming a most durable substance which can be used cold, in the usual way.

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose that people asked, "that nearly all the great of this world have been poor?" "I suppose," replied the old man, "it's because they had to do some thing to get their minds off the troubles they had at home."—Record-Herald.

Wanted Information.

Half an hour after Mrs. Blank had given her new maid an order she became uneasy and went to her room. "Well, Mary, what has detained you? Have you found my Keats anywhere?" "Lor', mum," Mary replied, "I was just comin' back to ask fo' a Keats."

Notice!, Farmers

We understand that it has gone out that our gin is not being operated this season. We wish to say right here that our gin is in first class shape. We appreciate your past patronage and ask you to continue with us. We assure you that we will give the best results possible.

We have obtained the services of Mr. W. E. Maddox, who is an experienced gin man. We will carry also a line of cotton seed meal and hulls, which we will exchange for cotton seed. Thanking you, We

CLANTON GINNERY

J. A. MADDOX, Manager.

Millinery

On the first of September I will open a Millinery Store in the Wells Building.

Will carry a complete and up-to-date stock of Fall and Winter Millinery.

Your trade is solicited.

MRS. A. M. GREEN

JEMISON, ALA.

Farmers,

We understand that a number of ers are under the impression tha er credit them for Ginning and Ties, but demand the cash when ginned. THIS IS NOT TRUE

We have our same old rules for only observe them closer. We cotton as cheap as anyone in tow you till the cotton is sold or you haul it away from the warehouse ginning.

Having had our machinery put in condition, and being operated by men, we can assure you perfect

We also pay the highest cash pr

Chilton Fertilizer C

Quick Lunc

The Best serv town---Cleanly itary and well ed---Sandwich Short Orders.

E. C. Pop

CLANTON, AL

E. HOPK

Manufacturer of Ceme all kinds of building purposes Well Curbing; Water-Proof B Vaults and All kinds of Ceme

Contractor for all kin work and plastering.

Estimates carefully fu

Peoples' Ph

Clanton, Alab

The Wearing o

Means the Tramping of Dolla

For even the product of th tories, which use the best will eventually wear out. It behooves you, therefore Best for the least money.

You'll Always Find T

KEMP BROT

Clanton, A

y 10 Cents
or Your Cotto

f the present financia
f the country, and rea om the sale of cotton i
y the people of this sec
o get money, we here
o accept cotton at 10
from all who are in us on former transac
s payment in any trans
may make while thes nditions exist.

N BROTHERS
A. M. GOW

essive?
nditions otective ocratic rosperi-
e NE,
he Pro-

Simple Cement.
For mending ornaments a china there is nothing be rice-flour cement. It is made, it being only necess rice flour or ground rice with cold water, simmeri over a slow fire until it thick by forming a most durable substance which can be us
cold, in the usual way.

Possible Solution.
"Why do you suppose asked, "that nearly all the
of this world have been
"I suppose," replied the old
"it's because they had to thing to get their minds off
bles they had at home."
Record-Herald.

Wanted Information
Half an hour after Mrs. R given her new maid an orde came uneasy and went to in
"Well, Mary, what has deta
Have you found my Keats, a ed?" "Lor', mum," Mary a
"I was just comin' back to to a Keats."

ngs the
eks. Of-

!, Farmer
d that it has gone
s not being operat
We wish to say j
gin is in first cl appreciate your p
ask you to contin
assure you that best results possib

ained the service ddox, who is an
man. We will ca
otton seed meal a e will exchange
hanking you, We

N GINNER DDOX, Manager.

nery
September I will open in the Wells Building.
omplete and up-to-date
Winter Millinery.
olicited.

M. GREEN
ISON, ALA.

Farmers,

We understand that a number of our customers are under the impression that we no longer credit them for Ginning and Bagging and Ties, but demand the cash when the cotton is ginned. THIS IS NOT TRUE.

We have our same old rules for ginning; but only observe them closer. We will gin your cotton as cheap as anyone in town, and allow you till the cotton is sold or you are ready to haul it away from the warehouse, to pay for the ginning.

Having had our machinery put into first class condition, and being operated by experienced men, we can assure you perfect satisfaction.

We also pay the highest cash price for seed.

Chilton Fertilizer Company

uick Lunches

The Best service in town---Cleanly, Sanitary and well cooked---Sandwiches, & Short Orders.

E. C. Popwell

CLANTON, ALA.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

The Wearing of Shoes
Means the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot

For even the product of the best factories, which use the best materials, will eventually wear out.
It behooves you, therefore, to buy the Best for the least money.

You'll Always Find Them Here.

KEMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

COUNTY FAIR TO BE IN OCTOBER

The Chilton County Fair this year is to be held at the permanent fair grounds in Clanton, on October 26 to 31. The catalog and premium list is now being printed, and will be out in a few days. We hope that, in spite of the hard times our people will give this worthy institution their hearty support. On account of our excellent crop conditions the agricultural side of the fair should be very good this year.

The Highway has been opened into Clanton from the south by the new route which comes up sixth street to the court house.

After a pleasant honeymoon including an extended trip north Mr. and Mrs. Grady Reynolds are at home to their friends in Clanton.

Miss Ruby Downs was hostess to a number of her friends at an enjoyable rook party Tuesday evening.

FOR SALE—Very desirable lot and house in Deatsville, Ala., short distance from depot. The house has waterwosks connection; garden if desired. Excellent place for nice home. If interested write the Union-Banner, Clanton, Ala., for further information. tf.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhare will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

The most up-to-date quick lunch service in Clanton is that recently opened up by E. C. Popwell in connection with his soda fount and cream parlor. The cooking department is in charge of Mr. J. O. Johnson, an expert chef de cuisine, and those nice hot lunches Joshua is dealing out will simply "make you hit your daddy."

Words of Praise
For Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy

"How thankful we are to you for getting a hold of your wonderful Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. My wife could not have had but a short time to live if she had not taken your Wonderful Remedy when she did. One more of those paroxysms pains she was having would have killed her without a doubt. Now she is free from all pain, free from heart trouble and free from that disturbing Neuralgia—all the results of five treatments and the expulsion of five or six hundred Gall Stones. Now she is able to eat anything she wants and her appetite is good and before taking your medicine she had no appetite and when she ate anything she would suffer death for so doing and could not sleep at night since taking your treatment she sleeps well all night long. T. A. SIBALL, Beeville, Texas."

The above letter should convince you more than anything we could say in behalf of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Sufferers should try one dose of this Remedy—one dose should convince them that they can be restored to health. Nearly all Stomach Ailments are caused by the clogging of the intestinal tract with mucoid and catarrhal secretions allowing poisonous fluids into the Stomach and otherwise disrupting the digestive system. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy painlessly removes these accumulations without a surgical operation and puts an end to Colic Attacks, Gases in the Stomach and Intestines and all of the usual symptoms of Stomach, Liver and Intestinal Ailments. Ask your druggist about Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy or write to Dr. A. Mayr, Phy. Chemist, 820 Pine St., Chicago, Ill. No more bad breath, belching, no gas, no constipation, no more sleepless nights, no more misery after eating, no more nervousness, no more dizziness, no more palpitation of the heart, no more pain in the region of the heart, no more pain in the left side, no more pain in the back, no more pain in the shoulder blade, no more pain in the arm, no more pain in the wrist, no more pain in the hand, no more pain in the fingers, no more pain in the chest, no more pain in the abdomen, no more pain in the groin, no more pain in the thigh, no more pain in the knee, no more pain in the leg, no more pain in the foot, no more pain in the toes, no more pain in the back of the neck, no more pain in the head, no more pain in the eyes, no more pain in the ears, no more pain in the nose, no more pain in the mouth, no more pain in the teeth, no more pain in the throat, no more pain in the tongue, no more pain in the lips, no more pain in the face, no more pain in the forehead, no more pain in the temples, no more pain in the scalp, no more pain in the hair, no more pain in the skin, no more pain in the flesh, no more pain in the bones, no more pain in the marrow, no more pain in the blood, no more pain in the heart, no more pain in the lungs, no more pain in the liver, no more pain in the kidneys, no more pain in the bladder, no more pain in the rectum, no more pain in the anus, no more pain in the genitals, no more pain in the legs, no more pain in the feet

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andzrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

There had been a snow, hard packed by traffic, and the blacks caught the sleigh swiftly along through the dusk. When the crowded business section lay behind them, Henley remarked casually:

"I saw your little charity back there."

"He was a cripple."

"I see," Henley nodded. "That's your greatest asset."

"What is?"

"Your health."

"My lack of it, you mean," Mark answered grimly. "But I don't quite get your point of view."

"It keeps you from making a fool of yourself. There's Hare, for instance, a capable man, drinking himself into incompetency. And Harmon, with his women. For them prosperity means indulgence. You keep your appetites under control."

"I have to."

"Exactly my point." For a few blocks Henley apparently gave himself over wholly to the agreeable exercise of breathing in the keen frosty air. When he resumed, no one could have guessed from his tone that he was working toward a given point. "Higsbee's case is worse. One woman."

"Has he—"

"His wife. A smooth catty creature, with a craze for display. Married him after he made his stake, of course. Always nagging him for new jewels, new carriages, a new—house. Makes him dress for dinner. Drags him around to dances and receptions and box parties—when 30 minutes of that takes it out of him more than 12 hours at the rolls used to." Mark might have been sitting for his portrait. "Egging him on until he's scheming as unscrupulously as a toothless old dowager to get into society—or what with her passes for society. He spent six months beating about the bush to get me to send my wife around to call on her. Queer, how a big talented man will let a pretty useless woman pull him around by the ears!"

"Damned queer!" said Mark.

"I suppose we, who aren't in the same case, can't understand it."

Henley, Mark thought, seemed to understand it very well.

A few minutes more brought them dashing up to a stop under the porte-cochere of Henley's big house.

"Much obliged for the lift," said Henley as he sprang out of the sleigh. He added casually, "Er—by the way, I think I heard my wife say she was planning to call on Mrs. Truitt in the near future."

Despite a quick flush, Mark looked at him steadily. "Higsbee, then, was a parable?"

"By no means," Henley returned blandly. "It seems they have met at St. Swithin's and were—mutually interested." He paused, but as no reply came from Mark, continued in the impersonal tone of one who philosophizes generally. "After all, there's a Higsbee in all of us. We affect to jeer at this society thing. But we want our wives to have the best. It's more comfortable, too. And besides, when a man has a charming wife, he can't hide her light under a bushel. Good night."

"Good night. Especially," Mark muttered to himself, "when she proposes to let it shine." He gave the reins an angry jerk. The horses leaped and raced down the driveway and into the street. The music of the sleigh bells rang merrily on the keen air.

Once he laughed aloud, sneeringly. "Complaisant toady!" He did not refer to Henley. He had, in fact, himself in mind. One can not well openly resent the insolent if friendly interest—even in one's domestic affairs—of the man whose eccentric favor spells prosperity. Still it stings, especially when it argues a shrewd guess as to the fact. And the fact was, Superintendent Truitt's domestic estate, like the neighborhood in which he lived, left something to be desired.

He aspired to a brick house that [illegible] from its neighbors only in that the yard was wide enough to allow for [illegible] in the little stable in the rear. [illegible]

Mark, leaning hard on his cane, limped stiffly up the terrace steps to the porch. The parlor—Unity was beginning to refer to it, not easily, as the drawing room—was lighted, the shades were not drawn.

Unity was reclining in graceful attitude—she could be relied upon to present graceful poses at all times—in a big easy chair. Her gown, of some soft, pale green stuff, vastly became her and, as did every detail of her from the carefully achieved coiffure to the black velvet slippers that peeped out from beneath her skirt, avouched the fact that Unity had mastered more than the rudiments of the art of personal decoration.

He went into the house, doffed his heavy overcoat and limped into the drawing room. Unity did not by so much as a glance around disturb her graceful pose until he was at her side. Then she languidly held up a hand to him.

He brushed it with his lips. "You're looking scrumptious, Unity." He went so far as to give a brief admiring pat to her hair.

She moved petulantly. "Don't! You'll muss my hair."

He dropped her hand. "That would be a shame, wouldn't it?"

He sat down near her. She sighed. The sigh, one might have thought, was one of alarm and was because she had noted his pallor, which even after the spirited drive was so pronounced.

"Been a hard day?" But the question was not Unity's. She had not marked his air of exhaustion or, if she had, was so used to it that she was not concerned.

"So hard!" She sighed again very plaintively. "So very exciting! And you know how excitement always affects me."

"Yes, I know." Just the edges of his satirical smile showed again. "What has been the particular excitement today?"

"Mrs. Henley called!"

"Yes?" Mark's voice did not reveal the interest so epochal an event demanded.

"Yes?" mimicked Unity. "Is that all you can say? But I suppose, of course, you don't care, though you know what it means to me."

"Just what does it mean to you, Unity?"

"It means," somewhat dithyrambically, "that I have won the friend-

"No, Thanks! I Might Acquire the Taste."

ship I have tried so hard for three years to win."

"Then she came up to the plans and specifications?"

"She's a dear. So sweet and refined! So intelligent and ambitious! It's no wonder a man with such a wife has got as far as Mr. Henley has. Though I suppose he would never give her credit."

"I fancy Henley does her justice," Mark ventured.

"That is more," Unity's tone was one of patient dignified reproach, "than some people I know do for their wives."

Habit put a seal on his lips.

From lesser beginnings the Truitts had found, in the earlier years of their marriage, steel and tinder for quarrels—nasty quarrels in which tempers were lost and cutting words spoken and that invariably had the same issue—the husband, humiliated by the sordidness of it, suing for peace. But that stage had passed. Now, at the first sign of hostilities, he promptly hung out a white flag.

She eyed him covertly for a little. "I was so ashamed this afternoon," she murmured at last pathetically.

He opened his eyes with a start, he had almost slept. "Ashamed—? Oh, yes—Mrs. Henley. What did you do?"

"I did nothing. It was this house. [illegible] over it. Though she was careful not to take too much pains to hide it."

"But, for a friend, isn't that—"

"Oh, you can't understand. Or won't," she amended bitterly. "You've no conception of the pride a woman likes to have in her home. Of course, she looked down on this. Anybody would."

"We used to think it mighty fine. In Bethel we never dreamed of anything so good."

"You didn't. But I did," she retorted. "Besides, we aren't in Bethel now. We're here and growing rich. And we ought to live like the rest of our kind."

"Just what is our kind, Unity?"

"If you didn't have me to give you ambition, we'd still be homely dowdy nobodies."

"Then we are somebodies?"

"We can be. We're going to be." She sat up suddenly, her thin lips tightening. "Mark, we must—we simply must—move. We can afford it, I know."

"Yes, we can do it." He made a gesture of resignation. "But it will clean me out of ready cash."

"You can make more," said Unity negligently. "You're so clever at that. And besides, what's the use of having money if it doesn't buy the things we want?"

"For one thing," he smiled grimly, "I can't get insurance, and men have been known to die and leave their widows penniless. However," he rose with an evident effort, "we've gone over all this a hundred times. I'll see."

Yielding was in his voice.

She fell back into her languid graceful pose. She gave him her very sweetest smile, which she meant to seem lovingly grateful. He saw in it only triumph.

"You can be such a dear!" she purred. "I'm so proud of you! And now you'd better hurry and dress. You know the Higsbees are coming for dinner."

He repressed an oath. "I'd forgotten." And he limped heavily from the room.

In his own room he dropped on the bed, yielding for a brief interval to the pain and weakness of which it was his pride never to give a sign before others.

He descended barely in time to join Unity in greeting their guests.

He did not see a deeper vanity in his feeling of superiority over his guests. Higsbee was a big beefy man, red of countenance and with a raucous voice that grated on Mark's nerves. He was rough, not to say boisterous, in manner, and his notion of wit was veiled smuttiness—essays to which Unity, incomparable hostess! paid the perfect compliment of a shocked laugh and a blush.

The dinner was well cooked and served, which was not always true when the Truitts dined alone. Mark ate sparingly, the while eying covetously the viands with which he dared not indulge himself. He talked little, neither Higsbee's coarse daring nor the ladies' light gossip of plays, latest books and mutual acquaintances—especially of mutual acquaintances—being fields in which he felt at home. But he was secretly much amused when to Unity's casual mention of Mrs. Henley's call, Mrs. Higsbee replied with the invidious suggestion that Mrs. Henley was a good deal of a snob. And when Unity countered sweetly, "Do you think so? I haven't found her so," he chuckled aloud.

He explained the chuckle. "One mustn't look a gift horse in the mouth." At which crude remark Higsbee guffawed, Mrs. Higsbee tittered maliciously and Unity looked pained. All three had a suspicion of what he knew—that Mrs. Henley's call had been under orders, a gift from Henley.

Later he smoked, slowly and very appreciatively, a mild cigar, which lasted until Higsbee had consumed the second.

"How," Higsbee asked once, untactfully, "did you get Henley to send his wife around?"

Mark resented the question. "I didn't get him to."

"No?" Higsbee looked a bit incredulous. "Well, you certainly do stand well with him. Say, if you get a chance, I wish you'd drop him a hint that we'd be glad to have her call."

"I'm afraid," Mark said coldly, "Henley isn't a man to take that sort of a hint kindly."

"I wish you would," Higsbee urged. "Mrs. H. is crazy for it. And I reckon," he laughed lumberingly, "the best way is to get a woman what she wants. It's comfortablest, anyhow."

"I haven't found it so," Mark lied, adopting Unity's tactics, and promptly changed the subject.

But at last the Higsbees left.

"Thank heaven!" exclaimed Mark. "And to think that that man is one of the best labor handlers in the country!"

"Bourgeois!" Unity gave a shrug and a nod to include the departed guests.

"Spell it."

Unity complied.

"Hmm! I happen to know what it means." He gave her a look of mock admiration. "Unity, you're a wonder. You've got the nerve of a winner. You travel too fast a gait for me. Who could believe that less than six years ago you were back in Bethel, keeping company with tight-fisted Bill Slocum."

But Unity was too well pleased with herself just then to resent this cruel reminder. "Don't you see why I am so anxious to get up above such people?"

"I can see," he said, "I shall have to give in."

She went to him with a little coaxing movement, locking both hands over one of his shoulders and looking up at him. She made a pretty picture.

"Oh, Mark, you make me so happy! Tell me the truth. Aren't you glad I made you come back to the city, and that we've got so far—and that we're going so much farther?"

"You insist upon the truth?" He looked thoughtfully at the reflection. "Well, I suppose I must be. Otherwise you couldn't force me to buy the new house, even though you are a very capable bully—"

"Bully!"

"Exactly. Only," he continued, "I still have a sense of proportion. We are rather absurd, you and I, Unity."

She laughed contentedly. "I know you. It's like you to growl when you're doing a specially nice thing." She held up her lips to him.

"And is this my reward? Magnificent!" But he did not kiss her. He looked curiously at her. Long ago he had been undeceived. He knew that the shallow tenderness and admiration summoned by her sweetness of flesh and perfect grooming were not love. He gently disengaged himself.

"No, thanks! I might acquire the taste. And it's too expensive." He limped away from her and pretended to examine a book that lay on the piano.

She assumed an air of gentle reproach. "Oh, Mark, you don't mean that?"

She did not detect the warning note in his laugh.

"Oh, no! Of course not!"

He returned to her. They kissed.

CHAPTER XIII.

Trophies.

"Meteoric" was the word most often used to describe Truitt's rise. It was a career possible only in his chosen industry and at that time when, no matter how fast plants were multiplied and new devices adopted, the output could not keep pace with the world's insistent demand for steel. It did not differ notably from the careers of several other young superintendents of the Quinby company, save in the one particular, that Henley's preference had deepened into something approximating friendship. On Mark's side the friendship was not open to question; his admiration and liking for Henley were unbounded and not dependent on favors received.

The Truitts had moved into their new house. It was a rambling, red-brick, ivy-grown structure containing eighteen rooms and surrounded by wide neglected grounds, and had been built half a generation before as a wedding present to Timothy Woodhouse III.

For several months Mark secretly congratulated himself on the purchase. Unity had the new house to wander over and admire. She had four servants to direct. Within the allotted time she had returned Mrs. Henley's call, and after an anxious period, Mrs. Henley called again; seeing which, certain other ladies of St. Swithin's who had attained the half-way station where they were very careful upon whom they left cards, called and invited her to share the activities of the guilds. All of which made for happiness, content. Unity found little to criticize, she was engrossed with the game of being a fine lady, which she felt sure was her vocation.

Thus peace abode in the Truitt household and Mark, freed from the irritation of constant bickering, was enabled to give himself wholly to work. He did not realize that during this truce he grew away from his wife more rapidly than when domestic inharmony kept her constantly in his thoughts. During these months he completed his improved process for rolling steel cold, which made some noise in the industrial world.

But there is nothing to which our species so readily adapts itself as to luxury. Content dissolved. Unity began to complain of the heavy labor of ordering so big a house. She resumed her criticisms of Mark, finding fault with his fashion of dress, his manners, his habits and his neglect of her. She was seized with a devouring mania for amusement, filling the house almost every evening with guests and demanding that Mark perform his duties as host. Other evenings she dragged him to the theater, which he detested. When he, rendered peevish by late hours and boredom, suggested that there were matinees, she put on an injured air that was more irritating to him than outright distemper.

"Other men are glad to go out with their wives."

"Other men don't have to work so hard as I do."

"You think of nothing but money."

"Devilish lucky for you," he was indiscreet enough to retort; and she did not emerge from her sulks for several days.

But at last the gnawing canker was disclosed. One evening so stormy that no guests had come, Unity went up to his study where he was making the most of this respite. She talked ramblingly for a while.

"Well, Unity, out with it!" he exclaimed impatiently, after several minutes. "What do you want? As you see, I've got a great deal to do."

"I wonder what is the matter with Mrs. Henley?"

"You ought to know. You see her often enough, don't you?"

"Yes, I see her—at church! And we call. But she never invites us to the things she gives. I wonder why?"

"Probably because she doesn't want us."

Unity looked her protest at this blunt speech. But she did not abandon her project.

"I should think, if you're such good friends with Mr. Henley, you could manage it easily enough."

"Now, you can stop right there. [illegible] invited to other people's houses. That's flat!"

And on that he was firm, though he was made to pay in many ways for his refusal.

But in due time and without management a dinner invitation came; on whose initiative, being a secret neither Henley nor his wife has ever disclosed. Hence we may not speak surely as to the accuracy of certain inferences that Unity drew.

"You see!" she cried, showing the note to Mark. Her manner said plainly, "I alone did it, in spite of the indifference of my husband."

"I see," he responded dryly. "Are you going?"

She treated this question to the contemptuous silence it deserved.

And as Mark stood in the hall and watched her descending the stairs for the start, he was bound to confess that she made a fair—oh, a very fair—picture.

"Why," he wondered, "did the Almighty make so pretty a shell and put nothing in it?" This seems to prove that he had been pretty effectually disillusioned.

However careless he might affect to be, he was himself keenly elated over the event. Often he had asked himself why Henley, so friendly in all else, had never let down the bars before his home. And as he mounted the steps toward the opening door, he could not repress the thrill of exultation.

He had need of the stimulus of this exultation as he and Unity faced that roomful of people who—well, were in longer practice at this sort of thing than was he. He limped, with something less than Unity's aplomb, across the room to meet his hostess, who murmured graciously something quite unintelligible, and Henley, who seemed rather bored. Then he was introduced to his dinner partner, Mrs. Belloc, who mistook his set expression for sternness, and was in the end led by her without mishap to their places near Henley's end of the table.

"Why," He Wondered, "Did the Almighty Make So Pretty a Shell and Put Nothing in It?"

He had no small talk and Mrs. Belloc, after one or two barren essays, allowed him a breathing spell.

Unity was at the very apex of her existence. She was the prettiest woman present, with the loveliness of physical full bloom just before it begins to fade. Her heart's desire had been granted—no longer must she be content with carelessly tossed crumbs and crusts of preferment; she sat, both literally and figuratively, at the table of the city's elect.

The salad was being served when Mrs. Saunders turned to Mark. Mrs. Saunders was one of the insecure ladies who, following Mrs. Henley's example, had called upon Unity. She had just been listening, too long for patience, to her partner's praise of Mrs. Truitt.

"I should think you'd be jealous. Mr. Hare is more than enthusiastic over your wife tonight."

"How very tactless!"

"Oh, no!" said Mrs. Saunders sweetly. "I quite agree with him. I think she's adorable. She reminds me so much of that portrait by—you know, the one that hangs in the Louvre."

"But I don't know. I've never been in the Louvre."

"Oh! I thought everybody had been there."

"You see, Mrs. Saunders, I'm not anybody."

"You would say that, of course. One hears—"

"But it's quite true. To prove it, I've never been east of this city. In fact, the first time I came to this house—not so very long ago—I peeked through the window at the party. Henley caught me." He grinned wryly. "The next day I got a job handling pick and shovel."

"How very romantic!"

"You wouldn't call it romantic, if you'd been in Houlahan's gang."

"And then, of course," Mrs. Saunders beamed, "you set out to win the princess?"

"The princess? Oh! my wife. Yes, I suppose so."

"She has always lived in the city, hasn't she?"

"You'd think so, wouldn't you?" Mark glanced critically at Unity. "But she hasn't. Eight years ago she was living in Bethel. And Bethel, Mrs. Saunders, you'll never find on the map."

"Oh!" Mrs. Saunders said innocently. "I had inferred—but that perfect manner! She must have acquired it at her finishing school?"

Mark chuckled. "Finishing school! I wish you could see Miss Smith's seminary for young ladies. It isn't [illegible]

Mrs. Saunders laughed admiringly. "How very clever! I must tell your wife."

She leaned forward a little toward Unity. "Oh, Mrs. Truitt—"

Unity gave ear.

"I must tell you the clever thing your husband just said. We were talking about your school—Miss Smith's seminary, wasn't it? And I called it a finishing school. And Mr. Truitt said"—Mrs. Saunders' voice carried well—"it isn't even a starter. Awfly good, I think." A faint titter ran down the table. "Ah—where is Miss Smith's seminary, Mrs. Truitt?"

It was Henley himself, strange to relate, who came to Unity's rescue.

"Never, Mrs. Saunders," he remarked, with an edge to his voice that the men recognized, "never uncover the past—here, at least. Only the other day Saunders was telling me he often wakes up in a cold sweat, because he has heard in his dreams, 'Dig in, ye tarrier!'"

The men all laughed reminiscently. Unity and Mrs. Saunders exchanged sweetest smiles. The dinner resumed its even tenor.

"Now," Mark grimly reminded himself, "I've let myself in for it."

But anger was surging. He deemed that, through Unity, he had been made ridiculous.

The evening passed. Mark handed smiling Unity into their carriage. Not a word passed between them during the drive homeward, nor until they were in their house. Mark led the way to the library. The gas jets were not lighted, but the glow from a generous log fire threw their angry faces into sharp relief, as they faced each other.

"Well, Unity, I suppose we're going to have this thing out."

"How could you?" she began stormily. "And on this night of all nights! Didn't you know she was leading you on?"

"Yes—when it was too late."

"The sugary jealous snob! She thinks because she's been abroad and came from Philadelphia she's so aristocratic. And you—you—helped her to shame me before them all."

"How could I know that my wife had been—fibbing about her antecedents?"

"Would you have me admit them to her and have her patronizing me? Haven't you any pride?"

"Haven't you any self-resp—"

But the bitter retort was halted bitten off by the quick tightening of his jaws. When he resumed, he spoke in a slow, distinct, quiet voice that Unity had never heard.

"On second thought, we will not have this out. We couldn't agree as to where the offense lies. No!" He raised a hand, sharply, in protest, as she began hotly to interrupt. "I mean that—quite. I'll remind you that I'm not a culprit boy but a husband—who has at last cut his leading strings. Also that we have had enough scenes in our pretty career together; and more would be too many."

"You take that tone—to me?"

"Even to you."

She stared, too amazed for speech.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"You may take it as a declaration of independence."

"Are you thinking," she gasped, "of—of divorce?"

"Not yet. That may come, though. It depends—" He even smiled.

She tried a weapon that had been effective, her pose of long-suffering injured innocence. But Unity, like all the pampered, was a coward. He was intuition again told her, capable of carrying out the cool menace in his last words. The pose broke down miserably. Forgetting the anger in which she had come to the interview, she went toward him with a frightened whimpering cry.

"Oh, Mark!"

He turned away with a careless lift of his shoulders and a curt, "Good night."

* * * * * * *

Alone in his workroom he sat before the fire, staring despondently into the dancing flames.

"I have been a fool," he said. "I have given up enough. Now I will let go."

As well as he could, he tried to keep that promise to himself.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Test for Mental Deficiency.

A Belgian physician, Doctor Demoor, has been making observations on the capacity of different people for judging which of two weights is the heavier, and has satisfied himself that, while ordinary people, especially children, fail to appreciate a small difference, the reverse is the case with the imbecile, idiotic and half-witted. He prepared two bottles, differing in size, partly filled with a heavy mineral but covered all over with blotting paper and exactly equal in weight. These he handed to 380 children ranging from six to fifteen years of age. Of these 370 judged one bottle to be the heavier. The other ten said the two were the same weight. These ten children were all abnormal or degenerates.

How the Boy Scouts Help.

A story illustrating the helpfulness of Boy Scouts to those on the road is related by a correspondent.

"I had a puncture near Farnborough, Kent, a few days ago," he said, "and was busily mending it when a troop of scouts came along and, to my surprise, the scoutmaster ordered them to halt.

"'Can we help you, sir?' he asked. 'We have motoring experts in the troop.'

"Two very small scouts—who had proficiency badges for 'motor repairing' and 'puncture mending'—stepped forward and saluted. I am sorry, [illegible]

1st

First in Everything

First in Quality
First in Results
First in Purity
First in Economy

and for these reasons Calumet Baking Powder is first in the hearts of the millions of housewives who use it and know it.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois.
Paris Exposition, France, March 1912.

W. L. DOUGLAS

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY WEARING W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

For 31 years W. L. Douglas has guaranteed the value by having his name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory. This protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them. If you could see how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, and the high grade leathers used, you would understand why they look better, fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than other makes for the price. If the W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your locality, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail. W. L. DOUGLAS, 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Don't Read This

unless you are interested in Kodaking. We develop your films absolutely free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Prompt attention to mail orders. We carry a fresh supply of Eastman films. Send us your order for these. We mail them out quickly.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

Eye to Business.

A young suburban doctor whose practice was not very great sat in his study reading away a lazy afternoon in early summer. His manservant appeared at the door.

"Doctor, them boys is stealin' your green peaches again. Shall I chase 'em away?"

The doctor looked thoughtful for a moment, then leveled his eyes at the servant.

"No," he said.—Lippincott's.

Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.

Worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Bell's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves Pain and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

It is well to be able to talk, but there are times when silence is more valuable.

A woman isn't necessarily industrious because she has a busy tongue.

How To Give Quinine To Children

BITTER is the trade-mark name given to all Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. Especially adapted to adults who cannot tolerate Quinine. Does not nauseate nor produce ringing in the head. Try it. If you need Quinine for any purpose, this is a most delightful preparation. The [illegible] to hands of [illegible]

Mrs. Saunders laughed admiringly. "How very clever! I must tell your wife."

She leaned forward a little towards Unity. "Oh, Mrs. Truitt—"

Unity gave ear.

"I must tell you the clever thing your husband just said. We were talking about your school—Miss Smith's seminary, wasn't it? And I called it a finishing school. And Mr. Truitt said"—Mrs. Saunders' voice carried well—"It isn't even a starter. Awfully good, I think." A faint titter ran down the table. "Ah—where is Miss Smith's seminary, Mrs. Truitt?"

It was Henley himself, strange to relate, who came to Unity's rescue.

"Never, Mrs. Saunders," he remarked, with an edge to his voice that the men recognized, "never uncover the past—here, at least. Only the other day Saunders was telling me he often wakes up in a cold sweat, because he has heard in his dreams, 'Dinner, ye tarrier!'"

The men all laughed reminiscently. Unity and Mrs. Saunders exchanged sweetest smiles. The dinner resumed its even tenor.

"Now," Mark grimly reminded himself, "I've let myself in for it."

But anger was surging. He deemed that, through Unity, he had been made ridiculous.

The evening passed. Mark handed a smiling Unity into their carriage. Not a word passed between them during the drive homeward, nor until they were in their house. Mark led the way to the library. The gas jets were not lighted, but the glow from a generous log fire threw their angry faces into sharp relief, as they faced each other.

"Well, Unity, I suppose we're going to have this thing out."

"How could you?" she began stormily. "And on this night of all nights! Didn't you know she was leading you on?"

"Yes—when it was too late."

"The sugary jealous snob! She thinks because she's been abroad and came from Philadelphia she's so aristocratic. And you—you—helped her to shame me before them all."

"How could I know that my wife had been—fibbing about her antecedents?"

"Would you have me admit them to her and have her patronizing me? Haven't you any pride?"

"Haven't you any self-resp—"

But the bitter retort was halted, bitten off by the quick tightening of his jaws. When he resumed, he spoke in a slow, distinct, quiet voice that Unity had never heard.

"On second thought, we will not have this out. We couldn't agree as to where the offense lies. No!" He raised a hand, sharply, in protest, as she began hotly to interrupt. "I mean that—quite. I'll remind you that I'm not a culprit boy but a husband—who has at last cut his leading strings. Also that we have had enough scenes in our pretty career together; one more would be too many."

"You take that tone—to me?"

"Even to you."

She stared, too amazed for anger.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"You may take it as a declaration of independence."

"Are you thinking," she gasped, "of—of divorce?"

"Not yet. That may come, though. It depends—" He even smiled.

She tried a weapon that had been effective, her pose of long-suffering injured innocence. But Unity, like all the pampered, was a coward. He was intuition again told her, capable of carrying out the cool menace in his last words. The pose broke down miserably. Forgetting the anger in which she had come to the interview, she went toward him with a frightened whimpering cry.

"Oh, Mark!"

He turned away with a careless lift of his shoulders and a curt, "Good night."

* * * * * * *

Alone in his workroom he sat before the fire, staring despondently into the dancing flames.

"I have been a fool," he said. "I have given up enough. Now I will let go."

As well as he could, he tried to keep that promise to himself.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Test for Mental Deficiency.

A Belgian physician, Doctor Demoor, has been making observations on the capacity of different people for judging which of two weights is the heavier, and has satisfied himself that, while ordinary people, especially children, fail to appreciate a small difference, the reverse is the case with the imbecile, idiotic and half-witted. He prepared two bottles, differing in size, partly filled with a heavy mineral but covered all over with black paper and exactly equal in weight. These he handed to 380 children from six to fifteen years of age. Of these 370 judged one bottle to be the heavier. The other ten said the two were the same weight. These ten children were all abnormal or degenerates.

How the Boy Scouts Help.

A story illustrating the helpfulness of Boy Scouts to those on the road is related by a correspondent.

"I had a puncture near Farnborough, Kent, a few days ago," he said, "and was busily mending it when a troop of scouts came along and, to my surprise, the scoutmaster ordered them to halt.

"'Can we help you, sir?' he said. 'We have motoring experts in the troop.'

"Two very small scouts—who had proficiency badges for 'motor repairing' and 'puncture mending'—came forward and saluted. I am sure I did not need help."

1st

First in Everything

First in Quality
First in Results
First in Purity
First in Economy

and for these reasons Calumet Baking Powder is first in the hearts of the millions of housewives who use it and know it.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

Save money when you buy cheap or big-can powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Is far superior to sour milk and soda.

W. L. DOUGLAS

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY WEARING W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

For 31 years W. L. Douglas has guaranteed the value by having his name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory. This protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them. If you could see how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made of the high grade leathers used, you would then understand why they look better, fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than other makes for the price. Take no substitute. W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your town, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail.

W. L. DOUGLAS, 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

Don't Read This

Unless you are interested in Kodaking. We develop your films absolutely free. Prints from 2c to 5c each. Prompt attention to mail orders. We carry a fresh supply of Eastman films. Send us your order for these. We mail them out quickly.

GRIFFITH & SCHLEGEL
BIRMINGHAM ALABAMA

Eye to Business.

A young suburban doctor whose office was not very great sat in his study reading away a lazy afternoon early summer. His manservant appeared at the door.

"Doctor, them boys is stealin' your peaches again. Shall I chase them away?"

The doctor looked thoughtful for a moment, then leveled his eyes at the servant.

"No," he said.—Lippincott's.

Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.

Worst cases, no matter of how long standing, cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. Bell's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

It is well to be able to talk, but there are times when silence is more valuable.

A woman isn't necessarily industrious because she has a busy tongue.

To Give Quinine To Children

SOLIQUINE is the trade-mark name given to the Soluble Quinine. It is a Tasteless Syrup, pleasant to take and does not disturb the stomach. Children take it and never know it is Quinine. It is specially adapted to adults who cannot take ordinary Quinine. Does not nauseate nor cause nervousness nor ringing in the head. Try it next time you need Quinine for any purpose. Ask for 8-ounce special bottle. SOLIQUINE is known by druggists everywhere.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Perry county farmers will not sell cotton at 7 cents.

Dale farmers are holding their cotton on the farms.

Three illicit stills have been raided in Barbour county.

Covington county is going to put $800 on its roads.

There are 15,500 Confederate pensioners in Alabama.

Deputy marshals broke up a still at Delta in Clay County.

Dr. L. L. Starkey will build a flour mill in Greene county.

Many towns are getting a fair share of the road tax money.

Thirteen Confederate pensions are paid in Cleburne county.

The buy-a-bale movement continues to spread throughout the State.

Contract has been let for the state road from Lafayette to Oakbowery.

The North Alabama fair opened at Decatur and will continue all the week.

Normal school at Livingston opened with a better attendance than ever before.

Fire, believed of incendiary origin, destroyed $6000 worth of property at Alabama City.

Out of 14 applications for Confederate pensions from Franklin county only four were successful.

It is about as important to hold the cotton seed as the cotton. In some places only $12 a ton is offered.

In Sumter there are 4502 farm homes and of these 482 are occupied by the owners and free of mortgage. Renters occupy 3703 farm homes.

There are 4532 farm homes in Tallapoosa and 1168 of these are owned by the people who live in them and have no mortgage. Only 589 farm homes are mortgaged.

Pursuant to a call of the president of the state division, W. H. Seymour, several hundred delegates attended the state convention at Montgomery Sept. 22 of the Southern Cotton Association. The present low price of cotton and methods tending to relieve the farmer were discussed at length.

Gen. Bibb Graves, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, designated the campaign committee of the party nominees for state and congressional offices in the November election. W. D. Nesbitt of Birmingham was named chairman of the committee, with Col. R. A. Mitchell of Etowah and Judge J. C. Kumpe of Lawrence, members of the committee from the state-at-large. The other members of the committee include one from each congressional district.

On the allegation that congress, through the institution of the parcel post, has changed the terms of the existing mail contract without consent of the plaintiff, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad has brought action to recover $184,204.09 from the government for carrying mails in Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee, Georgia and other states through which it operates. The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis brought similar action for $46,739.24.

Alex E. Walker, state superintendent of banks, has addressed telegrams to all the state banks asking for information about the amount of money they are lending on cotton and on what terms. The telegram were sent out by the state bank superintendents following a request for such information from John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency. The statistics which Superintendent Walker will collect will be used by the government in attempting to arrive at a solution of the cotton problem.

Farmers of Alabama have responded readily to the request that they plant certain portions of their farms in wheat this winter and the prospects are bright that 50,000 bushels required to supply a new flour mill in Montgomery will be raised, is declared in the weekly bulletin of the State Department of Agriculture issued by Captain Reuben F. Kolb, Commissioner. During the past week the department has issued two separate bulletins on wheat raising and has distributed these among the farmers of the State. The subject of growing wheat is discussed in detail and much valuable information is contained in the booklets.

Dale county will plant a large acreage of oats.

Several schools in the State have decided to teach on Saturdays and take a holiday on Monday.

The Alabama Good Roads Association is making an effort to secure the attendance of all the newly elected members of the coming negislature at its eighteenth annual session, which begins in Montgomery October 21st and closes the 23rd. An urgent invitation has been sent to all these members. It is expected many will attend.

Ozark estimates larger cotton receipts this year than last.

Of Marion county's 2766 farm homes 1313 the occupied by the owners and have no mortgages, but 464 other farm homes are mortgaged.

E. P. Lakeman of Red Bay, Franklin county, has written to Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner of agriculture, with a view to starting a movement whereby the government may add to the war revenue measures a section imposing a tax of 5 cents a pound on all cotton sold for less than 10 cents a pound.

Keep Down Uric Acid

Uric acid is a poison formed inside our bodies in digesting certain foods, especially meat, and by the burning up of nerve and muscle cells during exertion.

Uric acid is harmless as long as the kidneys filter it promptly from the blood, but people who overdo and overeat, make uric acid so fast that it overloads the blood, weakens the kidneys, and attacks the nerves, causing rheumatic pains. It forms gravel, hardens the arteries and brings on dropsy or Bright's disease.

By restoring the kidneys to normal activity Doan's Kidney Pills help to overcome excess uric acid.

An Alabama Case

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Mrs. J. W. Baxter, 320 Church St., Huntsville, Ala., says: "Malaria fever left my kidneys weak. My back ached terribly and I was tired all the time. I suffered from headaches and dizzy spells and could hardly turn over in bed. After the doctor failed, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they fixed me up in good shape."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Inventor of the Airbrake.

Who really invented the airbrake? Certainly the automatic airbrake, the one that has proved practicable and of permanent value in modern railroading, was the product of the late George Westinghouse's ingenuity. His patent for the automatic brake was taken out in 1872, superseding the non-automatic or "straight" Westinghouse airbrake patented in 1869, and later the Westinghouse vacuum brake was invented. But, as in the case of most other inventions, there are several claimants for originality in this field. Thus Mme. M. Drouanet, daughter of M. Debruges of Paris, claims the distinction of priority for her father. The New York Times has a letter from State Senator William P. Fiero of White Plains containing a patent office declaration by his grandfather, Henry Miller, of a "new and useful improvement in the application of steam and compressed air to the purpose of operating railroad brakes," recorded January 2, 1855. Mr. Miller was doubtless a pioneer in the progress of airbrake invention.

REMARKABLE LETTER FROM A WELL KNOWN WASHINGTON DRUGGIST.

In reference to Elixir Babek the great remedy for chills and fever and all malarial diseases.

"Within the last five months I have sold 3,600 bottles of Elixir Babek, for Malaria, Chills and Fever. Our customers speak very well of it. Henry Evans, 922 F St., N. W., Washington, D. C."

Elixir Babek 50 cents all druggists, or by Parcels Post, prepaid, from Kloczewski & Co., Washington, D. C.

Rays of Humor.

From underneath the war cloud little flashes of humor escape now and again.

Two Irish sergeants, brought wounded to Paris, are reported as saying that they did not know exactly where the battle was, but they had just been "fighting at Copenhagen." They probably meant Compeigne, but it made no difference in their willingness to fight.

The Paris Figaro pictures as a common sight on the streets two men reading their respective newspapers through to the end, and then exchanging a Figaro for a Matin, and absorbingly rereading in the second newspaper the identical official announcement which they had read in the first.

Life retains its shades of fun even in the darkest shadow of trouble.

Too Ambiguous.

Thornton—When Willie Wimpus wanted a new motor car he thought he would throw out a broad hint to his father.

Rosemary—Did the scheme work?

Thornton—Not exactly. He told the old man he would like something he could start and stop, and his father bought him a dollar watch.

No. SIX-SIXTY-SIX

This is a prescription prepared especially for Malaria or Chills and Fever. Five or six doses will break any case, and if taken then as a tonic the fever will not return. 25c.—Adv.

A Word From the Weary.

"You seem inclined to favor criticisms of the railroads."

"Yes," replied the weary statesman; "I'm tired of having them criticize my motives. Let 'em criticize somebody's locomotives."

Better an ounce of did than a pound of going to do.

EAS-IT

A PRESCRIPTION at last discovered that will Positively relieve the severest Headache in fifteen to thirty minutes. Sold on a positive Guarantee. Money back if your want it. Absolutely No Risk. Contains No Opiate. Ask your druggist. Adv.

He's Too Good.

Dolly—At last I have met my ideal! Kind hearted, modest, patient, self-denying! But, alas, married!

Daisy—Don't worry! No woman will live long with such a freak! You'll get a chance at him.

Shame on Him.

"What is your friend so elated about?"

"Seems his wife is marooned in Europe."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Accounting for It.

"That girl has a swelled head."

"That's only because she wears such big 'hats.'"

PARADISE FOR THE ARTIST

Devotees of the Brush Are Accorded Accommodations Without Price at Inn at Capri.

Capri, beautiful in itself as a winter resort, offers an irresistible invitation to artists, since it has an inn where anyone, by painting a picture on the wall can get free board.

To the lovely island of Capri, with its perennial summer, its blue grotto, and its lemon groves, came, some fifty years ago, a ruined artist. He opened an inn, and died rich. In his will, leaving the inn to his heirs, he made these conditions:

"The charge per day, two bottles of red Capri wine included, is never to be more than six francs.

"If any artist is too poor to pay he shall paint a picture upon some wall-space, receiving all the accommodation accorded to those paying the highest price.

"If any German artist shall come to the inn he shall be accommodated, and shall receive the amount of his fare to Germany upon his promising never to return to Italy."

The inn is conducted today on these conditions. Its walls are covered with paintings. Now and then a German gets his fare home.

Correct.

"Love levels all things," quoted the sage.

"Yes, everything but heads," corrected the fool.

More than one hundred thousand pedestrians and twenty thousand vehicles pass over the London bridge daily.

DESCRIPTION WAS ALL RIGHT

Not Just What Jones Was Looking for, But Brown Surely Had Told the Truth.

As Brown landed on the platform he ran full butt into Jones.

"Where bound, Jones, and why such speed?" queried Brown.

"Just off to Seashell-on-the-Mud, and am anxious to get some fruit before I start."

"Fruit? Just the thing! Now she's just off; jump in that carriage. I left a fine pear in the corner."

Jones got in and started searching around.

"My friend said he left a fine pear in the corner," explained Jones, as an old lady sniffed angrily at the way he searched round her.

"Guess he meant that corner, my man," she snapped.

Jones looked and saw a young couple blushing furiously.

Social Welfare.

First Barroom Politician—Say, Bill, wot's this bloomin' mortuarium they be tarkin' so much about?

Second Politician—Well, ye see, it's like this. You don't pay nothin' to nobody and the government pays it for ye.

First Politician—Well, that sounds a bit of all right, don't it.—London Punch.

Resting.

Patience—Did you see Peggy down at the beach?

Patrice—Oh, yes.

"What was she doing? Flirting, as usual?"

"No, she said she went down there for a rest."

CARE FOR YOUR HAIR

With

CUTICURA SOAP

And Cuticura Ointment. They cleanse the scalp, remove dandruff, arrest falling hair and promote hair health.

Samples Free by Mail

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 9B, Boston.

Physicians Recommend Castoria

CASTORIA has met with pronounced favor on the part of physicians, pharmaceutical societies and medical authorities. It is used by physicians with results most gratifying. The extended use of Castoria is unquestionably the result of three facts: First—The indisputable evidence that it is harmless: Second—That it not only allays stomach pains and quiets the nerves, but assimilates the food: Third—It is an agreeable and perfect substitute for Castor Oil. It is absolutely safe. It does not contain any Opium, Morphine, or other narcotic and does not stupefy. It is unlike Soothing Syrups, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, etc. This is a good deal for a Medical Journal to say. Our duty, however, is to expose danger and record the means of advancing health. The day for poisoning innocent children through greed or ignorance ought to end. To our knowledge, Castoria is a remedy which produces composure and health, by regulating the system—not by stupefying it—and our readers are entitled to the information.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. B. Halstead Scott, of Chicago, Ills., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria often for infants during my practice, and find it very satisfactory."

Dr. William Belmont, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "Your Castoria stands first in its class. In my thirty years of practice I can say I never have found anything that so filled the place."

Dr. J. H. Taft, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria and found it an excellent remedy in my household and private practice for many years. The formula is excellent."

Dr. R. J. Hamlen, of Detroit, Mich., says: "I prescribe your Castoria extensively, as I have never found anything to equal it for children's troubles. I am aware that there are imitations in the field, but I always see that my patients get Fletcher's."

Dr. Wm. J McCrann, of Omaha, Neb., says: "As the father of thirteen children I certainly know something about your great medicine, and aside from my own family experience I have in my years of practice found Castoria a popular and efficient remedy in almost every home."

Dr. J. R. Clausen, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "The name that your Castoria has made for itself in the tens of thousands of homes blessed by the presence of children, scarcely needs to be supplemented by the endorsement of the medical profession, but I, for one, most heartily endorse it and believe it an excellent remedy."

Dr. R. M. Ward, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Physicians generally do not prescribe proprietary preparations, but in the case of Castoria my experience, like that of many other physicians, has taught me to make an exception. I prescribe your Castoria in my practice because I have found it to be a thoroughly reliable remedy for children's complaints. Any physician who has raised a family, as I have, will join me in heartiest recommendation of Castoria."

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Better Name.

The dog was a curious creature with a short body and long dangling ears. The newsboy owner was proud, however, as he held it in leash.

"What kindo purp is it?" asked an acquaintance.

"Dachsunt," replied the newsie.

"Dash hound?"

"That's what I said."

"Dash nothing," the other contemptuously retorted, "it looks more like a hyphen."—Youngstown Telegram.

Queer Talk.

"So poor old Bill has gone under."

"Yes, they say his business is going up."

The Time-Tested Tonic for MALARIA Chills & Fever Is

Wintersmith's TONIC

50 YEARS IN USE

PILES Try the drugless home treatment; no ointment, no drugs; something new. F. C. ALLEN, 1809 Locust, Kansas City, Mo.

Acre Farm Land and share common stock free with every $100 purchase. 8% preferred stock. Write FERRIGO, Ann Arbor, New Orleans.

AGENTS—Either sex: household specialties that really sell; no experiment; guarantee proposition; home territory. Ball Co., Box 11, Sta. A, Detroit, Mich.

Pettits Eye Salve TONIC FOR EYES

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent free. Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Specialist, Dr. H. H. Green Sons, Box O, Atlanta, Ga.

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

Tax Notice!

Collector's and Assessor's Only Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes for Chilton County for the year 1914, and assessing the taxes for the year 1915: Hours 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jemison,	Beat 2	October	1	1914.
Thorsby	" 9	"	2	"
Cooper,	" 10	"	3	"
Maplesville,	" 7	"	5	"
Shoults,	" 7	"	6	"
Stanton,	" 8	"	7	"
Riderville,	" 8	"	8	"
Pletcher,	" 15	"	9	"
Kincheon,	" 6	"	10	"
Minooka,	" 13	"	12	"
Concord,	" 13	"	13	"
Mars Hill,	" 2	"	14	"
Macedonia,	" 14	"	15	"
Benson,	" 3	"	16	"
Culp School House	" 15	"	17	"
Robinson's Store	" 12	"	19	"
Mineral Springs,	" 12	"	20	"
Mullins Academy	" 1	"	21	"
Cane Creek	" 11	"	22	"
Providence	" 16	"	23	"
Clanton, Beat 4, Oct. 24 to 31,		Nov. 7 to 14		"
Mountain Creek	Beat 5	Nov.	3	"
Verbena,	" 5	"	4	"
Evergreen	" 10	"	5	"
Enterprise	" 6	"	6	"

Take notice that under the present law we only make one round, and you are requested to meet us in the Beat in which you live. If for any reason you are unable to meet us in your own Beat, you will please meet us at Clanton on the days given there.

After the completion of the above round, and beginning on November 16, 1914, all assessments become delinquent, and after December 31, 1914, all taxes become delinquent. Therefore, if you wish to avoid payment of a 50c fee, you will please assess before Nov. 16, and pay before Dec. 31, 1914.

J. N. DENNIS, Tax Assessor. J. D. COLLINS, Tax Collector.

When You Come To Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you don't want to forget those little toilet and fancy articles your wife said bring back with you.

Also you want to keep in mind that the proper place to get them is at our store.

Not only fancy toilet articels, but also anything else that is usually kept in a first-class Drug Store. Patent Medicines.

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft drinks at the front, ice cream, etc. COME to see us.

Langston Drug Co.,
Jemison, Ala.

Prepare For SYRUP MAKING

We can supply you with Syrup Kegs, Barrels and Cans, and copper for Syrup Pans.

Send Us Your Mail Orders

You will need Brick, Lime and Cement for foundations and other purposes, all of which you can get at our place.

Clanton Hardware Co.
Succcessors to
Gamble Hardware Co.

MR. BONE WEDS MISS CARRIE Z. MULLINS

An incident of last Sunday afternoon, which carries with it a wide interest, and equally as much surprise, was the marriage of Prof. Joseph F. Bone and Miss Carrie Z. Mullins.

The ceremony was a quiet one, being attended only by the immediate friends of the popular couple. They left on the same afternoon for Montgomery where they will spend this week, after which they will make their home at New Decatur, where Mr. Bone will teach for the next year.

Both parties to the wedding are well known here, having been in past very successful teachers in this county. Many are their friends who will learn of their marriage with interest, and join in wishing them a happy life.

Take One Pain Pill, then— Take it Easy.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

will help you, as they have helped others.

Good for all kinds of pain. Used to relieve Neuralgia, Headache, Nervousness, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Kidney Pains, Lumbago, Locomotor Ataxia, Backache, Stomachache, Carsickness, Irritability and for pain in any part of the body.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills when troubled with headache, and find that one pill infallibly effects relief in a very short time. I am considerably affected with neuralgia in the head at times, and find the Anti-Pain Pills of much benefit. The Dr. Miles' Remedies are beyond comparison and I recommend them to all my friends."
GEORGE COLGATE,
219 Oakland St., San Antonio, Tex.

At all druggists. 25 doses 25c.
MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Keep a Thankful Heart.

The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find in every hour some heavenly blessings; only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Daily Thought.

Two things must be rooted out o man: conceit and distrust.—Epictetus

FOR SALE—One good horse perfectly gentle, which I will sell very reasonable.
Howare L Foshee
9-3-4t Thorsby Ala.

FOR SALE—3 milk cows 2 giving milk one due to freshen December 8 next 4 Bred Jersy heiffers, 2 Jersey bulls, one 17 months old, one 6 months old sire and grand sire Registered.
This September 5th, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

Shower For Miss Mullins

Mrs. J. Q. Wade entertained at a shower in honor of Miss Myrtle Mullins last Friday afternoon. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion in red and green.

The guests were entertained with a drawing contest, each one being required to draw a picture of some person well known to the company.

After the prizes were awarded little Miss Elizabeth Duncan entered. She was dressed as a bride in white lace and flowing veil, carrying bride's roses, and drawing after her a small wagon in which was a basket containing about seventy-five beautifully embroidered pieces of linen.

A delicious salad course was served.

Miss Mullins was beautiful in a white crepe de chine gown. Miss Maud Mullins wore pink hand embroidered crepe de chine. Mrs. Wade was charming in a dress of soft white material.

DON'T TAKE WRONG MEDICINE

If your liver gets lazy you need a liver tonic, not merely a laxative for the bowels. Many people take a simple laxative when the liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at at home and lose a day from your work.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tone. Dodson's Liver Tone is all that is claimed for it, because the druggists who sell it agree to hand back the money with a smile, to any person not satisfied with the relief Dodson's gives.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a vegetable liquid with a very pleusant taste and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation biliousness, sour stomach and torpid liver.

Alred Drug Company give it their personal guarantee. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone is only 50 cents. For children or grown people it is the ideal medicine. Try it on the guarantee.

Hint for Coming Maternity

In a little book designed for expectant mothers more complete instruction is given in the use of "Mother's Friend." This is an external embrocation applied to the abdominal muscles for the purpose of reducing the strain on ligaments, cords and tendons.

In thus bringing relief and avoiding pain great good is accomplished. It serves to ease the mind, indirectly has a most beneficial effect upon the nervous system and thousands of women have delightedly told how they were free of nausea, had no morning sickness and went through the ordeal with most remarkable success. "Mother's Friend" has been growing in popular favor for more than forty years. In almost every community are grandmothers who used it themselves, their daughters have used it and they certainly must know what a blessing it is when they recommend it so warmly. Strictly an external application it has no other effect than to ease the muscles, cords, tendons and ligaments involved hence is perfectly safe to use by all women. It is used very successfully to prevent caking of breasts.

"Mother's Friend" is prepared in the laboratory of Bradfield Regulator Co., 404 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

SUPPOSE YOU!

When you want a tender steak, a superb roast or some delicious chops or chicken QUICK come here and your dinner wont be late. Our quality is of the highest standard—All our meats are of pure prime excellence.

Prices as low as the markets permit.

B. McKEE Meat Market.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a d of fundamental principles d sic to the Constitution itself rowed from the English bill of of 1689. When the Constitutio United States was framed a mitted to the people it did n a bill of rights and it was s criticized on this account t friends promised to incorporat such a declaration, and the amendments to the Cons made after the main instruc adopted, were in fulfillment promise. All the State Cons now have bills of rights, p identical with one another.

Daily Thought.

"The best and greatest thi or woman is capable of doi or her sphere."—Wendell Phi

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch D
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOL
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bld
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DE
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bld
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M
Surgery and Diseases
Women and Chil
Given Special Att
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30
Smith Building, - Clan

DR. J. P. CRUPTON,
Office, Wilson Bld
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPK
PHYSICIAN & SURG
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2
Special attention given the Ear, Nose and Thro
Office 7th Street, CLAN

I want Mastic Paint

EXPERIENCE has taught the man who is "paintwise" that it pays best to use MASTIC PAINT. It lasts longer, looks better and covers more surface than Keg Lead and Oil hand mixed paint or ordinary ready-mixed paint. You will save money and disappointment when using

MASTIC PAINT
"The Kind That Lasts"

BEHIND every gallon of this old reliable paint is an iron-clad guarantee. It means that MASTIC PAINT must give satisfaction. Every gallon undergoes the most rigid tests before it is placed on sale. Be sure to specify MASTIC PAINT—it means utmost paint satisfaction.

FREE Illustrated booklet, "Homes and How to Paint Them," also color card of MASTIC PAINT or any other Pee Gee Finish. Ask us or write direct to PEASLEE-GAULBERT CO., Incorporated, Louisville, Ky.

For Sale By
Upchurch Drug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

EQUAL JUSTICE

Selfishness actuates many of the arguments made on the political stump and pleas made before juries. Equa Justice to all parties concerned is lost sight of.

The cradle days of the American Republic we marked by hardship and privation on the battle fie Our fathers were determined that they would enjo equal rights with the mother country.

Emerging victorious they adopted a Constitutio which provided and guaranteed equal justice to a That document is a masterpiece of calmness, of state manship, of high ideals.

How many of our people have read that document How many of us have memorized, have pondered thinking out the words which constitute the ve foundation of our national life?

The L. & N. writes of these things because we wa equal justice for the corporation and the citizen alike no more, no less. We realize the freedom of politic speech. We appreciate the educational value of discu sion. We hold in reverence the judicial part of our go ernment. We realize that law and order are essenti to national prosperity.

We ask only that a mutual understanding exist. That is why we are writing to you frankly, sincerely.

If the citizen would resent the filing of claims which are without merit, the making of attacks that are with out foundation, the unjust treatment of corporations on the stump and before juries, a better day would dawn for American peace and prosperity.

The policy of the L. & N. is that no one shall be imposed upon. We devote equal effort in safeguarding the interest of the general public and the interest of our property, to the end that equal justice may be meted out to all.

It is only through equal justice that mutual prosperity can exist.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

THE

THE UNION 11th Y

GIVEN BY OUR Y COMMISSIONER

Union-Banner:--Please
a short space in your answer some questions
been asked me in ree present condition of
ty.
ay, in the best of my
, in regard to the pres-ncial condition of the hat with what the coun-owes and what it has d for which will be due ry 15th, 1915, is about or $22,000.00; and the ion of letting another for about $25,000.00, to in one, two and three m now, is being carried is is to finish grading
ingham and Montgomway north of Clanton.
d will cost the county 37,000.00 to be graded
d with wooden bridges;
he course of two or three his road will have to be d and rolled to satisfy the ts of Birmingham and ry, which will cost the about $20,000.00. As he wood bridges begin way steel and concrete will be demanded, which approximately $30,000
All this will make the t, as a whole, $75,000 or

I am opposed to putting money on one or two the county. I believe ing the man at the foot adder as well as at the he proposed highway, as is for the people of Montand Birmingham, as them came before our and told us that if we build the road the people
ose towns would donate $10,000 toward it, (but is the donation?)
n we build roads by warr bonds we send large money in the way of in to New York and other ities, and have to employ ontractors to do the work
dle the warrants. Why this work to our farm-
keep this contract mon-ome where it belongs, as ners have to make it.
not want anyone to think do not advocate good but I do disapprove the
ey are going at it.
ice that the Press likes to y name the honor of help-form the present debt system that is about to take effect in to say that I honor or cre

lieve in doing
ly that the state of Alab
ing directly.
says that we without the
To issue i warrants is t
the people a doing things realize that of the people
of the people
Montgomery
treating all alike as nea
ing no spec
This tim building roa advocated b this county contractors in you or y
If you are vote the which will
the people,
Thanking
in advance.
Bull Moose

Mrs. sell

Mrs. M venerable age, and Smith, die near Clant
She was Archibald
to this cou 1902, and 1912. Sin husband with the
As a b
the church
ed lady ha
early year
Her memi church i place she her childh
She w was prec
both her blessed b whom ar Funera
mains o
were con
Armstron
when all good wo
the dust,
her life r
gave it.

BUR

On last o'clock, and Miss happily
the bride
J. H. And lera. Th
ducted b
Monteva

To th
O

You a Thorsby
urday O purpose and elec
the Chil
Oct. 30, renial P tend thi have to with us

r New Location

Headley Building across railroad from the Post Office
far the most convenient in town to get a Haircut or
e.
then too, you are always
in of keen razors, clean tow-
and careful attention.
have heard of the excellenc service—now come have proven to you by an indi-deal.
y job we do is done with a personal interest and to make it the best.

nford,
Wagoner
and Glass

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 25

GIVEN BY OUR COMMISSIONER

Union-Banner:--Please short space in your swer some questions been asked me in re- present condition of

, in the best of my in regard to the pres- cial condition of the with what the coun- ves and what it has for which will be due 15th, 1915, is about r $22,000.00; and the of letting another r about $25,000.00, to one, two and three now, is being carried is to finish grading gham and Montgom- y north of Clanton. will cost the county 000.00 to be graded ith wooden bridges; ourse of two or three ad will have to be rolled to satisfy the s of Birmingham and , which will cost the out $20,000.00. As wood bridges begin steel and concrete ll be demanded, which approximately $30,000 ll this will make the as a whole, $75,000 or

I am opposed to putting money on one or two the county. I believe ing the man at the foot ladder as well as at the The proposed highway, as t, is for the people of Mont- y and Birmingham, as of them came before our and told us that if we build the road the people hose towns would donate $10,000 toward it, (but is the donation?)

we build roads by war- r bonds we send large money in the way of in to New York and other ies, and have to employ ractors to do the work le the warrants. Why his work to our farm- ep this contract mon- e where it belongs, as rs have to make it.

t want anyone to think o not advocate good t I do disapprove the are going at it.

e that the Press likes to name the honor of help- form the present debt system that is about to take effect in this county. I wish to say that I do not deserve this honor or credit, as I do not believe in doing anything indirectly that the Constitution of the state of Alabama forbids us doing directly. The constitution says that we cannot issue bonds without the vote of the people. To issue interest-bearing time warrants is taking the voice of the people away from them, and doing things whether or not. I realize that I am only a servant of the people of this county (not of the people of Birmingham and Montgomery) and I believe in treating all parts of the county alike as near as possible, showing no special favors to any.

This time warrant plan for building roads is being strongly advocated by the democrats of this county and some hungry contractors that have no interest in you or your county.

If you are a free people lets vote the Progressive ticket which will listen to the voice of the people, and be free indeed.

Thanking you for this space in advance, I am yours for the Bull Moose ticket.

W. T. Herrod.

Mrs. Mary Russell Payton Died

Mrs. Mary Russell Payton, a venerable lady of 78 years of age, and mother of Mrs. J. P. Smith, died at the latters home near Clanton on Sept. 10th, 1914.

She was the wife of the late Archibald Payton, who moved to this county with his family in 1902, and died at Maplesville in 1912. Since the death of her husband she had been living with the family of Mr. Smith.

As a believer and worker in the church of Christ, the deceased lady had been active since the early years of her womanhood. Her membership was at Salem church in Coosa county, the place she had cherished from her childhood days.

She was twice married, and was preceded to the grave by both her husbands. Her life was blessed by ten children, six of whom are living.

Funeral services over the remains of her mortal existence were conducted, by Rev. W. J. Armstrong, at Mulbarry church when all that was earthly of this good woman was given back to the dust, and the noble spirit of her life returned to the God who gave it.

BURNETT-ANDERSON

On last Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Mr. Thomas Burnett and Miss Alma Anderson were happily married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Anderson near South Calera. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. E. A. Scott of Montevallo.

To the Singers Of the County

You are requested to meet at Thorsby Baptist church on Saturday Oct. 3, at 1:30 p.m. for the purpose of organizing a choir, and electing a director to sing at the Chilton county Fair, Friday, Oct. 30, 1914. Book used "Perrenial Praise." Don't fail to attend this meeting, as you will have to organize and rehearse with us if you sing in the choir.

James Franklin,
Pres. Co. [illegible]

AN APPEAL FOR THE RULE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor Union-Banner:—I have decided that I would drop you a few words; if you have space to print them, all right.

I want to ask what has the democratic party done for the dear people since they took control of this government? It appears to me that this country is in the worst condition that it has ever been in before, and yet a number of democrats say they can see nothing going wrong. When any charge is brought up against the democratic party they never ask or investigate for any broof, but tell the accuser to clear himself. It the democrats were to get the people to where they could not get one cent of money (and we are now nearly to that point,) they would still brag on their party. They brag as much over a failure as over a success, for when the bosses in the little towns tell the country democrats to throw up their hats and hollow, up she goes and out comes a yell. The democrats say that their party to them is the antidote of despair, the elixer of hope, the tonic of depression, the cure of suicide.

I almost feel like crying to hear some democrats boosting the democratic party at a time like this; some of them can be heard saying that it is all right to get the county in debt as far as pleasure demands. Some of the same men said four years ago that Reynolds and Co. made the taxes too high. Now the taxes have been doubled, and because the democrats are in the lead for bonds, road warrants, and other means of throwing the county in debt, the same fellows say it is all right. Put it to us; we will grin and endure it to the end, if you town fellows say for us to.

It has been my opinion for some time that the democrats were controlled entirely by towns and now I am convinced that it is a fact, and I do not believe they will let a country fellow vote who will not vote to suit them. If they threaten to put one of their own men out of a job if he does not vote in their primary as they suggest, what would they do for a Progressive?

I can hardly understand how those men who own the Clanton Press can conduct such discussion of a campaign as they now are, Just stop for a minute and think who is running it for them. Have they lost all self respect? Have they no principal? Do they stand for anything? I cannot understand why they are so much opposed to the farmers, for, it I know who they are, the farmers support them and they have made their money off them and surely expect to make some more in the same manner. Now Mr. Press, I wish you would publish the names of the parties that own and control the Press. I think the people should know, and Mr. J. M. Mims hit the nail on the head when he said we ought to trade with our men who are ready to stand up and fight for us and our liberties. If the crowd that controls the democratic party were to get in full control of the county government, I ask in the name of common sense, what would become of this county? Where would our taxes go to? I heard one of the commissioners say that Judge Deason wanted to issue enough time warrants to build a high way through the county west, and north and south, which I am sure would take more than 100,000 dollars. My, my! What are we coming to? The Constitution gives the people the right to vote on bonds before they can be issued, and right here in our county we have democrats that would deprive the people of their Constitutional rights by issuing time warrants, which anybody knows are worse than bonds. I would like to know how the warrants can ever be paid, if our county has gotten in debt fifteen or twenty thousand dollars without building any permanent roads. Does the issuance of warrants mean that all the rest of the roads will have to go without work? I would like for Messrs Herrod, Shaw or Robinson, or all of them to make a statement of the condition of the county affairs; tell us how much in debt the county is; how much they expect to contract on the roads to be paid in the future. Tell us how you expect to get the money to pay them with. I think the people have a right to know of the workings of the county. It seems that just a few are keeping everything a secret from the people. Do you expect to raise our taxes after the election is over? I cannot for my life see how the county will pay for building the highway unless they raise our taxes. They have been nearly doubled within the last three years, and the Lord knows we are taxed to death now. Where the farmers are going to get the money to pay their taxes this fall is a severe problem now before them and if they are to be raised, it will be farewell; their homes will have to be taken, and all they can hope for is that in two years the Progressives will get in power and then they can redeem it.

Has it come to the place that the farmers of this county have no voice in the affairs of the county? I am sure that if this question of issuing warrants were left to the people, they would vote against it five to one.

Have the democrats come to the conclusion that this is their last time at the public trough, and that they are going to make well of it? Are they going to bankrupt the county in spite of the protests of four-fifths of the people? Why not give the people a chance to vote on the question? The law provides it.

I hope to see the full statement of the county affairs next week. I am sure we are entitled to it; and if we cannot stop the extravagance before, we will meet you at the polls in November.

Respectfully,
One for the rule of the people.

Burglary at Thorsby

The store of Parnell & Freeman at Thorsby was entered by burglars Monday night. The cash drawer was broken open, and robbed of $12 in money. They took some shoes and other merchandise, the value of which has not yet been determined.

The robbers entered the store by way of a rear window, and carried their goods out at the back door. As yet there is no clue toward identifying the perpetrators of the act.

As my work calls me away, I will close this season with my horse at Thorsby. He will be at Mars Hill Friday, Sept. 25, and every nine days thereafter, and will be also back here for going season.

[illegible]

COUNTY BOARD OF REGISTRARS

Register Chancy 2 April 2

The Board of Registrars of Chilton county will be in session at the court house in Clanton on Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31, for the purpose of registering voters for the general election of November 3rd. All men who have become 21 years of age since October 1, 1913 are entitled to register and have their names placed on the list of qualified voters for Chilton county.

Mr. Thomas as A Representative

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of this county, in regard to my candidacy for the office of Representative. I wish to say a few words in regard to that great injustice that has been done to the common schools of this state, at the hands of the democratic party. Should I be elected to represent Chilton county in the next Legislature, I will use every effort in my power to increase the appropriation to the rural schools of this state.

The children atending the rural schools are now receiving $2.84 each per year, while the students of the State University are receiving $369.00 each. I feel that this is a great wrong, and that children in the rural schools should receive a much larger amount than they are now getting, and I will do all in my power to secure a much larger appropriatian for the rural schools. I feel that the peoples money has been spent uselessly on high salaried officers, and in other ways that did not benefit the common people of the state, and I will do all in my power, if elected, toward economizing the expense of the state, when same can be done without injury to the common good of the people.

I feel that the present administration has been extremely wasteful in the affairs of this state, and that the wishes of the people have been entirely ignored. I feel that something should be done to stop the waste of the people's money on useless officers and appropriations, which does not benefit the masses of the people. Some of the appropriations that have been made by the democratic administration have been for the classes of the people instead of the masses; and most of the offices that have been created have been at the suggestion of the Machine Democrats of the state, to pay political debts. I feel that all such affairs should be abolished and the money left in the treasury should be appropriated to the common schools of the state.

I am against a bond issue and time warrants. I believe that before the county is put in debt it should be submitted to a vote of the people, and see whether they desire the debt or not. I believe that the voice of the people is supreme, and should be heard above three or four men.

In conclusion, I wish to say again that I will do all in my power to bring about better appropriations for the common schools, and get some laws passed looking toward the common people of this county and state.

W. A. Thomas.

DELEGATES TO GOOD ROADS ASSOCIATION

Following are the names of the delegates from Chilton county to the Alabama Good roads Association to be held in the city of Montgomery, October 21 to 23, as appointed by Judge E. B. Deason:

It is urgently requested that all these delegates make a special effort to attend the meetings of the Association.

C. B. Cox, Clanton
W. A. Reynolds, Jemison
H. N. Mullins, Maplesville
E. H. Mims, Clanton
W.H. Strock, Verbena
R.F. Atkinson, Clanton
G. C. Kemp, Maplesville
W.Hamp Foshee, Maplesville
A. F. Mims, Thorsby
John Rockett, Cooper
T. L. McKee, Clanton,
J. B. Northcutt, Jemison
Jno. B. Moore, Montelallo
W. D. Nix, Maplesville
J.D. Sims, Clanton
D.S. Robinson, Verbena
W. H. Shaw, Jemison
W. T. Herrod, Plantersville
W.Y. Atchison, Maplesville
Moses Robinson, Verbena
L. R. Sawyer, Shelby
W.R.K. Stanford, Lawley
R. J. Williams, Clanton
S.D. Waldrup, Jemison
W. M. Aldridge, Calera.

Mt. Pleasant.

This leaves the people able to pe picking high priced cotton.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Hawkins of Cooper spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Duncan attended the singing at Walnut Creek Sunday.

Mr. W.W. Durden of Sylacauga spent part of last week with Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Vickers.

Messrs. Marshall Dozier and Oliver Duke are visiting in Coosa this week.

Rev. B. H. Vickers and daughter, Miss Esther of Liberty were visitors at Mr. B. H. Massey's Sunday.

Misses Eula Belle Foshee and O. D. Lindsey spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Maddox.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cox spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Scroggins.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Vickers spent Saturday night with Mrs. Mandy Davis near Bethel.

Has anybody felt the reduction of the high cost of living being brought about by the democratic party.

Little Viewer.

Something For Your Money

We will send you The Union-Banner and The Montgomery Daily Times one year for $2.00; or we will send you The Union-Banner together with The Alabama Weekly Times a year for $1.00

These liberal offers are strictly for cash in advance. The Montgomery Daily Times is a clean, well edited paper and is dedicated to the service of the citizens of Alabama.

THE UNION-BANNER
Clanton, Ala.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a d of fundamental principles d sic to the Constitution itself rowed from the English bill of 1689. When the Constitut United States was framed mitted to the people it did a bill of rights and it was criticized on this account friends promised to incorpor such a declaration, and the amendments to the Co made after the main instru adopted, were in fulfillment promise. All the State Con now have bills of rights, identical with one another.

Daily Thought.

"The best and greatest th or woman is capable of do or her sphere."—Wendell Ph

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch D
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOL
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bl
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DE
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bld
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG,
Surgery and Disease
Women and Chil
Given Special Att
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-
Smith Building, - Clan

DR. J. P. CRUPTON,
Office, Wilson Bld
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPK
PHYSICIAN & SURG
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 t
Special attention given the Ear, Nose and Throat
Office 7th Street, CLANT

L JUSTICE

s many of the arguments made on d pleas made before juries. Equal concerned is lost sight of.

f the American Republic were and privation on the battle field termined that they would enjoy mother country.

us they adopted a Constitution guaranteed equal justice to all asterpiece of calmness, of states ls.

people have read that document ve memorized, have pondered rds which constitute the very ional life?

of these things because we want corporation and the citizen alike e realize the freedom of politica e the educational value of discus rence the judicial part of our gov that law and order are essentia mutual understanding exist. Tha to you frankly, sincerely.

resent the filing of claims which making of attacks that are with just treatment of corporations o juries, a better day would dawn nd prosperity.

& N. is that no one shall be im e equal effort in safeguarding th l public and the interest of our that equal justice may be meted equal justice that mutual prosp

AND NASHVILLE
AD COMPANY

New Location

Headley Building across road from the Post Office for the most convenient in town to get a Haircut or hen too, you are always of keen razors, clean tow- d careful attention.

ve heard of the excellenc service—now come have proven to you by an indi- test.

job we do is done with a personal interest and to make it the best.

nford,
Wagoner
and Glass

STODDARD TO OPPOSE OLIVER

Cordova Man Nominated by the Republicans to Make Race for Congress in the Sixth District.

NEWS LETTER FROM CAPITAL

Happenings in and About Alabama's State House Interestingly Told.

—Montgomery.

Samuel L. Stoddard of Cordova will be the Republican candidate for Congress from the Sixth District against William B. Oliver of Tuscaloosa, Democratic nominee, according to a certificate filed in the office of Cyrus B. Brown, Secretary of State. The certificate was filed by Sim T. Wright as secretary of the Republican State organization.

Morgan to Instruct A. N. G.

Sergeant-instructors of the Alabama National Guard started this week on an itinerary of instruction through north and south Alabama, according to an announcement made at the office of the state military department.

Sergt. L. R. Morgan has been detailed to north Alabama, where he will spend several weeks instructing companies at Florence, New Decatur, Birmingham and Bessemer. Sergt. John L. Sweeney will work in south Alabama, going first to Luverne and thence to Mobile, Bay Minette and Castleberry.

Sergeant Morgan will spend two weeks in Florence working with the new company of the Second regiment which has just been mustered into service. He will then go to New Decatur for a week and thence to Birmingham, where he will spend one week with each of the companies in that city. Later he will spend a week instructing the Bessemer company.

The itinerary of Sergeant Sweeney includes one week at each place with the exception of Mobile, where he will remain three weeks.

Shackling of Convicts Inhumane.

Shackling of convicted prisoners in the Bessemer city jail is "inhumane and cruel," and is "a sad commentary upon the city," says a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector, who recently inspected the Bessemer city prison. Dr. Oates declares that many of the prisoners in the jail have ugly scores upon their ankles caused by the use of leg irons.

"I respectfully called the attention of the mayor and members of the city council to the fact that several counties of the state, including Madison, Pike, Morgan and Etowah, are working long term convicts on the roads without shackles, and with very few escapes," said Dr. Oates.

Dr. Oates declares that he has taken up this question several times with the city authorities of Bessemer and was under the impression that the shackles were removed at night, if not altogether discontinued.

"I find that I was wrong and that neither has been done," said Dr. Oates.

Reports on the condition of the county jailes of Etowah, Cherokee, Marshall, St. Clair, Bibb and Blount were filed. The inspections were made by John D. Adams, chief clerk in the office of Dr. Oates. Nearly all of these jails were found to be in satisfactory condition although recommendations as to cleaning and renovating were made in a few instances. In Marshall county it was found that great improvement has been made.

Reappoint Agee and Winkinson.

W. C. Agee and E. Wilkinson of Birmingham were reappointed by Governor O'Neal as chairman and associate member, respectively, of the Birmingham excise commission. Both were named for two-year terms. Mr. Agee has served three years as associate member.

For the last six weeks an active fight for these two positions has been waged. There were about fifteen applicants for the positions and there was considerable opposition to the reappointment of Chairman Agee. There was practically no opposition to Mr. Wilkinson.

Tax Commissioner Removed.

J. B. Cosby, tax commissioner of Perry county, has been removed by the state tax commission, it was announced by Associate Member Henry P. White. Mr. Cosby was removed "for cause," it was announced. J. O. Bailey of Marion was appointed to succeed the deposed official.

The removal of the county tax official followed a visit to Marion of Special Agent Harvey Blue, who was sent to Perry county in the regular course of his inspections over the state.

New Insurance Tax Double One.

Frank Julian, associate member of the railroad commission, issued a statement to the effect that if the ruling of the tax commission, relative to taxing the reserve or cash value of life insurance policies, is put into effect, "it will simply mean double taxation." According to Mr. Julian, the "reserve, cash or surrender value of a policy is created out of a portion of the premium, and the state collects a tax on all premiums, hence the further taxing of a premium is necessarily a tax on premiums."

Game Wardens Active.

Illustrative of the activity displayed by county game wardens in prosecuting all violations of the game statutes, John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner, announced a dozen or more recent convictions in three counties of the state.

S. A. Edwards, the game warden of Mobile, reported to Mr. Wallace a few days ago the arrest and conviction of six persons on the charge of shooting squirrels out of season. A fine of $25 was assessed against each violator.

The game warden of Crenshaw county, H. J. Browder, reported to the game department that four persons in his county had been convicted in the circuit court of posioning streams and had been fined $50 each.

Other convictions were reported by J. C. Mims, game warden of Pickens county, who announced to the department that two persons in his county had been fined $50 each for illicit seining of streams.

Solvent Credits Taxable.

The state tax commission formally ruled that foreign corporations are taxable on all solvent credits in Alabama and so instructed the various county commissioners of the state. The commission, in its ruling, announced that it had paid especial attention to the class of foreign corporations which have depots or manufacturing plants from which the products of the corporations are sold and distributed, "and for which credit is given and which credits are under the control of some office outside the state of Alabama."

The substance of the commission's ruling was that foreign corporations are taxable on all credits in Alabama where such credits arise from shipments made from the distributing plants and depots in this state. "It is further the opinion of the commission," according to the opinion rendered, "that such solvent credits are assessable at the places where such distributing plants and depots are located."

The commission has not yet passed on the question of assessing credits of public service corporations.

Feagin Issues School Manual.

The County High School Manual, a volume setting out the new course of study, together with the textbooks to be used in these schools, is the latest publication issued by the state department of education.

The manual was prepared by Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin with the assistance of members of the faculties of the higher institutions of learning and principals and teachers of secondary schools, the various subjects being treated separately.

In his introductory statement Superintendent Feagin calls attention to the fact that the county high school is the property of the county and should be in touch witn the humblest school in the community.

"In furtherance of the spirit that has been implicit both in the conception and the preparation of this manual, it is confidently expected that the faculty of the county high schools in the state will give themselves largely to extension work in behalf of the rural schools," said the superintendent of education.

Good Roads Tour Announced.

Good, roads advocates of Elmore, Coosa, Talladega and Montgomery counties have arranged for a big good roads tour from Montgomery to Talladega for the purpose of mapping out a trunk highway according to an announcement made by W. S. Keller, state highway engineer. Mr. Keller has been invited to go on the trip and make the tour with the good roads promoters.

Leaving Montgomery October 6 the parties will go to Talladega by way of Wetumpka, Sandtuck, Central, Seeman, Equality, Nixburg and Goodwater. No stops will be made in Elmore county because that county already has a splendid system of roads. Stops will be made at Equality, Nixburg and Goodwater. At Goodwater dinner will be served.

On the return trip the scouts will go by way of Sylacauga, Hanover, Rockford, Speed, Buyck and Wetumpka. Stops will be made at Sylacauga, Hanover and Rockford, dinner being served at Rockford.

This movement will be for the purpose of stimulating interest in the "Montgomery - Talladega" highway.

Invitation Issued.

Declaring that the time is opportune to give an impetus to road building in Alabama and stating that an interesting program has been arranged for the next annual meeting of the Alabama Good Roads association, which meets in Montgomery October 21-23, the Chamber of Commerce has issued a general invitation to good roads organiations and other bodies urging them to attend the meeting. The entertainment feature of the meeting will consist of a 75-mile ride through Montgomery county.

Shelby County Game Warden.

J. N. Robertson was appointed game warden of Shelby county.

Crossland Succeeds Gilmer.

Governor O'Neal appointed David W. Crossland as tax assessor of Montgomery county, succeeding Morgan S. Gilmer, who died recently. The appointee had been serving as chief clerk to the assessor for a number of years, and upon the death of Mr. Gilmer there was a general endorsement of his application for the vacancy. The appointment is for Mr. Gilmer's unexpired term.

REBIRTH OF AMERICAN MERCHANT MARINE

Scene on the deck of the United Fruit company's liner, Zacapa, when the British flag was hauled down and the American flag run up, signifying the change of the steamer to American registry and the rebirth of the American merchant marine.

CRACOW, WHERE AUSTRIANS ARE CONCENTRATING

Citadel of Cracow, on a cliff overlooking the Vistula, which the Austrian armies are trying to reach for a last stand against the Russian armies. Cracow was the capital of ancient Poland and is very strongly fortified.

BRAVE BELGIAN BOY SCOUT

Joseph L. Neyssent, a boy scout of Belgium, who has been given the bronze medal of merit. Single-handed he captured two German engineers, one uhlan and two priests who were spies. He had fought in five engagements when this photograph was taken, and had made several daring trips on his bicycle carrying dispatches.

Ridicule Men Afraid of War.

London.—"Wanted — Petticoats for strong, ablebodied young men not in the army"—is a sample of personal advertisements in the columns of London papers since it has become evident that recruiting the army up to the strength desired by General Kitchener is to be slow work.

Another reads: "Doctor's wife, middle aged, will undertake the work of any tramway conductor, coachman, shop assistant, or other married worker with children, provided that worker will undertake to enlist and fight for his country in our hour of need. All wages earned will be turned over to the wife and family. Apply Mrs. Lowry, 1 Priory terrace, Kewgreen, S. W."

Wounded Nine Times.

Ostand.—Among the French wounded in recent fighting was a dragoon with six bullet and three bayonet wounds in the upper part of his body. He has expected to recover.

PEASANT WOMEN IN RUINED HOMES

Peasant women in Belgium searching for belongings in the debris of their homes, ruined by the Germans.

PRIESTS HELP THE WOUNDED

Priests running to the assistance of a wounded soldier at the battle of Ypres.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Work on the Warrior will be co ued to completion.

DeKalb county has 71 Su schools.

Dixie Pipe company, Gadsden, will build an iron pipe plant.

John Abner, near Alabama City, found a deposit of galena on land.

Wire grass newspaper men printers have organized an asso tion.

Farmers in many parts of Alab will reduce their cotton acreage year.

Charles Cauley, near Kellerton, sold $100 of produce from one of land.

Gadsden reports that the De cotton mill is to resume full o tions in the near future.

Buy-a-bale of cotton movement raised the spot price of the s two cents and it is still climbi

New Decatur has decided no change her name. The vote wa actly even on change and no ch

Sam F. Claoaugh of Tuscal Ala., was confirmed as postmast that place by the United States ate.

The North Birmingham Pa company will expend $65,000 i creasing the capacity of its reb ating plant.

The Allentown Power com Florence, Ala., recently incorpo purposes to develop hydro-el power on Cypress creek.

Lumber shipments from Mobil Europe which were abruptly can late in July when the nations of rope went to war, are being resu

The Florence and Huntsville urban Railroad company has bee corporated at Florence, Ala. Its pose is to build an electric rai from Florence to Huntsville.

Officers of the Queen and Cre will, it was stated, offer a rewa $1000 for the apprehension of wrecker of the Alabama Great So ern train No. 2 near Livingston.

John B. Shivers, judge of pro for Perry county, died in Selma lowing a surgical operation ear the week. The body was take Marion and buried in the City Ce tery.

Invitations to state officials and ployes to attend a five-day farm institute at Greenville, Butler co the first week in October, have tendered by the entertainment mittee.

The Senior, Sophomore and Jun classes of the University of Alab have taken steps within the law that promise to eliminate practical all hazing now going on at the Uni versity.

Judge William E. Fort, in the Cri nal Court of Birmingham, sentenc Bennie Ward and Wash Gray to be hanged on October 30, the two negro being convicted in the court dur the week on a charge of highway rob bery.

"General Reunion Order" to camps of the Alabama Division, C. V., has been issued by Major Ge eral Harvey E. Jones, setting out details of the annual state reunion the veterans, which will be held Mobile, October 22-24.

John H. Wallace, Jr., fish and ga commissioner of Alabama, has furnished by the American Fore association with the draft of a mo state forestry law, and will embody in his annual report, now being pared, with recommendations tha be passed by the next legislatu The American Forestry associatio now planning a campaign to se the passage of this law, and h statement showing how vital is need of such a law, says: "Alabam forest resources in timber alone ly exceed $100,000,000,000 board worth, not less than $500,000,000, sides naval stores and other sec ary products. Each year these sources yield to the state in the cut and other products in excess $25,000,000. The lumber industry, fact, ranks first in importance am the industries of the state, gi employment to more than 22,000 sons and disbursing in wages a $7,259,000. This industry alone ploys over 30 per cent of all the w earners of the state."

Morgan county has suffered rain.

DeKalb's fair will hold four d from October 9.

The next regular term of the preme court begins November 9.

Out of 30 bales ginned at Colu ville only five have been sold.

Birmingham coal is being sent Argentina as a result of the war Europe.

Alabama farmers will devote m time and attention to grain and stock as a result of the effects of European war on the cotton crop.

At Centreville 43 pints of whisk were taken from a tiger and destro ed. Tiger is in prison.

On the farm of Ben Crane n Haleyville a gang of negro cot pickers, five in number, picked pounds in one day. One picked

Escambia farmers sold 900 bales cotton before the war struck the

J. Y. Olive of Colbert has sold dozen eggs and 300 pounds of but has held his 20 bales of cotto

Jefferson county is about to work on the construction of a ing sewer disposal plant.

RCE BATTLE IS AGED ON SOMME

ANS AND ALLIES HAVE EN STRIVING 2 WEEKS TO USH EACH OTHER BACK.

SIANS FIGHT GERMANS

erlands Declare Martial Law to event Exportation of Contraands of War to Germany. Keiser's Son Sick.

ndon.—The territory between the Somme and Oise is the scene of ercest battle along the great front rthern France, where the Ger and allies have been striving o weeks to force each other back. ground includes the French left which has thrown tremendous against the German general, Kluck's, re-enforced army in an vor to outflank him.

French official report describes struggle as a violent one and anes that the allied troops have a slight advance.

the Woevre region the French report some gain, but describe the tion on the heights of the Meuse hanged.

or to this, however, the Germans crossed the River Meuse near St. d in the Woevre district.

Russian general staff reports a between the Russians and Ger in the region of Druskenhiki, in government of Suwalki, Russian d, bordering on Prussia, but gives tails. The general staff also re the retirement of the Austrian westward on Cracow.

Netherlands government has de d martial law in the eastern prov s, according to an Amsterdam dis h, to prevent the exportation of rabals of war to Germany and at same time Great Britain takes a sition in the matter of contraking it compulsory for neutral es importing foodstuffs to give nces that the food is not intend r German consumption.

ce Oscar, the German emporor's son, according to the announce from Berlin, has been obliged to draw from his regiment because affection of the heart, brought on verexertion.

test reports indicate that the Aus seaport of Cattaro, in Dalmatia, ing bombarded by French and h warships and that the Austrian ess of Pelagosa has been disman and seized.

BATTLE IS IMMINENT

ans Mass Troops for Clash with ssians in East Prussia—Latter Chase Position.

ndon.—A dispatch from Petrograd e Daily Chronicle says:

new and decisive battle is immi on the borders of East Prussia. re is complete confidence in Gen. enkampf, who has had his own inasmuch as the fight, when it es, is to be on ground chosen by ne army corps a day is the rate at h Germany is re-enforcing her in East Prussia. Along the whole rn line, from near Memel in the to the frontier of the governof Alisch, the armies are in groping by means of reconnais and minor collisions at the facts ming each other's strength and know that to the 11 army corps in East Prussia there must be added at least five more, of three are reserves, and that, there is a secondary army on Alisch frontier, whose function is er the German right. At least German troops of all classes thered to try and balance the rian failures."

MAN COLONIES CAPTURED

Beach Is Seized—Germans Make prisals by Raid in Cape Colony. French in West Africa.

deaux.—The ministry of marine nced that the French gunboat se took possession of Cocq in Kamarun, the German colony estern Equatorial Africa.

tor Augagneur, the minister of ne, announced the capture of Beach at the cabinet meeting. He that previous to landing her ma who dislodged the German on shore, the Surprise, which is all vessel of 680 tons, unarmored, carrying 10 small guns, sank two belonging to the German aux fleet, the Rhios and the Italo. M. gneur said that this capture was llant exploit to the credit of the Roumania May Join Allies.

ogred.—A Bucharest dispatch to oyce Vremya says it is rumored the first Roumanian army corps ordered to the Austrian fron ar's Son Has Heart Trouble.

rlin.—Prince Oscar, the emperor's n, it was announced, is suffer a heart affection due to his in the field, and has been to leave his regiment. He is care of physicians at Metz.

TERRIF

Hand-to-h in T

Paris opened along the and the prised in at sever both side

Soon Germans the allie but were hand-to-h after lin charges

Severe the entir rowed to rival arm for more

During the enga tivity of was des morning allies op Artillery signal, a

On the conducte here the had mad the troo enthusia

The F and rake galling the rapi of the ti English and stor

The Germans struggle were dri ance wa they we swept

ALLIES

Try Ha man

Paris municat there ha tion on suance commen

The follows: "Ther situatio tion.

"The Aisne but it recalls

"The action which tion of army expect to orga same the Ais was re sition ground in man ually h

"This present the cha lar to

"It m tional each o lery ag cannon the tem two ad

"The whole one pr ticularl mitrail

Lond ent sta re-enfo tween French also sa of one prisone

Lond announ tured wald Atlant

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Work on the Warrior will be ued to completion.

DeKalb county has 71 S schools.

Dixie Pipe company, Gadsden will build an iron pipe plant.

John Abner, near Alabama Ci found a deposit of galena land.

Wire grass newspaper men printers have organized an a tion.

Farmers in many parts of Al will reduce their cotton acreage year.

Charles Cauley, near Keilleyto sold $100 of produce from one of land.

Gadsden reports that the cotton mill is to resume full tions in the near future.

Buy-a-bale of cotton movemen raised the spot price of the two cents and it is still climb

New Decatur has decided change her name. The vote w actly even on change and no c

Sam F. Claboaugh of Tusca Ala., was confirmed as postmas that place by the United States ate.

The North Birmingham Pa company will expend $65,000 creasing the capacity of its re ating plant.

The Allentown Power com Florence, Ala., recently incorpo purposes to develop hydro-el power on Cypress creek.

Lumber shipments from Mob Europe which were abruptly ca late in July when the nations o rope went to war, are being res

The Florence and Huntsville urban Railroad company has be corporated at Florence, Ala. Its pose is to build an electric ra from Florence to Huntsville.

Officers of the Queen and Cre will, it was stated, offer a rewa $1000 for the apprehension of wrecker of the Alabama Great S ern train No. 2 near Livingston.

John B. Shivers, judge of pro for Perry county, died in Selma lowing a surgical operation ear the week. The body was take Marion and buried in the City C tery.

Invitations to state officials and ployes to attend a five-day farm institute at Greenville, Butler co the first week in October, have tendered by the entertainment mittee.

The Senior, Sophomore and Ju classes of the University of Alab have taken steps within the last w that promise to eliminate practic all hazing now going on at the versity.

Judge William E. Fort, in the cri nal Court of Birmingham, senten Bennie Ward and Wash Gray to hanged on October 30, the two negr being convicted in the court du the week on a charge of highway bery.

"General Reunion Order" to camps of the Alabama Division, C. V., has been issued by Major G eral Harvey E. Jones, setting out details of the annual state reunion the veterans, which will be held Mobile, October 22-24.

John H. Wallace, Jr., fish and commissioner of Alabama, has furnished by the American Fore association with the draft of a m state forestry law, and will embod in his annual report, now being pared, with recommendations tha be passed by the next legislat The American Forestry associatio now planning a campaign to se the passage of this law, and statement showing how vital is need of such a law, says: "Alaba forest resources in timber alone ly exceed $100,000,000,000 board worth, not less than $500,000,000, sides naval stores and other sec ary products. Each year these sources yield to the state in tim cut and other products in excess $25,000,000. The lumber industry, fact, ranks first in importance am the industries of the state, giv employment to more than 22,000 sons and disbursing in wages a $7,259,000. This industry alone ploys over 30 per cent of all the w earners of the state."

Morgan county has suffered rain.

DeKalb's fair will hold four from October 9.

The next regular term of the preme court begins November 9.

Out of 30 bales ginned at Coll ville only five have been sold.

Birmingham coal is being sent Argentina as a result of the war Europe.

Alabama farmers will devote time and attention to grain and stock as a result of the effects of European war on the cotton crop.

At Centreville 43 pints of whis were taken from a tiger and des ed. Tiger is in prison.

On the farm of Ben Crane Haleyville a gang of negro co pickers, five in number, picked pounds in one day. One picker

Escambia farmers sold 900 bales cotton before the war struck th

I. Y. Olive of Colbert has sold dozen eggs and 300 pounds of but has held his 20 bales of co

Jefferson county is spending work on the court house. 900 sewer diseased

GE BATTLE IS GED ON SOMME

ANS AND ALLIES HAVE STRIVING 2 WEEKS TO H EACH OTHER BACK.

ANS FIGHT GERMANS

nds Declare Martial Law to t Exportation of Contra- ds of War to Germany. Keiser's Son Sick.

—The territory between the Somme and Oise is the scene of est battle along the great front thern France, where the Ger- and allies have been striving weeks to force each other back. ound includes the French left which has thrown tremendous against the German general, ck's, re-enforced army in an to outflank him.

French official report describes ggle as a violent one and an- that the allied troops have slight advance.

Woevre region the French rt some gain, but describe the on the heights of the Meuse anged.

to this, however, the Germans sed the River Meuse near St. in the Woevre district.

Russian general staff reports a tween the Russians and Ger- the region of Druskenhiki, in rnment of Suwalki, Russian bordering on Prussia, but gives ls. The general staff also re- retirement of the Austrian stward on Cradow.

therlands government has de- rtial law in the eastern prov- rding to an Amsterdam dis- prevent the exportation of s of war to Germany and at time Great Britain takes a ion in the matter of contra- ing it compulsory for neutral importing foodstuffs to give s that the food is not intend- erman consumption.

Oscar, the German emporor's according to the announce- Berlin, has been obliged to r from his regiment because fection of the heart, brought on exertion.

t reports indicate that the Aus- seaport of Cattaro, in Dalmatia, ng bombarded by French and h warships and that the Austrian ss of Pelagosa has been disman- and seized.

G BATTLE IS IMMINENT

rmans Mass Troops for Clash with Russians in East Prussia—Latter Chase Position.

London.—A dispatch from Petrograd the Daily Chronicle says:

"A new and decisive battle is immi- t on the borders of East Prussia. re is complete confidence in Gen. enkampf, who has had his own , inasmuch as the fight, when it es, is to be on ground chosen by

One army corps a day is the rate at h Germany is re-enforcing her in East Prussia. Along the whole r line, from near Memel in the to the frontier of the govern- f Alisch, the armies are in groping by means of reconnais- nd minor collisions at the facts ng each other's strength and now that to the 11 army corps in East Prussia there must added at least five more, of three are reserves, and that, there is a secondary army on h frontier, whose function is r the German right. At least German troops of all classes hered to try and balance the n failures."

AN COLONIES CAPTURED

Beach Is Seized—Germans Make ials by Raid in Cape Colony. French in West Africa.

eaux.—The ministry of marine ced that the French gunboat e took possession of Coco n Kamarun, the German colony tern Equatorial Africa.

Augagneur, the minister of announced the capture of each at the cabinet meeting. He t previous to landing her ma- who dislodged the German n shore, the Surprise, which is vessel of 680 tons, unarmored, rrying 10 small guns, sank two belonging to the German aux- fleet, the Rhios and the Italo. M. eur said that this capture was nt exploit to the credit of the e.

umania May Join Allies.

grad.—A Bucharest dispatch to rge Vremya says it is rumored first Roumanian army corps ordered to the Austrian fron-r's Son Has Heart Trouble.

—Prince Oscar, the emperor's , it was announced, is suffer- a heart affection due to his in the field, and has been to leave his regiment. He is care of physicians at Metz.

THOSE AMERICAN TOURISTS

(Copyright.)

TERRIFIC ATTACK AT NIGHT

Hand-to-Hand Encounter—Lines Clash in Terrific Bayonet Charges in the Dark.

Paris.—In a furious night attack opened by the allies simultaneously along the whole line between the Aisne and the Oise, the Germans were surprised in their trenches and driven out at several points on the German right, both sides suffering very heavy losses.

Soon after the attack opened, the Germans directed an attack against the allies' lines further to the east, but were finally driven back in a hand-to-hand encounter, in which line after line clashed in terrific bayonet charges in the dark.

Severe fighting has occurred along the entire battle line, which has narrowed to about 90 miles because of the rival armies drawing closer together for more massive compact.

During the early part of the night the engagement had narrowed to activity of the heavy guns, and the fire was desultory. But at 2 o'clock in the morning a preconcerted attack by the allies opened with unprecedented fury. Artillery, rapid-fire guns and small signal, and the fire was overwhelming.

On the allies' left the onslaught was conducted with the greatest vigor, for here the attacking French and British had made the greatest advances and the troops were buoyed up by the full enthusiasm of their triumphs.

The French gunners had the range, and raked the German trenches with a galling fire. Under cover of this and the rapid-firers, which swept the top of the line of trenches, the British and English cavalry and infantry advanced and stormed them.

The energy of the attack took the Germans by surprise, and after a fierce struggle at the trenches, the Germans were driven back. The German resistance was desperate. It was not until they were overwhelmed that they were swept from their position.

ALLIES MAKE SOME GAINS

Try Hard to Turn Right Wing of German Army—Violent Fighting Along Front.

Paris.—The French official communication, after announcing that there has been no change in the situation on the battle front since the issuance of the previous communication, comments on the battle of the Aisne.

The text of the announcement is as follows:

"There has been no change in the situation since the last communication.

"The battle in progress along the Aisne has extended over eight days, but it should cause no surprise if one recalls the Russo-Japanese war.

"The battle of the Marne was an action undertaken in the open field, which began with a general resumption of the offensive by the French army against the enemy, who did not expect it and had not time seriously to organize defensive positions. The same cannot be said of the battle of the Aisne, where the adversary, who was retreating, stopped and took position which by the nature of the ground are substantial in themselves in many places and which he gradually has improved as to organization.

"This battle of the Aisne, therefore, presents on a large part of its front the character of war by assault similar to the operations in Manchuria.

"It might be added that the exceptional power of the artillery facing each other—the heavy German artillery against the French 7 5-centimeter cannon—gives a particular value to the temporary fortifications which the two adversaries have now drawn up.

"The task is, therefore, to take whole rows of entrenchments, each one protected by close defenses, particularly rows of barbed wire with mitrailleuses in concealed positions.

Two Trains Blown Up.

London.—The Mail's war correspondent states that two trains of German re-enforcements were blown up between Peronne and St. Quentin by a French gunner. The correspondent also says that the entire general staff of one German division was brought prisoners to Amiens.

Liner and Collier Taken.

London.—The official press bureau announced that the British cruiser captured the German armed liner Oldenwald and three colliers in the North Atlantic on Sept. 3.

HEAVY GUNS ARE USED

Both Sides Continue to Hammer Away at Entrenchments of Enemies. Battle Not Decisive.

New York.—Count von Berustorff, German ambassador to the United States, announced he had received by wireless, by way of Sayville, an official statement from the German general staff in Berlin, as follows:

"On the right wing of the German army beyond the Oise the battle has come to a standstill. Flanking movements of the French army have had no success. Between there and the forest of Argonne no serious fighting took place. East of the Argonne Vareness was taken by the Germans.

"Their advance is continuing. The German army, which is attacking the forts south of Verdun, repulsed sorties from Verdun and Toul. Many prisoners and machine guns and cannon were taken. The heavy German artillery has begun to bombard successfully the French forts of Troyon-Les-Paroches, Camp des Romaine and Lionville (L'Ironville).

"In the French Lorraine and on the frontier of Alsace French troops were repulsed.

"A really decisive action has taken place nowhere."

Paris.—The brief official communication issued here announces that on the left wing the battle continues to develop; that a lull has occurred in the fighting in the center and that on the right wing German attacks apparently have been checked.

London.—Heavy artillery continues to play a leading part in the battle of the Aisne, which has been in progress nearly a fortnight. The opposing forces continue to hammer away at each other from their well entrenched and strongly fortified positions with the greatest stubbornness, but without decision.

Almost without a lull great shells are being hurled across the rivers, valleys and plains stretching from the River Oise in the west to the Meuse in the east, and thence southward along the whole Franco-German border, while the lighter guns play on the infantry lying in the trenches awaiting an opportunity to deliver attacks and counter attacks, with, as the French official communication says, "alternate retirement on certain points and advance on others."

DISCOVER CHOLERA IN ARMY

Announcement Causes Apprehension in Dual Monarchy—Nine Cases Reported in Hungarian Army.

Vienna.—Nine cases of Asiatic cholera have been discovered among wounded soldiers in Hungary. The announcement has excited great apprehension throughout the dual monarchy.

It is learned here that the first suspected case of cholera in Hungary was that of a wounded soldier brought Sept. 15 to Bekes Csaba from the Galician battlefield. The bacteriological examination clearly showed Asiatic cholera.

The patient immediately was isolated. Since then eight other cases have been discovered, also among the wounded who returned from Galicia.

Both Austrian and Hungarian ministers of the interior are taking the utmost precautions against a spread of the disease.

Vienna is awaiting with keen anxiety news of the progress of the fighting against the Russians and Servians, but nothing is forthcoming beyond the bare official statement that there are no new developments in the eastern theater of the war.

Four Die on Revenue Cutter.

Seattle, Wash.—Unconfirmed reports here were that four men in the fire room of the revenue cutter Tahoma perished when the vessel went on a reef in the Rat Island group of the Aleutian Islands and was lost.

Captain Went Down With Ship.

London.—The correspondent at Harwich of the Evening News says he learns from survivors of the disaster to the three British cruisers that Capt. Robert W. Johnson of the Cressy went down with his ship.

50,000 Germans Wounded.

Amsterdam.—The correspondent at Maestricht of the Telegraaf says that during the past few days about 50,000 Germans, wounded on French battlefields, have passed through Liege on the way to Germany.

GERMANS TO RESIST RUSSIA AT CRACOW

GERMAN TROOPS RULE TOWN AND THE AUSTRIAN CIVIL GOVERNMENT FLEES.

RESIDENTS IN A PANIC

Three Army Corps Thrown Into Cracow District by Germans—Baltic Fleet Possible — All Traffic Is Stopped from Berlin.

London.—"That Cracow has been occupied by German troops, that the town has been put under a German military commandant and that the Austrian civil administration has been displaced is the gist of the latest advices received here," says the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post.

"All the original administration of the city has fled and all the civil officials of the Austrian government have left. Residents are fleeing in a panic.

"The leaders of the Polish secret committee, which has been in charge of all the Polish volunteer detachments fighting on the Austrian side also have left Cracow. The Germans have thrown three army corps into the Cracow district, according to this information, and are bringing more troops in preparation for the expected Russian attack.

"Word has been received here that Germany has stopped all traffic on the railways between Berlin and the German Baltic ports of Danzig, Elbing and Stettin. This news has set experts to figuring on the possibility of a German descent on Russian territory by way of the Baltic. Any such move is regarded here as impossible from the standpoint of an effective act of war, although it might be theatrically effective in supporting the morale of the Berlin populace."

CARE FOR GERMAN WOUNDED

Poincare Asked That They Be Humanly Treated—Many Will Recover from Wounds.

Bordeaux.—President Poincare's recent admonition to the hospitals to treat German wounded the same as French is being carried out, according to a correspondent who today visited the Bordeaux High School, where 60 German wounded are being treated.

Dr. Melvile Wastermann of San Francisco and a Bordeaux doctor, are in charge of the hospital, assisted by a well-known Dresden surgeon.

The German's are being treated in the lofty class rooms of the high school, which look out over the sunny garden. The men seem to suffer more from homesickness than their wounds, which they bear with patient resignation.

As a rule the Germans in the hospitals here are more badly hurt than the French soldiers. In addition to the first dressing of the German wounds having been inadequate, the wounds also are infected. The physicians say that a large majority of the wounded will recover, however.

ONLY HARD SIEGE WILL WIN

Will Be Difficult to Drive Germans from Positions—Germans Are Playing a Game.

London.—H. M. Tomlinson, the Daily News correspondent, telegraphing from outside of Paris, says the battle now proceeding is beyond the power of description, but from a mass of disconnected matter, carefully examined in detail, as personally related by combatants, we may judge that the progress in the section from Peronne to Verdun has been fairly, finely won by the allies. Some say the Germans are still playing a subtle game, with something up their sleeves, but the concensus of opinion is that the Germans retreated because they had to.

It does not need a military expert to understand that the allies can't make as quick progress, because the Germans occupy strong positions and know that when they break they break for good. It must be admitted that it will be difficult to storm the Germans from their positions. Only a hard siege will do it.

German Diplomat Killed by Japs.

Peking.—A letter from a German in Tsing Tau says that Baron von Eisenback, former secretary of the German legation at Peking, was killed by a Japanese patrol dressed in Chinese clothes.

30 Warships Off Denmark.

London.—A Copenhagen dispatch to the Standard says a fishing fleet which has arrived at Falkenberg, Sweden, has been in close proximity to a fleet of 30 warships. They were sighted in the vicinity of Anholt, a Danish island in the Kattegat.

Lieut. Gen. Von Busse Dead.

Berlin.—The announcement was made here that Lieut. Gen. Von Busse was killed in action Sept. 3. Thus far 24,000 persons have been decorated with the iron cross.

BRITISH SOLDIERS TELL HOW THEY WON THE DAY AT MARNE

By GEORGE DRU.
International News Service.

Paris.—Details given me by British soldiers enable me to give the following account of the participation of the British in the great battle of the Marne:

The troops had marched since dawn through a country of fields and comfortable farm houses. As the afternoon wore on they could see the foe had been driven back from positions recently held. On all sides began to appear stretches of charred waste and broken, gaunt walls, relics of happy homes—even a church on the edge of a village given to the flames, and tombstones trampled under foot.

As the march was renewed the temper of the men exhibited a distinct change. There was no more whistling, no more light banter. Each man's face was set and determined. As night drew near the rumbling of guns was audible in the distance. Then came a galloper on a foam-spattered horse bearing dispatches to the general. After delivering the dispatches he mounted a fresh horse and disappeared into the darkness.

Still the khaki-clad wave marched on, every mile bringing the sound of heavy firing nearer. Toward midnight a squad of cavalry came into touch on the right, and a little later the men were in what they soon discovered was to be the firing line.

Trenches Dug at Night.

The army came to a halt, but harder things than blankets were in store. Gallopers came flying from nowhere and were as quickly dispatched into the darkness. After a wait of no long duration the men dug trenches and threw up breastworks to be ready for the coming fray.

Daylight showed in front of an almost level stretch of open country, backed up by a belt of growing timber, where the Germans had taken up their position. Although none of the foe was visible, the woods were alive with armed men, and behind the woods lay artillery in trenches protected by breastworks. The British troops waited, backed up by heavy guns in the rear. Suddenly there was shooting in the distance, followed by a long wail as a shell passed over their heads, to explode with a deafening roar at a safe distance from the trench. The Germans had opened the duel.

Guns Begin to Answer.

The guns of the British soon began to answer with greater effect. All at once little spurts of dust were noticeable rising in front. The men in the woods were trying to get the range, but still our men had no orders to fire.

One of our men, unable to control his anxiety to use his rifle, rose from the trenches, fully exposing himself to the enemy's fire, only to fall back dead.

Finding themselves unable to draw our fire, the Germans advanced in the open, only to be met by a heavy volley. They quickly sought cover, and then the fight became vigorous. With two hours' continuous fighting, the foe returned into the heart of the woods.

Our guns practically silenced the German battery, thanks to information received from a French aeroplane. They then turned their attention to the riflemen in the woods and under protection of their fire our soldiers silenced the infantry. If it had been a parade they could not have shown more coolness and steadiness.

Enemy Quits Thicket.

After covering most of the intervening space at a march they broke into the double and soon were in the vicinity of the thicket. Finding our guns had located them, the enemy had retreated.

Our left and right flank cavalry rounded the edge of the woods while the infantry passed through the center of the timber. On reaching the far side they fell into close formation and charged the foe, and what they missed was not enough to fill a liquor glass, let alone a tumbler.

Dead Germans, struggling, wounded horses and broken guns made a thrilling but terrible picture. Great gashes torn in the earth were eloquent signs of the accuracy of British gunnery.

At another stage of the great battle the Germans massed near a wood. The British lay well away from them on one side, the French under General Pau on the other. Some desultory firing took place and the Germans tried to hide their real strength under cover of the forest, but the allied commanders had been well supplied with information and were on the alert.

The Germans' right asked for an armistice for the purpose of attending to their wounded and burying their dead, but while this request was under consideration a British aeroplane discovered the Germans were setting a trap for the allies. Negotiations at once were broken off and the fighting recommenced.

Death Trap Fails.

An airman had seen an immense number of guns enter the woods, the foe evidently having planned to put up a sham fight and retreat so as to draw the British to the hidden guns. It was a well planned death trap, but the allies by this time were aware of the tactics. The motive behind the request for an armistice was to lull the allies into a sense of security and so enable fresh German forces to arrive from Compiegne.

A terrific cannonade at once was opened upon the wood, which took fire, and as a brisk wind was blowing, the flames soon turned the forest into an inferno. The Germans rushed out in great disorder, and the British, who were waiting, fell on them hip and thigh. The men, remembering all that has been done by them and the peasantry, fought with terrible fury, and wiped out the score.

The German commander concentrated all his energies on saving the guns, but this was just the thing the allied commanders had decided to frustrate. Much fierce fighting took place around the artillery, the British cavalry distinguishing itself by its dash and determination, sweeping down upon the German horsemen trying to escort the guns to places of safety. They were through them like an avalanche, and it will be long before those Teutons who escaped forget the headlong, irresistible rushes of our hard riders.

Cavalry's Worth Shown.

Once again it was demonstrated that the cavalry arm still is one of the most effective an army can possess when it is used at the proper moment and in the right way. Cavalry may be useless against men intrenched on kopjes, but in the open field it is as effective as in the days of the first Napoleon.

Not only did the cavalry prevent the German guns from escaping, but their lightning-like delivery of charges prevented the gunners from taking up positions from which to work havoc on our infantry. The Germans were busy at all times, and the accuracy of their firing soon made every fresh position untenable.

Our infantry went also into the fray with terrible relish and zest. The zouave-like open formation is the best on earth for rapid advance and heavy volleying on the move.

Our men got over the ground at a swinging pace, and closed up for bayonet work. The men literally were on the run, and nothing could stop them. They went through the Germans like fire through flax.

The French are loud in their praises of the British in this battle. Stand after stand was made by the Germans in hope of stemming the tide of disaster until support should arrive, but the British knew the value of time as well as the Germans, and pushed the attack home so hotly that, according to the latest verbal reports, the enemy lost, in dead and wounded, 35,000 men. A large amount of artillery, great and small, big guns and rapid firers, fell into the British hands.

RIVERS CHOKED WITH BODIES OF AUSTRIANS

London.—"The newspaper correspondents describe horrible scenes on the battlefields abandoned by the Austro-German forces last week," says the Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent.

"Streams, they say, were choked full with slain men, trodden down in the headlong flight till the waters were dammed and overflowing the banks. Piles of dead are awaiting burial or burning. Hundreds of acres are sown with bodies and littered with weapons and battle debris, while wounded and riderless horses are careering madly over the abandoned country. The trophies captured comprise much German equipment. An ammunition train captured at Janow (11 miles northwest of Lemberg) was German, while the guns taken include 46 heavy caliber bearing Emperor William's initials and belonging to the German Sixth army corps.

"The line of retreat of the Austro-German forces was blocked with debris of every kind—valuable military supplies, telephone and telegraph installations, light railway and other stores, bridging material—in fact, everything needed by a modern army was flung away in flight. Over one thousand wagons with commissariat supplies alone were captured.

"Newspaper dispatches assert that the German troops have been interspersed with Austrian troops in the intrenchments in order to raise the morale of the Austrians. One correspondent declares that while the Austrians took flight the Germans were ready to the last man to perish."

GERMAN STAFF MANIFESTS CONFIDENCE IN OUTCOME

Berlin.—Members of the general staff here in private conversation have manifested absolute confidence in the outcome of the battle in France, as their own army is steadily growing stronger and the lines of communication have been adjusted to permit a more efficient supply of provisions and ammunition, it having rather outrun its supply arrangements in the rapid advance on Paris. The French army, according to the staff, is showing signs of having shot its bolt and has fought itself to a standstill, being unable to fill its depleted ranks like the Germans.

The headquarters announcements still give no definite information regarding the position of the battle line, contenting themselves with speaking of it generally as located between the Oise and Meuse rivers, but not mentioning what part of this large region the German sweep.

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

STATE.

For Governor:
Dr. E. H. CROSS.

Lieutenant Governor:
C. B. FORMAN.

U. S. Senator:
A. P. LONGSHORE.

Congressman at Large:
G. A. SAYLOR.

Attorney General:
DUNCAN TRIMBLE.

For Auditor:
J. W. COCHRAN.

Secretary of State:
T. T. NOCK.

For Treasurer:
J. F. SUTTERER.

Com. of Agriculture:
SID BERREY.

Railroad Commissioners:
H. H. BOLTON.
J. M. GREEN.

COUNTY.

For Sheriff:
H. A. HARRIS.

For Representative:
W. E. THOMAS.

Commissioner, 1st. District:
S. E. WALDRUP.

Commissioner, 2nd. District.
R. J. WILLIAMS.

Take all your complaints to the Lord; Congress has troubles of its own.

Mr. P. E. Alexanber, the Progressive nominee for State Senator, has been sick for two or three weeks and when he is able to do so he will be in the Campaign in this county.

Smile, Mr. Democrat! Sell your 8 cent cotton and buy high priced biscuit. Tell your neighbor about the war, and all the great things Woodrow and his crowd have done for you.

Why is cotton 12 cents in Liverpool and 7 cents in Alabama? And why are business conditions much better in Germany than in the United States? Will some free trade Democrat kindly explain?

The Democratic nominee for Representative says that he is in favor of a bond issue. How do the people of this county like that? Does this look like he will use his efforts to lessen the burdens of the tax payers or does it look like he will try try to increase them?

With the county already about $20,000,00 in debt why do the democrats of this county continue to insist on putting the county in debt $100,000,00 to put on the roads? Why don't they submit it to a vote and see what the people want before trying to run it over them anyway? Why does the democratic Probate Judge continue to insist on this? Why aren't they satisfied with putting the county in debt something like $20,000?

THE TARIFF AND WAR.

Democratic candidates for Congress, who have been consoling themselves with the thought that the stopage of European imports, due to the war, has had the same effect as a Tariff wall of prohibitive hight, and therefore has blanketed the Tariff issue for the purposes of the Congressional campaign, are simply reconing without the traveling salesman.

The traveling salesman will take pains to explain the situation to the dealers in all the cities, towns and villages. Take the hosiery salesmam, for instance. He will explain that the war has, in fact, cut off German importations. In a way it has been as though an exorbitant Tariff had been levied. No German hosiery is coming in. Thus, the American manufacturers might be said to have the market to themselves.

Exigencies of the war, however, cannot possibly produce the same beneficial results as a Protective Tariff. The saleman will explain that there are drawback to the war business. There are buyers, for example, who are under restraint for financial reasons incident to present conditions. The salesmen cannot sell his American hosiery if the customers have no money to buy.

The evil of regarding the Tariff as a local issue is to be found right here. It is of little benefit to any industry to be well protected by the Tariff if the rest of the country is not prosperous. A well-adjusted Tariff benefits business generally. There is no accident in the process. The nation itself is protected from cheap labor products from abroad and can pursue its way, with prosperity and high wages.

Moreover, the vaunted protection which certain industries are said to be receiving from the cessation of imports, take no account of the needs of the Treasury. Under a Protective Tariff ample revenue is obtained for the Government, while industry and wages are protected from the lower standards of wages that prevail abroad.

The war is apt to bring the Tariff problem home to the people in a new light. They have had their experience with a Tariff for revenue only for the first time in many years, and the younger generation of business men know more about the subject now than they did before the new Tariff law went into effect.—Washington Post.

COME OUT IN THE OPEN.

We want things done openly and honestly, and in good cool reason. We don't want things done in a fever of excitement, without any time to think. The former is always productive of right and steady action and results; the latter more often is the cause of wrongdoing and dissatisfaction.

Therefore, we would urge for the sake of the voters, that those who have any political fights to make before the election, make them now, and in time for due consideration before the ballot is cast. If one party has a charge to make against another, let it be done now, that the accused may have a fair opportunity for justifying itself in the minds of the people. For any party to fail to do this would be striking a blow at its enemy in the dark, without giving any warning.

As is already known, the Progressive party in this county is already waging its fight. For the past month speeches have been made over the county, each time with an open invitation to the Democrats to defend their party, and not one time have they accepted. We know not their reasons; it may be they have no principles to defend or it may be they are lying low to start a whirlwind of confusion at the last moment. We would warn the voter to be careful that he is not deceived and misled. Whichever way you vote you should exercise this caution, for it means justice to you and all parties. "What I say unto you, I say unto all, WATCH."

COMMISSIONER HERROD

We are glad to present to our readers this week a letter from our Commissioner, Mr. W. T. Herrod. We feel that many will be interested to read a communication from this gentleman of the court regarding the situation that has precipitated so much agitation in the past few months. His letter is very conservative in a way, being given to a strict presentation of some facts that have been disputed by some heretofore. We would like for you to observe as you read what he says, that the arguments which have been put forward by The Union-Banner from time to time regarding the conditions of our county are to all practical intents and purposes, the same as the facts which he states. We are pleased with Mr. Herrod's letter, not only because of the vindication which we find in it for our previous arguments, but also because of the spirit which he shows for being in favor of the rights of the common people, and the success of our Progressive ticket.

STINGERS

From The Yellow Jacket.

Wilson ought to thank his lucky stars for that war. Free Trade never could have survived a period of peace.

There is consolation in store for voters in the Fall Congressional election. For, no matter who is elected, it would be impossible to get a sorrow Congress than the present one.

The difference between the Democratic party and the Republican party is that the Republicans raise money to support this government by taxing the foreign manufacturer and the Democrat raise it by taxing Americans to suppart foreign manufacturers. That's the difference.

If this country had a protective tariff there would now be money enough to run the country without a Democratic war tax on a country of peace, and goods enough made by American workmen to prevent a Democratic panic. But Free Trade has depleted our treasury, busted our banks, shut out factories, and put our working men out of business. And now to cap the stack, Wilson slaps a $100,000,000, Democratic war tax on us, which is more individually than we would ever have had to pay under protection. Ain't Democracy a peach?

OUR COTTON PROPOSITION AND BANKING SITUATION

Mr. Editor:

Will you allow me space to say a few more words about the farmers cotton and banking system?

Some farmers don't seem willing to sacrifice any money at all to relieve themselves. They had rather trust the present banking system than one of their own. If we are not willing to put part of our money crop in a bank of our own, we just as well stop; for we know that money is the power of our business men, also the power of our government. Now unless we have some system of our own of controlling money and plenty of it, we will be left as usual; and I don't know of anything better than the $5 a bale plan for building stock in our bank. This would be shares of stock owned by those who sold the cotton, and I think that we ought to be willing to make this deposit for ten years, with the understanding that we are to let this deposit remain for ten years. Of course we could accept deposits from anyone, and pay same on demand as other banks, but let the $5 a bale deposit of stock be permanent for ten years. Then let this bank do all the cotton selling of the county.

By this method you see our representative would do the selling, and he would have a sayso about it. Of course we must be reasonable in the price.

Suppose we had this plan in force. we would more than make this $5 back this year. I venture to say we would make $10 to the bale this year. If we are not watchful we will get prejudiced against our home merchant and blame him with things for which he is not responsible. I think when we get this thing apjusted all business men will endorse it, for they know that which is to the farmer's interest is to their interest also. The merchant and the banker are not altogether to blame for us not having a system of our own.

There will be a discussien of this subject at Jackson's Chapel schoolhouse, 3 miles north of Clanton next Saturday night, Oct. 3. Everybody is invited to come and leave their poiitical prejudice at home.

Respectfully,
J. H. JACKSON.

Lomax, Ala., Sept. 28, 1914.

We offer a $25,00 reward for a copy of the Democratic platform as adopted by them in this State this year. We will gladly pay this to the Clanton Press, or to any democrat for a copy of the platform that the Democratic nominees are running on this year as adopted by them this year. We have asked the Clanton Press to publish this, and they don't seem to be willing to do so; and now we offer to pay them for their time and trouble. We would just like for the people of this county to see their platform, if they have one.

One of the democratic nominees for county commissioner was for a bond issue in 1913. Does this look like if he should be elected that he will do any thing to lessen the burdens of the tax payers of this county? But on the other hand don't it look like he will do as the rest of the democrats are doing—use every effort in his power to put the county further in debt? How does this suit the tax payers of this county?

Are You A Progressive?

Do you want better conditions in the South?
Do you believe in a Protective Tariff?
Are you tired of Democratic Blunders?
Do you want relief?
Would you welcome Prosperity?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUNE,

The Recognized Organ of the Progressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 50 cents brings the Tribune to your door for 52 weeks. Offer expires Jan. 1.

Will Pay 10 Cents For Your Cotton.

In view of the present financial condition of the country, and realizing that from the sale of cotton is the only way the people of this section have to get money, we hereby agree to accept cotton at 10c per pound from all who are indebted to us on former transactions, and as payment in any transaction we may make while these present conditions exist.

GOWAN BROTHERS

J. E. GOWAN, A. M. GOWAN

OIL AND COAL ARE DISCOVERED HERE.

It is being asserted around in town that the constructors of the city waterworks system, in boring the well on the north side of town, have struck a vein of coal and a flow of oil. All the adjacent property and farms near by have been leased or placed under option.

Rights to several tracts of land were secured by those in possession of the secret before the news leaked out; among them are said to be the Watts farm, the Willis farm and portions of the Cooley estate.

Information regarding the matter is hard to obtain. Secrecy seems to possess those who are on the inside. But some say there is no doubt as to the facts of the discovery.

Machinery is in operation in the big creek swamp near by making additional borings to the one by the waterworks company. Of course no one knows what the speculations may result in; but much subdued excitement seems to prevail regarding the prospects.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and [illegible] china there is nothing better [illegible] rice-flour cement. It is very [illegible] made, it being only necessary [illegible] rice flour or ground rice th[illegible] with cold water, simmering [illegible] over a slow fire until it thicken[illegible] by forming a most durable [illegible] substance which can be used [illegible] cold, in the usual way.

Wanted Information.

Half an hour after Mrs. [illegible] given her new maid an order [illegible] came uneasy and went to in[illegible] "Well, Mary, what has detained [illegible] Have you found my Keats, as [illegible] ed?" "Lor', mum," Mary ap[illegible] "I was just comin' back to ask [illegible] is a Keats."

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is" [illegible] asked, "that nearly all the great [illegible] of this world have been [illegible]" "I suppose," replied the old [illegible] "It's because they had to do [illegible] thing to get their minds off the [illegible] bies they had at home"—[illegible] Record-Herald.

PROVIDENCE BEAT [illegible]

There was a meeting [illegible] for this place on September [illegible] by the farmers to hear a report from the Cedar Grove [illegible] which was held last Saturday. The committee made their report, which was received.

A resolution was passed to the effect that all parties hold their cotton if they do not owe it, [illegible] parties in debt were advised to place their cotton in warehouses and stay the debts with the receipts till times get better.

Judge Reynolds and Mr. E. Thomas had been invited to the meeting, and after the Clanton meeting had finished Judge Reynolds made a speech of about one hour. Mr. Thomas made a strong speech and showed where he is for the common people.

After the speaking a vote was taken, and it was practically unanimous for the Progressive ticket. All this part of the county is largely the same.

CHAIRMAN.

Notice!, Farmers

We understand that it has gone out that our gin is not being operated this season. We wish to say just here that our gin is in first class shape. We appreciate your past patronage and ask you to continue with us. We assure you that we will give the best results possible.

We have obtained the service of Mr. W. E. Maddox, who is an experienced gin man. We will carry also a line of cotton seed meal and hulls, which we will exchange for cotton seed. Thanking you, We are

CLANTON GINNERY

J. A. MADDOX, Manager.

Farmers,

We understand that a number of ers are under the impression th er credit them for Ginning and Ties, but demand the cash whe ginned. THIS IS NOT TRU

We have our same old rules fo only observe them closer. We cotton as cheap as anyone in to you till the cotton is sold or you haul it away from the warehous ginning.

Having had our machinery put i condition, and being operated b men, we can assure you perfect

We also pay the highest cash pr

Chilton Fertilizer

uick Lunc

The Best serv town---Cleanl itary and well ed---Sandwich Short Orders.

E. C. Pop

CLANTON, AL

E. HOPK

Manufacturer of Ceme l kinds of building purposes Vell Curbing; Water-Proof B aults and All kinds of Ceme

Contractor for all kin ork and plastering.

Estimates carefully fur

Peoples' Ph

Clanton, Alab

he Wearing o

ins the Tramping of Dolla

For even the product of the tories, which use the best will eventually wear out. It behooves you, therefore, Best for the least money.

u'll Always Find T

KEMP BROT

lanton, Al

y 10 Cents
or Your Cotton

f the present financial
the country, and real-om the sale of cotton is
y the people of this sec-
get money, we hereaccept cotton at 10c
from all who are ins on former transac-
payment in any trans-
nay make while these ditions exist.

N BROTHERS
A. M. GOWAN.

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and c china there is nothing better rice-flour cement. It is very made, it being only necessary rice flour or ground rice tho with cold water, simmering over a slow fire until it thickens by forming a most durable substance which can be used cold, in the usual way.

Wanted Information.

Half an hour after Mrs. Richl given her new maid an order sh came uneasy and went to invest "Well, Mary, what has detained Have you found my Keats, as re ed?" "Lor', mum," Mary apolo "I was just comin' back to ask is a Keats."

Possible Solution.

"Why do you suppose it is," asked, "that nearly all the great of this world have been mar "I suppose," replied the old bach "It's because they had to do thing to get their minds off the bles they had at home."—Ch Record-Herald.

PROVIDENCE BEAT 13

There was a meeting ca for this place on September by the farmers to hear a rep from the Cedar Grove meeti which was held last Saturd The committee made their port, which was received.

A resolution was passed to effect that all parties hold th cotton if they do not owe it; parties in debt were advised place their cotton in warehou and stay the debts with the ceipts till times get better.

Judge Reynolds and Mr. E. Thomas had been invited the meeting, and after the ton meeting had finished Ju Reynolds made a speech of al one hour. Mr. Thomas ma strong speech and showed he is for the common people.

After the speaking a vote taken, and it was practic unanimous for the Progre ticket. All this part of county is largely the same CHAIRMAN

Farmers,

We understand that a number of our customers are under the impression that we no longer credit them for Ginning and Bagging and Ties, but demand the cash when the cotton is ginned. THIS IS NOT TRUE.

We have our same old rules for ginning; but only observe them closer. We will gin your cotton as cheap as anyone in town, and allow you till the cotton is sold or you are ready to haul it away from the warehouse, to pay for the ginning.

Having had our machinery put into first class condition, and being operated by experienced men, we can assure you perfect satisfaction.

We also pay the highest cash price for seed.

Chilton Fertilizer Company

uick Lunches

The Best service in town---Cleanly, San-itary and well cook-ed---Sandwiches, & Short Orders.

E. C. Popwell

CLANTON, ALA.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

Farmers

that it has gone ou
not being operate
Ve wish to say jus
gin is in first clas ppreciate your pas
ask you to continu
assure you that we
est results possible.

ned the service o
dox, who is an ex-
nan. We will carry tton seed meal an e will exchange fo
anking you, We are

N GINNERY
DDOX, Manager.

The Wearing of Shoes

ns the Tramping of Dollars Under Foot

For even the product of the best factories, which use the best materials, will eventually wear out.

It behooves you, therefore, to buy the Best for the least money.

u'll Always Find Them Here.

KEMP BROTHERS
lanton, Ala.

The Deserter

By John F. Bowdon.

I was tired of the navy
And the routine every day;
Seemed 'twould drive me crazy,
And like a fool I ran away.
The everlasting scrubbing, of
My clothes upon the sand,
Was against the grain you bet;
'T was more'n I could stand.

The easy part was going,
But the hardest was to stay
Among men who were honest;
Gee, it worried me each day.
For I was always thinking
Of a dark and gloomy jail;
I knew of course that eyeoy cop
Was camping on my trail.

I didn't start out bumming
Tho' I know some fellows do;
The job I got was paying,
And the chow I got was good.
My conscience kinda hurt me,
And the hurt grew worse each day;
My tho'ts were sorrow-laden,
And my hair was turning gray.

They called me a deserter,
But today I am a man;
For now I'm in the navy,
I came back to Uncle Sam.
You bet I sure got punished,
Bnt my conscience now is clear
I look all men right in the face
Without a bit of fear.

[Note—The above poem was sent to The Union-Banner by one who appears to be a member of the United States navy. No letter or explanation came with it, but we suppose it was meant for publication. Hence we publish it, as there may be some friend or relative of his here who would be interested.—Editor.]

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Duncan and children made a trip to Birmingham in an auto last Saturday, returning Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Hart have returned to Clanton after a delightful wedding trip to points in south Alabama. They will make their future home here, Mr. Hart continuing his connection with the Clanton Hardware Co.

J. A. Logan of Route 4 was a pleasant visitor to our office Saturday.

Calvin Wilson, Tom Littlejohn Ed Driver and Ed Littlejohn motored to Mineral Springs Sunday, via Jemison.

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch, Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Matthews composed an auto party to the Capital City Sunday.

R. T. Grant of Verbena was in Clanton Monday on business.

There have been some cases of scarlet fever reported in town.

G. W. Martin from up Jemison way was in to see us Monday. He says war, panic, cotton, stock law, and other things have got things going pretty well up where he lives.

Clark Harper, who is now located with the Gamble Hardware Company at Wetumpka, was exhibiting his smiling countenance to many of his old appreciative friends in Clanton Sunday.

Wallace C. Edler of Thorsby was in Clanton Tuesday on business.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhare will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

MARRIAGES

Marriage licenses have been ssued this week to the following persons.

John Devaughn and Miss Effie Deloach, J. T. Burnett and Miss Alma Anderson.

Colored Sim Crayton and Elmer Wood.

Mr. Cantey Brown has returned to his old time profession, and is successfully wielding the pen at a writing school at Elmore now.

Miss Emmette Matthews is still in an infirmary in Montgomery, as a result of an operation last week for appendicitis. The latest reports indicated that she is improving rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Bone left last Saturday for New Decatur, where they will make their future home. Mr. Bone will be engaged in the teaching profession at that place.

NOTICE

I have several one and two horse farms in the Mulberry district for rent. For full information either write to or call on me at Clanton Ala.
1-1-15. Mrs. Tipton Mullins.

A. R. Cooper is spending the week with his father at Talladega Springs, who is very ill. His brother J. D. is in charge of his business.

Mrs. L. M. Dykes and daughter of Birmingham spent last Saturday with Mrs. J. Q. Wade.

Mr. Frank Smith of Thorsby spent Saturday in Clanton.

Mrs. R. C. Marshall spent last Friday and Saturday in Maplesville.

Mr. Howard Harlan of Richmond Va., spent Saturday and Sunday with his sister Mrs. R. C. Marshall.

NOTICE

To those who are indebted to me, I wish to announce that I will accept cotton at ten cents per pound in payment of same, until further notice.

Respectfully,
V. J. Gragg, M. D.
Clanton, Ala., Sept. 21, 1914

W. A. Davis of Anniston was in Clanton this week on business.

Mrs. Rayfield of Birmingham is visiting in Clanton this week.

Uncle Jim Collins of Thorsby was here Tuesday night to furnish music for the Red Men's banquet.

Dr. Upchurch spent Monday in Birmingham on business.

Commissioners Court was in session the first of this week.

Most Skin Trouble Readily Overcome

The Active Principle of a Famous Remedy Works Wonders.

Many people have marveled the way S. S. S. overcomes skin troubles. The explanation is the fact that S. S. S. works in the blood and the blood is really a most intricate and extraordinary mass of arteries and veins.

When you come to realize that the skin and the flesh beneath are composed of a network of tiny blood vessels you solve the mystery.

There are wonderful medicinal properties in S. S. S. that follow the course of the blood streams just as naturally as the most nourishing food elements.

It is really a remarkable remedy. It contains one ingredient, the active purpose of which is to stimulate the tissues to the healthy selection of its own essential nutriment. And the medicinal elements of this matchless blood purifier are just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritious elements of the meats, grains, fats and sugars of our daily food.

Not one drop of minerals or drugs is used in its preparation. Ask for S. S. S. and just insist upon having it. And if you desire skillful advice and counsel upon any matter concerning the blood and skin, write to the Medical Department, The Swift Specific Co., 520 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Do not allow some careless clerk's eagerness over something "just as good" to induce you to part with the most thoroughly tried and tested blood purifier of all concerned, under your own name.

Have You Poultry Troubles ?

Cure the liver and you cure the bird. Nearly all poultry troubles are due to a disordered liver. Thousands of poultry raisers who use it all year round to keep their flocks in good health, highly recommend

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE

It's a Liver Medicine.
Also a strengthing Tonic.

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE is a splendid cure for liver trouble, roup and chicken cholera. Given regularly with the feed, in small doses, it also makes an excellent tonic.
F. J. Stowe,
Purcell, Okla.

25c, 50c and $1. per can.
At your dealer's.
P. B. 5

TREES TO SET

I am arranging to supply the trade a big lot of trees this winter; stock on hand after Nov. 15, and at prices much less than you geneally pay for such trees.
Judson Strock, Verbena.

Division Of Adams Estate

The old Adams estate, consisting of extensive property between third and fourth avenues, was divided among the several heirs Monday of this week. The division was executed in probate by J. P. VanDerveer, C. C. Pickett, and Mr. Bolton, of Birmingham who had been appointed as Commissioners to perfect the necessry arrangements No figures as to the value of the estate were obtaineble but the situation of the property is such as to make it amount to a great deal.

Drs. Roper and Broadhead have returned to medical school.

FOR SALE—Very desirable lot and house in Deatsville, Ala., short distance from depot. The house has waterworks connection; garden if desired. Excellent place for nice home. If interested write the Union-Banner, Clanton, Ala., for further information. tf.

WHEN YOU ARE NERVOUS

you have the first symptom of a run-down system, and nervous people too often conceal their aches and pains and suffer in silence, while, if neglected, this condition often foreruns more serious trouble.

If those so afflicted would stop taking medicine containing alcohol or drugs which menace the foundations of health, and just take the pure, strengthening nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, it would create new blood to pulsate through the organs, refresh their bodies and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shun substitutes.

Program

of Sunday School Convention of District No. 4 at Poplar Spring October 11th 1914.

10:00 a.m. Devotional exercises by Rev. L. Thomas.

10:15 The Home Department; what it is and why every school should have it, by Miss Lizzie Hoopes, Co. Supt. of Home Department.

10:40 The great need of missionary training and how we may obtain it, by Miss Hattie Jones, county missionary superintendent.

11:00 Our banner school standing, by Judson Strock, district President.

11:30 What is being accomplished by co-operative Sunday school work? by Rev. W. W. Carleton.

12.00 Dinner.

1:30 Devotional service by M. C. Crumpton.

1:40 Teacher training, by Miss Minnie Algood, State Field Secretary.

2:10 How the adult organized class may help the Sunday school by M. C. Crumpton, adult superintendent.

2:40 The teacher's qualifications, by Rev. C. H. Rogers.

3:10 Why every school should be a banner school, by W. E. Thomas, county president.

3:30 What forward step will my school take before our next convention?

Select time and place for next meeting; adjourn.

All schools in reach of Poplar Springs are requested to send delegates. Those coming by rail will get off at Falakto.

JUDSON STROCK, Pres.
Miss ANNIE REELE, Sec.

Saves Fisherman Trouble.

Harness to hold a fishing pole, so as to leave a fisherman's hands free to manage his bait or catch, is an English invention.

Help!

Begin to get ready to go to the Chilton County Fair where you will see exhibits of educational interest to young and old.

Up-to-date attractions that are clean, clever and wholesome.

Meet your friends and their friends at the best Fair ever held in Chilton County.

Catalogs will be sent out next week.

Oct. 26 to 31, Inclusive

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP." "HIS RISE TO POWER." Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andzrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. Constant bickerings wear out Mark's patience and he makes threats of divorce.

CHAPTER XIV.

In the Mold.

Then began what promised to become a rake's progress. Mark sought out new companions and got himself invited to join their revels. He tried hard, at first recklessly, then determinedly and then wistfully to enter into the spirit of dissipation. The attempt was a flat failure. The thoroughgoing habit of mind that looked unerringly for the last result saw through at once to the dregs in the cup. His companions privately laughed at the spectacle of this hard serious man awkwardly essaying the role of devil of a fellow; but for the humor he thus unwittingly provided they would soon have got rid of him as a death's-head at their feasts. He succeeded only in still further impairing his health, in acquiring a bad taste in the mouth and relaxing all along the line his habit of rigid abstemiousness.

After a few months he returned to the old routine.

"I hear," Henley interrupted a consultation one day to remark, "you've been sowing wild oats. Got 'em all harvested?"

Mark nodded, grinning sheepishly. "Crop's in the barn—and for sale cheap. I agree with the prophet that all is vanity."

"What made you do it?"

"I don't know. To see what it's like, I guess. But I didn't have the knack of it."

"Trouble at home," thought Henley shrewdly.

Aloud he said: "I imagine not. You'd better stick to business, where you fit in."

"I sometimes think that's all vanity, too."

"At least we have something to be vain over. And on the whole there's more romance in making steel than in helping to support the Tenderloin."

Mark made a gesture of disgust. After a frowning pause, he answered: "I don't know. The trouble is, I've lost the romantic point of view. To me the business is nothing but a money-making machine now—and something to do. I wonder why we work so hard to get money we don't need. We get no good out of it. Timothy Woodhouse gets more pleasure out of his flying machines that won't fly."

"Just wait," said Henley dryly, "until somebody tries to take it away from you. Nearly every man of unusual vitality goes sooner or later through the stage of questioning the existing scheme of things. Things are, is all the answer he gets. The sooner he quits asking questions, the better for his peace of mind."

They returned to the matter in hand, which was the fleecing of Timothy Woodhouse.

No one would have been more surprised than Timothy to learn that he had any fleece worthy of the attention of such shearers as Henley and Truitt. But years before a Lochinvar had come out of the West with stock to sell in the Iroquois Iron Ore Mining, Development & Transportation company. He had a gifted tongue. He departed for his own place, a richer and doubtless a wiser man, having received a profitable lesson in the credulity of his fellows. Later inspection revealed that the long-named company's properties consisted of an immense field of admittedly good ore, but its development work only of the extraction of the sample so proudly exhibited by the promoter and its transportation facilities of a franchise to build a railroad through 300 miles of wilderness. In those days the building of railroads was not lightly undertaken. The investment seemed to fall short of Lochinvar's prospectus.

"Naturally!" Timothy once said ruefully. "Since I invested."

But a time had come when makers of steel began to operate on a larger scale and to look far ahead into the future. The MacGregor company conceived the project of buying that ore field and building that railroad. It commenced secretly and leisurely picking up blocks of stock in Lochinvar's company; it could be bought for the proverbial song. But Henley got wind of it. He, too, began buying stock, secretly and swiftly, also for a song. By the time the MacGregor company learned of his rivalry, he needed but a thousand shares to own control of the company, its properties and franchises.

"And I know just where those shares are to be had," Henley told Mark. "Do you know one Timothy Woodhouse?"

"I bought my house from him. And he wants me to lend him money to build his new flying machine. He came to me," Mark chuckled, "as one inventor to another."

"Get that stock," Henley commanded. "Act quick and you can get it cheap. We can't build that railroad. Or rather, we won't. 'Let the other fellow blaze the path!'" This sneering quotation was from the illustrious but cautious Quinby. "That's what comes from working with a cow-

"I'll Give You," Proposed Timothy Eagerly, "a Half Interest in the Machine."

ard. But that's no reason why we shouldn't turn an honest dollar at the expense of MacGregor, is it?"

It is not, however, true, as alleged in the bill in equity Timothy was afterward induced by MacGregor agents to file against Mark, that "the said Truitt falsely and fraudulently and with intent to deceive and defraud, represented to the said Woodhouse that said stock was of no value whatsoever, the while knowing that said stock had the value hereinbefore set forth." Mark, who prided himself on his honesty, was always careful not to lay his projects open to legal interference. In this case, that special Providence which seems to guide the schemes of men of such honesty, graciously rendered legal fraud unnecessary.

"By George!" he exclaimed when at their next meeting Timothy, with the model before them, had explained his plans for the new machine. "By George! It may be—it may just be—that you've hit it. It sounds plausible, anyhow."

"I prize your opinion," said Timothy gratefully, "the more because you've done something mechanically yourself. I meet so much skepticism. Do you think you'd care to finance this?"

"Well," Mark returned to caution, "after all, aerial navigation is hardly in my line. I really ought to have some security, don't you think?"

"I'll give you," proposed Timothy eagerly, "a half interest in the machine."

Mark seemed to be fighting down an impulse. But he shook his head. "You see, its value would be scientific rather than commercial. And I'm just a plain money-grubber, you know."

Timothy sighed. "That ends it, I guess. All I've got is mortgaged to the limit now. I'm disappointed, though."

"Still," Mark went on slowly, "I'd like to do it. Haven't you anything that would give business instinct even an excuse to be silent?"

"Nothing. Unless," Timothy ventured timidly, "you could call Iroquois Iron an excuse."

Mark grinned broadly. "I've heard of that bubble."

Timothy, too, grinned, though unhappily. "Bubble, I'm afraid, expresses it exactly."

Mark spent a minute in frowning study of the model. "It would be something," he admitted at last, "to contribute even money to what might turn out to be the invention of the age. I believe—I believe I'll take the excuse." He made a sudden reckless gesture. "I'll do better. I'll go the whole hog and buy the stock. Mr. Woodhouse, you would talk the birds out of the trees!"

It was ridiculously easy.

But the event had a sequel. Scarcely a week passed when Timothy returned. Timothy was evidently excited.

"Have you discovered some new important principle of your machine?" Mark inquired.

"No," Timothy answered. "I have come to buy back that stock."

"Oh, no! I'm satisfied with my bargain."

"But," Timothy explained innocently, "I have discovered that it has a value in excess—very much in excess—of what you paid me for it."

"The less reason then," Mark smiled, "why I should sell it back to you."

"But," Timothy swallowed hard and down went pride, "you don't understand. It would be a great favor to me. I have been careless—I may as well speak out and say that I am a very poor business man. I have lost almost everything I inherited. What is left is mortgaged almost to full value, except this stock which I now find I can sell for enough to clean up my obligations and give me a new start."

"And which is now mine."

"Which is now yours, through a hard bargain—an inadvertently hard bargain, of course," Timothy added hastily. The troubled look in his eyes deepened. "And now I come to you as one gentleman to another, to ask you to release me from it."

"That would hardly be business-like."

"But this is not business. I said, as one gentleman to another." Timothy was guiltless of humorous intent. "For myself I shouldn't think of disturbing any advantage your interest in my work might accidentally give you. But to my wife and daughter, who are entirely dependent upon me, this would mean much."

"Isn't it a little late, after wasting your substance in riotous invention, to begin thinking of them? Besides," Mark looked at his watch pointedly, "I hardly see your right to ask me to give them the consideration you've never given them."

Timothy flushed painfully, rising. "You refuse, then?"

"I do."

"Then you had this stock in mind all along?"

"If you'd made as shrewd a guess before—" Mark grinned.

"I was told you are apt to do this sort of thing."

"The loser in a deal," Mark reminded him coldly, "always finds something to criticize. If there's nothing else I can do for you—good day, Mr. Woodhouse."

"So this is what you call a deal? I should choose another term. I shall take enough of your time to give you my view of it. You came to me to get that stock, but you did not come frankly. You resorted to subterfuge. You flattered me. You took advantage of your inside knowledge of its value and of the fact that I'm rather a fool in such matters to get it absurdly cheap. But I suppose one need hardly expect particularity of conduct from your sort."

Mark sneered. "At least you felt no obligation to particularity of conduct when you thought you were getting a good round sum for something of no value at all."

"That," said Timothy with dignity, "I supposed and you pretended was practically a gift to science. I shall keep you no longer, sir."

And Timothy stalked away. For several days Mark's familiars observed in him an unusual irritability of temper.

Steel had come into its own. It was the first principality of industry. Swiftly as the sun seeks its zenith, its leaders were rising to power and prestige, doing big things in a big, bold, precedent-defying fashion that stirred the world to a just admiration. And above the others—in the estimation of all who did not march with the army of steel—towered that giant MacGregor, and in his shadow but too big to be obscured wholly, Jeremiah Quinby, their names and fame known wherever the stout fabric was used.

After many years Quinby's project was a fact, the more splendid for the delay. It stood just across the street from MacGregor's library. This proximity called for a comparison, by which the Institute of Paleontology suffered no whit. Somehow its noble lines and masses, in exact copy of the Parthenon, seemed to suggest in its founder a simple majesty of character not shared by the author of the elaborate library.

MacGregor could not have believed that a comparison was intended, since he accepted an invitation to share with Quinby himself and an ex-president of the United States the honors on the occasion of the dedication. He, as did the ex-president, made a speech, in which he paid a high tribute to his "brother in the great work of distributing surplus wealth." This tribute Quinby, when his turn came, formally assigned to "the thousands of obscurely faithful" who had "given their strength, their courage, their patience and talent, nay, oft their very lives, to upbuilding the industry which made this project possible." Some of his hearers interpreted this merely as the too great modesty of superlative, triumphant genius. But when, expanding this text, he thus brought his peroration to a close: "Let labor and capital, the Siamese twins of production, dwell together in unity, in amity, in the forbearance that springs from love!" the audience applauded enthusiastically, reckless of damage to new kid gloves.

That evening, in the cells of the institute, was held a great reception. The Truitts were there—as who that counted was not?—but together only until they had reached the end of the receiving line. Mark betook himself to a chair in a corner occupied by the skeleton of some prehistoric monster and there watched the crowd.

He caught a glimpse of Unity, a beaming happy Unity, the center of a laughing group, and scowled angrily.

Though their life had been superficially unchanged, he had lost his freedom. It had been a jealous freedom that he did not want, paid for by the loss of even the pretense of affection, by an ill-disguised mutual aversion.

His reflections were interrupted by a hand on his shoulder. Henley sat down beside him.

"Taking it in?"

Mark nodded.

"We're outshone."

"As the stars by the sun. Do you care?"

"No!" snarled Henley, in a tone that gave his words the lie. Mark repressed another sneer. Here was Henley, the man of magnificent achievements, of real genius, jealous as a woman over Quinby's hollow glory!

"He seems," Mark nodded toward the resplendent Quinby, "to attract the women."

"It's mutual. As I happen to know."

"So? I'd have classed him with the vestal virgins. Isn't he a little old for the woman game now, though?"

"He's in his fifties," Henley said, "and well preserved. And the man who has nothing to do but to idle around the globe and spend the money others make is always easy picking for the Delilahs."

"Quinby doesn't just meet my notion of a Samson."

"Samson," returned Henley, who felt the better for his outburst, "was a penny-wit."

Later, Henley and Mark left their refuge and sauntered through the crowd. It chanced that Quinby espied them. He deserted an admiring group to greet them paternally.

"A lifelong dream has been realized, thanks partly to you"—he placed a hand on Henley's shoulder —"commander in the field. And to you"—he laid the other hand on Mark —"his chief lieutenant."

It was a striking tableau. Quinby, modestly unaware of the many eyes upon them, held it a moment, then gracefully withdrew.

"My commander in the field!" sneered Henley. "Drunk! Blind drunk with self-importance!"

"How much better are we?"

"Sometimes," Henley said coldly, "you talk like a fool." He strode away.

Mark, left alone, began to pick his path gingerly around trailing gowns and chattering groups, in search of fresh air and quiet. But once, as he was passing a group of men, a remark arrested his attention. He did not know the speaker, but he halted sharply and addressed him.

"Who was that you said committed suicide?"

The man looked at him strangely a moment before answering.

"Timothy Woodhouse. It was practically suicide. He insisted on going up in his new flying machine. Broke his neck, of course."

Mark passed on quickly. Not so quickly but that he overheard an explanation.

"The man that skinned Woodhouse."

CHAPTER XV.

Stuff of Dreams.

When his spirit for it was dying, Mark's campaign of conquest came to its grand climax—he became a stockholder in the Quinby Steel company, one of the "young partners" of whom Quinby, in all things abreast of his great rival, was wont to speak with such paternal enthusiasm. Up to this time he had been merely an employe, handsomely paid but finding his chief reward from Henley's profitable friendship.

When, through Henley, Mark laid the matter of partnership informally before Quinby, he was allowed to see through the philanthropist to—Quinby. At first Quinby unctuously but firmly refused his assent, turning arguments aside by the simple expedient of ignoring them. When Henley, at whose suggestion Mark had demanded the right to purchase stock, insisted with rising anger, Quinby donned a frigid dignity.

He Placed a Hand on Henley's Shoulder.

"Do you want the company to lose Truitt?" Henley demanded.

"I can not conceive," Quinby answered coldly, "that any man who owes as much to my company as Truitt does could be so lacking in loyalty and all fine sensibilities as to desert me."

"That," said Henley curtly, "is damned nonsense. The company owes more to Truitt than the stock we ask you over forty, more than to any other man—with one exception."

"I am glad," Quinby thawed slightly, "that you make an exception."

"Yes. Myself."

Quinby's face was a study.

"And," Henley continued, "you can let him have this stock or lose Truitt and me."

Thereupon Henley wrote out and gave to Quinby his resignation from the chairmanship. There was a tense silence while Quinby studied the paper.

"Very well," he said at last. He tore the resignation into little bits.

But it was a graceful surrender. During the pause Quinby had regained his poise. He was once more the gracious patron, apparently blind to Henley's show of dislike.

"Ah! my dear Tom," he shook his head smilingly, "that was hardly fair. You played upon my affection. You know there is no sacrifice I would not make rather than lose you."

"Humph!" grunted Henley. "This is no sacrifice."

"Of course," the philanthropist went on, "Truitt takes under our agreement."

And this launched another long argument. For under the Quinby company agreement—borrowed, indeed, from his friend and rival, MacGregor—any stockholder, upon written demand by three-fourths of the stockholders owning three-fourths of the outstanding shares, could be compelled to surrender his stock at its "book value;" a provision from the threat of which Quinby, owning the majority of the stock, alone was exempt. Had his own interest not been so deeply concerned Mark might have relished the spectacle of the tremendous arrogant Henley hurling himself in vain against the paternal Quinby. Mark did not deceive himself as to Henley's real purpose, which was not to serve him but to set up a precedent to upset the agreement.

"It isn't fair to Truitt," Henley protested vehemently. "It isn't fair to any one but you. How can he, how can I, how can any of us, know when you're going to make a deal with the others to kick him out and cheat him out of the real value of his stock?"

Tact was the one weapon Henley knew not how to wield. Quinby gave him a pained glance.

"You know I'm not a hard man. And you know that is a contingency not likely to happen."

"It happened to Cauler and Stebbins and New."

"Ah! But they," Quinby reminded him, "got an exaggerated idea of their importance to the company."

Henley glared. Quinby smiled.

The mellifluous voice flowed on. "You should know that men in my position may not consider their private impulses. Our wealth is a trust—a sacred trust." He paused, perhaps to control the rising emotion inspired by thought. "The secret of my success has been harmony in my organization. Harmony I must have—I will have. And so I must reserve the right and means to oust any who seek to disturb it. The work to which I have given myself—the projects you, I fear, hold so lightly—depends too closely on my business success to allow me to violate successful precedents. Even," he beamed on Mark, "even for the sake of your brilliant young friend. Even for you."

Quinby's face had not put off its smiling benevolent mask. His voice had not risen nor lost by so much as a note its wonted musical stately cadence. But Mark, a silent and almost forgotten listener, knew that in the last words menace spoke as clear and venomous as in the hiss of a snake. He could interpret the menace; Henley had rested too securely in his importance to the company; he now had his warning; like Damocles' sword the power of Quinby's contract rested heavy overhead.

If he had not known from Quinby's voice, Mark would have understood from him to whom the menace had been spoken. Henley's hands, resting on the desk, clenched until the nails bit into the palms. The ugly imperious face was deathly white. His black eyes blazed. Mark thought for a moment he was about to spring upon Quinby and inflict physical injury, or at least hurl at the vain shallow poseur the splendid defiance the man of real worth, of invincible and unpurchasable spirit. Because he had a profound respect and a sort of love for Henley, he wanted to see and hear that defiance. He forgot his own interest in the scene.

Henley reached again convulsively, for pen and paper. Quinby raised a hand—a beautiful, soft, perfectly manicured member—in humorous protest.

"My dear Tom!" How the purring paternal phrase, addressed to Henley, stung! Mark felt the hot blood rise, resentful for his master. "If you are about to resign again, I beg of you, consider. I have made one concession to that threat. But if you make it again, I shall be obliged to break off a relation that has been both pleasant and profitable. It will cost me something, perhaps, but—it will cost you more."

"Now!" muttered Mark.

Now was the time to hurl defiance, to overwhelm Quinby and Quinby's power under manly scorn. . . . Quinby, outwardly serene as midsummer's skies, smiled on. Henley was silent. The blazing anger in his eyes died down to a smoldering, sullen, futile rage. The pen dropped from his hand.

What a shattering of idols was there! Mark turned away that he might not see.

His glance fell upon Quinby. The mask of benevolence had been pulled aside. Ugly triumph and still uglier hate shone. In that moment Quinby's revenge for a thousand sneers and the open contempt of years was taken. Mark hated him.

After a long heavy silence Quinby turned to Mark. "Do you accept agreement?"

"It seems to be Hobson's choice."

Quinby rose and took Mark's hand in both of his.

"Let me be the first to welcome into the company. I'm sure we be—harmonious."

"I can see," Mark answered with shrug, "that harmony pays."

Quinby was gone. Mark, sick and saddened, watched a man, for moment mad, belatedly giving to his rage. He paced swiftly and forth across the room, like wild beast he had become. He incoherently the departed Quinby, pouring forth a flood of coarse phemies. He flung his arms smote and kicked chairs and desk though they had lives to be This, with Quinby present, would struck a responsive chord in barbaric soul. But this, with Quinby gone, from the man who had sat under threats, called forth only tempt.

"My success! My company! work!" Henley stopped, panting glaring, before Mark. "My God! you hear him? Fool—fool—fool!"

Mark shrugged his shoulders. mistake was in thinking him a

"And I—I had to sit there and his oily threats—"

"At least, you took them."

"—I, who made this company who gave him the money to advertise himself around the world—I—"

Henley Glared. Quinby Smiled.

the fool. You're the fool. We're fools, working our lives out to up this business while he, who nothing, gallivants about spending lions on his accursed institutions knowing when he'll close in on and rip us out of our jobs and digging profits—"

"I used to think that thing you, when I was in the mills. I suppose men think that about us now." Mark's laugh was a sneer.

Henley turned on him. "And you," he snarled. "I made you, too. I, I suppose, when Quinby crooks his whip, you, too, will fall into line help to rob me of the stock I've valuable. You, with your 'Harmony pays'—"

An hour before Mark might quailed before Henley's wrath. he did not quail.

"See here!" he said sharply, pushing away the fist under his nose. "Probably you're right. Probably I'll into line. I hope not—for my sake. But you can talk to me that when I give you the excuse. now you," he added coldly, "had pull yourself together. There are within hearing."

Henley dropped heavily into a Slowly the paroxysm subsided. lence Mark watched the white working face.

It was Henley who spoke first, surprisingly. "What are you ing?"

"I'm wondering, does money cowards of us all?"

Henley stared hard. For a Mark thought that again a match been touched to the magazine of rage. Then the red of shame into the older man's countenance made a gesture of dejection.

"You're a witness that it does."

Mark limped slowly away from Quinby building.

Now, by all the rules of the he played, was the time to exult. monster was tamed, or at least ever baffled; it need not, looking him, lick its slobbering chops. Whether or not the partnership—final of Eldorado's conquest—survived Quinby's treacherous caprice, the venturer would never again know haunting fear that lashed the He had no need to catch its hurrying pace.

Yet he did not exult. He had he had set out to win, and he not. His triumph was fact. But sense of it, the swelling of soul, surging passionate pride he had tasted in his young dreams, were Success was but figures on a balance sheet.

He had succeeded in a life in sentiment, brotherly kindness, were the badges of failure; thought of a weak Timothy house, dead in an hour of reckless bred by a cheat, could drive from his pillow.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Found in Sing Sing Prison.

Found, a photograph, a a young girl. Owner may by applying to the editor Sing Sing Star of Hope.

OTTON 10c
KING OF THE SOUTH
tion. Don't Sacrifice Your Crop have unbounded confidence in cotton, will take middling cotton direct the man who raised it at 10c per in exchange, or as part payment on Player Piano, Organ or Talking Machine.
prices are the lowest in the South. new pianos as low as $195.00; player $285.00; good used pianos at $125.00; organs at $35.00 and a new one at $55.00. easy and we will give as long as years to finish paying for a new Piano Player Piano.
Catalog mailed free on request. We can you some money if you will write us prices and ask for catalog A.
FORBES PIANO COMPANY
MINGHAM & MONTGOMERY, ALA.

lms Developed
10 Cents Per Roll
nts 3c and 4c Each
ompt attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
partment K Birmingham, Ala.

EE! IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY OUR FAMOUS VER ONE PEERLESS RAZOR STROP
ing one week, if you are convinced that it is the strop you ever saw, send us $1.00 by mail, return strop. Don't scrape and pull any Mail card today for FREE TRIAL. You will be the greatest comfort you ever had.
ELESS MFG. CO., 55 Ardmore Place Buffalo, New York

all others fail I-C-U-C ring and fall gives you Vim, Vigor and Vitality, blood tonic, liver toner, kidney strengthener, digestion and malaria. 50c and $1.00 bottles. Van Vettrah, Box 1455, Jacksonville, Florida.

ANTED Men or women to do copying at home; good pay for your spare time; refused work; no canvassing. Send stamp reply. Box 861, Ft. Worth, Texas

R SALE Well equipped newspaper plant first-class condition; live western Kentucky publishing town. Paying. Fine opportunity for hustler. J. Kirk Rowell, 429 W. Main, Louisville, Ky.

T A WAR MAP For a graphic, concise presentation of the European situation our double War Challenge comparison. Sent postpaid for 25c. Band Sales Company, Box 631, El Reno, Okla.

ENTS To introduce our new home remedies for Rheumatism, Nervous, Kidney and Lung troubles. Send for descriptive booklet. ROWE CO., 400 East 43rd, CHICAGO

Chinese Lucky Coin Every boy wants one novel watch charm. Prepaid for 10 cents. SUPPLY CO., Fillmore, California

PAY you $60 monthly co-operating with me. Spare time; no canvassing; no home work. Hawk, 138 S. 3rd, Harrisburg, Pa.

RE home plan to become independent; no capital required; spare time; no canvassing; be quick. H. E. BURNS, Thompsontown, Pa.

NE Farm, 100 acres, mile railroad town; central Mo.; incumbrance $3,000. Price $60 Write L. B. 11, GORIN, MISSOURI

RBERS Make face lotions, creams, shampoo; costs 5c; Sells you 25c. Samples alone. E. O. Haines, Box 91, McComb, Ohio

STCARDS I will send you 10 views of Chicago for 10c; 50 for Agency Co., 65 Maple St., Chicago

ENTS Sell our new vulcanizers; best made; big profits; repeat orders. Outfit half. Hurry. Latonia Specialty Co., Latonia, Ky.

TLERS Two profitable ways to make money. Send $1, free blue print and particulars. HYDE, Ecoings, Vancouver Island, Canada y's Salve For bleeding, itching piles, eczema, sores, wounds, chilblains. Mail $1. Hay Supply Co., 3803 Broadway, Kansas City, Mo.

WHOLE year's amusement: 8 games for 10c: chess, checkers, authors, dominoes, DOS. RICHTER, 307 Wisconsin Street, Chicago

A DAY for common laborers. Read new book "$1,500 Yearly Average Wage." Price EL HUDSON, Second Street, MAYSVILLE, MO.

Sale Best suburban drug store in city; clean, up-to-date, well established, growing, no cutting. Box 282, St. Joseph, Mo.

0 Hard Rubber, self-filling fountain pen for 50c, postpaid, gold point. Ideal Spec Co., 1230 Filbert St., Philadelphia ain did not invent war. He was ly the first murderer.

r foot-rot use Hanford's Balsam.

he chronic invalid is a blessing to doctor who needs the money.

ith a hard summer's work at hand, ford's Balsam should be in every ble. You will find frequent use for Adv.

ew men smoke for the sole purpose burning their money.

r. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. ar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take. not gripe. Adv.

ccasionally a man does a good d by mistake.

. F. Seeger of Jonesboro, Ill., says: anford's Balsam of Myrrh has en the place of all gall cures in this unity." Adv.

ome people marry in haste and live to have golden weddings.

RUB-MY-TISM
cure your Rheumatism and all es of aches and pains—Neuralgia, umps, Colic, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Sores, Burns, etc. Antiseptic odyne. Price 25c.—Adv.

rocrastination increases the des of anticipation.

Old Sores, Other Remedies Won't Cure.
worst cases, no matter of how long standing, cured by the wonderful, old reliable Dr. ore's Antiseptic Healing Oil. It relieves and Heals at the same time. 25c, 50c, $1.00.

It never rains but somebody forgets umbrella.

Whenever You Need a General Tonic Take Grove's
The Old Standard Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is equally valuable as a General Tonic because it contains the tonic properties of QUININE and IRON. It acts on the Liver Drives Malaria, Enriches the Blood and Builds up the Whole System. 50 cents turned to Mark. "Do you accept agreement?"

"It seems to be Hobson's choice," Quinby rose and took Mark's hand in both of his.

"Let me be the first to welcome into the company. I'm sure we be—harmonious."

"I can see," Mark answered with shrug, "that harmony pays."

Quinby was gone. Mark, sick and saddened, watched a man, for moment mad, belatedly giving to his rage. He paced swiftly and forth across the room, like wild beast he had become. He incoherently the departed Quinby pouring forth a flood of coarse phemies. He flung his arms about smote and kicked chairs and desk though they had lives to be taken. This, with Quinby present, would struck a responsive chord in Mark's barbaric soul. But this, with Quinby gone, from the man who had sat under threats, called forth only tempt.

"My success! My company! work!" Henley stopped, panting glaring, before Mark. "My God! you hear him? Fool—fool—fool!"

Mark shrugged his shoulders. "Y mistake was in thinking him a fo

"And I—I had to sit there and his oily threats—"

"At least, you took them."

"—I, who made this company who gave him the money to adve himself around the world—I—!

Henley Glared. Quinby Smiled.

the fool. You're the fool. We're fools, working our lives out to b up this business while he, who nothing, gallivants about spending lions on his accursed institutes—n knowing when he'll close in on and rip us out of our jobs and righ profits—"

"I used to think that about when I was in the mills. I suppose men think that about us now." Ma laugh was a sneer.

Henley turned on him. "And yo he snarled. "I made you, too. I suppose, when Quinby cracks whip, you, too, will fall into line help to rob me of the stock I've valuable. You, with your 'Harmony pays'—"

An hour before Mark might h quailed before Henley's wrath. N he did not quail.

"See here!" he said sharply, push away the fist under his nose. "Pr ably you're right. Probably I'll into line. I hope not—for my sake. But you can talk to me that when I give you the excuse. now you," he added coldly, "had be pull yourself together. There are cle within hearing."

Henley dropped heavily into a ch Slowly the paroxysm subsided. In lence Mark watched the white, working face.

It was Henley who spoke first, surprisingly. "What are you thi ing?"

"I'm wondering, does money m cowards of us all?"

Henley stared hard. For a mom Mark thought that again a match been touched to the magazine of rage. Then the red of shame c into the older man's countenance. made a gesture of dejection.

"You're a witness that it does."

Mark limped slowly away from Quinby building.

Now, by all the rules of the g he played, was the time to exult. monster was tamed, or at least ever baffled; it need not, looking at him, lick its slobbering chops. Whet or not the partnership—final tro of Eldorado's conquest—survi Quinby's treacherous caprice, the venturer would never again know haunting fear that lashed the cre He had no need to catch its hurry pace.

Yet he did not exult. He had w he had set out to win, and he ha not. His triumph was fact. But sense of it, the swelling of soul, surging passionate pride he had tasted in his young dreams, were Success was but figures on a balance sheet.

He had succeeded in a life in w sentiment, brotherly kindness, were the badges of failure, yet thought of a weak Timothy W house, dead in an hour of reckle bred by a cheat, could drive from his pillow.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Found in Sing Sing Prison.

Found, a photograph, a young girl. Owner may by applying to the editor Sing Sing Star of Hope.

COTTON 10c KING OF THE SOUTH

Farmers, Don't Sacrifice Your Crop

We have unbounded confidence in cotton, and will take middling cotton direct from the man who raised it at 10c per lb. in exchange, or as part payment on a Player Piano, Organ or Talking Machine.

Our prices are the lowest in the South. We sell new pianos as low as $195.00; player pianos $495.00; good used pianos at $125.00; upright pianos at $35.00 and a new one at $55.00. Our terms are easy and we will give as long as a year to finish paying for a new Piano or a player Piano.

Catalog mailed free on request. We can save you some money if you will write us before you buy and ask for catalog A.

THE FORBES PIANO COMPANY BIRMINGHAM & MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll

Prints 3c and 4c Each

Special attention and work the best.

COVELL COMPANY

Department K Birmingham, Ala.

FREE! IT COSTS YOU NOTHING TO TRY OUR FAMOUS NEVER STRIP ONE PEERLESS RAZOR STROP

For a limited time only, if you are convinced that it is the best strop you ever saw, send us $1.00 by mail. Regular price of the strop. Don't scrape and pull any longer with a dull razor. Don't strop your razor. Don't scrape and pull any longer with a dull razor. Don't strop your razor. Don't scrape and pull any longer with a dull razor. Don't strop your razor

Tax Notice!

Collector's and Assessor's Only Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes for Chilton County for the year 1914, and assessing the taxes for the year 1915: Hours 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jemison,	Beat	2	October 1	1914.
Thorsby	"	9	" 2	"
Cooper,	"	10	" 3	"
Maplesville,	"	7	" 5	"
Shoults,	"	7	" 6	"
Stanton,	"	8	" 7	"
Riderville,	"	8	" 8	"
Pletcher,	"	15	" 9	"
Kincheon,	"	6	" 10	"
Minooka,	"	13	" 12	"
Concord,	"	13	" 13	"
Mars Hill,	"	2	" 14	"
Macedonia,	"	14	" 15	"
Benson,	"	3	" 16	"
Culp School House	"	15	" 17	"
Robinson's Store	"	12	" 19	"
Mineral Springs,	"	12	" 20	"
Mullins' Academy	"	1	" 21	"
Cane Creek	"	11	" 22	"
Providence	"	16	" 23	"
Clanton, Beat 4, Oct. 24 to 31,			Nov. 7 to 14	"
Mountain Creek	Beat	5	Nov. 3	"
Verbena,	"	5	" 4	"
Evergreen	"	10	" 5	"
Enterprise	"	6	" 6	"

Take notice that under the present law we only make one round, and you are requested to meet us in the Beat in which you live. If for any reason you are unable to meet us in your own Beat, you will please meet us at Clanton on the days given there.

After the completion of the above round, and beginning on November 16, 1914, all assessments become delinquent, and after December 31, 1914, all taxes become delinquent. Therefore, if you wish to avoid payment of a 50c fee, you will please assess before Nov. 16, and pay before Dec. 31, 1914.

J. N. DENNIS, Tax Assessor. J. D. COLLINS, Tax Collector.

When You Come To Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you don't want to forget those little toilet and fancy articles your wife said bring back with you.

Also you want to keep in mind that the proper place to get them is at our store.

Not only fancy toilet articels, but also anything else that is usually kept in a first-class Drug Store. Patent Medicines.

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft drinks at the front, ice-cream, etc. COME to see us.

Langston Drug Co.,
Jemison, Ala.

Prepare For SYRUP MAKING

We can supply you with Syrup Kegs, Barrels and Cans, and copper for Syrup Pans.

Send Us Your Mail Orders

You will need Brick, Lime and Cement for foundations and other purposes, all of which you can get at our place.

Clanton Hardware Co.
Succcessors to
Gamble Hardware Co.

Farmers Hold Mass Meeting

Pursuant to a call, the farmers of the county met in mass meeting at Cedar Grove church last Saturday. J. W. Hayes was elected Chairman and J. M. Smith, Secretary. After hearing reports from different parts of the county regarding the cotton-holding proposition, a motion was carried that the chairman appoint a committee of five on resolutions, which was as follows: B. L. Cobb, S. E. Waldrup, N. J. Vinson, E. B. Popwell and W. B. Cooper.

The committee presented the following which was adopted:

1. We recommend that the farmers hold their cotton for 15 cents per pound and that cotton seed be sold at $25.00 per ton or used as fertilizer.

2. That we ask the ginners to reduce the price of ginning to 25 cents per hundred pounds of lint; and covering to 75 centsper bale.

3. That we cut our cotton average for 1915 to not more than six acres per farm horse; and as a means of reducing expenses, we recommend the following: (a) A repeal of the law creating the Jury Commis ion, and that the Commissioners court be required to select the Jurors for each term of court. (b) A repeal of the law creating the office of each tax commissioner, and that two competent men be elected to assess land values and said assessment to be made every four years. (c) That the nine congressional agricultural schools and six of the state normal schools be disposed of and the appropriations heretofore made to those schools be placed to the credit of the rural school. (d) That we discharge the county health nurse, at work in our county.

Many farmers expressed their unwillingness to purchase any commercial firtilizer for another crop, as they consider it a risky thing, if used to grow cotton.

The meeting adjourned at 4 p.m., subject to the call of the Chairman.

JUMBO.

Health in our part of the county continues very good.

I hear of some who have not finished fodder pulling yet.

There is much cotton to pick here; and everybody grumbles because they can't sell it. Why do they plant so much then? As a man soweth so shall he reap.

Let us all unite in everything; let us pray for peace among nations; let us all have more brotherly love one for another.

Our country is just what we make it. If we want to be prosperous we must be prayerful and peaceful: we must serve God with our whole hearts in haste. A. V.

FOR SALE—3 milk cows 2 giving milk one due to freshen December 8 next. 4 Bred Jersy heiffers, 2 Jersey bulls, one 17 months old, one 6 months old sire and grand sire Registered. This September 5th, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

Finds Cure for Epilepsy After Years of Suffering

"My daughter was afflicted with epileptic fits for three years, the attacks coming every few weeks. We employed several doctors but they did her no good. About a year ago we heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, and it certainly has proved a blessing to our little girl. She is now apparently cured and is enjoying the best of health. It is over a year since she has had a fit. We cannot speak too highly of Dr. Miles' Nervine."

MRS. FRANK ANDERSON,
Comfrey, Minn.

Thousands of children in the United States who are suffering from attacks of epilepsy are a burden and sorrow to their parents, who would give anything to restore health to the sufferers.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

is one of the best remedies known for this affliction. It has proven beneficial in thousands of cases and those who have used it have the greatest faith in it. It is not a "cure-all," but a reliable remedy for nervous diseases. You need not hesitate to give it a trial.

Sold by all druggists. If your druggist has not it, you can procure it for you from the manufacturers, when you write for the book described above. Address Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

BIDS WANTED.

Notice is hereby given that at a regular meeting of the Commissioners Court of Chilton county, Alabama, held at Clanton, Alabama, on the 14th day of September, 1914, a resolution was adopted providing for building or constructing a public highway from Clanton to the line of Chilton and Shelby counties near South Calera, by way of Thorsby and Jemison in Chilton county, along or near the line of the present highway between said points.

Said Road to be built by grading, chirting or graveling, the work to be done by contract, and said contract to be let to the lowest bidder under seal bids to be deposited with the Judge of Probate on or before the 26th day of October, 1914.

Said bid shall set forth the number of miles in length, and the kind of road whether graded, chirted or graveled, and the charge for each kind. Said bids shall be made upon plans or specifications to be provided by J. B. Converse, civil engineer, of Selma, Ala.

The payment for the building of said highway to be made by the county, by issuing county warrants payable in annual installments from one to three years; all persons offering to bid upon said contract for the building of said road or any section or number of miles of same, may deposit their bids in sealed envelopes marked bids for county road work, and addressed to Commissioners court on or before 12 o'clock the 26th day of October, 1914, at which time said bids will be passed upon by the Court; the Court reserving the right to reject any and all bids. Contractors bidding will be required, as evidence of good faith in making bids, to deposit with said bid a certified check for $750.00, or to deposit same with the Judge of Probate on or before said bids are opened and passed upon by the Court. E. B. DEASON,
9-24-4t Judge of Probate.

Daily Thought.

"The best and greatest thing a man or woman is capable of doing is his or her sphere."—Wendell Phillips.

Public Speakings

There will be speakings in the interest of the Progressive Ticket at the following times and places:

Everybody, regardless of political affiliations, are cordially invited to be present.

Mineral Springs, Beat 12, Monday, Oct. 5 at 7 p.m.

Oak Grove, Beat 2, Thursday, Oct. 8 at 7 p.m.

Jachson's Chapel, Beat 4, Saturdey, Oct. 10 at 7 p.m.

Competent speakers will be present to deliver the addresses.

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

FOR SALE—Blue stem seed wheat in any quantity at $1.50 per bushel. W. E. Thomas,
9-24 4t. Jemison, Ala

Lambasted.

A new trainer was engaged for the circus and was told to put a lion and a lamb through an act. He seemed nervous, and the next his boss asked him how he got along with the savage lion. "Sure, the lion didn't bother me much," he said, "but that durned lamb butted the daylights out of me!"

Red Men Give Entertainment

The members of Waxanatchie Tribe No. 9, Improved Order of Red Men, were hosts at a banquet to their friends at the Lodge hall in Clanton Tuesday night. Despite the fact that the weather was cloudy, there was a splendid crowd out, and the entertaining spirit of our ruddy warriors and braves was fanned to a brilliant glow by the presence of so many ladies and children.

Short speeches were made at the hall by J. P. Gore, W. S. Cox W. M. Wyatt, J. E. Robinson, P. O. Barrett, and A. R. Aldridge setting forth briefly to the visitors, some of the works and principles of the Order.

Refreshments were served under auspices of the Lodge at the Upchurch Drug Store.

A notable feature of the occasion was the music furnished by Uncle Virginia Collier and his

It is Just Natural To Admire Babies

Our altrustic nature impels love for the cooing infant. And at the same time the subject of motherhood is ever before us. To know what to do that will add to the physical comfort of expectant motherhood is a subject that has interested most women of all times. One of the real helpful things is an external abdominal application sold in most drug stores under the name of "Mother's Friend." We have known so many grandmothers, who in their younger days relied upon this remedy, and who recommend it to their own daughters that it certainly must be what its name indicates. They have used it for its direct influence upon the muscles, cords, ligaments and tendons as it aims to afford relief from the strain and pain so often unnecessarily severe during the period of expectancy.

Every woman should mention "Mother's Friend" when the stork is the subject of conversation. An interesting little book is mailed free upon application to Bradfield Regulator Co., 405 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It refers to many things that women like to read about.

Get or recommend a bottle of "Mother's Friend" to-day and write for the book.

Stevenson on Life.

We are not meant to be good in this world, but to try to be, and fail, and keep on trying; and when we get a cake, to say, "Thank God!" and when we get a buffet, to say, "Just so: well hit!"—Stevenson.

A Lecture On The Judgment

On the 15th inst. Mr. Thorne of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn lectured at the Waldrup school house in West Chilton to a large audience. "A reasonable and an unreasonable view of the judgment."

He said, "The unreasonable view is to look for it to be a day of 24 hours, a day of five cyclones, tidal waves, a day of dread when all in heaven and in eternal torment will be brought back to be judged; and the whole race will pass before the great white throne and be judged; a day of reeling tomb-stones.

"The reasonable view is to look for the judgment to be a day of one thousand years, a bright day, the grandest in all earth's history; a day of gladness, light, and progress when the dead billions will come back from death and be tried or judged; when the aged will be restored to youth; when life, perfect life will be everywhere; when the wilfully wicked and no others would be cut off in the second death never to live again; a day of the pure gospel, when all will be taught, and have one full chance of life; when sickness will flee away. Although a bright and glorious day, yet it will be ushered in with a trouble unparallelled."

Mr. Thorne is a lovely man and a good speaker.

CORRESPONDENT.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a declaration of fundamental principles deemed basic to the Constitution itself and borrowed from the English bill of rights of 1689. When the Constitution of the United States was framed and submitted to the people it did not have a bill of rights and it was so harshly criticized on this account that its friends promised to incorporate or add such a declaration, and the first ten amendments to the Constitution, made after the main instrument was adopted, were in fulfillment of this promise. All the State Constitutions now have bills of rights, practically identical with one another.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our many bors and friends for the kindness shown us during the recent ness and death of our mother Mrs. Mary Russell Payton. God's blessings blend with our most earnest efforts to show our honest gratitude to everyone.

Respectfully,
J. P. Smith and family
Clanton, Ala., Sept. 26.

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENS
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children
Given Special Attention
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, D.
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. Phone
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON

STOMACH SUFFERERS
If You Wish To Obtain Complete and Permanent Results Try
Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy
One Dose Will Convince You

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is known throughout the country. Many people have taken it for Stomach, Intestinal Ailments and report marvelous results and are highly praising it to others. Astonishing benefits sufferers have received even from one dose are heard everywhere to explain its tremendous sale. It never fails and those afflicted with Stomach and Intestinal Ailments, Indigestion, the Stomach and Intestines, Dizziness, Fainting Spells, Colic Attacks, Sick Liver, Constipation, etc., should by all means try this remedy. The benefits starting to users who have taken Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy have received is in most cases a lasting one. After you have taken this Remedy you should be able to digest your food, assimilate your food, enable the bowels to make pure red blood to every part of the body, giving firmness and strength to fibre and muscle, lustre and sparkle to the eye, clear healthy color to the complexion and activity and buoyancy to the brain. Do away with gloom and suffering and this is often brought about by even one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Interesting literature describing Stomach Ailments sent free. Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

For Nearly Half a Century
The Standard of Excellence

This record alone is convincing evidence of the high quality of Mastic Paint. Every gallon is guaranteed and must give absolute satisfaction. Be sure you get

MASTIC PAINT
"The Kind That Lasts"

It will save you many a dollar, because it wears longer, covers more surface, looks better than any other paint.

FREE Ask us for illustrated booklet, "Homes and How to Paint Them," also color card, or write direct to PEASLEE-GAULBERT CO., Incorporated, Louisville, Ky.

Upchurch Drug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

THE

THE UNION

RT OF THE COUN-HEALTH OFFICER

rning the present
lth conditions in East Chilton.

on, Ala., Sept. 25, 1914.—
V.H. Sanders, State health
Montgomery, Ala.

Doctor:—It gives me
e to herewith submit my
of the investigation made rd to Malaria in the neighd of the reservoir above n of the Alabama Power ny, at Lock 12.

I wish to state that I did mpt to cover the entire y adjacent to this rerer-t I am submitting a map
hows just what territory
vered and what condition nd in that part covered and I wish to say that I make a thorough inves
so far as I went.

lotted lines on the map
y route: Leaving Clan-ent via Thorsby in my rriving at Brewer school Beat 1, I left my car and about one mile to the across Waxahatchie creek
I entered a canoe and down the creek about es to where it flows into sa River; thence I rowed e river about one and a f to the mouth of Littleanch and rowing about d one-half miles up this
I left my boat and pro-on foot to W.L. Littleton's ec. 2, T. 23, R. 15. I was rried in a two-horse wag-ss the country to Brewer house at the south-west of Sec. 29. T. 24, R. 15.

red figures on the map rethe marginal number
y consulting this you
d the number of people in rticular family who have ills this year, the distance
e from the backwater, ether or not they have ills in former years. I ob-data by sending the word ys before, that I wished to e people on the afternoon 3rd inst., at their school, result was that enough met me to report 94 cases this year where there
ly been two cases in the ears.

e are many, I am inform-o failed to meet me. I of my own knowledge
e teacher at this place
ued his school before it was on confined and he survey.

It is that I di
all cases
those ca
ly those chills.
Before this secti crossing into Seel has been fordable
The
some sta sunken tion, and same c less exte er, but if ger see streams
tary to l
Here the floating some dy ers still merged.
In con
so far as dimber was des left stan ands of way or
I saw pools th
high wa places h
Res
Dear space to warm in when M
Frank G
and ma
Mr. R fore the
the Dem
Bull Mo
any it w said that going to Democr
funny to not out party.
strange giving t litical sp
not in th cal part in the in party, a as they
But th out and ic party.
know th
and they
I learn able rep
though,
They st
least 15 would v et. But a man that tick of this are too vote th
Novemb get into for the white v their ba party
This i tion for have str out any party is come to the seco
But let the goo will find need.

r New Location

e Headley Building across railroad from the Post Office
far the most convenient in town to get a Haircut or
e.

then too, you are always
in of keen razors, clean tow-
nd careful attention.

have heard of the excellene r service—now come have proven to you by an indi-
al test.

y job we do is done with a ch personal interest and t to make it the best.

nford,
Wagoner
and Glass

THE UNION-BANNER

THE UNION 11th Year | CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1914 | THE BANNER 21st Year | NO. 26

...T OF THE COUN-... HEALTH OFFICER

...ing the present ...th conditions in ... East Chilton.

...o, Ala., Sept. 25, 1914.—...H. Sanders, State health ..., Montgomery, Ala.

... Doctor:—It gives me ...to herewith submit my ...of the investigation made ...d to Malaria in the neigh-... of the reservoir above ... of the Alabama Power ...r, at Lock 12.

... I wish to state that I did ...mpt to cover the entire ...y adjacent to this rerer-...t I am submitting a map ...ows just what territory ...ered and what condition ...nd in that part covered ... and I wish to say that I ... make a thorough inves-... so far as I went.

...ted lines on the map ...w route: Leaving Clan-...ent via Thorsby in my ...rning at Brewer school ... I left my car and ...out one mile to the ...ross Waxahatchie creek ... entered a canoe and ... down the creek about ...les to where it flows into ...n River; thence I rowed ... the river about one and a ...les to the mouth of Little-...ch and rowing about ...d one-half miles up this ... I left my boat and pro-...d on foot to W.L. Littleton's ... Sec. 2 T. 23, R. 15. I was ... carried in a two-horse wag-... across the country to Brewer ...ol house at the south-west ...er of Sec. 29. T. 24, R. 15.

...e red figures on the map re-... to the marginal number ... by consulting this you ...find the number of people in ... particular family who have ...chills this year, the distance ...are from the backwater, ...whether or not they have ...chills in former years. I ob-...ain by sending the word ...days before, that I wished to ... the people on the afternoon ...ed inst., at their school, ... result was that enough ...ent me to report 94 cases ... this year where there ...y been two cases in the ...years.

...are many, I am inform-...s failed to meet me. I ...of my own knowledge ... the teacher at this place ...closed his school before it was out because of his being confined to his bed with malaria and he is not included in this survey.

It is needless for me to say that I did not try to account for all cases of malarial infection in those cases seen. I counted only those who suffered marked chills.

Before the rising of the water this section found an outlet by crossing the Waxahatchie creek into Seelby, but now the creek has been converted into an unfordable river.

The main stream contains some standing and thousands of sunken trees cut before inundation, and some floating logs. The same conditions prevailed to less extent along the Coosa river, but the worst element of danger seems to be in the small streams and flat hollows tributary to both the creek and river. Here thousands of logs are found floating and thousands of trees, some dying, some dead, and others still living are partially submerged.

In conclusion I will say that so far as I can tell, much of the timber was cut; little of that cut was destroyed and much was left standing, there being thousands of trees with the water half way or more to their tops.

I saw no ditches for draining pools that would be filled by high water. The water at some places has a very offensive odor.

Respectfully submitted,
V. J. Gragg, M. D.,
County Health Officer.

Mars Hill

Dear Editor: Please allow me space to say that politics was warm in this section last week, when Mr. Gant Riggins and Mr. Frank Goodgame passed through and made a speech at this place.

Mr. Riggins said he was before the people, not belonging to the Democratic, Republican nor Bull Moose party; if he claimed any it was the Socialist. But he said that he and Goodgame were going to vote for a part of the Democratic ticket. It was real funny to hear them say they were not out in the interest of any party. I told them it seemed strange that men would be out giving their time to making political speeches, when they were not in the interest of any political party. I told them they were in the interest of the Democratic party, and were hired to go about as they were doing.

But they are ashamed to come out and claim the old Democratic party. Why? Because they know that the wolf is in the flock and they are the hirelings.

I learn that they made a favorable report to Mr. Felix Dudley though, when they returned. They stated that there were at least 15 or 20 at Mars Hill who would vote the Democratic ticket. But I dare say there was not a man present who will vote that ticket. They are too sick of this administration. They are too tired of bosses, and will vote the Progressive ticket in November. They are going to get into a party that is clean and for the people and invites all white voters to came in and cast their ballot with the cause of the party.

This is the new party of salvation for us. The two old gangs have stripped us, and left us without anything. The Progressive party is the Good Semaritan, come to relieve us. This is only the second time it has been out. But let us all give our support to the good cause, and soon we will find the relief we so much need.

Respectfully,
J. N. Scott.

Joint Debate at The Court House

In accordance with Mr. L. R. Sawyer's letter in the Clanton Press and other correspondence with him, there will be a joint debate at the Court house in Clanton on Saturday, Oct. 17, 1914. There will be two speakers to represent the Progressive party and we hope the Democrats will have two speakers there to represent them.

Everybody is invited to come and hear the issues discussed.

Walnut Creek

The singing at this place the Fourth Sunday was a real success. The good singing and behaviour was above the ordinary, which made it an occasion of enjoyment and pleasure to all present.

The meeting being opened with a song, Prayer was offered by Mr. T. J. Powell, after which Prof. R. A. Smith was elected Chairman, who appointed T. G. Wyatt, John Cleckler and Hugh Thompson as Program Committee, who rendered the program for the morning as follows: W. B Culp, C. H. Robinson, L. F. Cleckler, R. A. Smith, and J. A. W. Mims; each 15 minutes.

The Chairman then adjourned for dinner, after which a bounteous dinner was spread to all.

The congregation reassembled at 1:30, when the committee rendered the program for the eveneng as follows: J.M. Smith, Ocie Baker, W. O. Rich, R.M. Robinson, W.B. Culp, R.A. Smith J.A. W. Mims and our esteemed Bro. Riley Robinson; each 15 minutes.

The organists for the day were W. B. Culp, Lee Grant, C. H. Robinson, and Misses Beatrice Mims, Roberta Driver, Lillian Robinson and Martha J. Mims.

J. A. W. Mims.

STORE AT JEMISON ENTERED BY ROBBERS

The storehouse of S. J. Reynold at Jemison was entered by burglars last Friday night, and quite a large amount of Merchandise was taken out, consisting mostly of jewelry and cutlery. The loss will be several hundred dollars. A telephone call was sent to Clanton at once for blood hounds to pursue the outlaws, but none were obtainable. No evidence has been produced leading to the identity of the robbers.

Public Speakings

There will be public speakings in the interest of the Progresssve party and the Pregressive candidates for state and county offices at the following times and Places:

Cross Roads schooloouse, Beat 9, Tuesday, Oct 13, at 7 p.m.

Bethsalem, Beat 6, Thursday, Oct. 15 at 7 p.m.

All are invited to come out to the speakings and hear the discussions. Competent and interesting speakers will be on program, and yon are sure to hear some things that will be of interest and value to you.

The Democrats are invited to meet in joint debate at these places if they desire to do so.

The Union Grove School Opening

The Union Grove Public school will open Monday, Oct. 12, 1914, at 8:30 a.m., Prof R. A. Smith as Principal and Miss Jewel Bratton, assistant. County Seperintendent W. T. Bean and County Nurse, Mrs. Marshall are expected to be with us at the opening.

All patrons are requested to be present.

Statement

Of the ownership, management, circulation, etc., required by the act of August 24, 1912, of the Union-Banner, published weekly at Clanton, Alabama, for October 1st, 1914.

Editor—W. M. Wyatt, Clanton, Ala.

Business Manager, M. D. Foshee, Clanton, Ala.

Publisher—W.M. Wyatt, Clanton, Ala.

Name of Corporation—The Union Publishing Company.

Stockholders—L.H. Reynolds, M. D. Foshee, Wiley Littlejohn, J. E. Littlejohn, J. N. Dennis, J. O. Middleton, W. M. Wyatt, all of Clanton, Ala.

(Signed) W. M. Wyatt, Editor

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 29th day of September, 1914.

M. D. Foshee, Clerk Circuit court of Chilton County.

GENERAL DISCUSSIONS BY MR. J.A. LINDQUIST

Thorsby, Ala., Oct. 2, 1914.

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me space for a few words in regard to the resolutions adopted by the Farmers Meeting concerning the schools of the state.

In the first place, very few farmers' or laborers' children get any education in our higher institutions of learning. But to annihilate them entirely would be wrong. Shall we have our public and common school teachers educated in other states, or shall we teach them at home?

My belief is that we should pay an equal amount to each pupil, whether in the higher or lower institutions; and where the tuition is not covered by our appropriation, let the individual pupils complete it. This is fair to all.

The amount of school money which the state now appropriates would have to be multiplied by five to come up to the average appropriation of all the states which is $20 per pupil; or multiplied by three to amount to $12 per pupil, or to allow the common sohools ten months of school per year.

Alabama ought to be ashamed of her standing—the second from the bottom. Only South Carolina stands below us.

The aforesaid resolutions gave $2.94 as the amount expended per pupil in the public schools, $300 and some per pupil in the higher institutions. But neither of these is correct; I can find nothing sustaining that statement. Only $4 per pupil is expended for both the higher and lower institutions. There are 750,357, whereby 385,442 or 51.8 attend schools, at an expenditure of 3,000,428. Now if the expenditure were paid on actual attendance or $1,541,7% the school money could be raised to $8.00 with hardly any extra taxes, the savings is $1,459,632.

There are out of the above numbers who attend the common schools only 475,048, where 291,340 or 618 attend school. The expenditure is $1,600,360 or a saving of 733,832 and there our other $4 could be added to equal $12 with very little additional taxes.

There are 275,309 within the school age whereof 95,109 attend the higher institutions at a cost to the state ot $1,101,236 and is spent according to actual attendance equal $376,536 at a savings of $725,800 and the 1200 allowance per pupil would come fairly in reach without extra taxes.

As for attendance a $4.00 cash is $1,531,796 or a balance of the amount.

Now as to the school taxes, there are about .25 on each $100 of valuation, and no tax payer ought to kick at all on .50 and 100 and a dollar (1.00) would be a fair appropriation. As a rule such is a demonstrated fact. $1 per year, per head for school means from $50 to 100 income a year per man as an average case. As educating well our boys and girls, is similar to spending money for good seed corn; as both poor education and poor seed corn lead to poverty.

As an actual shown record the south Central states children get 41.2 day school at a cost of $1.05 whereas in the north Central, get 82.2 day at a cost of $3.23 the lowest in the North.

Now the expenditure we pay for good schools and good roads are wise and cheap, and will come back 10 fold. But it is up to the farmers and common people to eliminate extravagance and needless offices at high salaries. Then tax land held for speculation, or laying idle to its full value. Then tax all income over 1000.00 and all inheritance for near kin, 108 and about 25c on distant kinship, that will place the burden of taxes on those able to bear it best. And enact a law that all notes and bonds are not collectable unless tax collector has fixed his stamp or name to it and taxes paid.

For the roads, work all convicts possible to spare in each county, one part raising their own food and cloths needed for all.

The price of 25,000 is out of reason. Cotton seed are worth $16 spread over land as fertilizer. None should sell for a cent less, and if farmer has stock, seed are worth 21.00 as feed and manure combined.

Jury commissioner and tax commissior should be voted out by legislature, or the people to vote out the legislature.

There should be three men for land assessors, but why not let the assessor do the assessing as is done in the north and Europe, and not having that extra amount to pay. The assessor goes to each real estate property and assess at full value, and two-thirds of that is the assessed valuation.

I, as one citizen, think we should not discharge the health nurse but rather give her more power within reason, and her word to be obeyed, especially in regard to vaults and cleaning up also wells, if she is competent to test the water; not otherwise.

On Mr. Herrod's remarks I will say that if the people must vote on a bond issue, why not on a time warrant. If the people see fit they can legally repudiate them.

Yours respectfully,
J. A. Lindquist,
Thorsby, Ala., R.F.D.

CHILTON COUNTY WOMAN WINS 2ND PRIZE

At the Birmingham State Fair on individual display Farm Products.

Register Chanc'y 9Aug12

Much congratulation has been extended to Mrs. S. E. Bruce by her friends here, and througout the county on her victory in winning the second prize of $150 on the individual display of diversified farm products, at the Birmingham state Fair, in addition to the premium of $50 for having her display placed ahead of time,—thus making a total of $200.

If the women of the county, or even the entire South, would display the mastery and industry of Mrs. Bruce, in managing the economic home problem, no war or industrial panic could seriously affect our common welfare. The victory of Mrs. Bruce should be taken as a matter of county pride by every citizen of Chilton, and her example should be practiced by many both men, women and children the next ensuing year.

Pates Chapel

Editor Union-Banner:—Please let me have a few words regarding the war and cotton situation. To me everything seems in a rather bad fix; but this all shows us what the democratic party will do. They say it is the war in Europe that causes cotton to go down; but I believe the trouble is at Washington, and it begins right there with Wilson and the Democratic Congress.

Behold, Gant and Frank have come; Moses has gone, but you can give some account of him. We all know they are just out to try to deceive the people in any way they can. The Democrats think that they might get a few votes for their ticket; but Gant says he is a Socialist, but we don't know what in the d—l Frank is.

I was glad to read Mr. Thomas's letter last week. I knew where he stood. He has always been with the common people, and is always ready to help the laboring man. I am sure if the people of Chilton elect him for Representative, he will work for the betterment in every way.

The Old Coon.

Card of Than...

We wish to thank our ...bors and friends for the kin... shown us during the recen... ness and death of our mo... Mrs. Mary Russell Payton. God's blessings blend with ... most earnest efforts to show ... honest gratitude to everyon...

Respectfully,
J. P. Smith and w...
Clanton, Ala., Sept. 28.

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug...
Clanton, Ala.

GRADY REYNOLDS
Attorney at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENS...
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M.
Surgery and Diseases o...
Women and Childr...
Given Special Atten...
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30
Smith Building, - Clanton

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, D...
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKI...
PHYSICIAN & SURGE...
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to ...
Special attention given the E... Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON

STOMACH SUFFERERS
If You Wish To Obtain Com... and Permanent Results T...
Mayr's Wonderful Stomach R...
One Dose Will Convince Yo...

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Known throughout the country. Many ... people have taken it for Stomach, Li... Intestinal Ailments and report marve... sults and are highly praising it ... Astonishing benefits sufferers have ... even from one dose are heard every ... explain its tremendous sale. It rar... fails and those afflicted with Stomach and Intestinal Ailments, Indigestion, ... the Stomach and Intestines, ... Fainting Spells, Colic Attacks, ... Liver, Constipation, etc., should by ... try this remedy. The benefits stomach ... ers who have taken Mayr's Wonderful ... ach Remedy have received is in ... a lasting one. After you have ... Remedy you should be able to digest ... similate your food, enable the heart ... pure red blood to every part of the ... ing firmness and strength to fibre and ... lustre and sparkle to the eye, clear ... color to the complexion and activity ... liancy to the brain. Do away with ... and suffering and this is often ... even one dose of Mayr's Wonderful ... Remedy. Interesting literature and ... describing Stomach Ailments sent ... Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-1... ing St., Chicago, Ill.

...y Half a Centu...
...dard of Excellence
...is record alone is convincing ...e of the high quality of ...int. Every gallon is guaranteed ...give absolute satisfaction. Be...
...TIC PAINT
...Kind That Lasts"
... dollar, because it wears longer, ...ks better than any other paint.
...ted booklet, "Homes and How ...so color card, or write direct ...rporated, Louisville, Ky.
...Drug Co.
... Ala.

...ur New Location
...e Headley Building across ...railroad from the Post Office ... far the most convenient ...m town to get a Haircut or ...
...een too, you are always ...h of keen razors, clean tow-...l careful attention.
...ave heard of the excellene ...r service—now come have ... proven to you by an indi-...l test.
...y job we do is done with a ...t personal interest and ...to make it the best.
...nford, Wagoner and Glass

Something For Your Money

We will send you The Union-Banner and The Montgomery Daily Times one year for $2.00; or we will send you The Union-Banner together with The Alabama Weekly Times a year for $1.00

These liberal offers are strictly for cash in advance. The Montgomery Daily Times is a clean, well edited paper and is dedicated to the service of the citizens of Alabama.

THE UNION-BANNER
Clanton, Ala.

WARRANTS FOR FIRST QUARTER

Pensions Warrants Aggregating Approximately $290,000 are Sent Out by the State Auditor.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS ITEMS

Doings of the Various Departments of the Commonwealth Given for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Pension warrants aggregating approximately $190,000, covering the first quarter of the fiscal year 1914-15, have been sent out by State Auditor C. Brooks Smith. These warrants were paid on October 1.

Because of the large number of illegal pensioners removed from the pension rolls of the State, the amount paid out for pensions during the first quarter of the fiscal year of 1914-15, beginning October 1, was $35,422 less than the amount paid for pensions during the same quarter last year, according to a statement issued at the office of C. Brooks Smith, State Auditor.

The total sum paid to pensioners for the first quarter of the new fiscal year was $271,533. The amount paid out during the first quarter last year was $306,955. The total number of pensioners on the roll this year is 15,323 as compared to 17,442 last year.

Following is the statement issued by Auditor Smith:

October 1, 1914:
On roll first class	1,101
On roll, second class	4,118
On roll, third class	10,103
Total on roll	15,322
Total amount disbursed	$271,533
October 1, 1913:
On roll, first class	1,211
On roll, second class	4,246
On roll, third class	11,985
Total on roll	17,442
Total amount disbursed	$306,955

Showing $35.42 less disbursed on October 1, 1914.

Ask Mill Men to Meet.

Cotton mill owners of every section of the country will be asked to meet in Alabama during the next few weeks for the purpose of agreeing upon some uniform and standard price of the fleecy staple. This announcement was made by the Governor of Alabama, who declares that he will at once issue a call to the spinners of this state to co-operate with him in bringing together for a conference the leading mill operators of the entire country.

It is the opinion of the Governor that if the cotton spinners of the South and East will pledge themselves to purchase cotton at a uniform price—say at the cost of production—that it will have a strong tendency to relieve the present crises in the cotton market, and that it will also serve to improve business conditions generally throughout the country. According to the plan proposed, an effort will be made to induce the manufacturers to purchase cotton at 10 cents a pound, the price which is declared to be equal to that of the cost of production.

The Governor stated that this plan was favored by William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, and that he had given Mr. McAdoo his assurance that he would use his effots in calling together a national conference of cotton spinners. It is proposed by the Governor that the conference be held in Montgomery, though he declared that Birmingham or Mobile would serve equally as well for the purposes of the convention.

Still's Books Are Correct.

The books and accounts of Probate Judge M. D. Still, of Elmore County, are correctly and accurately kept, according to a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by G. F. Sedberry, Examiner of Public Accounts. Examiner Sedberry discovered that Judge Still had not paid over to the State Auditor $375, collected from a sewing machine company, which has been withheld pending a decision of the Supreme court. When informed that the Supreme Court had ruled that this money should be paid to the state, Judge Still immediately settled.

Figure of Morgan in State Building.

Lee Cowart, Commissioner of Immigration, announced that arrangements have been made for the placing of a plaster cast of the late Senator John T. Morgan in the Alabama building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which will be held next year at San Francisco. Mr. Cowart says that this cast will be twice life size and will be placed in the Alabama building as a tribute to the efforts put forward by Senator Morgan in the construction of a canal between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The contract for the construction of the Alabama building will be let October 15, according to Mr. Cowart. The first contract will call for an expenditure of about $20,000 and more money will be spent later on the building.

Fulenwider Nominated.

Republicans of the Ninth Congressional district have notified Secretary of State Cyrus B. Brown of the nomination for Congress of Robert Fulenwider of Birmingham. Mr. Fulenwider will oppose George Huddleston of Birmingham.

Illiteracy Alarming.

Illiteracy in Alabama is alarmingly excessive and is due to a lack of adequate school facilities according to a pamphlet issued by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. There are at present 306,857 white children in Alabama between the ages of 10 and 20 years, and of this number 26,259 are unable to read or write. This means that one child out of every twelve in the state is illiterate. These figures were compiled by Superintendent Feagin from figures gathered when the school census was taken last summer.

Randolph county has a larger percentage of illiterate white children than any other county in the state, according to the figures compiled by Superintendent Feagin. These figures include children between 10 and 20 years of age. Lowndes county has the smallest number of illiterate white children. Montgomery county ranks third.

Considering white and negro children, Jefferson county ranks first as far as the smallest percentage of illiteracy is concerned. Wilcox county ranks last. Montgomery ranks as the forty-sixth county when white and negro children are considered.

Rutland Succeeds Hobdy.

Prof. J. B. Rutland, of Auburn, was appointed State High School Inspector to succeed Prof. J. B. Hobdy, resigned, according to announcement made by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. Professor Rutland assumed his duties at once and is making an inspection tour of the county high schools of the state. Prof. Hobdy, whom Prof. Rutland succeeds, was recently appointed rural school agent to succeed Prof. N. R. Baker, resigned.

Superintendent Feagin stated that all of the high schools of the state will be inspected by Professor Rutland during the next thirty days. Professor Rutland will be assisted in the inspection work by Prof. J. S. Thomas of the University of Alabama.

There are fifty-four county high schools in the state and they will all be inspected within the next thirty days. Reports of the inspections will be filed with Mr. Feagin. Monthly reports of the work done at the high schools will also be filed at the Department of Education.

At the capitol a conference was held by Mr. Feagin, Professor Rutland and Professor Thomas. At this conference Mr. Feagin outlined his plans and made suggestions concerning the work he expects to be done.

Professor Rutland is at the head of one of the departments of English at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn and is one of the most able educators in the state.

Not Taxable, Says Commission.

Public utility corporations which are subject to a franchise tax and which have complied with the law in making report to the State Tax Commission, are not taxable on solvent credits, it was held by the commission. Any corporation, however, against which no franchise assessment has been made, is liable for taxation under the solvent credits law, it was especially pointed out.

The following statement was issued by the State Tax Commission through Henry P. White, Associate Member:

"The State Tax Commission unanimously decided, with the approval of the Attorney General of Alabama, that public utility corporations, which are liable for a franchise tax under Article 19 of the Code, are not taxable on solvent credits owned by them, provided they have complied with the requirements.

Warrants to Sheriffs.

State Auditor Brooks Smith mailed warrants to sheriffs of Alabama aggregating $65,000, which represents one-half of the amount due them for feeding prisoners for the past nine months. The fund appropriated by the legislature for feeding prisoners was exhausted last January, and sheriffs carried their accounts until the beginning of the new fiscal year. The remainder of the amount due them will not become available until the legislature makes provision for the payment, inasmuch as the law expressly states that for the year beginning October 1, 1914, only one-half of the appropriation of $130,000 shall be available, and that the remainder shall not be sent out until March.

Pitts Succeeds Shivers.

William L. Pitts, Jr., of Uniontown, was appointed by the Governor to the office of Probate Judge of Perry County, to succeed the late Judge J. B. Shivers. The new Probate Judge is a warm personal friend of the Governor, and has been the recipient of other honors during the present administration. He was a member of the Governor's staff and was tendered a place on the supreme court bench several months ago. Another citizen who was mentioned for the vacant judgeship was William Fowlkes.

R. F. D. Men to Attend.

Fifty delegates from the Alabama Rural Letter Carriers' Association will meet here October 21 and will attend the sessions of the Alabama Good Roads Association meeting, according to word received at the office of W. S. Keller, State Highway Engineer. The rural letter carriers will discuss good roads problems and the needs of the roads of the state at present. The rural letter carriers traverse all the roads in the state and are familiar with good roads and bad roads.

AISNE A BLAZING VALE OF DEATH

SAYS ENGLISH WAR CORRESPONDENT

London.—A correspondent of the Times, writing from behind the lines at Senlis and Chantilly, says:

I have passed through a smiling land to a land wearing the mask of death; through harvest fields rich with great stacks snugly builded against the winter to the fields of a braver harvest; by jocund villages where there is no break in the ebb and flow of everyday life to villages and towns that despoiling hands have shattered in ruins.

And I have passed up this Via Dolorosa toward the very harvesting itself — toward those great plains stretching away on the banks of the River Aisne, where the second act of this drama of battles is at this moment being played.

Details of this fight are very scanty, but partly from personal observation and partly from information which has reached me I know that the struggle so far has been a terrible one, equal to, if not greater than, the struggle on the banks of the Marne.

Battling for Life.

The events of Monday revealed a foe battling desperately for his life; and this defense of General von Kluck's army demanded of the allies, and is demanding, their utmost strength and determination.

Picture this battlefield which before these lines are printed will assuredly have taken its place with that of the Marne as one of the greatest combats of the greatest war. Through the middle of it flows the great river, passing from the east to the west. The banks of the river here are very steep. Above the plain, which sweeps away from the northern bank, rises the "massif" of Laon. It is an ideal area for great movements and for artillery work directed upon the valley of the river. Pass eastward a little, there are the heights behind the city of Reims and above the Vesle, a tributary of the Aisne. Here again nature has builded a stronghold easy to defend, difficult exceedingly to attack.

I know of heroic work against these great lines, work that will live with the most momentous of this struggle. I know of smashing attacks the thought of which takes one's breath away. I have heard narratives of the trenches and of the bridges—these engineers, French and English, have indeed "played the game"—which no man can hear unmoved; how the columns went down again and again to the blazing death of the valley, and how men worked, building and girding in a very inferno—worked with the furious speed of those whose time of work is short.

Tells of Heroism.

And in the trenches, too, the tale of heroism unfolds itself hour by hour. Here is an example, one among ten thousand, the story of a wounded private: "We lay together, my friend and I . . . the order to fire came. We shot and shot till our rifles burned us. Still they swarmed on towards us. We took careful aim all the while. 'Ah, good, did you see that?' I turned to my friend and as I did so heard a terrible dull sound like a spade striking upon newly turned earth. His head was fallen forward. I spoke, I called him by name. He was moaning a little. Then I turned to my work again. They are advancing quickly now. Ah! how cool I was. I shot so slowly . . . so very slowly.

"And then—do you know what it feels like to be wounded? I rose just a little too high on my elbow. A sting that pierces my arm like a hot wire—too sharp almost to be sore. I felt my arm go away from me—it seemed like that—and then my rifle fell. I believe I was a little dazed. I looked at my friend presently. He was dead."

Make Great Stand.

So, on these green river banks and across these fair wooded plains the Germans make their great stand—the stand that if they are defeated will be their last in France. And meanwhile behind them lie the wasted fields and the broken villages. It is impossible adequately to describe the scenes which I have witnessed on the line of the great retreat, but here and there events have had place, which, in truth, cry to the heaven for report. Of such is the grim story of Senlis.

I spent many hours in Senlis and I will recount that story as I saw it and as I heard it from those who lived through the dreadful procession of days. On Saturday, September 5, the Germans reached this beautiful old cathedral town and entered into occupation. They issued a proclamation to the inhabitants calling upon them to submit and to offer no sort of resistance on pain of severe reprisals.

People Are Reckless.

But the inhabitants of Senlis had already tasted the bitter draft of German war making. The people had become bitter to the point of losing care of their own safety. They were reckless, driven to distraction.

Bitter was the price exacted for this recklessness! The trouble began on Tuesday when, exasperated beyond measure by the invaders, a brave tobacconist declared to a couple of the Prussians: "I serve men, not bullies." He followed his words with a blow delivered fiercely from the shoulder.

The infuriated soldiers dragged him from his shop and hurled him on his knees in front of the door. His wife rushed out shrieking for mercy. A shot rang out. . . . Another. . . . Man and wife lay dead.

Immediately the news of this act flew through the town. Outraged and furious, the conquerors marched instantly to the house of the mayor—their hostage—and arrested him. They conveyed him without a moment's delay to the military headquarters, where he was imprisoned for the night. On Wednesday morning a court-martial sat to decide his fate. A few minutes later this brave man paid for the indiscretion of his people with his life, dying splendidly.

Relieved by Turcos.

And then guns were turned on this town of living men and women and children. Shells crashed into the houses, into the shops, into the station. At Chantilly, seven kilometers away, the amazed inhabitants saw a great column of black smoke curl up into the air; they guessed the horrible truth. Senlis was burning.

The work, however, was interrupted. At midday the glad tidings were heard, "The Turcos are here." Within the hour broken and blazing Senlis was relieved and rescued. The Turcos pursued and severely punished the enemy.

Today these streets are terrible to look upon. House after house has been shattered to pieces—broken to a pile of stones.

One Big Heartache.

London.—The Westminster Gazette publishes a letter from a correspondent who obtained special permission to visit the Aisne battlefields. The letter does not deal with the military operations. The writer says:

"The whole district northeast of Paris is one big heartache. Imagine driving in an automobile through the lovely roads of France, with the harvests ripe and trees laden heavily with fruit and everywhere in the fields, on the roadside, on hill and in valley, sitting and lying, are not harvesters, nor holiday-makers, nor happy idlers, but dead men, stiff and stark, covering the fair fields.

Dead Stand in Trenches.

"Men in uniform lay or sat or stood as they were shot or had fallen from mortal wounds. Until I saw with my own eyes dead men standing or leaning stiff against their fellows in the trenches and actually against the earth of the trenches itself, I had not believed the stories that had reached Paris of this fact.

"It is impossible to conceive a nightmare more hideous.

"At a small village at no great distance from Cotterets we came upon a German surgeon, assisted by a French Red Cross nurse, operating in an open yard with several Prussian wounded, but most of the cases were past saving, although undoubtedly all that was humanly possible with the limited means at his disposal was being done. Two British officers near by also were being attended to, but scant hope was entertained of their recovery.

"An undeniable fact is that both the English and French armies are particularly scrupulous in their treatment of German wounded."

Suffer, Defying Death.

London.—A picture of the sufferings of the German troops, cramped in miles of underground trenches and galleries along the Aisne river, is given by the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail.

He says that the autumnal weather with its warm sunshine in the day time, damp nights, and bitterly cold dawns, is extremely trying to the men who are compelled to spend every minute in the same section of the damp, depressing trenches.

Alarms Occur Often.

If the men step from their trenches to the level ground, they do so at the risk of their lives.

At night the chances of an unexpected attack from the allies' infantry are so great that every German soldier must be at his post in the narrow ditch which is his home and defense, sleeping as best he may with his rifle at his side, ready to spring up at any moment at the alarms, which come very frequently these dark, cloudy nights.

The nerves of the sentries are sorely tried. They mistake the most innocent sounds for French infantry creeping up. When a sentry, tricked by his nerves, fires his rifle he brings the whole advanced post up at double quick, and it finds that there has been a false alarm.

WAR COSTS ENGLAND $25,000,000 A WEEK

London.—The government is expected shortly to make a further issue of $75,000,000 treasury bills. In the last 11 days of September supplies cost in excess of $75,000,000, the bulk of which went for war, while in the preceding week $42,595,000 was absorbed in the same way.

The government balance on hand September 30 does not exceed $80,000,000. The war is costing more than $25,000,000 weekly, the expenditure on "supply services" having increased by $211,910,000 during the eight weeks of the war.

The stock exchange committee is making inquiries into certain transactions on behalf of German interests before the war. Punishment is urged for those who accepted German orders which helped the panic.

Miss Amy Wren, a Brooklyn lawyer, has an extensive practice among the Chinese.

NEWS ITEMS OF ALABAMA

Not a vacant business house in Union Springs.

One gin at Ashville has ginned 100 bales this season.

Planing mill at Brent has shut down.

Average size Alabama farms is 79 acres.

Florence is now under commission government.

Covington county is to have a new court house.

C. N. Parnell was named as postmaster of Maplesville.

Twenty-five divorces were granted within fifteen days in Birmingham.

W. S. Tisdale, of Andalusia, has bought more than 100 bales of cotton at 10 cents.

President Wilson nominated Judge Richard W. Walker, of Huntsville, to be judge of the Fifth federal circuit to succeed the late Judge Shelby.

R. J. Cornelius, near Cordova, raised the best pumpkin crop in the state. His biggest is 5 feet 10 inches around and weighs 104 pounds.

Delegates to represent Alabama at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Farmers' National Congress, which will be held at Fort Worth, Tex., were appointed by the governor.

Madison county carried off the first prize for county agricultural exhibit at the Alabama State Fair, Birmingham, according to the announcement of the decision of the judges. The second prize was won by Morgan county.

In the case of the State against Luther Sims and Henry Weight, the two negroes who murdered J. Fletcher Turner, September 2, which was tried in Circuit Court at Dadeville, the jury returned a verdict fixing the punishment of both negroes at death, and Judge Brewer sentenced them to hang on October 30.

Twenty thousand bales of 10-cent cotton will be moved from the Montgomery market within the next few days, according to Duncan May and Bruce Kennedy, president and secretary, respectively, of the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce, who returned from the convention of commercial executives at Cincinnati. A great amount of the cotton will be bought under the "buy-a-bale" plan.

Engagements of space in outgoing vessels, both for South American and European ports indicate that there will be an early revival in the exportation of lumber through the port of Mobile. This fact has produced a more hopeful feeling in all branches of trade and industry, overcoming the depression that has existed since the beginning of the European war. The export movement of cotton was begun last week, when engagement was made for several hundred bales of the staple from a North Mississippi point to Liverpool, through Mobile.

An anonymous circular which was scattered over New Decatur on the day of the city election there, September 21, has been the subject of much comment, and in his charge to the grand jury of the law and equity court, Judge Thomas W. Wert instructed that body to inquire into the matter. The circular, which was unsigned, charged that Bank street (Decatur) merchants paid Decatur lawyers $2,000 to make speeches against the change of name of New Decatur to Morgan City.

The treasury department has deposited $13,029,746 in 23 states for fall crop moving purposes up to September 28, according to an announcement by Secretary McAdoo. Of this sum Missouri has taken the largest amount, $1,550,000, with Maryland second, $1,450,000. The other states and amounts follow: Alabama, $300,000.. Arkansas, $175,000; Florida, $81,250; Georgia, $368,750; Kentucky, $1,375,000; Louisiana, $700,000; Mississippi, $150,000; North Carolina, $456,250; South Carolina, $525,000; Tennessee, $625,000; Texas, $753,530; Virginia, $798,750; Colorado, $449,996; Illinois, $1,200,000; Indiana, $150,000; Iowa, $250,000; Kansas, $25,000; Nebraska, $325,000; Oklahoma, $93,500; Washington, $87,500; New York, $11,000,000.

Fire of unknown origin at Red Bay caused damage estimated at $20,000, burned six business buildings and several residences. Of the $20,000 loss half was covered by insurance.

Georgiana has sold the bonds voted for school and water. Sold $10,000 school bonds and $14,000 water bonds.

One firm in Greenville has bought $1,600 worth of Butler county oats.

Lumber company at Georgiana has begun to make furniture.

Many Covington county farmers are storing their cotton in their yards.

George Turner, formerly of Alabama, and formerly senator from Washington, has been defeated for the democratic senatorial nomination.

Capt. John Craft, president Alabama Good Roads Association, announced that he will wear nothing but cotton this winter.

At the Baldwin fair this year a feature will be community exhibits from several parts of the county.

The buy-a-bale movement continues to spread.

John Owens, near Samson, gathered 10 chestnuts that weighed a pound.

Better Biscuits Baked With

You never tasted daintier, lighter, fluffier biscuits than those baked with Calumet. They're always good—delicious. For Calumet insures perfect baking.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap baking powder. Don't be misled. Be economical—use a wholesome product. Calumet is far superior to sour milk or soda.

How Europeans Get Our Gold.

Do you know just how Europe recently got that $125,000,000 in American gold. Well, here is the way it was done: Europeans hold large amounts of American securities, that is to say they have bought bonds issued in this country. When the crisis came they saw the need of actual money in place of these bonds. They cabled to their American brokers to sell at the market price, they took whatever they could get, for there was always something doing, so the sales were heavy.

The purchasers of these bonds paid their checks. These the sellers cashed at their banks and got currency. The currency of the United States is made good by the deposit of gold in the teasuries. For every gold certificate in existence there is the actual metal in the treasury. The brokers, getting the currency from the banks, went to the sub-treasury in New York and asked for the gold. They received it and shipped gold to their customers abroad.

Fashion Note.

"One blessing, at least, will come to us from this dreadful war. We shan't be inundated with all those French fashions."

The speaker was a leading woman. She resumed:

"At a club dinner the other night a man fashion writer—man fashion writers are the best—said to me: "'A truce to these foreign styles. They are caricatures.'

"'Caricatures?' said I. 'Caricatures? Yes, perhaps. But wouldn't it be more accurate to call them take-offs?'"

Good Reason.

It was a very youthful class in physiology.

"Why," asked the teacher, "should we to eat soup first when one is hungry?"

The pupils stared at her blankly. Then Jamie enlightened them from the depths of his experience.

"You can get it down faster," he announced.

What It Takes.

"I've got lung power enough for the cornet."

"Have you got courage enough?"

New Jersey's 1913 mineral production was valued at $49,716,000.

ERMANS ADVANCE AGAINST BELGIANS

GIAN FORCES HAVE BEEN FORCED TO FALL BACK TO RIVER NETHE.

TILLERY FIRE IS FIERCE

ans Make Fierce Attack on Al- Center at Roye—Russians Push Germans Back Into Prussia.

York.—The determined efforts Germans are making not only to their lines in the north of France, win back some of the territory lied forces have succeeded in tak- from them since the great battle Aisne began, are indicated in official announcements from the ch war office.

Germans have continued their of desperate attacks on the ch left wing, and in the center the prince's army, which includes fteenth corps, has attempted to ce through the wood of La Gru But in all of these endeavors, ac- g to French accounts, the Ger- have been repulsed. The crown e's army even has been driven ward the north a mile or two. Belgium, however, the Germans been more successful, for the n legation at London admits that e east of the River Senne the n forces defending Antwerp, aft- desperate resistance of five days, been obliged to fall back to the Nethe, so terrific has been the n artillery fire. But the declara- made that the Belgians intend st the attack on Antwerp to timost.

latest official communication Petrograd describes the battle of stowo, in Russian Poland, as de- g into one of extreme violence, ermans supplementing their ar- fire with furious counter at- In an encounter between the division of the German cavalry ssian cavalry the Germans are ed to have been routed with loss, carrying their infantry with them.

Russians have occupied Ray- Kalvary and Mariampol, in Po-

Russian emperor, according to a grad announcement, has left the for the war zone. The German or is said to be at Thorn, West , close to the Russian frontier.

ANS ARE DRIVEN BACK

grad Says Russians Made Bril- t Bayonet Charge—Push Ger- mans Back Into Prussia.

don.—C. P. Sturk, correspondent London Daily News at Petro- telegraphs that Russian infantry, esult of brilliant bayonet charges, riving the Germans back into Prussia in the direction of Lyck. sian infantry also charged the ans who were besieging Augus- compelling them to abandon their is the first time in the northern one that there have been genu- fantry battles and the Russian s have proved their great su- ity in this class of fighting.

euter dispatch from Petrograd, ing the German attack on the lki-Olita railroad, says the Ger- made Vilna their objective, dis- ing Kovno, and attacked stub- , finally retreating before Rus- ayonet charges, but in order.

E CENTER OF BATTLE

h Official Statement Says There No New Details to Give Out. Impression Favorable.

on.—The official communication here says:

ere is no new detail to announce. eneral impression is favorable."

don.—Roye, the little town on ain road from Amiens to Noyon, ights around which have been al- ly occupied by the French and rmans during the past week, is e center of a battle of great vio-

Germans, who are fighting stub- to protect their flank at this have brought up re-enforce- but according to the French of- communication all their attacks been repulsed.

action, however, is still proceed d upon it much depends, for if rmans are beaten their line of unication at Tergnier will be se- threatened.

British Steamers Reported Sunk.

don.—The following official ment, issued in Berlin, has been ved here by wireless:

e German cruiser Karlsruhe has seven British steamers in the ic."

on.—Now that the Germans ceeded in clearing East Prus- the Russians, German army of- are giving their views as to the n condition of the Russian em- soldiers and officers.

OF

se in Uninned 100
has shut rms is 79
mmission
e a new as post-granted ngham sia, has f cotton ed Judge sville, to al circuit
elby.
Cordova,
p in the 0 inches
ds.
bama at eting of Congress,
t Worth,
e gover-
off the tural ex-
Fair, Birnnounce-
judges.
by Mor-
ainst Lu-
the two Fletcher
as tried lle, the ing the t death.
them to 10-cent
e Montext few May and d secre-tgomery return-commernati. A will be plan.
outgoing can and at there
e expor-port of duced a branches ning the ince the
ar. The was be-agement
d bales ississipgh Mo-ich was on the re, Sepbject of harge to d equity
Vert in-into the
was un-et (De-ur law-
against Decatur has de-tes for
to Sepnounce-
Of the largest aryland states a, $300,- Florida,
entucky,
0; Mis-
arolina,
525,000;
$53,530;
$449,- Indiana,
as, $25,- ahoma,
New
ed Bay $20,000, nd sev-
00 loss
e. s voted $10,000
bonds.
bought oats.
na has farmers
their
of Alar from ed for ination.
t Alan, an-ing but r a feats from ntinues gather-pound

Better Biscuit Baked With

You never tasted daintier, lighter, fluffier biscuits than those baked with Calumet. They're always good—delicious. For Calumet insures perfect baking.

RECEIVED HIGHEST AWARDS
World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, Illinois.
Paris Exposition, France, March, 1912.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Cal more economical—more wholesome—given Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

How Europeans Get Our Gold

Do you know just how Europ cently got that $125,000,000 in A can gold. Well, here is the w was done: Europeans hold amounts of American securities, is to say they have bought bon sued in this country. When th crisis came they saw the need tual money in place of these They cabled to their American kers to sell at the market price.
took whatever they could get there was always something so the sales were heavy.

The purchasers of these bonds their checks. These the cashed at their banks and got cy. The currency of the United is made good by the deposit in the teasuries. For every tificate in existence there is th ual metal in the treasury.
brokers, getting the currency
the banks, went to the sub-trea
New York and asked for the gold. They received it and gold to their customers abroad.

Fashion Note.

"One blessing, at least, will to us from this dreadful war shan't be inundated with French fashions."

The speaker was a leading woman. She resumed:

"At a club dinner the other a man fashion writer—man writers are the best—said to
"'A truce to these foreign
They are caricatures.'
"'Caricatures?' said I. Carica Yes, perhaps. But wouldn't it be accurate to call them take-offs?"

Good Reason.

It was a very youthful physiology.

"Why," asked the teacher, "is to eat soup first when one is hungry?"

The pupils stared at her Then Jamie enlightened them
the depths of his experience.

"You can get it down faster," announced.

What It Takes.

"I've got lung power enough the cornet."

"Have you got courage enough?"

New Jersey's 1913 school
tion was valued at $49,716,

ERMANS ADVANCE AGAINST BELGIANS

GIAN FORCES HAVE BEEN FORCED TO FALL BACK TO RIVER NETHE.

TILLERY FIRE IS FIERCE

Make Fierce Attack on Al- Center at Roye—Russians Push Germans Back Into Prussia.

York.—The determined efforts Germans are making not only to lines in the north of France, win back some of the territory lied forces have succeeded in tak- from them since the great battle Aisne began, are indicated in official announcements from the war office.

Germans have continued their of desperate attacks on the left wing, and in the center the prince's army, which includes eenth corps, has attempted to through the wood of La Gru- But in all of these endeavors, ac- to French accounts, the Ger- have been repulsed. The crown 's army even has been driven ward the north a mile or two. Belgium, however, the Germans been more successful, for the legation at London admits that east of the River Senne the forces defending Antwerp, aft- perate resistance of five days, been obliged to fall back to the Nethe, so terrific has been the artillery fire. But the declara- made that the Belgians intend the attack on Antwerp to most.

latest official communication Petrograd describes the battle of in Russian Poland, as de- into one of extreme violence, Germans supplementing their ar- fire with furious counter at- In an encounter between the division of the German cavalry Russian cavalry the Germans are to have been routed with loss, carrying their infantry with them.

Russians have occupied Ray- Kolrary and Mariampol, in Po-

Russian emperor, according to a announcement, has left the for the war zone. The German said to be at Thorn, West close to the Russian frontier.

ERMANS ARE DRIVEN BACK

Petrograd Says Russians Made Bril- liant Bayonet Charge—Push Ger- mans Back Into Prussia.

London.—C. P. Sturk, correspondent the London Daily News at Petro- telegraphs that Russian infantry, result of brilliant bayonet charges, driving the Germans back into Prussia in the direction of Lyck. Russian infantry also charged the Germans who were besieging Augus- compelling them to abandon their this the first time in the northern that there have been genu- infantry battles and the Russian have proved their great su- in this class of fighting.

latest dispatch from Petrograd, the German attack on the Olita railroad, says the Ger- Vilna their objective, dis- Kovno, and attacked stub- finally retreating before Rus- bayonet charges, but in order.

E CENTER OF BATTLE

Official Statement Says There No New Details to Give Out. Impression Favorable.

—The official communication here says:

"There is no new detail to announce. general impression is favorable."

London.—Roye, the little town on main road from Amiens to Noyon, heights around which have been al- occupied by the French and Germans during the past week, is center of a battle of great vio-

Germans, who are fighting stub- to protect their flank at this have brought up re-enforce- but according to the French of- communication all their attacks been repulsed.

action, however, is still proceed upon it much depends, for if Germans are beaten their line of communication at Tergnier will be se- threatened.

British Steamers Reported Sunk.

London.—The following official issued in Berlin, has been here by wireless:

"The German cruiser Karlsruhe has Seven British steamers in the —Now that the Germans ceeded in clearing East Prus- the Russians, German army of- are giving their views as to the qualities of the Russian em- soldiers and officers.

CONTAGIOUS!

(Copyright.)

REPULSE GERMAN ATTACK

Allies' Pressure Tells on Germans. French Forces Reach Practically to Belgian Border.

London.—The battle of the Aisne finds the allied armies pushing with all the strength they can bring to bear in their great effort to outflank the German right wing and force it back from its line of communication through Belgium.

There is evidence that this movement is beginning to tell, and that unless something unforeseen happens this portion of the German army must fall back to another defensive line.

The French official report says the action continues to develop to the northward, so that the French left must be pushing toward Cambrai, as it was in the neighborhood of Albert.

Even farther north than this the French cavalry is operating and last week a German force which was sent to Orchies, 16 miles southeast of Lille, to punish franc-tieurs for an alleged attack on a German hospital at that place met with superior forces and had to fall back.

The Germans, too, admit that they have been unable to arrest the French advance against their right and also that the allies have advanced on their right front. Indeed, there seems to be some agreement in the official reports of the belligerents on the events in this part of the battlefield.

JAPS CLOSE ON KIAO-CHAU

Invest Heights Around Tsing-Tau. Overlook German Position—Evacuate Line of Defense.

London.—The Japanese occupied all the high ground outside Tsing-Tau (seat of government of the German concession of Kiao-chau) overlooking the German's main line of defense, says a statement given out by the official news bureau. The communication continues:

"They began an attack on the advanced positions four kilometers (two miles and a half) from the enemy's main line at dawn. In a spurt of fierce flame from sea and land they drove the enemy from his position."

Peking.—The Germans in Kiao-chau have evacuated the Waldersee line of defense before an overwhelming force of the enemy. Tsing-Tau is now completely invested. The German losses were small.

This information is contained in a dispatch received here from a German source at Tsi-Nan, Shan-Tung, which evidently is a wireless communication from Tsing-Tau. It adds that the Japanese armored cruiser squadron bombarded Tsing-Tau Monday without doing any damage.

GERMANS BESIEGE ANTWERP

Commence Attack on First Line of Defense—Village People Flee to Forts.

Amsterdam.—The Germans have commenced their attack on the first line of defense of Antwerp, according to disptches received by the Amsterdam papers. Moll, an important railway junction near the Dutch border, was occupied by the Germans, and now the Germans who again occupy Malines, began a bombardment of Lierre, directly in front of Antwerp. They also continued their bombardment of Forts Waehel and St. Catharine. It is believed heavy Austrian artillery is being used.

Lierre, according to a message to the Handelsblad, has been under shell fire since early morning. The people at first hid in the cellars, but subsequently fled to Antwerp, being joined by fugitives from the surrounding villages. It is reported that one shell fell on a hospital, killing nine persons.

Concentrate on West.

London.—Fighting of the past few days, which took the form of heavy offensive operations, has not changed to any marked extent the positions of the opposing armies in Northern France.

Indian Troops Land.

London.—The war information bureau made it known that Indian troops were landed in France. The point of landing was not revealed, but it is presumed the troops disembarked at Marseilles.

GERMAN FLANK EXTENDED

French Claim Progress at Several Points in Argone—Bloody Artillery Duels—Win at Roye.

Paris.—The following official announcement was issued here;

"There is nothing of particular importance to describe except in the region of Roye (on the French left wing), where a violent action has turned successfully in our favor, and in the Argonne, where we have made progress at several new points.

"The general situation remains satisfactory."

London.—The battle of the Aisne, now nearing the end of its third week, soon will outstrip in respect to time the greatest fought at Mukden nearly 10 years ago, but still no decisive result has been achieved.

The French official communication condensed into about 30 words was one of the shortest given to the public since the war began. It records that progress has been made by both right and left wings of the allied armies, but gives no details or the extent of the progress between the lines.

Military experts believe the great claws, as they have been described, continue to open to clutch at the outspread wings of the German army, particularly the right, which forms the upright portion of the L, and now has its back to the east, fighting with desperation to prevent the French left from encircling or smashing it along most of the front, estimated at 180 miles in length.

The artillery has played by far the most important part in the struggle, but on the German right lighter guns, cavalry and infantry are doing most of the fighting with a stubbornness and disregard of life that people so often have said in recent years modern soldiers never would display.

IMPORTANT BATTLE FOUGHT

French and Germans Hold Center of Stage—Berlin Silent on Operations in France.

New York.—For the moment, all interest is fixed on the territory occupied by the French left wing and the German right wing, where the most determined fighting of the battle line is going on. The allied forces gradually are moving northward, and, according to the French official statement, that battle continues to develop more and more toward the north, the allies attempting to get beyond the extremity of the German line for the great outflanking movement which has been the object of their operations.

A continuation of this advance to the north would bring the allies to Cambrai, a strongly fortified town in Nord, and beyond that as far as the circle could be drawn.

Meanwhile there is comparative calm from Rheims to the Meuse, which constitutes the center of the front, but in the Woevre district there have been engagements in which the French have made advances.

Regarding the operations in Northern France, Berlin is officially silent, dispatches from the German capital declaring that no information has been given out regarding the progress of the general engagement.

An official announcement from Petrograd says the Austrian province of Galicia is completely freed of Austrians, the last remnants of their troops having sought refuge in the Carpathians. An unofficial dispatch from the Russian capital says fighting along the East Prussian frontier has resulted in the repulse of all the German attempts to force a passage of the River Niemen, in the government of Suwalki.

Ships Sunk by Mines in Adriatic.

London.—A dispatch to the Times from Rome says a Roumanian sailing ship and an Italian steamer have been sunk by mines in the Adriatic with heavy loss of life.

More British Officers Killed.

London.—The official report of casualties among British officers, from general headquarters, includes Brig.-Gen. Frederick L. V. Wing, commanding the third division, Royal artillery. Gen. Wing won distinction in the South African war.

Torpedo Boat Sunk.

Rome.—An Italian torpedo boat is reported to have been sunk by a mine between Venice and Comacchio, in the Adriatic sea. No confirmation of the report can be obtained in official circles.

GERMAN POSITIONS AT CRACOW SUFFER

RUSSIAN EMBASSY REPORTS A VICTORY OVER GERMANS AT LODZ AND SUWALKI.

ROUGH ROADS OBSTACLE

Two Forts Near Cracow Reported to Have Fallen—Petrograd Correspondent Reports 30,000 Men Killed and Wounded.

London.—Reuter's Rome correspondent says news received in the Italian capital from Russian headquarters declares that Przemysl, Galicia, has been attacked by the Russians on all sides.

Two of the forts, it is said, already have been taken, and from these the Russians silenced several Austrian batteries.

A dispatch to the Central News from Rome says:

"The Russian embassy here has issued a communication announcing that the Germans have suffered a terrible defeat in the provinces of Lodz and Suwalki, Russian Poland.

"The Germans," the communication says, "were attacked with extreme violence and compelled to flee from Suwalki, Ostrowiec and other towns, leaving behind great quantities of transports and guns. Their troops threw away their rifles and baggage. Numerous cannon were abandoned."

Telegrams from Petrograd, the Central News correspondent at Rome says, declare that the Germans have lost 30,000 men in killed or wounded and 20,000 taken prisoners.

The Antwerp correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company has sent the following dispatch:

"The German attack on the fort and approaches of Koningshoyck (one of the new forts on the outer line) was repulsed.

"A violent attack on Termonde was repulsed, the Belgians blowing up the bridge (over the Scheldt).

"The Belgians undertook attack from Antwerp on the front of the easterly position. This attack continues."

ANTWERP FORTS HOLD OUT

Bombardment of Forts Continues. British Aviators Do Splendid Work—Refugees Arrive.

Antwerp.—The bombardment of the southeast front of the Antwerp defenses was resumed fiercely, but no success attended the German effort to break through the strong Belgian positions. During the brilliant moonlight the Germans bombarded the forts at Duffel, Waelhem and Lierre. Many shells fell on the town of Duffel and a big paper factory was damaged severely.

The enemy made an infantry attack in force from the direction of Termonde on the intermediate forts of Liezel, Brendonck and Heyndonck, but it was brilliantly repulsed. The Germans suffered heavy losses. In the afternoon the artillery shelled Thisselt and Raemdonck, to the west of Mechlin. The damage was immaterial.

British aviators did splendid work for the Belgians. Flying in and out among the low clouds, they indicated the German positions to Fort Waelhem and enabled the gunners to direct a withering fire on the attackers.

CLAIM GERMAN DISASTER

Petrograd Correspondent Tells of New Gun Used by Russians—Says Rennenkampf Prepared.

London.—Percival Gibbon, the Daily Chronicle's Petrograd correspondent, telegraphs:

"The great German guns, which are now making their difficult way back over the marshes to the north and south of the Suwalki, met their match during the fighting on the Niemen. There appeared for the first time the new patterns of the Russian gun of large caliber and considerable mobility, which are the products of the Putlioff works.

"Artillery experts who have watched its performance are satisfied that it is equal in power and effect to anything the Germans have yet shown. On the Prussian frontier near Druskenik two of these new guns silenced the German batteries within 10 minutes. The German guns were afterward abandoned on their position, every gunner having been killed.

"The German invasion has been a disaster. It has failed at every point. Even as a reconnaissance it can have produced nothing of even the smallest value to the Germans.

Germans Repulsed.

Washington.—The following dispatch from the Belgian minister of foreign affairs was made public here:

"Forts south and southeast of Antwerp have been violently bombarded. On the southwest attack of German troops against Willebroeck repulsed."

Aeroplanes Toward Paris.

Paris.—Two Taube (German) aeroplanes were reported near Compiegne, flying in the direction of Paris. They are being pursued by one of the French aviators.

HOW RESINOL CURED ITCHING SKIN TORMENT

Baltimore, Md., May 23, 1914: "My limbs from knee to ankle were completely covered with eczema for a year. I hated to go in company, it itched and burned so badly. I had no rest at night. I tried a good many remedies for eczema, both liquid and salve, but they did me no good, only made the skin more rough and scaly. I learned of resinol ointment and resinol soap and tried them, and was relieved of the severe itching and burning AT ONCE, and after a month's steady use was completely cured." (Signed) T. S. Lewis, 1821 Summit St. Sold by all druggists.—Adv.

Approval.

"Are you still interested in gardening?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Crosslots. "I like to see gardening get every encouragement. I have bought an interest in a hardware store."

Do the elevators in a department store come under the head of shoplifters?

The Human Automobile

The human body, like an automobile, changes fuel (food) into power. When the fuel is too rich, or the mixers and valves are out of order, waste products clog the machinery and reduce the power.

The kidneys, like exhaust valves, should carry off the waste (uric acid), but weak kidneys can't. Uric acid in excess causes headache, weak eyes, rheumatic pains, gravel, dropsy and fatal Bright's disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid. It is the best-recommended special kidney remedy.

An Alabama Case

Mrs. A. F. Davis, Pinckney St., Marion, Ala., says: "Poor drinking water caused my kidney trouble. My back pained me so badly I could hardly straighten. I had headaches and dizzy spells and felt tired and languid. The kidney secretions bothered me, too. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I haven't suffered since."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Finally Captured Eagle.

After defying a score of traps and as many guns of farmers, who have sought vainly to impose summary sentence for the loss of hundreds of chickens over a period of six months, Old Baldy, a monster eagle, was caught by a man with a lasso. He lay waiting in the shadow of his chicken house for the chicken thief for more than eight hours. The bird swooped down shortly after daybreak. The lasso was thrown around the eagle's neck. The man wanted to capture the bird alive, but it fought so desperately that he was forced to shoot it. The eagle measures eight feet seven inches from tip to tip, and weighs 73 pounds.

Prolonged Probation.

"I do believe that by the time the ham is gone your love will also be ended."

"Is that so? If you believe that, better give me a larger ham!"—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Paw Knows Everything.

Willie—Paw, why is the way of the transgressor hard?

Paw—Because so many people have tramped on it, my son.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy, regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Do not gripe. Adv.

The area of taxed land in Japan is 37,098,560, of which 964,710 acres are residential property.

If a man had to go fishing for a living he would want to stick around the house all the time.

How scornfully a woman who merely powders can look at one who paints!

For All External Wounds and Sores

HANFORD'S
Balsam of Myrrh

For Galls, Wire Cuts, Lameness, Strains, Bunches, Thrush, Old Sores, Nail Wounds, Foot Rot Fistula, Bleeding, Etc. Etc.

Made Since 1846. Ask Anybody About It.

Price 25c, 50c and $1.00

All Dealers OR WRITE G. C. Hanford Mfg. Co. SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Films Developed

10 Cents Per Roll
Prints 3c and 4c Each
Prompt attention and work the best.
COVELL COMPANY
Department K Birmingham, Ala.

DRIVE MALARIA OUT OF THE SYSTEM
BABEK for That Tired Feeling

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

Paxtine

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women, which proves its superiority. Women who have been cured say it is "worth its weight in gold." At druggists. 50c. large box, or by mail. The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

SORE EYES

Dr. Salter's Eye Lotion

relieves and cures sore and inflamed eyes in 24 to 48 hours. Helps the weak eyed, cures without pain. Ask your druggist or dealer for SALTER'S. Only from Reform Dispensary, 68 S. Broad, Atlanta, Georgia

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A toilet preparation of merit. Helps to eradicate dandruff. For Restoring Color and Beauty to Gray or Faded Hair. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

FOR SALE Desirable improved Florida farm home; 15 acres; healthy, high pure land of Putnam County; good 10 room house; good barn; small bearing orange grove and other fruit. Price $3,000. W. B. SANDERSON, Interlachen, Florida

HAIR safely removed from the face to stay. Formula $2.00. 12 bars finest soap FREE by parcel post. John C. Stevens, Dept. 7, Quito, Tenn.

AGENTS WANTED for the best selling and repeat order novelties made; over one hundred per cent profit. McCormick Sales Co., Carbondale, Illinois

BIG MONEY MAILING CIRCULARS FOR OTHERS. Send 25 cents for Doyle's copyrighted instructions. B. C. Brooks, 406 West F Avenue, Capitol Hill, Oklahoma City, Okla.

KEEN EDGE sharpens your razor in 2 minutes or money returned. 10c large case prepaid. Crawford Supply Co., West Clarksfield, O.

FOOL YOUR FRIENDS
Will mail your letters here. 5c each, 6 for 25c. H. B. KENNEDY, 51 East 42nd Street, NEW YORK

AGENTS Both sexes—Wonderful seller; housewives can't resist; sample to workers, 15c; sells 50c. Soderquist, 1321 Nicollet Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

FLORIDA Sunshine, Comfort, Opportunity, Independence. Farms any size—any price. All localities best terms. Write, be convinced. C. Nahan, Jacksonville, Fla.

Learn a trade at home. Tuition only 50cts. up. Thousands enrolled. Particulars free. Address Educational Ass'n., 1071 21st St., Milwaukee, Wis.

WANTED 1,000 boys and girls to get a free premium. For particulars address The Kaiserton Co., 133 Bickel Ave., Louisville, Ky.

LANDS from $10 to $50 per acre; raise anything; good water and climate. 3 railroads. P. J. Pearce, Hampton, Fla.

WILL SELL set woolen machinery, wool and J. M. PIAZZEK, VALLEY FALLS, KANS.

AGENTS New patent necessity pocket sampler; exclusive territory, part or all your time. Investigate. Doubleek Mfg. Co., New Britain, Conn.

Climax Croup Cream Works like magic. Liberal sample free. CLIMAX COMPANY, BOX 81, STATION E, KANSAS CITY, MO.

LADIES Make extra Christmas money. Women's articles. Sample free. YOUNG, Box 1585, Los Angeles, California

Horse Owners I guarantee results from my tested recipe, no matter how old the horse. Mailed for 50c. CITY FEED CO., WILMINGTON, OHIO.

AGENTS $10 to $15 daily, household necessity, sure repeater, sells itself. 100% profit. Particulars free. JOE MATHIS, FOUNTAIN CITY, WIS.

WANTED Women for general and district agents. Women's articles and supplies. Steady employment. Address EDNA GARDNER Co., Madison, Wis.

Our Booklet "Safety" explains how to conduct a business or investment. Price 10c. National Investigation Bureau, 2144 Prescott Ave., Chicago

CANCERS cured by mail; $25 per month. Not a failure in 7 years. Dr. J. A. LATHEM, SPECIALIST, Oakwood, Ga.

DON'T BURN OUT One of our extinguishers will put out 3 fires; low priced. Agents write Atkins Supply Co., Hennessy, Oklahoma CURE your tender, sore, bad smelling feet, nightsweats, offensive odors. Sample free. CADOMA MANUFACTURING, 600 Lynn St., Cadiz, Ohio.

LADY AGENTS [illegible] pound. KNOWES, 15 W. 37th St., Chicago.

[illegible]

THE UNION-BANNER

Published Every Thursday at Clanton, Chilton County, Alabama.

UNION PUBLISHING CO.

W. M. WYATT, Editor.

Subscription price, in advance, per year, $1.00.

Entered April 15, 1903, at Clanton, Ala., as second-class matter, under act of congress of March 3, 1879.

PROGRESSIVE TICKET.

STATE.

For Governor:
Dr. E. H. CROSS.

Lieutenant Governor:
C. B. FORMAN.

U. S. Senator:
A. P. LONGSHORE.

Congressman at Large:
G. A. SAYLOR.

Attorney General:
DUNCAN TRIMBLE.

For Auditor:
J. W. COCHRAN.

Secretary of State:
T. T. NOCK.

For Treasurer:
J. F. SUTTERER.

Com. of Agriculture:
SID BERREY.

Railroad Commissioners:
H. H. BOLTON.
J. M. GREEN.

COUNTY.

For Sheriff:
H. A. HARRIS.

For Representative:
W. E. THOMAS.

Commissioner, 1st. District:
S. E. WALDRUP.

Commissioner, 2nd. District.
R. J. WILLIAMS.

Read from Mr. MacAdoo Secretary of Treasurery, President Wilson's son in law and right hand man; "In a number of places which have been brought to my notice the interest rate has been put up arbitrarly by the concerted action of the banks. There is no justification for high interest rate. There is no real reason for tight money in this county." Age Herald October 7.

Mr. MacAdoo says the banks are hoarding the money. Why is it Democrats who control every brauch of the National government, stand by and see the farmers robbed?

What is the cause of all this cry about no money? What has become of all the cold cash we had in this country under Republican rule? Have the money power and the speculator combined so as to rob the southern farmer who has been so loyal in the past to the Democrtic party? Why is it the Democrats which have full control of the national government will not provide some way to help save the farmers of this county from bankruptcy? Is it because the south votes the Democratic ticket any way? Or is it because the speculators are in control of the Democratic party? Will some one please explain why it is the war has put every thing up except cotton and put cotton down? Will some one please tell us when we ever had a prosperous year under full Democratic laws and a Democratic administration? One thousand dollars reward will be paid for the information. $500,00 reward for a copy of the Democratic platform in this state and county for 1914.

SOUTH MUST AND WILL HELP ITSELF!

That congres is not going to help us out of the plight in which those dependent upon the cotton crop have been plunged by the European war, is now evident.

That is now apparent with a finality that must convince the most credulous and confiding nature.

Very well, then!

There is at least the advantage that we know that we have nothing to expect.

We have before pulled out of holes infinitely deeper than this one without a helping hand.

We will do the same thing in the present instance, and on record time. The task already is well under way. It will be completed with a minimum of hardship upon the humblest factor in the southern states.

But the south will not let this mammoth congressional Punch and Judy show, the curtain upon which has just rung down, pass without its lasting lesson.

That lesson is that these people will not soon again be fooled by promises, nor be jigged along by broadside assurances that the government will come to their rescue in other emergencies that may confront them.

For two months we have been treated to a farce comedy of promises that would be humorous if it were not founded on deception.

We were told there was anywhere from $150,000,000 to $500,000,000 of emergency currency available to meet an unprecedented crisis.

We were told its placing for the relief of farmers and business men needing help was a matter of detail only, soon arranged, soon executed.

We were told to banish worry and leave it all to Washington.

We followed that advice. What happened?

After weeks of buncombe, thrashing around, caucuses and conferences, the soothing information comes that—

Congress will do nothing whatever of a definite nature! That the cotton states themselves must find the solution. Those who formerly were eager to lift the burden from our sholders are now fertile in advice as to how the problem can be solved without the interference of Washington.

It was a beautiful dream—while it lasted. The awakening is a little rude. But, thank the Lord! the south has cared for itself in previous emergencies and is fully capable of repeating the process in this emergency.

The shame of the thing is that we have lost valuable time listening to the siren song of congress. If we had been told the truth, at first, instead of gulled with verbal promissory notes, our problem would already have three-fourths been solved.

Never mind! The south will not forget!

Congress could willingly valorize the silver of the western mines.

It could pour millions and millions of public money to which the south contributed, into western irrigation projects.

It could appropriate millions and send two cruisers to bring stranded Americans back from Europe—which was right.

It could appropriate $37,000,000 to build a railroad through Alaska, from which it will be years in receiving a cent's compensation.

It could scramble to the relief of Wall street, pinched, asked for help.

For "probes" that ended in nothing, for "pork barrels" built to keep politicians in congress, congress could lavish millions.

But when confronted with the gravest crisis in half a century, when it asked, not for uncompensating aid, but for help with the best staple crop in existence for absolute security—

We were treated to a drama of promises which ended in a hoax!

The farce is ended. The curtain is rung down. At last we know that help cannot be expected from congress.

Now to the task of working out our own salvation. We have done it before. We are better equipped to do it again than ever in our history.—Atlanta Constitution.

Smile Mr. Democrat, smile. Tell your friends about the war and all the good things Woodrow and his crowd have done for you. The above article shows what confidence one of the strongest Democratic editors in the south has in Democracy.

MINERAL SPRINGS

Editor Union-Banner:

I wish the Democrats of Clanton could have been out here on Monday night to see the demonstration on the part of the people here. I have observed many political meetings here, and I am sure the interest in this one was the best I have ever seen. I was here early, and there was a large crowd already assembled; they continued to come till at the time Hon. J. O. Middleton called the meeting to order, the house was more than full. Many had to remain on the outside.

With a few appropriate remarks, Mr. Middleton introduced Mr. W. E. Thomas, candidate for Representative on the Progressive ticket, who made a short talk of about ten minutes.

At this time Mr. Roy Sawyer walked in, and being offered an opportunity by the chairman, he tried for about thirty-five minutes to make the best of the situation he could.

Mr. Middleton introduced Judge Reynolds as one who had been dubbed the Roosevelt of Chilton county, saying he could not conceive of any higher compliment that could have been paid him by the Press. He said perhaps Judge Reynolds had been abused more than any citizen of the county, but was always found on the side of the people and ready to fight their battles.

When Judge Reynolds rose, there was applause for several minutes. His speech of about one hour, was received with the greatest enthusiasm. He referred to the Democratic executive committee having been ordered by Mr. Goodwyn to put the bars up in Chilton, and not let Progressives, Republicans nor Socialists vote in their primary. He said Mr. Pinckard, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of this county, called the county executive committe together and put up the bars because the bosses at Montgomery said so. Mr. Ab Retherford interrupted the Judge by saying that the Democrats HAD to put up the bars because the bosses said so. When Judge Reynolds got through with that statement Mr. Rutherford looked like thirty cents.

He spoke of the bosses taking Mr. Stanfield down and putting Mr. Sawyer up for Representative. And he said the people would take Mr. Sawyer down on election day. From the demonstration out here it looks as if it would be by a large majority too.

The next speaker was Mr. Harris, the nominee for Sheriff. His speech was well received.

Squire Waldrop, candidate for Commissioner, followed with a short but appropriate speech.

Mr. Middleton concluded with a speech of thirty minutes. It was filled with much enthusiasm and portrayed very forcibly the false position of the democrats, and making it plain that we always have hard times when they are in office.

At the conclusion of his speech he was asked to poll the crowd which he did, and the great crowd rose as one for the Progressive ticket, and when the other side was put, but two lone men stood up, Mr. Sawyers and Mr. Maud Robinson; you know it looked mighty gloomy for the Democrats to only have two out of several hundred.

It was frequenty remarked that if Gant Riggins and Frank Goodgame could be sent back to this neighborhood there would not be any Democrats left. I have thought they might get ten or fifteen up here but I do not know now.

The Democrats think we people havn't any sense; they think they can fool us any way, with any old thing. Frank says he is a straight Republican, and as there is not a Republican ticket out he will support Jones the Democrat. Gant says he is a straight Sociallist, but they have no ticket and he is for Jones also. Now do you think we cannot understand all this? I wonder who is paying for the horse and buggy they ride in? I wonder who is paying the expense of the campaign they are waging?

Well I do not think we ought to be too hard on the Democrats. They have got their business in a jam. The whole thing is in such a mess that they cannot afford to go out and uphold the Democratic party, and they have to get some pretended Republican and Sociallist to manage their campaign for them. You know it makes me shed tears to think of a few good men getting themselves in such a mess. There are some honest Democrats that want to vote from principal, but my, just think what they have to endorse to be a Democrat. First Killgore runs the campaign for them; then comes Frank in all his pomp and glory, and he hits her for a quarter race till he is bellused; then comes Pounds for a half mile race, and he takes the the lead. Now it is up to Gant Riggins to lead the Democratic party out of the wilderness under Sociallist colors. It must be mighty bitter to some Democrats that have some principal left to have to stand by and see this crowd running the Democratic party. Just think for a moment how these fellows have stood with the Democratic party for the last few years; but you know it does not make any difference with a few fellows that hope to get office how they get it, or who leads the fight. I say it is enough to make the hardest heart weep to see a party that has stood for something, sacrifice all principle, trying to get an office.

Well we boys will all be at the joint discussion Saturday the 17th, at Clanton. I hope as many as can will come to hear both sides.

ONE OF THE BOYS.

Highland.

There will be a public speaking at Highland schoolhouse on next Saturday night; the discussion will be in regard to the cotton situation and banking question. J. H. Jackson and others will speak.

Get After that Cough To-Day

Too Many People Neglect Themselves

They catch a cold--and neglect it. Then the cold settles on the chest, causing a tight cough--and they neglect that.

Yes, they generally get well. But think of the distress, the annoyance--and even the danger.

All this trouble, when they might so easily avoid it by using Penslar

White Pine and Spruce Balsam

This cough remedy is compounded of the healing principles of white pine bark, red spruce gum, tamarac and wild cherry. The exact formula is printed on the label.

People who have used it tell us they never saw anything loosen a cough and give relief so quickly. That is the best proof anyone could ask.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Penslar White Pine and Spruce Balsam here, and get after that cough today.

Penslar DRUG STORE

ALRED DRUG COMPAN

"The Home of Quality."

SENATOR BANKHEAD'S PLAN FOR COTTON SITUATION

To the Chilton County Farmer and Business Man:

This business crisis is no time for the crimination and recrimination ordinarily practiced in local and state politics.

It is incumbent upon the farmer, merchant and banker to look well to the future and study carefully the succinct, practical plan submitted to his people by Senator John H. Bankhead in the Birmingham News of October 5, whereby the Senator proposes, through a special session of the legislature immediately called for the purpose, to place forthwith, an amendment to our constitution,—upon which the whole people by their vote, will have previous opportunity to pass—providing a medium of exchange for the purchase of one-half of the state's cotton crop, by the issuance of forty millions in bonds, in denominations ranging from ten dollars to one thousand dollars, thus to the end that the farmer and the business man can buy with his cotton, be it a small or a large amount, any denomination of bond that he can afford to handle. This system will afford a market for the cotton, and at the same time will afford a subsidiary medium of exchange (the bonds) in lieu of the actual money; the system should have a tendency in practical operation, as I view it, to steady and standardize the price of cotton, and to afford a system of credit to the State, to the individual farmer, the merchant and the banker. The bonds would be absolutely security, for the reason that they would be backed by the substantial commodity, cotton, as well as the State's credit in the commercial world. The bond, therefore, viewed from this standpoint would be worth dollar for dollar, and should, after business conditions assume a steady formation as a result of the standardizing of the price of the cotton crop, be worth a premium.

It is not for the hesitating and vacillatting local or statewide politician to place his ear to the ground and wait, look and listen for the direction of the popular straw. It is time for the practical farmer and business man to take the situation in hand, looking well to the future, the time when, after the first of the year 1915, the farmer will go to his merchant to arrange for advances to make the 1915 crop. What then, if the present conditions confront us? Providence only can determine when the present conflict in Europe will terminate; by it we are bound hand and foot unless, by some remedy as suggested by Senator Bankhead, we take a grip on our destiny.

Placing in execution this or some similar plan will steady the business conditions for the year 1915, when the farmer necessarily will be compelled to make his arrangements for the year.

Would it not be well for the advance merchant and the farmer, in making the advance contract (the mortgage) for 1915, to have the said mortgage to stipulate and provide for the planting by the farmer, of a certain percentage of his acreage in ready money Spring crops, which will be marketable for cash? Would not this tend to practical diversification, for which there has been so much popular clamor?

Very respectfully,
WM. M. ADAMS.

Saves Fisherman Trouble.

Harness to hold a fishing pole, so as to leave a fisherman's hands free to manage his bait or catch, is an English invention.

REGARDING DISCOVERY OF COAL AND OIL HE

Editor Union-Banner:—In [illegible] the prerogative of an old newspaper man and one who has had a wide experience in the oil, gas and coal [illegible] of Sistersville, W. Va., Bridgeport [illegible] Tulsa, Okla., and North Louisiana, trust you will pardon the friendly criticism of conditions in this territory voiced in a local, under the [illegible] "Oil and Coal are Discovered" [illegible] published in a recent issue of [illegible] valuable paper.

You stated that it was impossible to obtain authentic information [illegible] count of the desire on the part of persons, on the inside, to act in [illegible] until such a time when all [illegible] lands should be fenced in by leases [illegible] options prohibitive to the entire [illegible] all who otherwise would have a [illegible] to assist the exploitation of [illegible] beneficial to the entire community.

My understanding is, that all money used in the drilling and equipping of the well in question, is from a fund created by the taxpayers, therefore public money, in which every taxpayer has an interest and an unquestionable additional interest in all benefits accruing from the use of their money.

As a guardian of public [illegible] censor over the morals of a [illegible] ity, as well as a moulder of public opinion, is is your duty, dear editor, to place before your readers accurate information, so that they may [illegible] their interests as well as the interests of their heirs and assigns.

There can be no question, from the viewpoint of experience, about the presence of oil, gas and coal in [illegible] able quantity, in this territory. The triple alliance is inseperable. [illegible] where it will be profitable to [illegible] it remains to be seen later, but if public money is to be used to locate desirable assets the result should be for public gain and not to satisfy the avraciousness of private individuals who are gambling with chances.

Throw the searchlight of your powerful personality on to this subject, give it to your friends, the [illegible] merchants and taxpayers through the columns of your paper. In closing my dear editor, this is just a fraternal note, which you may [illegible] your good judgment dictates and know me your humble and

Most obedient servant,
FRANK D[illegible]

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 3, 1914.

Are You A Progr[illegible]

Do you want better co[illegible] in the South?

Do you believe in a Pro[illegible] Tariff?

Are you tired of Dem[illegible] Blunders?

Do you want relief?

Would you welcome Pr[illegible] ty?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBU[illegible]

The Recognized Organ of [illegible] gressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today:

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 80 cents [illegible] Tribune to your door for [illegible] for expires Jan., 1.

[illegible]ningham Stomach Suff[illegible]

Convinced by [illegible]

[illegible]eLaye, After Suffering for [illegible] months From Serious [illegible]ady, Finds Quick Relief.

[illegible] DeLay of Birmingham, Ala., suf[illegible] from an acute stomach trouble for [illegible] He went to doctors and got [illegible]ay or two of relief.

[illegible]eLaye is head of DeLaye's News [illegible] and his malady means both [illegible] less business efficiency. A [illegible]came more more imperative. [illegible] an announcement of Mayr's [illegible]ful Stomach Remedy. Now [illegible] he says:

[illegible]eived your trirl treatment last [illegible] I used it according to direc[illegible] am at a loss to find words to tell you [illegible] me. I fe[illegible] that your [illegible] derful. [illegible] and they [illegible] one or tw[illegible]

We war[illegible] stomach t[illegible] ter of how [illegible] of Mayr's [illegible] one dose [illegible] medicine [illegible] been tak[illegible] The most [illegible] ever sold. [illegible] Remedy i[illegible] Drug Co[illegible] Where."

[illegible]uick Lunc[illegible]

The Best ser[illegible] town---Cleanl[illegible] itary and well [illegible] ed---Sandwicl[illegible] Short Orders.

E. C. Pop[illegible]

CLANTON, AL[illegible]

J. P. Hayes [illegible]cts Buildings

[illegible]ations are being made, [illegible]k will soon begin on [illegible]wo-story brick buildings [illegible]corner of First Avenue [illegible]enth Street. The pro[illegible] the structures is Dr. J. [illegible]s. They will be splen[illegible]rehouse buildings, and [illegible] much to the business of Clanton.

NOTICE

[illegible]ose who are indebted to [illegible]wish to announce that I [illegible]ept cotton at ten cents [illegible]nd in payment of same, [illegible]rther notice.

Respectfully,
V. J. Gragg, M. D.
[illegible] Ala., Sept. 21, 1914

[illegible] Harris of Cooper, the [illegible] is running for Sheriff, [illegible]lanton Monday night of [illegible]k.

Prof[illegible] To

Prof. [illegible] week to [illegible] school a[illegible] ville, in [illegible] session [illegible] Miss R[illegible] tant pri[illegible] This sc[illegible] tauga c[illegible] Prattvil[illegible] cent se[illegible] due larg[illegible] ers in c[illegible] assistan[illegible] Downs.

FOR [illegible] lot and [illegible] short di[illegible] house [illegible] tion; ga[illegible] lent pla[illegible] terested [illegible] Clanton [illegible] mation.

You [illegible] put [illegible] wei[illegible] and [illegible] diu[illegible] Ge[illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible]ou'll Find The[illegible]

A fine line of fall and winter [illegible] underwear, hosiery, and sho[illegible] tire family. Hats, caps, an[illegible] men and boys. All you ne[illegible]

KEMP BROT[illegible]

Clanton, A[illegible]

r ough

y

People

nselves

--and neglect it. Then the cold settles tight cough--and they neglect that.
y get well. But think of the distress, the the danger.
when they might so easily avoid it by e and Spruce Balsam

edy is compounded of the heal-white pine bark, red spruce gum, cherry. The exact formula is
el.
ve used it tell us they never saw cough and give relief so quickly.
oof anyone could ask.
bottle of Penslar White Pine and e, and get after that cough today.

nslar
UG STORE
RUG COMPAN
Home of Quality."

PLAN ION

REGARDING DISCOVERY OF COAL AND OIL HER

Editor Union-Banner:—In assu the prerogative of an old newsp man and one who has had a wide perience in the oil, gas and coal of Sistersville, W. Va., Bridgeport, Tulsa, Okla., and North Louisia trust you will pardon the friendly cism of conditions in this territory voiced in a local, under the ca
"Oil and Coal are Discovered published in a recent issue of valuable paper.

You stated that it was impossib obtain authentic information, count of the desire on the parts sons, on the inside, to act in until such a time when all av lands should be fenced in by lea options prohibitive to the entra all who otherwise would have a cl to assist the exploitation of condi beneficial to the entire community

My understanding is, that all m used in the drilling and constructi the well in question, is from a created by the taxpayers, there public money, in which every taxp has an interest and an unquesti additional interest in all benefits
ing from the use of their money.

As a guardian of public functio censor over the morals of a mun ity, as well as a moulder of public ion, is is your duty, dear edit place before your readers accura formation, so that they may p their interests as well as the int of their heirs and assigns.

There can be no question, fro viewpoint of experience, abou presence of oil, gas and coal in m able quantity, in this territory, triple alliance is inseperable.
where it will be profitable to g it remains to be seen later, but lic money is to be used to locat desirable assets the result sho for public gain and not to satis
avraciousness of private indi who are gambling with chance.

Throw the searchlight of you ful personality on to this se give it to your friends, the merchants and taxpayers thr columns of your paper. In co my dear editor, this is just a fraternal note, which you may your good judgment dictates a know me your humble and

Most obedient servant,
FRANK DI

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 3, 1914.

Are You A Progre

Do you want better con
in the South?
Do you believe in a Pro
Tariff?
Are you tired of Demo
Blunders?
Do you want relief?
Would you welcome Pro
ty?

If so, subscribe to the

MOBILE TRIBUN

The Recognized Organ of th
gressive party in Alabama.

Fill out this coupon today

Name .....

Street .....

City or town .....

This coupon and 80 cents Tribune to your door for fer expires Jan. 1.

ingham Stomach Sufferer Convinced by the First Dose.

DeLaye, After Suffering for months From Serious ady, Finds Quick Relief.

DeLaye of Birmingham, Ala., suf- from an acute stomach trouble for He went to doctors and got or two of relief.

DeLaye is head of DeLaye's News and his malady means both less business efficiency. A came more more imperative. an announcement of Mayr's Stomach Remedy. Now he says:

ved your trirl treatment last I used it according to direc- I am at a loss to find words to tell you how much good it has done for me. I feel like a new man. The relief that your medicine has given me is wonderful. I have been to several doctors and they have only given me relief for one or two dav."

We want all people who have chronic stomach trouble or constipation, no matter of how long standing, to try one dose of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy—one dose will convince you. This is the medicine so many of our people have been taking with surprising resnlts. The most thorough system cleaner we ever sold. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by Upchurch Drug Company and druggists everywhere."

uick Lunches

The Best service in town---Cleanly, Sanitary and well cooked---Sandwiches, & Short Orders..

E. C. Popwell

CLANTON, ALA.

J. P. Hayes ects Buildings

ations are being made, work will soon begin on storey brick buildings corner of First Avenue Seventh Street. The pro- of the structures is Dr. J. ayes. They will be splen- storehouse buildings, and add much to the business of Clanton.

NOTICE

those who are indebted to wish to announce that I accept cotton at ten cents pound in payment of same, further notice.

Respectfully,
V. J. Gragg, M. D.
Ala., Sept. 21, 1914

Harris of Cooper, the is running for Sheriff, Clanton Monday night of

Prof. J. L. Wilson To Begin School

Prof. J. L. Wilson leaves this week to take up another term of school at Pine Flat, near Deatsville, in Autauga County. The session will begin next Monday. Miss Ruby Downs will be assistant principal of the school again. This school is the largest in Autauga county, outside the city of Prattville, and its success in recent sessions past is no doubt due largely to the excellent teachers in charge. There is another assistant in addition to Miss Downs.

FOR SALE—Very desirable lot and house in Deatsville, Ala., short distance from depot. The house has waterworks connection; garden if desired. Excellent place for nice home. If interested write the Union-Banner, Clanton, Ala., for further information. tf.

You must now put the light weights aside and don the medium weights. Get ready for the winter days.

You'll Find Them Here.

A fine line of fall and winter dress goods underwear, hosiery, and shoes for the entire family. Hats, caps, and gloves for men and boys. All you need any time.

KEMP BROTHERS
Clanton, Ala.

OTIS ROBINSON SHOT BY BEN KENDRICK.

A shooting affray occurred in Clanton Tuesday afternoon in which Otis Robinson, a young man about seventeen years old was seriously wounded by a pistol shot inflicted by Ben Kendrick, another young man of about the same age.

The direct cause of the shooting is not known, but it is understood that there has been ill feeling between the goung men for some time. They have had some personal encounters before, but none so serious as this one.

Kendrick was working below town, and walked to and from his work on the railroad, passing by a lumber mill where Robinson was working. It was as he was passing this mill that he and Robinson came in contact, and the shots were fired by Kendrick, one of which took effect in Robinson's breast, making a very dangerous wound. Entering the center of the breast, the bullet turned to the right side, striking the liver. They were only a few feet apart when the shots were fired.

Young Robinson was carried to Montgomery on the evening train in the hope that an operation might save his life. Reports received Wednesday morning say the chance for his recovery is rather uncertain.

Kendrick is a stranger in Clanton, and little is known of him. He makes no statements more than that he shot in self defense. He is in jail waiting the result of Robinsons wounds.

The Robinson boy is the son of Jno. M. Robinson, and was working at his father's mill.

Walter Culp, another young man about twenty-one, has been arrested charged with complicity in the crime.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER A GUARANTEED RELIEF

"I have arranged with Alred Drug Company so that every sufferer from Asthma, Hay Fever or Bronchial Asthma in Clanton can try my treatment entirely at my risk," Dr. Rudolph Schiffmann announces. He says: "Buy a 50-cent package of my Asthmador, try it, and if it does not afford you immediate relief, or if you do not find it the best remedy you have ever used, take it back to Alred Drug Company and they will return your money, cheerfully and without any question whatever. After seeing the grateful relief it has afforded in hundrers of cases, which had been considered incurable, and which had been given up in despair, I know what it will do. I am so sure that it will do the same with others that I am not afraid to guarantee it will relieve instantaneously. The druggists handling Asthmador will return your money if you say so. You are to be the sole judge and under this positive guarantee, absolutely no risk is run in buying Asthmador."

Persons living elsewhare will be supplied under the same guarantee by their local druggist or direct by Dr. R. Schiffmann, St. Paul, Minn.

J. D. Smith went up to Birmingham Saturday to take in the Fair.

Mrs. A. R. Aldridge went to Birmingham Monday.

Write or phone us for prices on clover, rye, barley, rape and wheat seed. We have big stock on hand and can supply you with any amount you want.—Alred Drug Company.

Miss Evylyn Waller spent Monday in Montgomery.

STRAYED—White and black spotted hound nearly two years old; bob tailed. Left about three weeks ago. Information regarding him furnished J. T. Wyatt, Clanton, Ala., Route I will be rewarded.

Miss Katie Smith of Mountain Creek was a visitor to Clanton Sunday.

The Chilton County High School Building, when completed, will be one of the best and most commodious structures of its kind in the state. The work is being pushed along rapidly, and it will be ready for the opening of the school in January.

Convicts Escape From Train

Two negro convicts who were being carried to the penitentiary Wednesday morning, escaped from a train jast south of the depot here, and made their way into the big swamp, getting away completely. Just as No. 9, the train they were on was crossing the creek swamp, one of the negroes pulled the signal cord to the engineer, and the train slowed down. When this was done the two leaped from the car window. Soon after the alarm was given, an army of men surrounded the swamp to close in on the fugitives, but they had been too quick. They made the get-away successfully, and have not been recovered yet.

Concord

The public school of this district, No. 32, will open Monday, Oct 19, under the direction of Prof. Cherry.

P. D. Wilson was a visitor to the Fair at Birmingham last week

H. J. Gilbert, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., here is spending the week at his home in Athens.

P. D. Wilson made a business trip to Montgomery Tuesday night.

Stewart, the little son of Rev. W. J. Armstrong, has almost recovered from a recent confinement with scarlet fever.

W. M. Wyatt was a visitor to the Capital city Tuesday.

Dr. Hayes returned from Montgomery Wednesday morning, having accompanied young Otis Robinson to Hill's infirmary for operation. He stated that the young man was resting as well as could be expected, considering the extent of his injuries.

Dr. Crumpton made a business trip to Montgomery Tuesday.

Frank Goodgame has been appointed marshal of the town of Clanton.

R. O. Headley of Fairview was in Clanton Monday on business.

Miss Pearl Durbin visited Birmingham last week.

O. E. Latham went to the Capital City Monday.

We sell the Columbia Phone Battery—the long life kind. Alred Drug Company.

MARRIAGES

Marriage licenses have been ssued this week to the following persons.

J. F. Armstrong and Miss Minnie Mims, H. G. Herrod and Miss Lula Jones, Brady Parrish and Miss Eva Houlditch.

Quick Relief When Utterly Worn Out

Getting the Blood in Order Is Required By Most People.

If you think you have gone to smash and fit only for the discard, try S. S. S. for the blood. It will surprine you to know what can be done for health once the blood is released of the excess of body wastes that keep it from exercising its full measure of bodily repair.

If you feel played out, go to any drug store and ask for a bottle of S. S. S. Here is a remedy that gets at work in a twinkling; it just naturally rushes right into your blood, scatters germs right and left, up and down and sideways.

You feel better at once, not from a stimulant, not from the action of drugs, but from the rational effect of a natural medicine.

The ingredients in S. S. S. serve the active purpose of so stimulating the cellular tissues of the body that they pick out from the blood their own essential nutriment and thus repair work begins at once. The relief is general all over the system.

Do not neglect to get a bottle of S. S. S. today. It will make you feel better in just a few minutes. It is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 506 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Send for their free book telling of the many strange ways germs steal into the system, and of the best means of ridding the system of them.

What "Bee Dee" Means

"Bee Dee" on the label means REAL VALUE inside the package, and RESULTS and SATISFACTION after the contents have been used. Always ask for "Bee Dee" when you buy a stock or poultry remedy. "Bee Dee" remedies are prepared from pure, medicinal ingredients, in a scientific way, and are genuine medicines that you can depend on.

Bee Dee STOCK & POULTRY MEDICINE LINIMENT—DIP

Bee Dee Healing Powder—Bee Dee Colic Remedy

After using the Bee Dee Remedies generally for sometime, we take pleasure in saying that they are giving entire satisfaction, and we cheerfully recommend them.
McMillen Stock Farm,
Waco, Texas.

You can get them at your dealer's.

P. B. 6

Maplesville.

Everything in this section is moving along smoothly, except some of the farmers have the blues over the cotton situation. They are grumbling at the low prices, some blaming the merchant, and some saying it is caused by the war. It is possible that they may have something to do with it, but I believe the main trouble is that the farmer is to blame for the way he carries on his business. He depends too much on cotton, and does not raise enough of his necessities at home. We must get out of this if we ever expect to have better times. We must raise our corn, peas, potatoes and everything we have to eat, right here at home, and not have to depend on the merchant or anyone else to furnish it to us. If everybody would cut down his cotton acreage in 1915, and look to raising what he has to eat, you would see better times. The farmer is the most independent people in the world, and could be the happiest, if he only would manage right.

Do not plant all your crop in cotton and depend on the other man to raise your corn and meat next year, Mr. Farmer. Raise it yourself. You can do it, and cheaper too, than anyone else can for you.

Hoping to see this in print, and promising to write some more later, I am, only a farmers son.

W. N. H.

NOTICE

I have several one and two horse farms in the Mulberry district for rent. For full information either write to or call on me at Clanton Ala.
1-1-15. Mrs. Tipton Mullins.

Ladies Meeting At School House

A meeting will be held in the school-building Friday afternoon at three o'clock to discuss questions of interest to all ladies of the town. The teachers will be present, and a full attendasce is urged of ladies interested in the welfare of children and the grwth of our town.

Mt. Pleasant

Health of this community is fairly good at present.

Mrs. G.D. Melton was carried to Dr. Hopkin's infirmary, Saturday and underwent an operation. The latest reports are that she is doing fine.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Duncan spent part of last week in Birmingham.

Miss Freda Baxley spent Saturday with Miss Balzie Baxley.

Mr. and Lindsey Thompson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Duncan.

Mr. and Mrs S. T. Parker of Coosa county spent last week here with friends and relatives.

Willie Nix and wife of Thorsby visited at W. C. Cotton's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Culp recently visited at B. H. Jone's.

The letter from Mr. Blackmon in last week's Press is right amusing when you turn back to the issues of that paper just before the democratic primary.

TREES TO SET

I am arranging to supply the trade a big lot of trees this winter; stock on hand after Nov. 15, and at prices much less than you geneally pay for such trees.
Judson Strock, Verbena.

Help!

Begin to get ready to go to the Chilton County Fair where you will see exhibits of educational interest to young and old.

Up-to-date attractions that are clean, clever and wholesome.

Meet your friends and their friends at the best Fair ever held in Chilton County.

Catalogs will be sent out next week.

Oct. 26 to 31, Inclusive

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of
"THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweetheart, Unity Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andzrejzski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman resents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Unity about to marry another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark rises rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make their married life unhappy. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Iroquois Iron company, supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and the latter buys Woodhouse's Iroquois stock at a small figure. Henley forces Quinby to let Mark have stock in the Quinby company, through a threat that if he does not he will lose both of them.

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

It was the less satisfying because he foresaw the end of a chapter. He had spent himself: in body—he was no longer capable of long intense application, he had fallen back upon the invalid's last resort, drugs; in mind—the creative faculty seemed dead, that very morning a young man in the mills had announced an important invention that was to have been Truitt's magnum opus and upon which his sterile brain had labored in vain; in soul—he could no longer dream. And for reward he had—the dry fact of a triumph he could not sense and the prospect of an empty, useless, discontented future.

He was a critic, you see; but not of himself. The world was out of joint.

Passers-by were diverted from their own cares by the sight of a well-dressed man stamping his cane on the pavement and muttering aloud: "An evil fate pursues me. Other men do as I do, desire as I desire and find content. Why can't I be contented—and happy?"

A thousand faces streamed past him, unrecognized and unrecognizing. Then, at a corner where two currents dammed each other, appeared one that seemed oddly familiar. It was of an undistinguished homeliness, pasty pale, morose, matching well the general shabbiness of its owner. At first Mark, confused by the dirty brown beard, did not recognize him.

The man had no doubts. At sight of Mark an evil glitter sprang into the sullen eyes.

"You!"

By the hate that had lived through fifteen years Mark placed him.

"Piotr Andzrejzski!"

"Peter Anderson," the man corrected him.

"That's a good American name. I'd forgotten you had a preference." Mark smiled and held out a friendly hand. "How are you, Peter Anderson?"

The hand was ignored. When Peter Anderson sneered, his homeliness became almost grotesque.

"Since you're so interested, I manage to keep alive."

"How do you manage it?"

"I'm a compositor on the Outcry—when there's any money for an issue."

"The Outcry?"

"You'll hear of it yet. It's the paper of our Cause."

Mark knew of but one cause that employed the capital. "Socialism, I suppose." He smiled indulgently. "I hope it's in funds sufficiently often."

"I look it, don't I?"

The answer was so obvious that Mark avoided it. "How," he asked hastily, "is Roman?"

"He breathes and sleeps and eats. But he's dead."

"Is that a Socialist parable? I'm not a Socialist, so you'll have to explain."

"His mind's gone. It began to go soon after you stole his job. But probably you've forgotten that, too."

"I have no recollection," said Mark coldly, "of any such occurrence." With a curt nod, he passed on.

He had gone but a few steps when he halted and looked back. Peter, unmindful of elbowing pedestrians, was still at the corner, glaring at him.

Impulsively he turned and retraced his steps.

"See here, Piotr," he said. "Let us not use hard names. There are a good many things we'd never agree on. But we can agree on this—you're hard up. I've been luckier than you. What can I do to help you?"

Piotr's lips formed a surly, "Nothing." But the refusal did not fall. A look of transparent craft displaced resentment.

"Do you mean that?" he asked suspiciously.

"It's now in the habit—"

"I don't care about your habits."

[illegible]

as a lawyer, however. Think of it," Mark smiled wryly, "as a gentleman—if the word means anything to you."

"It's your case," Shirley repeated. "But my notion is, people will think you don't want the publicity—for social reasons. That sort of talk—"

Mark rose abruptly. "I can't help," he replied, with an impatient frown, "what people think, can I? Fix it up as soon as you can."

But the day's adventures were not ended. The ghost of Timothy Woodhouse could not oust Rose Alley from Mark's mind.

The blacks, ordered by telephone, waited him. Swiftly, Mark holding the reins, they were guided across a bridge, along rough-paved, tumble-down streets, into a quarter such as their aristocratic feet had never trod. Grime and decay were everywhere.

It was 15 years since he had seen Rose alley, but he found the way as though he had taken it but yesterday.

He drew up at the mouth of a narrow shallow court, and giving the reins to his man, got down from the trap.

A few children—dirty, sallow, undersized—had been playing in the court. With difficulty, for they had not his tongue and were afraid of the stranger, he learned from them in which tenement Peter Anderson lived.

He groped and stumbled up two flights of stairs that groaned protestingly under his tread. He found a door and knocked. It opened. . . .

For a full minute, speechless, he stared at the woman who stood on the threshold.

CHAPTER XVI.

Glowing Embers.

The figure silhouetted in the doorway was one to make men dream, full curved, strong with the strength of women whose forbears have always toiled, yet without heaviness; it was the strength that lies in quality, not in bulk.

She looked at him steadily, showing no surprise. And by that he read that she had learned to take life, its coincidences and its climaxes as they came, calmly, without loss of poise.

She spoke first, in a low even voice that hinted even less than her manner at inner excitement. "I thought it was Piotr. Your step sounds like his."

They might have been daily familiars.

"Yes," he flushed. "I am somewhat in his case."

He almost missed the swift glance she cast toward his cane. But he was grateful that she had no comment for his injury. In the presence of her splendid perfections his own physical shortcoming seemed almost cause for shame.

"How do you do, Kazia?" he said gravely. "I didn't expect to find you here."

He held out an uncertain hand. She took it, neither hastily nor reluctantly, for a brief meaningless clasp.

"I am here sometimes. Will you come in?"

She stood aside and he entered, trying to overcome his limp. It was the kitchen, which in Rose alley—as he remembered—had to serve as living room as well. It was clean, but bare; pitifully bare.

By the stove stood a little faded woman, much stooped, her hair white and thin, her pale lack-luster eyes for the moment brightened by a startled question. He went over to her and took her hand. She shrank away from him.

"It is Mark Truitt, Matka," said Kazia in Polish. "Don't you remember?"

Hanka said something in the same tongue.

"She says," Kazia interpreted, "they have never forgotten."

Their eyes met again. . . . His turned away quickly and went to the other occupant of the room. He sat in the only armchair, a huge mass of inert flesh, head slouched forward and fingers playing aimlessly with the long unkempt beard that reached half-way to the bulging waist. Mark laid a hand on his shoulder. Roman looked up. But Roman saw as the new-born babe sees.

The grasp on his shoulder tightened. "Roman, don't you know me? I'm Mark—Mark Truitt, you remember."

The shoulder stirred a little under the tight grasp. Roman's head slouched forward again and he began once more his aimless twisting of the long beard.

"How long," Mark's voice had become sharp, "has he been this way?"

"Almost three years."

"And here?"

"A year longer."

Kazia's eyes said: "What is that to you?"

"Why," he demanded, "didn't you let me know about it?"

She smiled—contemptuously, as it seemed to him.

"We must get them out of here," he went on hastily.

"We can't. Piotr won't let us."

"He must," Mark declared curtly.

"He will not," she repeated.

"I saw him today. He's crazy."

"He is. He's a good compositor and could make enough to keep them at least decently. But he prefers to work for the Outcry—for little or nothing. Generally it's nothing. He says it's for the cause."

"But that's no reason why he shouldn't let me help them."

She shrugged her shoulders. "To Piotr it is. I know, because I've tried."

"Then," he said, "we'll take them away and settle with Piotr afterward."

He said it crisply, with the assured air of fortune's darlings who, having made their resolve, take its consummation for granted. Her faint smile showed again.

"It isn't so simple as that. They won't go."

"They won't go!" He stated. "Why you want to do something, you can lend me a hundred dollars."

"Lend," evidently, was a euphemism.

"What will you do—still, that's your business. Of course, I will. I wish you'd asked me something harder. Come along to the bank."

The bank was a few blocks away. Mark improved the time by asking the details of Roman's circumstances. Piotr, sullenness not lifted by the prospect of money, answered shortly. It was a pitiable story of descent—of the gradual dissipation of the savings of Roman's active years and the swift failure, through idleness and too much alcohol, of his mental powers, leaving him and Hanka dependent upon Piotr's scanty and uncertain earnings.

"Where," Mark asked, as they entered the bank, "do you live now?"

"Rose Alley."

"Rose Alley!" Mark stopped short. "My God!"

"What does your sort know of it?"

"Quite enough. Come along."

A few minutes later they were in the street again, Piotr the richer by the sum he had asked.

They stood facing each other—the strong man who had conquered and the inefficient, one of life's guerrillas, who had just taken of the strong man's largess. But the inefficient was not grateful; a hundred dollars could not conquer his hatred.

"I s'pose," he sneered, "you want me to thank you?"

"No. If you need more, come to me. And, see here, Piotr, I want you to get Roman and your mother away from Rose Alley."

"You want—!" The money in his pocket, Piotr threw craft to the winds. "What have you to do with us? Do you s'pose we'd let you help us?"

"But you took—"

Piotr chuckled—a chuckle of triumphant malice. "Did you think it was for us?" The chuckle grew into a laugh, as though he pondered some mammoth jest. "You—you—have just paid for the next issue of the Outcry!"

He wheeled and went haltingly away. Mark watched him until he turned a corner.

"Poor devil!" Mark shook his head pityingly. "He's mad."

It was not Mark's habit to waste precious hours wandering the crowded city streets in introspective meditation. He now went to the appointment with his lawyer to keep which he had left Henley.

It was a long and tedious consultation, having to do with a big real estate deal in which Truitt had shown his customary shrewdness. He displayed little interest. More than once Shirley, the lawyer, had to recall his straying attention. Shirley was astonished at this; his client was notable for his concentration on the matter in hand. He would have been even more deeply astonished, could he have looked upon the picture that lured away Mark's thoughts. But then, for

She Looked at Him Steadily, Showing No Surprise.

Shirley, the name of Rose Alley would have raised to life no dead memories.

Shirley's astonishment, however, reached its climax at the close of the consultation.

"It's a good deal," he remarked, "for you."

Mark answered with a nod and opened another subject. "I don't suppose Timothy Woodhouse left much."

"Practically nothing."

"How does our case stand?"

"We'll win it."

"You're sure of that?"

"Absolutely. His estate will never push it to trial."

"Then settle it."

Shirley whistled his surprise. "Has the philanthropic bee stung the whole Quinby concern?" he grinned. "I wouldn't do that, though. It would be an admission. As a lawyer, I couldn't advise—"

"I don't ask advice. Settle it."

Shirley waved a concessive hand. "It's your case, of course. For how much? They'll take any figure."

"For one thing," she returned quietly, "the Matka loves her son. I'll ask her."

She turned to Hanka and for several minutes the two women talked earnestly in their native tongue. Hanka shook her head continuously.

"She says," Kazia returned to Mark, "'My Piotr wouldn't like it.'"

Hanka interrupted, laying a hand on Kazia's arm and looking anxiously toward the door. Kazia nodded.

"She says also," she interpreted again, "that we'd better go. It's most time for Piotr to come home. She's right."

"I think," Mark answered, "I'll stay, since I'm here, and have this out with Piotr."

"You'd better not." Her swift glance seemed to measure his physical frailty. "Piotr's temper is uncertain. He found me here once and drove me out. It—" The gloom could not quite hide the color that surged into her cheeks. "It wasn't nice."

"I'm sorry for them, but just the same, since I've started, I'll see this through and wait for Piotr."

"No, you'd better not," she repeated with cold emphasis. "You can prove your inflexibility in some other way. Piotr is apt to have been drinking and if his temper is stirred up, he'll make them suffer." She nodded toward Hanka and Roman. "Really, you're quite helpless in the matter."

"I seem to be." He laughed shortly, to conceal a disappointment as undefined as the emotion set stirring by the sight of his old friends. "But, at least, I can leave some money."

But she shut him off from this, too. "No. What money they can use without Piotr's knowing of it, I can furnish."

He limped stiffly toward the door, more hurt than he was willing to admit to himself by the rebuff and the failure of his impulsive mission.

He went quickly out into the dark passage, that he might not have to look longer, and there awaited her. When she came, he led the way down the rickety stairs and out into the foul smelling court, lighted up now by a swaying arc lamp.

"One would think," he blurted out, "you wanted to stay there."

"Do you find that so wonderful?"

"I'm glad you can't. It's no place for such as you."

"Many people have lived here."

"But not from choice. I know. I lived here once myself, before—" He hesitated a moment. "I left it to live with Roman."

She made no reply. He stopped, facing her and blocking her egress.

"You're thinking my going there was to the advantage of no one but myself?"

"Why else should you have gone there?"

"That's almost cynical, isn't it? I might have had several other reasons—but didn't. At least I did you no harm."

"Neither harm nor good."

"One doesn't like to think of one's self as reduced to even a harmless nonentity. Still, most of the virtues are negative, I believe. Though I'm vain enough to wish I could have been a positive influence in the making of the woman you've become. It's rather remarkable, Kazia."

"It isn't remarkable—or excuse for vanity."

She had not winced, nor had her steady gaze wandered. But for just an instant a fleeting somber shadow had rested in her eyes.

"I must go," she said.

They walked in silence to the mouth of the court. At their approach Mark's man got down from the trap, touching his hat.

"Can't I set you home?" Mark ventured, not at all sure that she would accept. But she affected no reluctance.

She glanced at a little watch she wore. "I go to the Todd hospital, and I've overstayed here a little."

He helped her up to the seat. The horses sprang forward, swung into the car tracks and quickly left the tenement neighborhood behind. For a time Mark gave his attention to guiding their swift course around overtaken cars and the slow lumbering teams that drew the heavy traffic of the street. They were on the bridge before either spoke.

"You said, to the hospital," he began suggestively. "Do you—"

"I'm on a case there."

"You're a nurse, then? I remember you had a knack for that sort of thing. Your husband—er—I hadn't heard—"

"I haven't seen him for 12 years."

"Kazia," he asked gravely, "will you tell me about yourself?"

"There is nothing to tell—any more than there is about you."

"That is, you're not interested in what has happened to me. You're frank."

"Because a chance has thrown us together for an hour is no reason for us to pretend an interest neither of us can feel."

"You may speak for yourself, please. At least, we can oil the wheels of circumstance by going through the polite forms. You could smile very graciously on my man Felix, but to me—" He broke off with a short laugh. "History has a way of repeating itself. I remember saying something of the sort to you once before. Of course, you've forgotten."

"I forget—nothing."

"Ah!" He turned quickly to her again. "Then I did do you harm."

"I can't see—"

"It follows," he interrupted. "If I had done you no harm, you would remember charitably, not coldly or worse, and you would be at least as cordial to me as to my groom."

"Now it is you," she answered after a thoughtful pause, "who will not let me oil the wheels. Probably what you say is true. I haven't thought much [illegible]

"I'm sorry. Which seems all I can do about it. You and Piotr and Hanka seem in a conspiracy to teach me that for regrettable things we can pay only with regret. But I promised to save you time."

Darkness had fallen when they drew up before the hospital. Mark descended painfully to help her down—a rather superfluous courtesy, since she was better able to alight alone than was he. "You're in good time, I hope?"

"Oh, yes. Thank you for the ride."

They exchanged a conventional hand clasp. She moved toward the steps leading to the hospital door. He began to climb back into the trap.

But the restive horses started too soon, while he was balanced on the little mounting step. His foot was dislodged. He would have fallen, perhaps been dragged, had Kazia not sprung forward, and catching the reins, brought the horses sharply to a stop.

"You are hurt?"

"No," he lied through set teeth, as he pulled himself up to the seat. His

"Ah!" He Turned Quickly to Her Again. "Then I Did You No Harm."

hip, in fact, had received an excruciating wrench. "I'm a little awkward. This is one of the things I can't get quite used to."

"I supposed it was only temporary."

He shook his head briefly, as though the topic were distasteful.

"Another—you probably won't believe this—is an existence that continually requires little cruelties of one. Big ones, too, sometimes."

"You say—requires?"

"At least, encourages. But I," he smiled unpleasantly, "am subject to regrets. And equally unprofitable impulses. Of course," with obvious irony, "this is very interesting to you."

She was standing between two balustrade lamps. In their bright glow he saw her cool impersonal regard change, become questioning. And the dark shadow again—as though she had seen and known to the full the cruelties whereof he spoke. Her lips parted. But no words fell. With an odd little gesture of repression she turned and slowly mounted the stairs. At the top she paused for an instant.

"Good night," she repeated. "And thank you again."

He dined alone at his club that night. The events of the day had left him depressed and strangly restless and with a strong distaste for companionship.

CHAPTER XVII.

Fanned into Flame.

"I'd better quit thinking of her," Mark told himself.

A virtuous and a wise resolution, forsooth! And one strangely hard to keep. The thought—of a woman of the people, dwelling in a fine strong body whose splendid perfection the toil of the people could not diminish, whose flame it could not quench—never withdrew entirely, at most retired into ambush whence to spring out upon him at unguarded moments, with ever increasing potency to stir his jaded imagination.

Attainment of the partnership had indeed proved to be the climax of his career with the Quinby company. Followed quickly the long imminent collapse. There was no specific ailment, save a heavy stubborn cough and the constant ache in his injured hip, which were really symptoms. It was rather a general failure of his powers. He was no longer able to whip flagging energies to the day's tasks. The cool, clear, incisive brain that could grasp a multitude of details and yet not lose sight of result and purpose had become cloudy, vacillating and wandering, a poor tool for the direction of a huge, intricately organized plant operating under tremendous pressure. He was subject to attacks of profound melancholy. He could not sleep without the aid of drugs. Worst of all, the will to endure, to mock pain and weakness, had broken.

"What's the matter with me?" he demanded of his physician.

"Burnt out," was the succinct reply.

"What can I do?"

"Nothing. And quit taking drugs."

"But," habit protested, "I can't do nothing."

"It's your life," interrupted the doctor. "But you've consulted me and I propose to earn the stiff fee I'll charge you. Drop everything, go to the country or to the end of the earth—personally, I'd advise the end of the earth, because it's farthest away and newest to you. Forget work, play a while."

Mark asked and received from the directors a six months' vacation. But, although he formulated no reason, he did not at once leave the city. When the weather permitted he filled in the hours by driving through the parks. They were long tedious hours, as drearily empty as he had forecasted. The nights, when he lay sleepless, fighting an incipient craving, were longer and drearier. Thus it was that he had leisure to think of Kazia Whiting, though at some loss to explain why the reappearance of one whom in his receded youth he had treated badly should command so much of his interest.

Nor did he admit a design when his drives took him almost daily past the Todd hospital. Nevertheless the sight of that institution was enough to evoke a faint thrill of excitement not to be laid to its barrack-like architecture, followed by a more emphatic disappointment as the neighborhood was left behind. One afternoon Kazia, in company with another young woman, emerged from the grounds as he was passing and gave him a cool impersonal nod. He guessed that it was her recreation hour and marked the time. The quick leaping interest should have been a warning to him. Perhaps it was, for:

"I'm making a fool of myself," he growled. "What do I know of this woman?"

On the third day thereafter, at the same hour, he passed the hospital. This time Kazia appeared alone. She gave him again the cool impersonal nod and would have passed on. But he drew the horses up sharply and called: "Kazia!"

She paused, hesitated a moment, then went over to the curb.

"Will you drive with me for a while?"

"I ought to walk," she answered.

"Please, Kazia." It did not seem absurd to him that he pleaded.

She hesitated again, then—

"Yes," she said.

He would have alighted to help her to the seat, but she forestalled him.

"Don't get out." And she was beside him.

He touched the horses with his whip and they sprang forward.

"You aren't well," she said abruptly.

And he, ascribing to that fact her unexpected compliance, was at the moment almost glad of his disability.

"Is it obvious? I believe I'm not. In fact, my doctor has ordered me to get out and play—I find it very hard work. That's why—that's one reason why—I asked you. I needed company. The circumstance," he smiled, "ought to appeal to you professionally."

"Nurses are notoriously hard-hearted."

"Yes? Then I can't work on your sympathies. On the whole, I'd rather have it so. You'll have to admit it took courage to ask you to play with me, because—you'll admit again—you weren't exactly cordial the last time."

"What did you expect?"

"But I expected nothing," he retorted. "I didn't know you would be at Roman's. Why, I hadn't even heard of you for—I've been counting it up—14 years. That isn't gross flattery, is it? But, of course, you aren't the sort of woman that likes flattery. Are you?"

"Then you're not so sure, after all. But I do like it."

"I must remember that." He chuckled. "Playing becomes distinctly easier. Isn't it lucky I happened along by the hospital just when I did?"

"But I thought—" She almost smiled. "I thought it was a habit."

"So you've seen me? Now you mention it, I may as well confess that this isn't luck, but the result of a very clever plot. I've been driving past the hospital almost every day in the sneaking hope that just this would occur."

"You say, a sneaking hope—?"

"You see," he confided, "I'm really frightened. How could I know that I'd find you so—so beautifully human? Are you preparing to snub me for that?"

"I am considering it." The smile was unmistakable now. "But I won't, because today is one of the days when I can't help being beautifully human. I'm so healthy that sometimes I just have to take a vacation from myself.

"And I'm so unhealthy that, though I'd like to, I can't give Truitt the slip for even an hour. He's a persistent beggar—as you may have noticed the last few weeks."

They laughed.

It was a clear afternoon, beautiful with the mellow radiance of autumn sunshine. But the wind that swept the sky and air clean was crisp and penetrating. To her, superbly healthy, it gave only a rare tinge of color that enhanced her charm, gave the lithe needed softening touch. His wasted body, despite the heavy overcoat he wore, could not resist the chill breath. But, though he knew he would probably pay later for the exposure, he would not by so much as a minute curtail the hour.

"I haven't had so pleasant—it's a puny word, but let that go—so pleasant a time in years," he declared.

"I see," she laughed, "you have taken me at my word."

"But I mean it," he protested. "You like you to believe that I mean it."

He became grave.

"Since that day at Roman's I've been thinking a good deal of what you said—about my having harmed you. If regrets—but there's nothing so useless. That sort of thing isn't easily forgiven, is it?"

"Oh, very easily."

"You are thinking that I give too much significance to our little affair. I do not—"

"No, I mean I have never blamed you. Of course, we were too young for it to have any lasting significance. And, if I remember aright, I invited it—and so put you in what must have seemed a very tragic quandary at the time." The most critical ear could have discerned nothing ungenuine in her rippling laugh.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY WEARING W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

For 31 years W. L. Douglas has guaranteed the value by having his name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory. This protects the wearer against high prices and inferior shoes of other makes. W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them. If you could see how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made and the high grade leathers used, you would then understand why they look better, fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than other makes for the price. If the W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your locality, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail. W. L. DOUGLAS, 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

PICKED OUT THE RIGHT TIME

Schoolboy a Good Deal More Thoughtful Than Most Youngsters We Ever Heard Of.

A popular member of a certain school board tells a good story of a certain schoolboy who enjoys the unique distinction of having attended the school for 11 years without being once absent or late. In evidence of this the youth is the proud owner of 11 medals. When the eleventh medal was conferred the boy's mother was asked whether her son ever had any illness.

"Oh, yes," she replied.

"Measles?"

"Yes."

"Whooping cough?"

"Yes."

"How is it, then, that he has been able to make so remarkable a record at school?"

"Well, he generally had 'em in his holidays," was the proud mother's interesting reply.

Escapes in Heat of Battle.

Reports indicate it sometimes takes a lot to kill the modern soldier, the New York World states. Sergeant Pougere of France received eight bullet wounds, a broken arm and other injuries, and although shot in the calf, thigh and ankle, escaped being captured by Germans and limped ten miles to his regiment. Another French soldier received six bullets and three bayonet wounds and is recovering. The French war office estimates only two men are killed out of every one hundred hit. The peneration is so clean one soldier did not know he had been hit for three hours, and another bullet went through two soldiers and lodged in a cavalryman's saddle.

Old Charon Must Explain.

His boat made fast after the last trip of the night, Charon, homeward bound, encountered a stranger in one of the ill-lighted streets along the water front.

"What's the idea?" asked the old sailor.

"Summons," the stranger replied, producing the papers. "The interstate commerce commission wants to know how you killed off all competition. You public-service corporations are in for a hard winter."

Heavy Cost of Bad Weather

It has been figured that a day's continued frost or snow in England results in the idleness of 1,000,000 workmen.

LIGHT BOOZE.
Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a hot cup of coffee about that time. I could keep awake better.

"After three of four years of coffee drinking, I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum, and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the coffee drug, but I liked the taste of Postum, and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.
—sold by Grocers.

can nka that pay d to drew dewn—ince lone ime.

ide."
hand teps
be-too

the
was pernot
the
to a

as
his

hours by driving through the parks. They were long tedious hours, as drearily empty as he had forecasted. The nights, when he lay sleepless, fighting an incipient craving, were longer and drearier. Thus it was that he had leisure to think of Kazia Whiting, though at some loss to explain why the reappearance of one whom in his receded youth he had treated badly should command so much of his interest.

Nor did he admit a design when his drives took him almost daily past the Todd hospital. Nevertheless the sight of that institution was enough to evoke a faint thrill of excitement not to be laid to its barrack-like architecture, followed by a more emphatic disappointment as the neighborhood was left behind. One afternoon Kazia, in company with another young woman, emerged from the grounds as he was passing and gave him a cool impersonal nod. He guessed that it was her recreation hour and marked the time. The quick leaping interest should have been a warning to him. Perhaps it was, for:

"I'm making a fool of myself," he growled. "What do I know of this woman?"

On the third day thereafter, at the same hour, he passed the hospital. This time Kazia appeared alone. She gave him again the cool impersonal nod and would have passed on. But he drew the horses up sharply and called: "Kazia!"

She paused, hesitated a moment, then went over to the curb.

"Will you drive with me for a while?"

"I ought to walk," she answered.

"Please, Kazia." It did not seem absurd to him that he pleaded.

She hesitated again, then—

"Yes," she said.

He would have alighted to help her to the seat, but she forestalled him.

"Don't get out." And she was beside him.

He touched the horses with his whip and they sprang forward.

"You aren't well," she said abruptly.

And he, ascribing to that fact her unexpected compliance, was at the moment almost glad of his disability.

"Is it obvious? I believe I'm not. In fact, my doctor has ordered me to get out and play—I find it very hard work. That's why—that's one reason why—I asked you. I needed company. The circumstance," he smiled, "ought to appeal to you professionally."

"Nurses are notoriously hard-hearted."

"Yes? Then I can't work on your sympathies. On the whole, I'd rather have it so. You'll have to admit it took courage to ask you to play with me, because—you'll admit again—you weren't exactly cordial the last time."

"What did you expect?"

"But I expected nothing," he retorted. "I didn't know you would be at Roman's. Why, I hadn't even heard of you for—I've been counting it up—14 years. That isn't gross flattery, is it? But, of course, you aren't the sort of woman that likes flattery. Are you?"

"Then you're not so sure, after all! But I do like it."

"I must remember that." He chuckled. "Playing becomes distinctly easier. Isn't it lucky I happened along by the hospital just when I did?"

"But I thought—" She almost smiled. "I thought it was a habit."

"So you've seen me? Now you mention it, I may as well confess that this isn't luck, but the result of a very clever plot. I've been driving past the hospital almost every day in the sneaking hope that just this would occur."

"You say, a sneaking hope—?"

"You see," he confided, "I'm easily frightened. How could I know that I'd find you so—so beautifully human!—Are you preparing to snub me for that?"

"I am considering it." The smile was unmistakable now. "But I won't, because today is one of the days when I can't help being beautifully human. I'm so healthy that sometimes I just have to take a vacation from myself."

"And I'm so unhealthy that, though I'd like to, I can't give Truitt the slip for even an hour. He's a persistent beggar—as you may have noticed the last few weeks."

They laughed.

It was a clear afternoon, beautiful with the mellow radiance of autumn sunshine. But the wind that swept sky and air clean was crisp and penetrating. To her, superbly healthy, it gave only a rare tinge of color that enhanced her charm, gave the last needed softening touch. His wasted body, despite the heavy overcoat he wore, could not resist the chill breath. But, though he knew he would probably pay later for the exposure, he would not by so much as a minute curtail the hour.

"I haven't had so pleasant—it's a puny word, but let that go—so pleasant a time in years," he declared.

"I see," she laughed, "you have taken me at my word."

"But I mean it," he protested. "I'd like you to believe that I mean it."

He became grave.

"Since that day at Roman's I've been thinking a good deal of what we said—about my having harmed you. If regrets—but there's nothing so useless. That sort of thing isn't easily forgiven, is it?"

"Oh, very easily."

"You are thinking that I give too much significance to our little affair. I do not—"

"No, I mean I have never blamed you. Of course, we were too young for it to have any lasting significance. And, if I remember aright, I invited it—and so put you in what must have seemed a very tragic quandary at the time." The most critical eye could have discerned nothing unfeminine in her rippling laugh.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

W. L. DOUGLAS

YOU CAN SAVE MONEY BY WEARING W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES.

W. L. Douglas has guaranteed the above 50 years by having his name and the retail price stamped on the sole before the shoes leave the factory. This protects the wearer against high prices and the inferior shoes of other makes. W. L. Douglas shoes are always worth what you pay for them. If you could see how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made and the high grade leathers used, you would then understand why they look better, fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than other makes for the price. Take W. L. Douglas shoes are not for sale in your town, order direct from factory. Shoes sent everywhere. Postage free in the U. S. Write for Illustrated Catalog showing how to order by mail. W. L. DOUGLAS, 210 Spark St., Brockton, Mass.

PICKED OUT THE RIGHT TIME

Schoolboy a Good Deal More Thoughtful Than Most Youngsters We Ever Heard Of.

A popular member of a certain school board tells a good story of a certain schoolboy who enjoys the unique distinction of having attended the school for 11 years without being once absent or late. In evidence of this the youth is the proud owner of 11 medals. When the eleventh medal was conferred the boy's mother was asked whether her son ever had any illness.

"Oh, yes," she replied.

"Measles?"

"Yes."

"Whooping cough?"

"Yes."

"How is it, then, that he has been able to make so remarkable a record at school?"

"Well, he generally had 'em in the holidays," was the proud mother's interesting reply.

Escapes in Heat of Battle.

Reports indicate it sometimes takes a lot to kill the modern soldier, the New York World states. Sergeant Fougere of France received eight bullet wounds, a broken arm and other injuries, and although shot in the calf, thigh and ankle, escaped being captured by Germans and limped ten miles to his regiment. Another French soldier received six bullets and three bayonet wounds and is recovering. The French war office estimates only two men are killed out of every one hundred hit. The peneration is so clean the soldier did not know he had been hit for three hours, and another bullet went through two soldiers and lodged in a cavalryman's saddle.

Old Charon Must Explain.

His boat made fast after the last trip of the night, Charon, homeward bound, encountered a stranger in one of the ill-lighted streets along the water front.

"What's the idea?" asked the old sailor.

"Summons," the stranger replied, producing the papers. "The interstate commerce commission wants to know how you killed off all competition. You public-service corporations are in for a hard winter."

Heavy Cost of Bad Weather

It has been figured that a day's continued frost or snow in England results in the idleness of 1,000,000 workmen.

LIGHT BOOZE.
Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a hot cup of coffee about that time. I could keep awake better.

"After three of four years of coffee drinking, I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum, and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the coffee drug, but I liked the taste of Postum, and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer-headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.
—sold by Grocers.

RESULTS ARE SURE

Country Certain to Adopt Progressive Principles.

Colonel Roosevelt Calls Attention to the National Platform of the Party on Labor—Much Has Been Accomplished.

Colonel Roosevelt in a recent address outlined anew the principles of the Progressive party as follows:

No amount of government activity will in any way atone for lack of individual efficiency and initiative in private life. But governmental activity is often necessary in order to give free play to individual efficiency, at the same time that wrongdoing is checked. In our national Progressive platform we summarized as follows what we hope to accomplish for labor. We pledged ourselves to work unceasingly in state and nation for:

"Effective legislation looking to the prevention of industrial accidents, occupational diseases, overwork, involuntary unemployment, and other injurious effects incident to modern industry;

"The fixing of minimum safety and health standards for the various occupations, and the exercise of the public authority of state and nation, including the federal control over interstate commerce and the taxing power, to maintain such standards;

"The prohibition of child labor;

"Minimum wage standards for working women, to provide a living scale in all industrial occupations;

"The prohibition of night work for women and the establishment of an eight-hour day for women and young persons;

"One day's rest in seven for all wage-workers;

"The eight-hour day in continuous twenty-four hour industries;

"The abolition of the convict labor system; substituting a system of prison production for governmental consumption only, and the application of prisoners' earnings to the support of their dependent families;

"Publicity as to wages, hours and conditions of labor, full reports upon industrial accidents and diseases, and the opening to public inspection of all tallies, weights, measures and check systems on labor products;

"Standards of compensation for death by industrial accident and injury and trade diseases which will transfer the burden of lost earnings from the families of working people to the industry, and thus to the community."

Bit by bit we are bettering the various measures to achieve these ends through hostile legislation. In the end we shall accomplish all we have thus outlined, and then we shall go on and accomplish much more along the same general lines.

The only safe course to follow, as regards the tariff, is that which the Progressives have advocated, to stand openly and frankly for a protective tariff, not as a matter of preference to any one industry, but as a matter of principle to be extended with fairness and justice to all industries. This tariff should not be constructed along the methods employed by the present tariff, nor in its predecessor, the Payne-Aldrich tariff, both of which in opposite directions were almost equally vicious. It should not be constructed as a matter of politics by bargain and sale among congressmen and among powerful special interests.
—Theodore Roosevelt.

A Billion-Dollar Market.

Our opportunity to establish greatly expanded trade relations with the Latin-American countries to the south of us is conceded to be excellent, but it is an opportunity that requires active and intelligent effort for its development. Never before has there been such an inviting opening for the building up of business enterprises in that quarter on a permanent basis. For a time the competition that has won a great many of the prizes which we have felt belonged to us will be in a state of practical paralysis. After this convulsion has subsided and there has been time to emerge from the industrial demoralization which has already become so serious among our rivals, this competition will revive, but by that time we should have acquired a footing which to a great extent can be maintained.

Readiness Is Imperative.

There is nothing inconsistent between a national policy of prudent defense and a national policy of maintaining peace with all nations. The United States can and does refrain from making war, even under extreme provocation. But it cannot prevent war being made upon it whenever it may be in the interest of any nation to force such a war. The wise injunction of George Washington is emphasized by the war now going on. "In time of peace prepare for war."

No Nation Exempt From War.

Reliance upon the conviction that no enemy will ever invade and occupy any portion of the United States or its possessions is a dangerous rule. War can come in a night. If anything has been proved during the last few weeks, beyond any question or quibble, it is the fact that no nation can safely regard itself as exempt from war. It may be the most peaceable nation in the world, but its own good will is not supreme. The aggressor may decide [illegible]

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYRES, Box 74, Massena, N.Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Constipation Vanishes Forever
Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable — act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

WHY NOT TRY POPHAM'S
ASTHMA MEDICINE
Gives Prompt and Positive Relief in Every Case. Sold by Druggists. Price $1.00. Trial Package by Mail 10c.
WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

DROPSY TREATED, usually gives quick relief, soon removes swelling & short breath, often gives entire relief in 15 to 25 days. Trial treatment sent Free Dr. THOMAS E. GREEN, Successor to Dr. H. H. Greens Sons, Box O, Atlanta, Ga.

Birthplace of Froissart and Watteau.

Both Valenciennes and Malines, two of the latest towns to come into prominence in the western theater of war, have now little association with the production of lace beyond giving their names to the famous varieties. At Valenciennes, indeed, the manufacture has been discontinued, but the place has an alternate fame as the birthplace of Froissart, the historian (nearly six centuries ago) and of Watteau, the artist (230 years ago).

St. Louis Lady Cured of Eczema.

5639 Vernon St., St. Louis, Mo.

I have had Eczema for four years and have tried everything possible to cure it, without success, until I tried Tetterine. Your medicine has cured me after six months' trial. Miss A. B. King.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Itching Piles, Ring Worm, Dandruff and every form of Scalp and Skin Disease. Tetterine 50c; Tetterine Soap 25c. At druggists or by mail direct from The Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

With every mail order for Tetterine we give a box of Shuptrine's 10c Liver Pills free. Adv.

A Sound Sleeper.

"My old nag has one advantage over an automobile. It doesn't require and intricate mechanism to start her."

"That's true. All you need is an alarm clock to wake her up."

Copper as Hard as Steel.

There is no process known at present for making copper as hard as steel. Such a process is supposed to have been known in ancient times. If anyone can discover such a process he will have a valuable secret.

Relieved.

She—I hear small checks are to be favored for dresses this season.

He—Thank heaven!

One of the newer napkin rings is a spring affair with which a boiled egg may be held for removing the shell.

If the wolf camps on your doormat, train him to chew up bill collectors.

Did you ever know a rich young woman to marry a poor old man?

SMALL WARS MEAN BIG POEMS

Greatest Battle Hymns Have Not Been Inspired by Titanic Struggles Like the Present One.

The greatest poems have been written about little wars. The Iliad was written around a siege carried on by a handful of barbarian chieftains against a city of the second class. The battle of Chevy Chase was a border skirmish following upon a cattle-stealing expedition. And Kipling's imperial muse is at her best when she sings of petty wars with colored tribesmen. Britain's far-flung battle line was far flung against Dervishers and Afrids; it was seldom brought into collision with field intrenchments and siege artillery. Little war, or else big wars in anticipation of retrospect, these are the rich soil for the poet.

A great war in the actual, the fate of an empire truly at stake, may make poets out of the common crowd, but subdues the poet to the level of the common crowd. There is a solemn tone about Kipling's latest verse which has its effect. Only it is not exhortation we wanted, but exultation; not an appeal, but a clarion call. When an entire nation is aflame the poet is apt to find his mission rather perfunctory.

ALMOST BALD WITH ECZEMA

R. F. D. No. 2, Johnson City, Tenn.—"Some time ago my head became covered with small sores which they said was eczema. They were red and inflamed and when I would comb my head they would break and run a yellowish matter. My hair was coming out by handfuls until I was getting almost bald. My hair was so dead and dry it seemed as if it would break off.

"I put on —— and —— and several other remedies without getting any help. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment and used them. In a short time the pimples dried up and my hair stopped falling out and is thick and glossy. I am cured." (Signed) J. W. Fisher, Jan. 1, 1914.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."—Adv.

"Przemysl."

"Przemysl" is one of the few really simple proper names that have secured notoriety in the Russian invasion of Galicia. It is pronounced "Pzhem-is-l," with the accent on the "pzhem." Just how easy this is one may appreciate by considering Przemyslany, in the first syllable of which the "r" is sounded, thus; "Przhe," with the Austro-Hungarian variation of "miscellany" following. In pronouncing "Przemysl" you should carefully hold a "p" between your teeth while pronouncing "ahem" (which is a soft, mushroom, dumdum variety of "shem") and just as you are about to eject it deftly insert the "p" in the outer hook of the "z," thus: "Pzhem." Nothing can be simpler.

Approaching, but Not Close.

"When I left Havre on my way back to England," says Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, "600 French soldiers lined up on the dock and sang 'God save the King' in English. By the nine gods of war! as our own General Bingham would say, this incident, taken in connection with the Belgians stepping to the front chanting 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary,' seems to indicate the approach of the much-touted brotherhood of man."

It Helps a Lot.

Eve, for the first time in their married life, was telling Adam just what she thought of him.

"This is the original rib roast," chuckled Adam.

And that was the beginning of the saving grace of humor.—Judge.

Easy to See.

"I wish I could have seen your great feat," said a lady to a gentleman who had met with a hazardous adventure in Africa. "There they are, madam," said he, pointing to his pedal extremities.

EAS-IT

AUTOMOBILIST, Away from home. Away from your family physician. A bottle of Stutts' EAS-IT in your luggage takes away the fear of Aches and Pains while on your outing. Positively Guaranteed by your druggist. Contains NO OPIATE. Adv.

Altruism.

Teacher—Johnny, you have been writing your excuses.

Johnny—I know, mum; it takes all pa's time to think of his own.

Accounting for It.

"How stiff those new people are!"

"Don't you know why? They made all their money in starch."

More of It.

"Juno was an ox-eyed beauty."

"I guess if she lived in these days she would be a peroxide one, too."

American railroads employ 1,315,239 persons, who last year received $1,373,830,589 in wages.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU Try Murine Eye Remedy for Red, Weak, Watery Eyes and Granulated Eyelids. No Smarting, just Eye Comfort. Write For Book of the Eye by mail Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

There are 50,000,000 acres of forest in Japan, almost half the total area of the country.

Libby's California Asparagus

If you've never tasted Libby's California Asparagus, there is a treat in store for you. Grown on the islands of the Sacramento River, the finest Asparagus region in the world. Put up fresh from the garden as soon as cut. Tender and flavory. White or green—peeled or unpeeled. Insist on Libby's. If your grocer cannot supply you, send us his name.

Try this recipe:—

Asparagus with Eggs—Salt and pepper well one can of Libby's Asparagus. Beat four eggs just enough to break up the yolks, add a tablespoonful of melted butter, pepper and salt, and pour upon the Asparagus. Bake eight minutes in a quick oven, and serve immediately.

Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago

PICKED OUT THE RIGHT TIME

Girl Made Victim of Hoax by Mischievous Friends Went Home in a Fury.

One day several of my girl friends called to see me. We started to make some candy when I discovered that we didn't have any chocolate in the house and said that I couldn't possibly make it without "a speck of chocolate."

Mary, one of the girls, said: "Why, what kind of chocolate is that—couldn't you use any other kind?"

One of the girls gave me a pinch and I said: "Oh, no, I couldn't use any other kind. It's a new kind. You telephone the grocery and order some, Mary, and we'll start the candy. Now be sure and order 'Aspecka.'"

"So we filed to the kitchen and left Mary to telephone. We sat in the kitchen holding our sides with suppressed laughter while she called up one store after another trying to get "Aspecka chocolate." She finally gave up in despair and then we told her. Needless to say, she went home in a fury, as mad as a wet hen. She barely spoke to us for weeks after that.—Chicago Tribune.

Strong Man's Weakness.

Speaking of great feats of strength Franklin H. Lane, secretary of the interior, recalled an incident that happened in a western state.

One afternoon an elderly woman visited the penitentiary, and on pausing before a certain cell was told that the inmate had been imprisoned for stealing a piano.

"I am very sorry to see you here," remarked the woman turning to the convict. "Is it true that you stole a piano?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the frank admission of the convict. Then he added: "I did it in a moment of weakness."

"In a moment of weakness!" gasped the elderly visitor. "Mercy me! I presume that had you your usual strength you would have walked away with the whole house!"

Mustn't Be Quoted.

"Dolphin looks so important you would think he was crammed full of state secrets."

"So he does. If Dolphin makes a prediction about the weather he expects you to treat it as strictly confidential.

Not All Sunshine.

Mrs. Flatte—Didn't you say if you married me it would be all sunshine?

Mr. Flatte—Yes, I did.

"Well, I suppose you realize that I've got a lot of rain checks coming to me!"

The first morning he forgets to kiss her good-by when starting down town the honeymoon sends out the S. O. S. call.

Belgium's national wealth a year ago was estimated to be $9,000,000,000.

Found He Was Mistaken.

A man from the country, in charity one will say from the country, although he may have been a Bostonese, entered a New York restaurant the other evening, and while waiting to be served, gave his attention to an electric fan revolving just above his head. It was a high pressure fan, noiseless, and almost, if not quite, invisible because of its rapid motion. The stranger gazed at it for some considerable time and was heard to mutter: "I don't believe there is anything there at all." With that he put up his hand to confirm his belief. Immediately there was a yell that almost threw the place into a panic. The man sprang into the air, rushed out of the door and, as he disappeared, was heard to say: "I monkeyed with the buzz-saw, all right."

This Is Not the Way.

Wife (with magazine)—Here's an article on "How to avoid war."

Hub—What does it say—remain single?

FATIMA, Turkish-blend cigarettes are the purest form in which tobacco can be smoked, and their flavor is "Distinctively Individual"

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢

Agents Wanted Send dime and get sample. Greatest money maker yet. Box 51, Watertown, Mass.

FOR FLORIDA FARM LAND in any size tracts at low prices and easy terms, write D. G. BARDIN, Live Oak, Florida.

Complete Course Shorthand and typewriting $15.00. Send for free booklet. MARATON SHORTHAND SCHOOL, 1128 Ingleside Ave., Chicago.

AGENTS Start a circular mailing business of your own. Full particulars 25c. Address Fleming, 3020 Lee, St. Louis, Mo.

FINEST Silver Cleaner ever discovered. Works instantly. Cannot injure the finest surface. Agents wanted. CASCO CO., NEW HAVEN, CONN.

W. N. U., Birmingham, No. 41-1914.

This ℞ is for You!

If You Suffer From Hot flashes or dizziness, fainting spells, hysteria, headache, bearing down pains, nervousness—all are symptoms of irregularity and female disturbances and are not beyond relief.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is directed to the real cause and promptly removes the disease, suppresses the pains and nervous symptoms and thereby brings comfort in the place of prolonged misery.

It has been sold by druggists for over 40 years, in fluid form, at $1.00 per bottle, giving general satisfaction. It can now be had in sugar coated tablet form, as modified by R. V. Pierce, M. D. Sold by all medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50c in stamps.

Every sick woman may consult us by letter, absolutely without charge. Write without fear as without fee, to Faculty of the Invalids' Hotel, Dr. R. V. PIERCE, President, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, New York.

DR. PIERCE'S PLEASANT PELLETS REGULATE THE LIVER.

The Time-Tested Tonic for MALARIA Chills & Fever Is Wintersmith's TONIC

Death Lurks In A Weak Heart

TAX NOTICE

Collector's and Assessor's Only Round.

We will attend at the following times and places for the purpose of collecting the State and County Taxes for Chilton County for the year 1914, and assessing the taxes for the year 1915: Hours 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jemison,	Beat	2	October 1	1914.
Thorsby	"	9	" 2	"
Cooper,	"	10	" 3	"
Maplesville,	"	7	" 5	"
Shoults,	"	7	" 6	"
Stanton,	"	8	" 7	"
Riderville,	"	8	" 8	"
Pletcher,	"	15	" 9	"
Kincheon,	"	6	" 10	"
Mihooka,	"	13	" 12	"
Concord,	"	13	" 13	"
Mars Hill,	"	2	" 14	"
Macedonia,	"	14	" 15	"
Benson,	"	3	" 16	"
Culp School House	"	15	" 17	"
Robinson's Store	"	12	" 19	"
Mineral Springs,	"	12	" 20	"
Mullins Academy	"	1	" 21	"
Cane Creek	"	11	" 22	"
Providence	"	16	" 23	"
Clanton, Beat 4, Oct. 24 to 31,			Nov. 7 to 14	"
Mountain Creek	Beat	5	Nov. 3	"
Verbena,	"	5	" 4	"
Evergreen	"	10	" 5	"
Enterprise	"	6	" 6	"

Take notice that under the present law we only make one round, and you are requested to meet us in the Beat in which you live. If for any reason you are unable to meet us in your own Beat, you will please meet us at Clanton on the days given there.

After the completion of the above round, and beginning on November 16, 1914, all assessments become delinquent, and after December 31, 1914, all taxes become delinquent. Therefore, if you wish to avoid payment of a 50c fee, you will please assess before Nov. 16, and pay before Dec. 31, 1914.

J. N. DENNIS, Tax Assessor. J. D. COLLINS, Tax Collector.

When You Come To Jemison

Don't fail to remember that you don't want to forget those little toilet and fancy articles your wife said bring back with you.

Also you want to keep in mind that the proper place to get them is at our store.

Not only fancy toilet articels, but also anything else that is usually kept in a first-class Drug Store. Patent Medicines.

We sell cigars, tobaccoes, soft drinks at the front, ice cream, etc. COME to see us.

Langston Drug Co.,
Jemison, Ala.

E. HOPKINS

Manufacturer of Cement Blocks for all kinds of building purposes; Cement Pipe Well Curbing; Water-Proof Brick for Burial Vaults and All kinds of Cemetery Work.

Contractor for all kinds of cement work and plastering.

Estimates carefully furnished.

Peoples' Phone
Clanton, Alabama.

Read The Union-Banner.
It gives the news of Chilton County. $1.00 per year.

Mothers Tell of Mother's Friend

Experience is or should be our best teacher. Women who have obeyed the highest and noblest of all sacrifices, the struggle for the life of others, should have a better idea of helpful influence than those who theorize from observation.

At any rate when a prospective grandmother urges her daughter to do as she did—to use "Mother's Friend," there is reason to believe it the right advice.

"Mother's Friend" is an external application for expectant mothers. Its purpose is to furnish pliancy to the muscles, to take away the strain on the cords and ligaments, to relieve the tension of nerves and tendons so apt to provoke or aggravate nausea, morning sickness, twitchings of the limbs and so on.

Although, in the nature of things, a woman would use "Mother's Friend" but but rarely, yet so effective has it been found that this splendid remedy is on sale in most drug stores throughout the United States. It has been prepared by Bradfield Regulator Co., 406 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and advertised by us for over forty years. This is a fine record for such a special remedy and the grateful letters received to-day are just as appreciative as were those of years ago notwithstanding that methods are supposed to have greatly advanced. Ask at the drug store for a bottle of "Mother's Friend." It is worth while.

Mt. Creek News

Miss Lottie Allide Carr of this place eloped with Mr. S.E. Spain of Birmingham on Monday last. They were hastily married, and will make their future home in Mobile. Miss Lottie enjoyed the distinction of being one of the prettiest girls in town. Mr. Spain is a worthy, industrious young man, and a happy future is wished them.

Prof. C. L. Harrod of Austin, Indiana has commenced a school here, with a good attendance. The Professor has the best of testimonials.

State of Ohio, City of Toledo, } ss.
Lucas County.

Frank J. Cheney makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. Cheney & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.
FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D. 1886.
(Seal) A. W. GLEASON, Notary Public.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Program

of Sunday School Convention of District No. 4 at Poplar Spring October 11th 1914.

10:00 a.m. Devotional exercises by Rev. L. Thomas.

10:15 The Home Department: what it is and why every school should have it, by Miss Lizzie Hoopes, Co. Supt. of Home Department.

10:40 The great need of missionary training and how we may obtain it, by Miss Hattie Jones, county missionary superintendent.

11:00 Our banner school standing, by Judson Strock, district President.

11:30 What is being accomplished by co-operative Sunday school work? by Rev. W. W. Carleton.

12.00 Dinner.

1:30 Devotional service by M. C. Crumpton.

1:40 Teacher training by Miss Minnie Algood, State Field Secretary.

2:10 How the adult organized class may help the Sunday school by M. C. Crumpton, adult superintendent.

2:40 The teacher's qualifications, by Rev. C. H. Rogers.

3:10 Why every school should be a banner school, by W. E. Thomas, county president.

3:30 What forward step will my school take before our next convention?

Select time and place for next meeting; adjourn.

All schools in reach of Poplar Springs are requested to send delegates. Those coming by rail will get off at Falakto.

JUDSON STROCK, Pres.
Miss ANNIE REELE, Sec.

BIDS WANTED.

Notice is hereby given that at a regular meeting of the Commissioners Court of Chilton county, Alabama, held at Clanton, Alabama, on the 14th day of September, 1914, a resolution was adopted providing for building or constructing a public highway from Clanton to the line of Chilton and Shelby counties near South Calera, by way of Thorsby and Jemison in Chilton county, along or near the line of the present highway between said points.

Said Road to be built by grading, chirting or graveling, the work to be done by contract, and said contract to be let to the lowest bidder under seal bids to be deposited with the Judge of Probate on or before the 26th day of October, 1914.

Said bid shall set forth the number of miles in length, and the kind of road whether graded, chirted or graveled, and the charge for each kind. Said bids shall be made upon plans or specifications to be provided by J. B. Converse, civil engineer, of Selma, Ala.

The payment for the building of said highway to be made by the county, by issuing county warrants payable in annual installments from one to three years; all persons offering to bid upon said contract for the building of said road or any section or number of miles of same, may deposit their bids in sealed envelopes marked bids for county road work, and addressed to Commissioners court on or before 12 o'clock the 26th day of October, 1914, at which time said bids will be passed upon by the Court; the Court reserving the right to reject any and all bids. Contractors bidding will be required, as evidence of good faith in making bids, to deposit with said bid a certified check for $750.00, or to deposit same with the Judge of Probate on or before said bids are opened and passed upon by the Court. E. B. DEASON,
9-24-4t Judge of Probate.

Business Man Praises Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy

Successful Merchant After Investigation Found a Remedy That Restored His Health.

"This is Thanksgiving day in the state of Pennsylvania, and I want to devote a part of it in writing a letter to you. On the 28th day of November, '10, I was stricken with heart trouble. My family physician called it Angina Pectoris. I had from one to five attacks in 24 hours, in the latter part of December, 1910. I wrote to the Miles Medical Co., for information concerning my case, and in reply I received a very kind and instructive letter, which I handed to my family doctor, and he told me to use your Remedies in connection with the medicine he gave me, so I did. I used five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and seven bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine. I was confined to the house for about four months. The action of my heart is now, and has been normal for the last six months. I can truly recommend Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Remedy to do what they are intended for, if used according to directions. I thank you kindly for your advice in answer to my monthly reports. I am now sixty-seven years of age, have been in the mercantile business for thirty-five years and lived retired for the last thirteen years." A. B. HOLLINGER, Lincoln, Penna.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists. 10

MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind.

Stevenson on Life.

We are not meant to be good in this world, but to try to be, and fail, and keep on trying; and when we get a cake, to say, "Thank God!" and when we get a buffet, to say, "Just so: well hit!"—Stevenson.

Puzzled the Youngster.

The town visitor to the country last appeared in a bathing suit charming but abbreviated. "Haven't you gone into long dresses yet, Miss Annie?" asked a wondering youngster on the shore.

FOR SALE—Blue stem seed wheat in any quantity at $1.50 per bushel. W. E. Thomas,
9-24-4t. Jemison, Ala

Beat No. 11

Editor Union-Banner:—Please give me a short space in this week's paper.

Times are looking rather gloomy now for the farmer who is in debt; but we should not give up. Let us try again and, possibly we can bring about better times some way.

I am glad Mr. Herrod has came out and explained himself to the people as he has.

Now, boys, let's not have the road warrants. Let's come together and stop it. We can do it if we will stand together and not submit to having such stuff run gver us. It seems that the time has come that we cannot live without standing together. If we would tell them what we would do for them, and then do what we say, we would have better times. We farmers have to bear the burden of all of it. Farmers can hardly pay the taxes that are demanded now and live. We should stand together and demand better things if it causes blood to be shed. Come boys, in November, and lets see if we can't make some shanges in the management of affairs.

John S. Dennis.

FOR SALE—3 milk cows 2 giving milk one due to freshen December 8 next 4 Bred Jersy heiffers, 2 Jersey bulls, one 17 months old, one 6 months old sire and grand sire Registered.
This September 5th, 1914.
Alfred Popwell.

DR. J. P. CRUPTON, Dentist
Office, Wilson Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & DENSON
Lawyers,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug Co.
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & REYNOLDS
Attorneys at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M. D.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children
Given Special Attention
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.m.
Smith Building, - Clanton, Ala.

Dr. P. I. HOPKINS
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p. m.
Special attention given the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON, ALA.

STOMACH SUFFERERS

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy Is Recommended and Praised by Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick man about three years caused from Catarrh of the Liver and was given up by three of our most prominent physicians who would have to make an operation to save my life but heard of your wonderful Stomach Remedy, secured a full treatment and took it according to directions and now after hundreds of Call Bottles. Since taking your medicine I work regularly and don't feel any ill effects. I am praising your Remedy to all my friends. I feel it is worthy of the highest praise. B. L. BAILEY, Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Bowel Ailments are not asked to take the Wonderful Stomach Remedy for several months before they feel benefited, but one dose— which should make you feel better in health, convince you that you will be well and strong, free you from your suffering and give you a sound and healthy Stomach, as it has done in thousands of cases. Wherever it is taken you will hear nothing but the highest praise. Go to your druggist—ask him about the great results it has been accomplishing in cases of which he knows or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for a free book on Stomach Ailments and hundreds of grateful letters from people who have been restored.

WAR

And Its Effect on Business

As a direct consequence of the war in Europe, Southern farmers and business men have found it expedient to co-operate, and call on the federal government, to safeguard the interests of the South.

Patriotic business men have pulled shoulder to shoulder with the cotton growing farmer. Representatives in Congress, and high government officials, have signified a willingness to do all in their power to bring about stable conditions.

There is now every indication that our people have risen to the occasion and that they have the situation well in hand.

For which the L. & N. rejoices.

The L. & N. hopes the lesson will not be lost on the people. The L. & N. has suffered from the loss of revenue, due to the war. But we have continued to operate trains and supply the same high class service as was supplied in times of prosperity.

The people found it necessary to band together, to call for federal aid, for the common good. No individual firm or corporation objects.

In times like these the demagogue and detractor are silent. They are impotent. They do not rise to the emergency.

It is the brains of the South, the business ability, the conservatism, the true patriotism, that is exerting itself.

The L. & N. knows that the memory of the people is short. But we indulge the hope that the next time the L. & N. is attacked, is forced to appeal to the courts for protection, and to the people for fair treatment, that the people will not forget.

Our service is unexcelled. Our disposition is to co-operate. Our effort is for mutual prosperity.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

THE

3 THE U

MOST PEACEFUL ATION IN THE WORLD

sked to pay a War Tax of $100,000,000 by Free-Traders.

e most peaceful nation in world is to be asked to pay a tax of a hundred million rs. The United States is t war, and is not in reality a rer from the European war. e necessity for this tax is reated wholly by the war in pe, or even mainly by the e deficit in the income of United States Government is partly to the reduction in mount of imports into this try, but also largely to a reon of the tax upon imports this country.

e reduction in the amount imports the party in power ashington is not responsible but the reduction in the nt of the tax on imports the in power at Washington is nsible for.

e reduction in the amount eign imports is not a disadge. On the contrary, it is ny respects a distinct benefit our country. The reduc- in the amount of income these imports is obviously advantage, and a distinct vantage at this time.

vould appear therefore, that arty in power at Washing- as not responsible for such its as there are in this pres- tuation, but was and is reible for the disadvantages e situation.

y cannot the Democratic frankly confess that its Trade theories are a mis- and are now proving to be take, and have always prov- be a mistake?

y cannot the Democratic , which has many claims popular confidence, aban- he visionary and impracti- olicies which will, if persist- forever deny its popular dence and suppport?

r or no war, the Democrat- rty's tariff policies were ng failures.

ore war was declared in pe, or even contemplated, alance of trade had shown ensely against this country. export balance had decreas- er a quarter of a million rs in seven months.

ld was being exported in tity. The income tax had ed sufficient to compensate the reduction in the tariff nues.

reign goods are coming in- r country, perhaps not in cient quantities to raise an uate governmental revenue r the reduced rate of taxa- but certainly in snsficient tities to deprive our Ameri- aborers of employment.

erican men out of employ- were parading the streets. erican men in bankruptcy putting up their shutters. erican factories were clos- nd discharging their work- and, instead of America ing more goods abroad than e the reduction of the tariff, rica was importing more hipping less, with the bal- of trade going more and to our disadvantage.

en comes the European war through no effort or merit r own, European goods are held from our markets, and home markets are again

11

er:—Please e in this

g rather rmer who d not give and, pos-out better

errod has ed himself

have the come toe can do ether and uch stuff that the e cannot gether. If what we then do uld have ers have ll of it.
the tax-now and together
ngs if it
. Come lets see shanges fairs.
ennis.

cows 2 freshen ed Jersy
, one 17
nths old istered.
914.
owell.

Dentist
g.,

SON

G. C. WALKER
Lawyer.
Office over Upchurch Drug C
Clanton, Ala.

MIDDLETON & REYNOL
Attorneys at Law,
Office, Gowan Bldg.,
Clanton, Ala.

V. J. GRAGG, M.
Surgery and Diseases of Women and Children
Given Special Attentio
Office hours 9-11 a.m., 1:30-3:30 p.
Smith Building, - Clanton,

Dr. P. I. HOPKIN
PHYSICIAN & SURGEO
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m. 2 to 4 p
Special attention given the Ey
Ear, Nose and Throat.
Office 7th Street, CLANTON,

STOMACH SUFFERER
Mayr's Wonderful Stomach
Is Recommended and Praised Thousands Who Have Been Restored

"I was a sick about three caused from Gall of the Liver and wa
by three of our most linent physicians th
would have to subm
an operation to get but heard of your W
ful Stomach Remedy secured a full treat and took it accord
directions and hundreds of Gall S
Since taking your
cine I work regularly
don't feel any ill effects. I am gra your Remedy to all my friends. I think worthy of the highest praise. B. L. D
I.E.V. Roanoke, Va."

Sufferers of Stomach, Liver and Int Ailments are not asked to take Wonderful Stomach Remedy for weeks months before they feel benefited. Just one dose— which should make you feel in health, convince you that you will be well and strong, free you from suffering and give you a sound and Stomach, as it has done in thousands of cases. Wherever it is taken you will nothing but the highest praise. Go to druggist—ask him about the great rem has been accomplishing in cases of peo knows or send to Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. C ist. 154-156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., free book on Stomach Ailments and grateful letters from people who have restored.

WAR

Effect on Business

uence of the war in Europe, South-siness men have found it expedient call on the federal government, to ests of the South.

men have pulled shoulder to shoul-growing farmer. Representatives
h government officials, have signido all in their power to bring about y indication that our people have and that they have the situation

& N. rejoices.

the lesson will not be lost on the has suffered from the loss of rev-
But we have continued to operate e same high class service as was prosperity.

it necessary to band together, to or the common good. No individn objects.

the demagogue and detractor are potent. They do not rise to the

the South, the business ability, true patriotism, that is exerting

s that the memory of the people ulge the hope that the next time d, is forced to appeal to the courts the people for fair treatment, that rget.

xcelled. Our disposition is to cos for mutual prosperity.

AND NASHVILLE
AD COMPANY

THE UNION-BANNER

L. 3 THE UNION 11th Year CLANTON, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15 1914 THE BANNER 21st Year NO. 27

E MOST PEACEFUL ATION IN THE WORLD

sked to pay a War Tax of $100,000,000 by Free-Traders.

he most peaceful nation in world is to be asked to pay a tax of a hundred million lars. The United States is t war, and is not in reality a rer from the European war. he necessity for this tax is created wholly by the war in rope, or even mainly by the he deficit in the income of United States Government is partly to the reduction in amount of imports into this ntry, but also largely to a re-ion of the tax upon imports this country.

he reduction in the amount imports the party in power Washington is not responsible but the reduction in the nt of the tax on imports the y in power at Washington is ossible for.

he reduction in the amount reign imports is not a disad-ge. On the contrary, it is ny respects a distinct bene-o our country. The reduc-in the amount of income these imports is obviously dvantage, and a distinct vantage at this time.

would appear therefore, that party in power at Washing-was not responsible for such ects as there are in this pres-situation, but was and is re-nsible for the disadvantages the situation.

Why cannot the Democratic rty frankly confess that its ee-Trade theories are a mis-e and are now proving to be mistake, and have always prov-to be a mistake?

Why cannot the Democratic rty, which has many claims on popular confidence, aban-the visionary and impracti-policies which will, if persist-, forever deny its popular idence and suppport?

r or no war, the Democrat-party's tariff policies were ng failures.

ore war was declared in rope, or even contemplated, balance of trade had shown nsely against this country. export balance had decreas-ver a quarter of a million lars in seven months.

Gold was being exported in ntity. The income tax had ved sufficient to compensate the reduction in the tariff enues.

oreign goods are coming in-our country, perhaps not in cient quantities to raise an uate governmental revenue er the reduced rate of taxa-but certainly in snsficient ities to deprive our Ameri-laborers of employment.

merican men out of employ-were parading the streets. merican men in bankruptcy putting up their shutters.

merican factories were clos-and discharging their work-and, instead of America ng more goods abroad than the reduction of the tariff, rica was importing more ipping less, with the bal-of trade going more and to our disadvantage.

en comes the European war through no effort or merit own, European goods are id from our markets, and home markets are again open to our home manufacturers.

Another consequence of this European war is the opening of foreign markets to our products.

Markets which were formerly supplied with goods from England and France and Germany and Austria will not be supplied from those nations, and must be supplied with goods from the United States.

The advantage of markets is clear and conclusive. Markets are merely the demand for our products. Without the demands there cannot be a sustained supply, and with enlarging demands there must ever be enlarging supply, increasing production, increasing employment and increasing prosperity.

We should have kept our home markets with legitimate protection.

We could have gotten enlarged foreign markets with judicious reciprocity.

We did neither.

But what we failed to do for ourselves the war will do for us.

Yet, to take full advantage of the opportunities which the European war offers to this neutral nation, those chances should be made as permanent as possible by intelligent legislation and diplomatic negotiation.

If home markets are desirable and advantageous, as they obviously are, let us retain them for American producers by a tariff admittedly for protection.

If foreign markets are advisable and advantageous, as they clearly and surely are, let us retuin them and enlarge them for our American manufacturers by reciprocity treaties.

A tariff for revenue only has proven to be a tariff for insufficient revenue only.

A tariff for judicious protection would prove a tariff for sufficient revenue as well.

If a frank policy of judicious protection intelligently coupled with reciprocity were adopted by the Democratic party, the business men of America could proceed confidently and competently to take advantage of their present unexampled opportunities.

They would know that those opportunities and advantages would not be temporary but permanent.

They could build factories, not to operate for the period of a war lasting only a few months, but for periods of years, guaranteed by the fostering care of a wise and farseeing government.

There would then be no need for continuel levies of new taxes.

There would then be no occasion for parades of unemployed or business proceedings into bankruptcy.

There would then be no need for foreign wars, or such regrettable calamaties to others, for us to glean a prosperity which should naturally be our due.

With our home markets secured through legitimate protection and foreign markets obtained through intelligent reciprocity our production would be immense and our prosperity correspondingly great.

Then, with a merchant marine to carry our products to all parts of the world and a mighty navy to protect our ships and our shores, America could be in the dominent position which the enterprise and intelligence of its people, is not of its Government, entitle it to hold.

Why cannot the Democratic party abandon its theories which have proved fatal?

Why can it not cease forever taxing our producers, forever restricting, restraining and retarding our production? Why can it not embark upon a new and enlightened policy of intelligently encouraging our production, of adequately transporting our production and of constantly enlarging and retaining the markets for our production at home and abroad?

In this way lie progress and prosperity for the party, for the government and for the nation.
—American Economist.

Mineral Springs

Miss Lizzie Retherford of this place eloped last Sunday with Mr. George Littleton of Siluria. They were hastily married, and will make their future home in Siluria.

Prof. J. L. Harris of Verbena has commenced a school here, with a good attendance.

There will be a singing at this place next Sunday at one o'clock All singers and lovers of music are invited to come.

Miss Essie Kilgore spent Sunday with Miss Dovie DuPriest.

Blue Eyes.

Beat No. 11

Please allow me space to urge that all the farmers come together at Clanton on the 17th of this month and ask the Commissioners to divide our road tax and apportion it correctly among the several districts. We want all the Commissioners to meet us at the court house on that day and hear what we want them to do. It seems that such a body of gentlemen would not mind to come together and hear the wishes of the people set forth.

Let everybody come and ask them to do this, and if they wont do this, let's ask them to come down, and we will try to put in some who will hear and listen to the voice of the people on some things. Everybody come and let's try them once more.

John S. Dennis.

Death of Mrs. Sallie Dunlap

Mrs. Sallie Dunlap, mother of Mr. W.D. Dunlap of near Highland, died on the morning of the 22nd inst. She had been ill for some time, and somewhat feeble but her condition was not suspected to be at all dangerous.

On the 20th she was rendered speechless and helpless. She remained conscious but helpless and speechless, and a few hours before the end came she fell into a deep sleep, and passed away peacefully.

The deceased lady was born and reared in Mississippi, but had lived in this county for more than fifty years. At her death she was in her seventy-sixth year. For a long time she had been a devoted member of the Baptist church, and was a lady of high moral worth, and enjoyed the respect and confidence of many friends, who will mourn her untimely death. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. M. J. Parrish at Highland.

A Friend.

Write or phone us for prices on clover, rye, barley, rape and wheat seed. We have big stock on hand and can supply you with any amount you want.—Aired Drug Company.

SOME HINTS TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me a small space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of Chilton county. I have had the pleasure of attending several speakings during the campaign. I never saw as much interest shown in a campaign before since I have been old enough to take any interest in politics. This makes me believe that the people are tired of Democratic rule. It seems that the Democrats have no issue in this campaign; they have tried to make Judge Reynolds the issue. I think when a party tries to make some private citizen an issue in a political campaign, they are getting to low ebb. Why don't the Democrats meet the issue as it confronts the voters of this county? The Chairman of the Progressive Campaign committee has asked the Democrats to meet them in joint discussions over the county to discuss the issue now before the people. I would like to hear a Democrat make a speech and defend the present administration of the county, state and nation. If the Democrats believe they should be elected, why don't they go before the people and tell them why they should be elected. It looks like they could point to something they have done in the past and something they want to do in the future. I don't see how a Democrat can have the audacity to ask the voters to support him under the present administration. Last spring when the Democratic Executive committee met to arrange for the primary, they let the bars down asking all qualified voters who would support the ticket in November, to vote in the primary. What happend? Mr. Pinckard who is Chairman of the Democratic Executive committee of this county got a message from Mr. Goodwin, who was Chairman of the Democratic state Executive committee, telling him that he must call the committee back together and put up the bars. Referring him to the law, it stated that if any one voted in the Primary who did not support the Democratic ticket in November, from constable to president, would be prosecuted. And what did Mr. Pinckard do? Did he not call the committee back together and put up the bars?

The Democratic organ of Chilton county, the Clanton Press said that the great Roosevelt of Chilton (L. H. Reynolds) was the boss of the Progressive party. What side does the bossism and ring rule come on? If I were in that gang I would hang my head in shame. Letting the corporation and railroad lawyers say who shall and who shall not vote in a free county like this in the great state of Alabama. What do you think of this? Is that bossism? Some of the candidates who helped do this will put his arm around your neck, with tears in his eyes, begging you to support him. Last April they did not want any Progressive or Republican votes, but now you look so good to them that they want your support. In their primary they said you shall not help; now we say we will not.

Before closing my letter I cannot help but say that I believe we nominated as good men for the office as we have in Chilton county; men whom I believe will do the wishes of the people. Mr. Harris goes before the voters of this county with the strongest recommendation of any man who was ever in the race for a county office. In the primary of last April Mr. Harris received every vote cast in his home Beat, which was 110. A Beat which speaks louder than words can express. Mr Waldrup has been weighed in the balance and found sufficient. R. J. William is a conservative man, always found fighting for the cause of the common people and his party. W. E. Thomas will make Chilton county a good and efficient Representative. I hope to see the Progressive ticket elected by the largest majority that any ticket has ever been elected in the county.

I believe that if Kilgore, Goodgame, Pounds and Riggins will just keep fighting the battle for the Democrats, we will have one thousand in the majority.

I notice that Mr. Jones, the Democratic nominee for sheriff, is giving out his cards, asking for your support, but doesn't say what ticket he is on. Last spring before the Democratic primary, his cards read, "B. E. Jones, candidate for Sheriff, subject to action of the Democratic primary." Beware, voters and don't be fooled.

In conclusion, I wish to ask all the Progressive voters to fight on: the victory is ours.

I want the colors of the Progressive party to wall in old Chilton as never before.

It there's anything I can do, call on me at your service.

Respectfully,

J. L. Gore.

Political Conditions in Beat 16

Editor Union-Banner:—Please allow me space to say a few words in your paper about some of the happenings of Beat 16 lately.

Behold, the great guiding star of tne Democrats made his appearance in this section a short while ago. As in times long ago when the star by night and the cloud by day, led the wise men to Bethlehem to see the new born king, he is attempting to lead the people into something or other, but it is hard to tell what it is, unless it is to voting the Democratic ticket.

When he first appeared in the community he said he was going to discuss the subject of woman suffrage. And he also said that he was going to have a joint discussion with Judge Reynolds, (in order to get a crowd to come out and hear him.)

At the beginning of his address he stated that he was a Socialist. From there he went to many various kinds of discussions and criticisms of persons, principles and parties. It was soon evident that his audience was not much in sympathy with what he said when someone stole out into the darkness and set aloud the cry that somebody's team had broken loose. In an instant the great Socialist-Democratic star was left with only two or three listeners.

But before he sat down he said he was going to vote for the Democratic nominee for Sheriff, thereby making it plain, as he has in other places, that he is stumping the county for Mr. Jones. We like Mr. Jones all right as a man, but when it comes to politics, he is on the opposite side of the fence from

STATE MEETING OF FARMERS PLANNED

Ford Issues a Call—Many Present Petition for Extra Session.

Montgomery, October 10.—O. P. Ford, president of the State Farmers' Union, sent out a call for a general mass meeting of the people of Alabama interested in the cotton situation. The situation in Alabama will be discussed by members of the conference, and a petition will probably be presented to the Governor for an extra session of the legislature to consider relief measures.

Register Chancery April 2

Beat 16.

We are amused at the way this great Socialist is leading the Democrats in this county. That party must have gotten somewhat low in its own estimation to allow such leaders to go out and wage its fight. But let them have it. Every step they make is bringing them nearer to their fateful destiny. It has come to the place that not only the official acts of the Democratic administration are detrimental to their party, but the very efforts of their leaders are doing them harm.

He paid the greatest tribute to Judge Reynolds, by saying that he and Roosevelt were the rottenest politicians in the country. I have thought for some time that Judge Reynolds was the greatest man in the county, and if he can be compared with Roosevelt, we shall have still more evidence for our belief.

I wish to warn everyone to be careful of the many doctrines and so-called issues that are being scattered over the county by this infernal mixture of democracy and socialism. Let us not be led astray by any of it. We know what is right, and who will do to depend upon; so let's sit steady in our boat, and keep our eyes fixed upon yonder shore, where we can land free from the oppression of this onesided affair called Democratic government.

I think we can salely say that Beat 16 will support the Progressive ticket straight, with the possible exception of less than half a dozen votes.

With best wishes to the Union-Banner and its many rerders, I am for Reynolds and Roosevelt first, last and all the time.

X. I. X.

Something For Your Money

We will send you The Union-Banner and The Montgomery Daily Times one year for $2.00; or we will send you The Union-Banner together with The Alabama Weekly Times a year for $1.00

These liberal offers are strictly for cash in advance. The Montgomery Daily Times is a clean, well edited paper and is dedicated to the service of the citizens of Alabama.

THE UNION-BANNER
Clanton, Ala.

RECEIPTS FROM SALE OF LIQUOR

Licenses in Eight Counties Yield $2,021,247.04—Jefferson Gives State $929,411.11.

STATE CAPITAL NEWS ITEMS

Doings of the Various Departments of the Commonwealth Given for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Receipts from the sale of liquor licenses in eight counties of Alabama since the present local option laws became effective until September 1, last, were $2,021,247.04, according to a statement prepared by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman. These receipts accrued from the sale of licenses in Colbert, Cullman, Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery, Pike, Russell and Madison counties, and have been apportioned among the State, and the counties and cities in which liquor has been sold.

Examiner Gorman's statement shows that Jefferson county yielded the largest returns from the sale of liquor licenses, the round sum of $929,422.36 having been collected in that county. Mobile county comes second in the list, with $438,119.80, and Montgomery third, with $316,140 collected.

In the apportionment of the fund since 1911, the state has received $297,123.8. The counties have received $653,455.85. In addition to these amounts, $19,130 has been paid out in commissions to probate judges and $89,612.58 in salaries to excise commissioners.

Thomas Succeeds Walker.

Judge E. Perry Thomas of Eufaula was appointed by the governor as Judge Richard W. Walker's successor on the court of appeals. Judge Thomas has been on the court court of appeals since 1912, but in the April primary was defeated for renomination by J. B. Brown of Cullman, who will probably succeed Judge Thomas following the November election.

The vacancy on the court of appeals, caused by the promotion of Judge Walker to the office of United States circuit judge, was sought by three applicants in addition to Judge Thomas, Judge Edward deGraffenreid of the supreme court, whose term will expire in January, being the closest contestant in the race. Other applicants were Judge J. H. Ballentine of Huntsville, judge of the Madison law and equity court, and Judge W. H. Taylor of Uniontown, formerly a chancellor of his district.

Judge Thomas has been a conspicuous figure in the political and civil life of Alabama for years. He has been engaged in the practice of law since 1893, was mayor of Clayton from 1899 to 1902, and was a member of the state senate from 1902 until 1910. He made a race for lieutenant governor on the ticket on which the present governor was elected. Judge Thomas' appointment is expected to give general satisfaction among the lawyers of the state. His endorsement for the office two years ago was signed by the leading members of the bar of the state, and a similar demand was made for his appointment in the present instance.

Says "Squatters" Destructive.

The annual report of J. W. Martin, commissioner of state lands, submitted to the state printer, states that less than 100 acres of state lands contain marketable timber owing to the rapacity of squatters and others who have made their homes on these properties.

Existing laws declare the occupant of 20 years standing on state property the owner of the property has reduced the state properties more than one-half, according to the report.

According to the report the law states specifically that grand juries shall be charged to investigate violations of the trespass law. Mr. Martin charges that no judge, to his knowledge, has ever included any advice of this nature in his charge to this body and that as a consequence the state lands are overrun with unworthy tenants who dispose of the timber and market the available minerals.

Not in Favor Special Session.

Governor O'Neal has been urged by a large number of business men to call a special session of the legislature in order that legislation forcing the uniform reduction of cotton acreage may be adopted. The governor has replied to the petition of these citizens that the legislative body are so limited in this respect that the expense of a special session is hardly justifiable. This matter, he stated, would be brought to the attention of the legislative body at the regular January session.

Brassell Appointed Solicitor.

I. H. Brassell of Andalusia was appointed solicitor of the Twelfth Judicial circuit to succeed the late R. H. Parks. Governor O'Neal, in appointing Mr. Brassell, stated that he knew of no man better qualified for the position. Mr. Brassell was highly endorsed for the position.

Crenshaw Succeeds Brassell.

Allen Crenshaw of Andalusia was appointed solicitor to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Mr. Brassell as solicitor of the circuit court of law and equity of Andalusia.

To Promote School Legislation.

With a view to collecting data to be used in the promotion of advanced school legislation in Alabama at the coming sesion of the legislature, Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin has addressed a letter to the various county superintendents asking them to lend their best efforts toward filing their annual reports as soon as possible. By sending in the reports promptly the department of education will be enabled to issue its annual report earlier than usual this year, and will thereby be able to place fresh material in the hands of the lawmakers, according to a circular letter sent out by Superintendent Feagin.

That a determined fight for the passage of new laws that will better educational conditions in this state will be waged at the next session of the legislature is indicated by the letter sent out.

Two important measures will have the active support of the department during the next session. One of these will be a measure providing for local taxation for school purposes while the other measure will provide for compulsory education under certain conditions. These will be the two most important measures urged, but there will be much other legislation which it is believed will improve conditions.

Reduced Acreage Urged.

Capt. R. F. Kolb, state commissioner of agriculture, who returned from Washington, where he attended the Southern Food Congress, stated emphatically that the plans of forcing cotton upon the market in payment of debts will further demoralize the market in this commodity and that the only solution of the problem is the reduction, compulsory if necessary, of the cotton acreage in Alabama for 1915.

He states that the probable loss to Alabama alone in forced selling of cotton at from $15 to $25 below the actual price of production amounts to more than $20,000,000 per annum.

Captain Kolb could offer no plan of immediate relief. He stated that the congress which he attended had drafted resolutions encouraging the calling of special sessions of the legislatures and the enactment of laws compelling the reduction of cotton acreages throughout the south that even if this were done the existing conditions would remain the same.

Clarke County Books O. K.

An examination of the books and records of Clarke county officials, conducted by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, shows the following officials indebted to the county and state through technical errors to the following amounts:

C. A. Coater, sheriff, $185.82; . B. Doyle, former tax assessor, $80.80; W. M. Mobley, former tax commissioner, $266.26.

The examination disclosed the fact that H. C. Hawkins, the present collector, had drawn $1319 by error and that he has already returned upwards of $775 of the amount to the treasury.

Examination showed that the following amounts had been paid into the treasury upon discovery of error:

Clayton Fosine, probate judge, $5; Connie Garrett, clerk of court, $160.20; C. A. Coater, sheriff, $44.80; H. C. Howmins, tax commissioner, $72.85; T. L. Head, superintendent of education, $15.10. The books show further that former Tax Assessor J. B. Doyle owes the state $82.52.

The books of W. M. Mobley, G. G. Warren and J. G. Cunningham, ex-Tax Assessors, and J. B. Malone, treasurer of the school fund, were found correct. All of the errors are purely technical.

Make Bold Escape.

Two negro convicts from Jefferson county picked the locks which secured their handcuffs and jumped through the open windows of a passenger train a short distance below Clanton, Ala. The train was stopped, but the men made their escape.

The negroes were Archie Reese, sentenced to serve 20 years for murder in the first degree, and Will Brown, sentenced to serve 13 years for robbery.

Officials at the convict department were displaying a small pin, with which the negroes picked their locks. Mr. Austin said he had no intimation that there was about to be an escape until he heard a commotion and turned and saw the negroes' feet disappearing through the windows. He said the train was running about 10 miles an an hour. He was en route to the State penitentiary from Birmingham.

Sponsors and Maids.

Commander John H. Wallace, Jr., of the Fourth Brigade, U. S. C. V., dispatched a letter of John L. Moulton, commander of the Alabama Division of the Sons of Veterans, informing him that the following ladies had been appointed by him to represent the brigade at the annual reunion at Mobile, October 24: Miss Elizabeth Cooper, Huntsville, sponsor; Miss Georgia Lowry and Miss Elizabeth Mowry, both of Huntsville, maids of honor; Mrs. Benton M. Hall, of Huntsville, matron of honor.

Receipts Are Compared.

Receipts of the state convict department for the year ending October 1 were $193,692.15, an increase of $31,157.09 over the previous year. Hartwell Douglass, president of the convict bureau, is preparing his annual report to present to the governor. Receipts of the state pure food and drug department, for the year, were $22,171.09, a decrease of $6,855.60 from the previous year. C. M. Billingsley, head of the department, attributed the loss to the illness of the attorney general.

ANTWERP TAKEN BY THE GERMANS

Last and Strongest Citadel of Belgium Falls Before the Rain of Shell of the Germans..

HOPE OF ALLIES BLASTED

Napoleon's Designation of Antwerp as a Pistol Pointing at the Heart of England Recalled.

London.—Antwerp, the last and strongest citadel of Belgium, has fallen before the rain of shells of the Germans.

The civilian population in a large part has fled, the seat of the Belgian government has been moved to Ostend and the Germans are in occupation.

Because of the chaotic conditions during the past few days in the beleagured city and the interruption of telegraphic communication, there has been much delay in the transmission of news from Antwerp to England. Nevertheless, England has been expecting and discounting the fall of the Belgian position and newspapers are speculating on what stragetic use the Germans will make of it now that it is in their hands.

The battle line in France is now so long — forming as it does a rough curve of 350 miles, from Lorraine to the Belgian frontier—that the battle of the Aisne and the operations before Antwerp have become so closely knit as to be from the military piont of view, inseparable.

The allies' hope to deliver a crushing blow against the German army in France before the occupation of Antwerp by the enemy is now, of course, a thing of the past. The German right wing under General Von Kluck, apparently is still intact, and the official communication given out in Paris recorded no change in the situation, merely emphasizing that there was sharp fighting in the region of Roye, nearly 100 miles south of the northern extremity of the fighting line, where opposing bodies of cavalry were clashing almost within sight of the North Sea.

The dispatches attempting to analyze the German plan of compaign with Antwerp in their hands, declare that the German purpose is to sweep over northern France with the object of taking possession of the channel ports, and thus bring the warfare nearer England. It is said that German newspapers are predicting the use of this northern Belgian position as a base for operations against England.

Of one thing there is no doubt—Antwerp suffered terribly from the bombardment and losses among the civilian population have been heavy. The city was crowded, not only with its normal population of more than 300,000 persons, but with other thousands who had sought refuge there on account of the German invasion. All stories coincide in relating the terrible suffering and mental torture of these unfortunates struggling to leave the danger zone. Many are said to have been marooned by the destruction of a pontoon bridge over the River Scheidt. While the vast bulk of refugees are burdening Holland, thousands later will come to England, where other thousands are already being cared for.

Just how much damage has been done to Antwerp, particularly to edifices of historic interest, it will take some time to determine. Some refugees say that the Cathedral of Notre Dame has been badly damaged, while others say this is not so.

All reports agree that the Germans entered the city by the west suburb of Berchem.

With Antwerp taken the Germans will now be able to detach the considerable force used during the siege of the city and transfer these men to their right wing, near the French-Belgian frontier, which has been sorely pressed.

The morale of the fall of Antwerp is not minimized in England. The city was called by Napoleon "a pistol pointing at the heart of England." The seaport long has been one of the greatest of Europe.

It is estimated that there are no fewer than 400,000 Germans in Belgium today.

There was nothing new in the eastern arena of the war. Reports that the Austrian city of Przemysl is on fire lacks confirmation. The Austrians insist that the Russians before this position are being repulsed.

Bombs Dropped on Paris.

Paris.—A score of bombs, launched on different quarters of Paris by two German aviators, killed three civilians and injured 14 others. The property damage was small.

PAPAL STATE SECRETARY DEAD

Cardinal Domenic Ferrata Passes Away.

